Beauty is as essential to a woman as any other quality; with beauty of form and feature comes beauty of mind and character. Physical beauty is a rounded form, the brightly tinted cheek, the vivacious eye, a certain ease and grace of manner, which indicates a superabundance of physical strength. Very few women possess these qualities, but very many more might possess them who do not. If you feel that you are losing vitality, losing your beauty losing your strength, if you feel that your face which once was plump and rosy, is becoming thin and sallow, that wrinkles (which are the terror to all pretty women) are beginning to appear, take our advice and try that greatest of discoveries, the "MASSAGE FACE CUP," which is the only means known to science to convert a thin and sallow expression into a plump and rosy face. It will transform a face with plain or homely features into an expression of grace and beauty. Physiology teaches us that if we would be strong, we must exercise the muscles which need the developing. Exercise causes the blood to rush to that part of the body called into action, the muscle is fed and strengthened by the fresh blood and will, therefore, develop.

The Massage Cup will do for the face, when properly applied, by contracting and relaxing the muscles, what exercise will do for the other parts of the body.

If you would have a pinkish complexion, if you would like a face plump and rosy, if you would like to remove that "horrid" wrinkle, send One Dollar to us and we will mail you the great "MASSAGE FACE CUP," with full directions for its use. Remember, you can have your money back, if you say so.

OBITUARIES.

REILY—JOSEPH C. REILY died in peace at his home in Clinton, La., Jan. 12, 1897, aged sixty-six years.

"Capt. Joe" was a true man, faithful in all the relations of life. As a steward of the church, he was loyal and liberal. As a soldier, he was brave and conregeous; wise in counsel, trusty in peril. Few brighter Masons have presided as master of a lodge; but, alas! his gavel has fallen. He sleeps his last sleep, awaiting the call of the Grand Master of the universe, who giveth victory over the grave, whence he will "arise to hail him in triumph descending the skies."

We have good reason to believe our departed brother was a genuine Christian, born of the Spirit. He received Christ by faith, and received power to become a son of God, realizing through that faith forgiveness, happiness, and joy. Our brother fled to Christ and sought acceptance from him through his precious blood. The Bible was the rule and guide of his faith and practice, taken as his infallible directory, as his light from the throne shining in a dark place. It was received not as a dogma for discussion, but as truth for hearty reception. The love of God was shed abroad in his heart by the Holy Spirit, which was given unto him. With love in the heart there was light in the head; hence he needed no human directory, for love is the fulfillment of the law. Christ interceded for him, the Spirit interceded within him and ministered to him. Circumstances varied his condition, but could not rend his union and communion with his Lord. Our brother died with faith in God, hope in immortality, and with love and charity for all mankind.

Death has quenched the light of that bright eye, and stilled the throb of that true heart, and turned to dust that manly form. His sun has gone down beyond the western horizon to arise more glorious in the everlasting east; "for if we believe that Jesus died and rose again; even so them also which sleep in Jesus will God bring with him." The earthly house has been dissolved, but through Jesus and the power of his resurrection, clothed with immortality, he will enter in through the gates into the holy city, the sanctum sanctorum of the King of eternity, who has gone to prepare a mansion, a building of God, "a house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens."

May the God of all grace comfort the grief-stricken widow, and lead his sons in the way everlasting!

WHILOM PASTON.

HOLCOMBE—On the eighteenth day of November, 1896, ARCHIBALD HOLCOMBE passed from labor to rest, from service to reward. A good man is gone after a useful life of sixty-one years, in which the church had in him a true and devout member, society an upright gentleman of clean, pure life; the widow and orphan a friend, and, needless to say, his family an exemplary head.

It was my privilege to be, in his latter years, very close to him. He was my friend, and as few others could know, I learned to know his sterling worth. I can say, I believe I knew his heart as well as 'tis possible for one to know another, and his every intention was good, and he strove to set before his five sons a pattern of upright manhood and Christian purity. He suffered financial reverses that tried all his resources, but dishonor was not one of them. Ah, how these years have tried his faith and manhood! But the grace of God proved sufficient for him, and now, after weary years, he has laid down the burden to rest from his labors and wait for the resurrection.

God help his loved ones all so to live as he would have had them live, that, like him, when the last hour came, they, too, may pass triumphingly into the great beyond without aught of fear or doubt.

His friend,
K. S. ENOCHS.

SAMPLES—Whereas, The great Ruler of the universe has sent the death angel into his vineyard to gather in fruit, and in so doing he has passed this way and plucked from our Sabbath-school Sister ANNIE SAMPLES, and, we trust, has transplanted her to a clime where youth fades not, and where sorrow and pain are known and felt no more; therefore, be it

Resolved, That while we deplore the loss of our young sister, we believe that our loss has been her eternal gain.

Resolved, That our prayers be offered for the comfort and condolence of the bereaved family.

BROWN SABBATH-SCHOOL.

MARSALIS—Died on Tuesday, May 11, 1897, at the residence of his grandfather, W. J. Leslie, little LESLIE P. MARSALIS, aged nine years and two days, only son of Lula P. Marsalis.

He lived a short life of suffering, which he bore patiently; but the Lord has delivered him out of it all, and he is, no doubt, now enjoying the brightness of a better world beyond in the company of his father, who had preceded him, and that of the holy angels.

HIS GRANDFATHER.

RUSS—WILLIAM HARDIE RUSS, aged seventeen years, was drowned while bathing in Pearl river, May 20, 1897.

He came to Millsaps College about four months ago, and had made many friends here. He was cheerful, companionable, and affectionate, unusually free from the faults common to boys of his age. He was a good student, and gave promise of a useful life. He was a member of the church before he came to college, and, although he did not claim the assurance of his acceptance with God, yet his outward life was not inconsistent.

About two weeks before this sad accident some of the students began twilight prayer meetings. Hardie attended these meetings, and, while manifesting much concern about his own condition, he showed a deep interest in his fellow-students, urging them to attend the meetings. At the meeting Wednesday evening, May 19, he was happily converted, and made to rejoice in a sense of pardon and personal acceptance with God. Twenty hours later his spirit went home to God. We "sorrow not, even as others which have no hope." (I. Thess. iv, 13.)

God has used this sad accident in the awakening and conversion of many of the students, and the work still goes on.

COSTLEY—On the evening of the fifteenth of March, 1897, just before the sun had reached the western horizon, my beloved father, LEWIS B. COSTLEY, quietly breathed his last. He was born in Pennsylvania, Feb. 5, 1820, having a little more than completed his seventy-seventh year. He came to the South when quite young. He was married in 1849 to Miss Eunice Scott, of Jefferson county, Miss., where he afterwards located, until a few years ago, broken down by failing health and the infirmities of old age, he left his old homestead and spent the remainder of his life at the home of his son in Franklin county, Miss. His bodily afflictions were many, and at times his sufferings were intense. He often expressed himself as being ready, willing and anxious to go, his only regret being that he had not consecrated his earlier life to the service of his Master.

He leaves three sons, two daughters and many grandchildren to mourn their loss, our mother having preceded him to the better world three years before, where, after the battle of life is over, we hope to meet them. Until then we will say, Farewell.

His daughter,
ELLA.

AUSTEN—M. S. PAINE was born February 6, 1864. She was born and reared in West Feliciana, and joined the Methodist Church in August, 1884, and was married to J. F. Austen, Nov. 13, 1884, and they lived happy Christian lives, and had six children born to them. Two of them preceded her to heaven. The father and four children mourn her loss. Sheila was a loving wife and a fond mother. She loved to talk of dying and of heaven. She suffered for a long time, but bore it with patience, and now she rests from her labors. May the father and dear children meet her in heaven! She died in Jackson, La., March 17, 1897, where she had lived four or five months. She died in the Savior's arms without a struggle. She was talking with her pastor a moment before she expired. May the Lord shield and comfort her husband and children! is the constant prayer of

ONE THAT LOVES HER.

HOSKINS—Sunday night, April 18, the Meridian South Side Epworth League held a very interesting memorial service, at which several beautiful tributes were made to the life of Mrs. DEE WRIGHT HOSKINS, who died April 2, 1897. The following resolutions were read:

Whereas, It has pleased our heavenly Father to remove from our midst our much-loved sister, Dee Wright Hoskins; And, whereas, Ties of the League friendship and sisterly love have been severed, never again to be reunited till our heavenly Father shall come to gather up his jewels; therefore, be it

Resolved, That in the death of one so young and so gifted our League has sustained a great loss; and while we bow in humble submission to the will of him who doeth all things well, we shall never cease to miss her, nor forget the tones of her sweet voice as she sang with us the songs of Zion.

Resolved, That we deeply sympathize with her bereaved companion and family, and extend to them the consolation which supported her in her affliction.

Resolved, That a page of the Minutes be devoted to her memory, and that a copy of these proceedings be furnished the family of the deceased.

Respectfully submitted.

MRS. J. M. STONE, for Committee.

KENNON—The undersigned having been appointed by our superintendent to draft resolutions as a tribute of respect to the memory of WOODSON KENNON, who "fell on sleep" April 27, 1897, submit the following:

Whereas, The spirit of Woodson Kennon has left his suffering body to enter upon the rest and reward prepared for "the pure in heart;" therefore, be it

Resolved, That in his death we lose an example of heroic suffering and patient, cheerful resignation born of the Spirit of God.

Resolved, That while his name has been dropped from the roll on account of ill health, when deprived him of attending for the past few years, it has been registered on our hearts and shall be cherished as a precious legacy.

Resolved, That we deeply sympathize with the bereaved parents and relatives in their sorrow and loss, and reverently commend them to the care of that holy One who came to heal earth's sorrows.

Resolved, That these resolutions be spread upon the Minutes, and a copy of same be sent to the bereaved parents, and a copy furnished the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE for publication.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and, therefore, requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address,

CONTAINS THE FOLLOWING HELPS TO THE STUDY OF THE BIBLE.

Concordance, with Contexts, over 40,000 References; Index to Persons, Places and Subjects, 16,000 References; Scripture Atlas, with Index; Glossary of Bible Words; Bible Calendar; Summary and Analyses of the Old and New Testaments.

A Self-Pronouncing Dictionary of Proper Names and Foreign Words contained in the Bible, comprising about 3,500 words, giving the pronunciation, the meaning, and the location of the text where the word occurs for the first time.

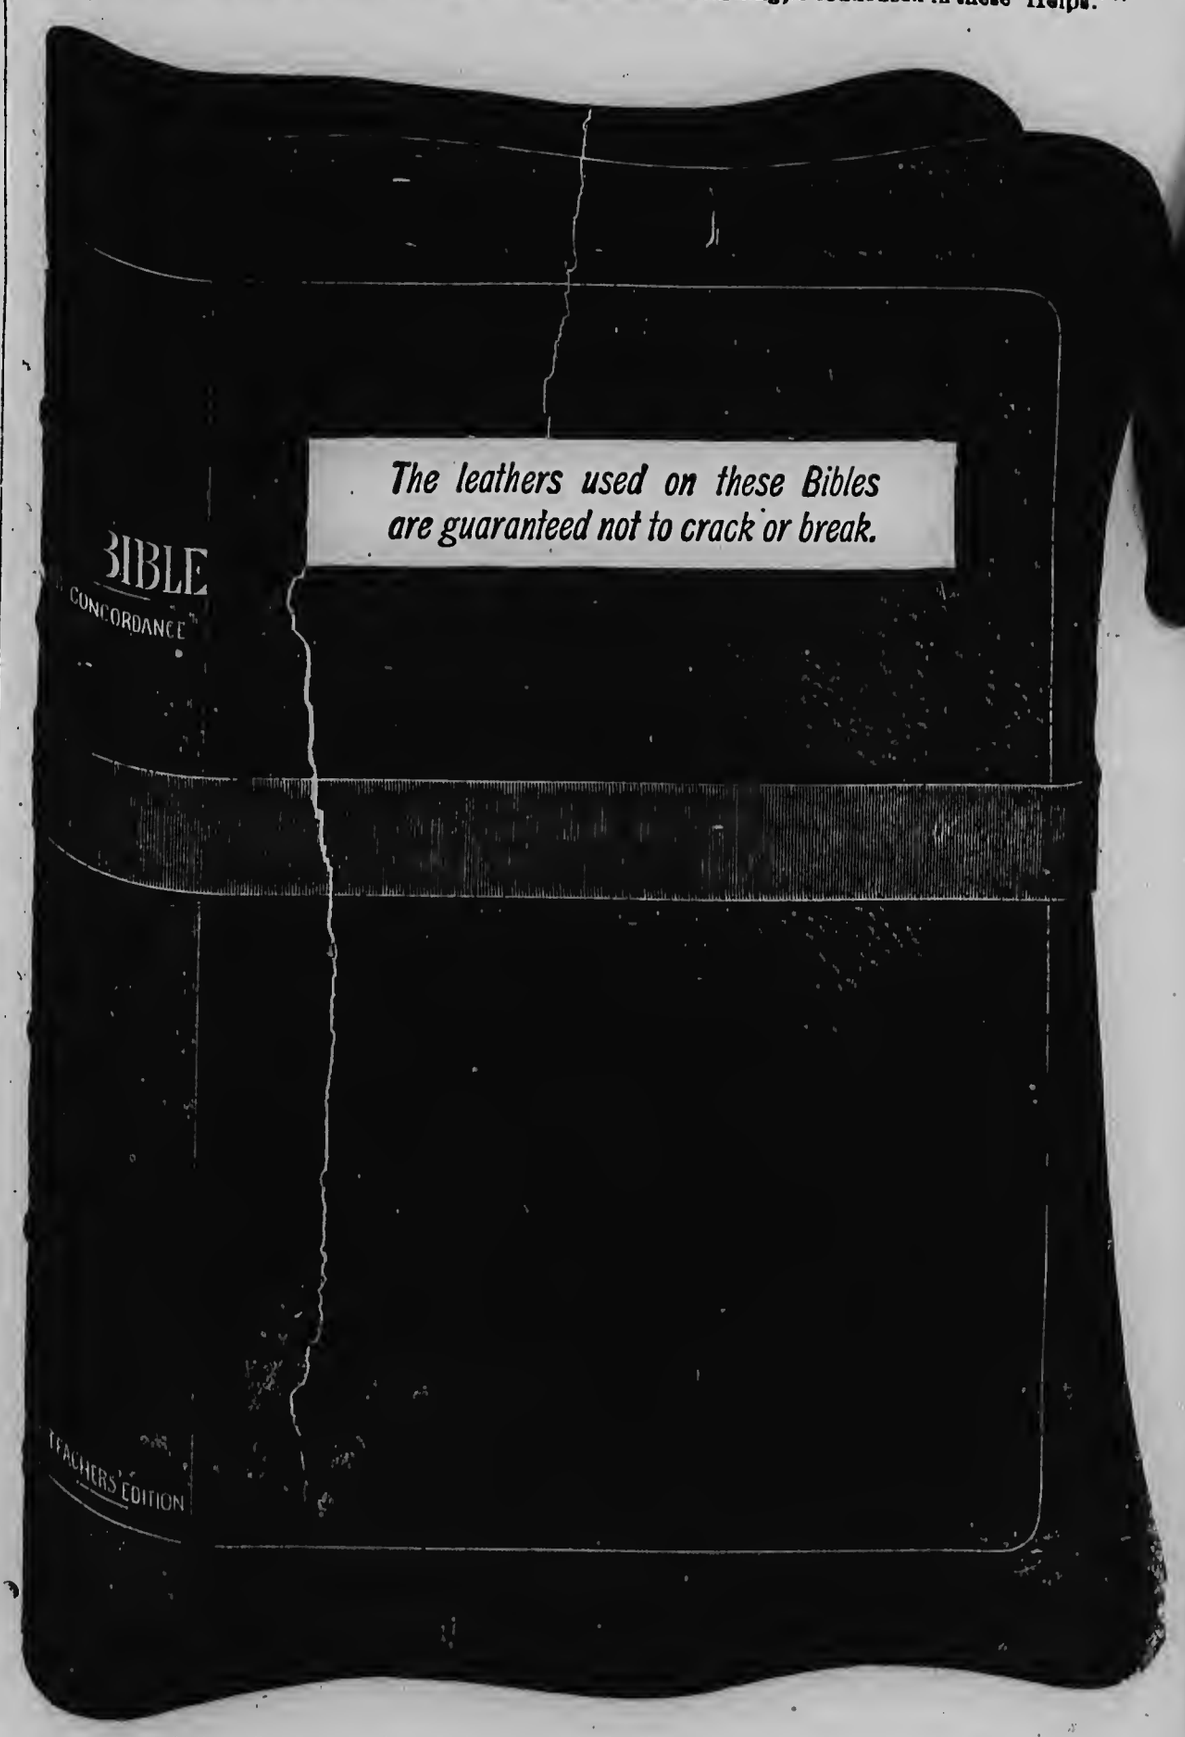
Exhaustive Articles on Biblical History, Geography, Topography, Natural History, Ethnology, Botany, Chronology, Music and Poetry; a Complete Harmony of the Gospels, Tables of Parables, Miracles, Prophecies, Prayers, Money, Weights and Measures, Jewish Sects and Orders, etc.

TWELVE FULL-PAGE MAPS IN COLORS.

Every proper name in the text is syllabified and accented, and has the vowels marked according to the most authoritative modern standards of pronunciation. The text is in exact conformity with that of the world-famous Oxford S. S. Teacher's Bible. All the valuable "Helps to the Study of the Bible" contained in the Oxford Bible are retained.

The only Teacher's Bible with a self-pronouncing text. No similar Bible was ever obtainable heretofore; in fact, no publishers ever attempted its publication.

"The essence of fifty expensive volumes, by men of sacred learning, is condensed in these 'Helps.'"



The large-type (Bourgeois) edition sells to persons who are not subscriber for $5. Our subscribers get it, on conditions specified below, for $2.35. The same Bible in Minion type, which is somewhat smaller than Bourgeois, we offer to our subscribers, on conditions named below, for $1.55. To those who are not subscribers we sell it at $3.15. We also handle an edition in still smaller type (Emerald). Our subscribers get this for $1.00.

In order to get anyone of these at these rates it is necessary to pay your subscription one year in advance, viz., to June, '98. (A little later it will be July, '98.)

For twenty cents we will have your name engraved in gilt letters on the outside of the book.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

DOMESTIC.

The cost of the completed capital at Albany, with the central tower left out, foots up to $23,000,000, twice as much as the national capitol.

President McKinley spent last Friday at the Nashville Exposition. He spent the day in holding receptions and viewing some of the wonders of the Centennial.

The cruiser "New York" sailed from Boston, under sealed orders, on June 10. She was provisioned and coaled for a long cruise. It is believed the vessel will anchor in a Cuban port.

Archbishop Janssens, fifth Archbishop of the Roman Catholic Church in New Orleans, died last Thursday. He was on his way to his native town in Holland, having embarked last Wednesday, but was suddenly stopped by the hand of death. His remains were transferred to an inbound steamer, and on Saturday they arrived in this city and were conveyed to the archiepiscopal residence. He was buried on Wednesday, June 16.

The trial in the United States District Court of President Henry Gardes and other officers of the defunct American National Bank, after nearly a month of patient and arduous exertion by the accusers and the accused, has been brought to a termination. The jury brought in a verdict Saturday night, finding Henry Gardes and Walter W. Girault guilty of embezzling and misappropriating the funds of the bank, and of making false entries in the bank's books. Thomas H. Underwood was found not guilty.

The Harvard University memorial to Bishop Brooks is to be a building, for which the university will provide a site on the grounds. A fund of $50,000 has been raised, of which $40,000 will be expended on the building, which will provide accommodations for all of the religious and charitable societies of the university.

A cottage was dedicated at Beauvoir, Miss., on June 9, as a dormitory for the girl waifs sheltered by the S. P. C. C. of Louisiana. Mrs. M. C. Jennings donated the cottage, and has furnished it completely. The ceremony of dedication was very impressive. Rev. A. E. Clay, the superintendent, was assisted by other ministers.

Mr. Meyer S. Isaacs, president of the Baroness de Hirsch charity fund for the betterment of poor Jews in New York, has received a draft for $400,000, the distribution of which is to be made this week. A manual training school is to be founded with $150,000; $250,000 is to thin out the crowded district on the east side.

Chancellor W. E. Boggs, of the University of Georgia, in a report made to the Board of Trustees at Athens last week recommends the admission of women to the university on an equality with men. The women of the State have been conducting an agitation to this end for several years past, and the chancellor's recommendation is the first practical result of their labors.

On Monday the treaty between Great Britain and Venezuela, providing for the submission of the boundary dispute between the two countries to arbitration, was finally ratified. The scene of the ratification was the State Department at Washington, and with the signing of the documents by the British and Venezuelan representatives the interest of the United States in the question ceased.

FOREIGN.

There has been an uprising of natives in India. Several British officers and native soldiers were massacred.

An attempt was made to kill President Faure of France last week. A dynamite bomb exploded in a thicket while en route to Longchamps. No one was injured by the explosion. The culprit escaped.

Among the interesting features of Queen Victoria's diamond jubilee will be the presence in the grand parade, which is to be the culminating pageant of the celebration, of bodies of colonial troops from all parts of the British Empire.

Florence Nightingale, who has just celebrated her seventy-seventh birthday, is ill and not expected to recover. She will leave at her death a magnificent memorial of her achievements as a pioneer in the work of nursing the sick and wounded on an organized plan in the shape of a Nurses' Home, to which she devoted the $400,000 subscribed by the English people as a national testimonial of gratitude at the close of the Crimean war.

Although negotiations have now been in progress for some weeks between the representatives of the powers and the Turkish government, looking to a settlement of the trouble between Turkey and Greece, no solution has yet been arrived at. Although the powers have formulated the terms upon which they expect that a treaty of peace should be based, the Turkish government has not receded from any of its demands. The Turkish ministry appear to be unalterably opposed to the restoration of Thessaly to Greece.

Some Notes of Encouragement.

Bro. C. D. Cecil, Heidelburg circuit, is pressing his collections and expects increased contributions. May his people agreeably disappoint him by paying in full!

Bro. L. J. Jones, Raleigh circuit, has a number of religious young women vigorously helping him to "raise" his collections, and they are at work and are "turning on the light."

Bro. J. G. Cammack is busy gathering materials and money wherewith to build a new church in Brownsville, and expects to bring up his collections in full. How his people love him, and how cordially do they cooperate with him!

Bro. W. H. Huntley and the Lumberton brethren are showing "zeal according to knowledge" in thei missionary contributions. The Lord abundantly bless and prosper!

ONLY TO-DAY.

BY REV. HENRY BURTON.

Only to-day is mine,
And that I owe to Thee;
Help me to make it Thine,
As pure as it may be;
Let it see something done,
Let it see something won,
Then at the setting sun
I'll give it back to Thee.

What if I can not tell
The cares the day may bring;
I know that I shall dwell
Beneath Thy sheltering wing;
And there the load is light,
And there the dark is bright,
And weakness turns to might,
And so I trust and sing.

What shall I ask to-day?
Naught but Thine own sweet will.
The windings of the way
Lead to Thy holy hill;
And whether here or there,
Why should I fear or care?
Thy heavens are everywhere,
And they are o'er me still.

Give me Thyself to-day,
I dare not walk alone;
Speak to me by the way,
And "all things" are my own;
The treasures of Thy grace,
The secret hiding place,
The vision of Thy face,
The shadow of Thy throne!

How to Study.

We study to learn, and all learning is acquisition of knowledge not formerly possessed. Given any subject concerning which we are to acquire knowledge, and the best "how" is to sit down or get in some position with the source of information before the learner, or somewhere in his presence, abstract the attention from everything else in the universe, and concentrate it upon the different phases of the said subject, each and collectively, until all the knowledge if it desired, or even possible of acquisition, has been obtained. Every interruption, from whatever cause, delays the complete acquisition. If the time required extends through hours and even days, it would be better if interruptions were not necessary, even for sleep, recreation, eating, and the various calls of nature and life. But in our plane of existence sleep, eating and recreation are necessary for the sustenance of life and the maintaining of the mind in its vigor; and we may use the hour of recreation for the digestion of what we in some degree acquired the preceding hour. Any moments spent in assimilating what we study are a part of the study itself, and have a place in the process; but all moments during which the mind is absorbed by other interests, whether trifling or important, mean postponement of the goal of complete knowledge. Supposing the acquisition of this knowledge a supreme duty, and then any unnecessary loss from our work of acquisition, and consequent postponements of complete knowledge, are sinful, that we allow our minds to be turned from the supreme duty to other trifling ones.

Here we may well call attention to a dangerous habit of a laborious thing. Many people who want to be students are not so much idlers as triers. They keep busy, but instead of a steady, persevering pursuit after all immortal knowledge that will be of real substantial value, they are side-tracked by numerous trivial duties that seem for the time more or less urgent, but which have in them no lasting benefit.

Thus civilization brings danger to spirituality. Civilization offers so many comforts, conveniences and luxuries that men, in their proneness to take thought for the body, are continually tempted to devote to these the little time only which is in many case required for possession. Little by little do trifles absorb the hours, and only minutes are left for the vast concerns of immortal life.

There is danger, too, from so many books and papers. Literature is very cheap. Pamphlets, daily newspapers, illustrated magazines fall into our laps; this and that late light product put in their claims for attention. Happy is the preacher-student who can dash these aside, giving them scarcely a glance, because his mind is occupied with the world's masters. It is well to have a chest for the purpose of preserving such light literature as does not for the present seem worthy of serious perusal, but is fit to be kept for a possible future use in the practical demands of the ministry. Bishop McTyeire, it is said, never read newspapers, giving as his reason that he cared not to know much recorded in them; and, if they told of anything important, he would probably hear it from the lips of others. The system of laborious trifling leads into a wide field, which is barren and waste.

The twofold purpose of a preacher's studying is his own intellectual upbuilding and the evolving of thoughtful truth, to be used for the popular edification. System here, as in other departments of life, supplies great advantage. No longer than two weeks ago I read a secret copied in our ADVOCATE from an exchange. It was this: The preacher who devotes the five buoyant hours of the morning to earnest study, the afternoons to systematic pastoral work, the evenings to his family and social life, will achieve success. We all know this secret worthy of jealous keeping. Who will prove true to it and let it bring forth its fruitage?

We need to be as strict with ourselves during the hours of study as any strong old pedagogue ever was with his hard-headed, wayward pupils. Here we would pronounce another beatitude, and say: Happy is the student who, for the sake of himself and those whom he feeds, has perfect control over his appetites and passions. Happy is the man who, as his own taskmaster, during the hours of study can lock the world out and lock himself in; who, when he sees himself going out at the door, will call himself back. Happy is the student who will not excuse himself at such times to try a new yoke of oxen, to see his recently purchased land, or even to dote upon his newly married wife. When Mrs. Gladstone was a bride she complained that her husband doted rather more upon the classics than upon his bride. She was jealous of Homer. This reminiscence contains a hint which we may well work on when we attempt to explain why it is that Gladstone has been for half a century a master in literature, theology, and statecraft.

Let knowledge, thought, beautiful, sublime, uplifting towards heaven, be the student's love, his passion, a fair portion of his daily bread; and let this passion for daily intellectual and spiritual food become so overpowering as to smother many a baser appetite. Let it be a continual exhibition of the expulsive power of a new affection.

There is so much within the range of knowledge, and so little that any one person can learn, that good judgment should be used in choosing proper objects, not only because of the advantage that some pieces of knowledge have over others, but also because of the individual aptitude to a certain branch of knowledge. What we need is patient attention to the subject in hand, and it is easier to attend well to what we like.

Doubtless, the genius is often simply one who has made a happy hit or choice, and he pursues with a delight that gives patience. Each new acquisition is a joy. He dwells in his subject, and, of course, becomes master of it.

We, as preachers, pursue the highest truths of the universe, and each new appropriation is so delightful, uplifting and necessary that we ought to be careful, lest in saving some lesser advantages we lose the important results of study.

From the Interior.

Some of our preachers—specially some of the younger men—have been converted to the tithing system; to the idea of giving one-tenth to the Lord. It is well enough to have some system in all our work, both secular and religious. System is essential to order, and order is essential to piety. The tenth is vastly more than most people give, and, perhaps, it is more than some ought to give, and, manifestly, not as much as many others ought to do. So, if any are led to give that much, improvement is made. The advocates of the tithing system, or giving the tenth, do not agree among themselves as to what is meant by the tenth—the tenth of the gross income or of the net proceeds. Some say one thing and some another. This is an important question in the final and correct adjustment of this system. I am not yet convinced that God requires just this under the gospel dispensation. I am not yet ready to assert positively that it is the duty of Christians to give one-tenth of their gross incomes or one-tenth of their net gains. When I say things of that kind I like to back it up by the Word of God. The desirability and advisability of adopting this system, or some other, is quite another question. What God requires and what I might advise are two very different things. The one is a divine enactment, the other a human judgment.

There seems to be an innate tendency in some men to run off after one idea, to preach and teach one thing to the exclusion of everything else. This is unfortunate—a weakness that ought not to be yielded to, not for a moment, nor under any kind of pressure. When a preacher yields to this, it matters not what the subject is, nor how sound his teaching may be, he soon loses his influence for good. He becomes a hobbyist and a crank. The people grow weary of an everlasting sawing on one string. The thing comes to be monotonous. I have known some preachers who emptied their churches and lost their places by preaching every Sunday on so great and important a subject as temperance, family government, baptism, the millennium, and, strange to say, on sanctification. It was not because the people were opposed to these things, but because the preacher wore himself, the subject and the people out. It is said that a drop of water falling on the head in hot weather is remarkably pleasant at first, but, if continued long, it comes to be very painful. I know a few preachers now who preach in whole or in part on giving the tenth in every sermon. The mention of this subject by them causes people to dodge like the crack of a rifle near by. The same is true in the case of other preachers on the other subjects named. The average preacher can tell about all he knows on any given subject in one sermon half an hour long. A repeater is not popular long with the same congregation. Variety is said to be the spice of life, and it is the spice of preaching, too. A full gospel in the fullness of the gospel wearies no one.

After long years of travel in the interior, and regular and constant attendance at church, I do not think I ever knew the preaching to be more earnest, practical and scriptural than it is now. This is true of all the churches and the large majority of the preachers. They are men of God bent on saving souls and building up the church. One would have to travel long and go far to hear a sermon that did not have enough good in it to make it worth listening to—enough truth to save a soul. The truly great sermons are heard at wide intervals and on rare occasions. Paul and Peter have few successors in the ministry.

It is evident everywhere that preachers must qualify themselves more thoroughly for their work. This they ought to do before they enter the work, or they will have it to do after they enter. Our preachers and people ought to impress the importance of thorough preparation on the minds of our young men. The supply of illy qualified preachers is now greater than the demand for them. The ranks are crowded. The demand for qualified and thoroughly equipped men is greater now than ever before. "As you are, we have no need for you, no place to give you; but if you will qualify yourself for the work, there is plenty of room." This, or the substance of it, should be whispered in the ears of young men called to preach the gospel.

The facilities provided for helping young men to get ready to preach are very great, thanks be unto God. Nothing, nobody, can qualify a young man for this great work without diligence, great industry and persistent, hard work on his part. Study is hard work. A lazy man might be crammed for the examination without being prepared for the work. A falsehood of this kind will out within the first year. Truth should be in the inward parts of a preacher.

The right thing and the merciful thing is for Examining Committees to be rigid and thorough with young men at the door of the ministry. These committees should be honest and exact in their reports. We may admit a man by grace, and then, unqualified as he is, require him to be justified by works. The examination concerns his preparation for the works. It is wrong to require him to do works he is not qualified for.

The people in the interior want preachers who know how to think, and are able to express their thoughts in simple, plain, intelligible English. They are not hungry for Latin, Greek, and Hebrew; but they do long for the truth of God in strong English. They do not care a fig about what infidel scientists say, but they do care for the words of Jesus—the Word of God. VIATOR.

Epworth League Echoes.

BY REV. THOMAS B. CLIFFORD.

"Speak not evil one of another, brethren; he that speaketh evil of his brother and judgeth his brother, speaketh evil of the law and judgeth the law."

"Do all the good you can, to all the people you can, in all the ways you can, as long as ever you can, for Jesus' sake."

The Epworth League means, trained soldiers for active service. The bugle notes say—"Forward." We have never learned the "retreat."

Bishop Ninde, president of the Epworth League of the Methodist Episcopal Church, speaks of the young people's movement as follows: "It is, perhaps, impossible that our young people should estimate the crisal character of the period in which they are living. To those of us whose memory can span a half-century of vivid recollections, we seem in these later years to be springing with leaps and bounds toward some august destiny. It thrills one's soul to think that vast numbers of our Christian young people will live to see not only the incoming of the new century, but to wander far down into its depths. The voices that call from the mists which veil that mystic future are especially for them. Will they heed the call? Will they rise to the summit of their high privilege and duty? We believe they will. That faith is the day-star of a better hope for the race. The skies are brightening. We uncover our heads in the presence of that marching host—the young, the hopeful and the daring, who shall snatch from our failing grasp the blood-stained banner, and bear it on to glorious victory."

By special invitation of Dr. H. W. Featherstun, pastor of Central Church, Meridian, we left Water Valley, Thursday morning, June 17, to visit his charge in the interest of the Orphans' Home and Epworth League. We arrived in the Queen City at ten o'clock at night, and found a committee of enthusiastic Leaguers at the depot to extend a welcome and arrange for our entertainment.

En route we met Bro. W. M. Sullivan, who informed us that he had recently witnessed a wonderful revival in his church at Forest, and had organized a good League.

During the trip from Jackson to Meridian we enjoyed a friendly chat with a religious drummer. "What house are you traveling for?" he asked. I replied, "I am a Methodist preacher." "Then give me your hand," he said. He turned out to be a loyal Methodist from Philadelphia on his way to Meridian to accept a permanent position with a large wholesale house, intending to make Mississippi his home. He remarked that his father was a Methodist for fifty years, and also stated that his wife was the daughter of a Methodist preacher. He spoke of Bishop Simpson and other pure-minded and sweet spirited men whose names are household words among American Methodists. "These men made my father's house their home," he added.

Our drummer friend is an Epworth Leaguer, a member of the Y. M. C. A., and he, with his excellent family, will shortly hand their church letters to Dr. Featherstun. We predict that they will prove valuable additions, not only to the Central Church, but to the society of the Queen City.

We pen these lines in Meridian Saturday afternoon, and will give an account of the Sunday services and League rally, etc., in our "Echoes" of next week.

Meridian, Miss., June 19, 1897.

"Forsitan haec olim meminisse juvabit." With these words the hero of the Enied cheered his disappointed followers, looking away from the then present hardship and toils to the glory and token of a better day. The deepest joys and sublimest experiences of this earthly pilgrimage belong to its maturer years.

What a poor, barren life it must be that lives only in the present! Associations make life more real because by them is the current of life broadened and deepened.

A college needs a history of its own. Ours has one. A glorious history of self-denial, toil and sacrifice on the part of faithful men, to some of whom God committed the ministry of the Word, and others who wrought with them, all ministers of sanctified learning. A glorious history in that galaxy of brainy men who have gone forth from her classic halls and taken lofty rank in all the departments of good citizenship in our own and other commonwealths. Their names are written in the hearts of their countrymen; why should I write them here? Their deeds are so interwoven into the texture of our social, civil and religious life as to escape notice by their very commonality. Louisiana, Mississippi, and the great State of Texas are much richer in those things that make for life and righteousness, because of the old college, that taught and trained promising boys, and made of them cultured, strong men. With this constituency there is no good reason why Centenary should not have as large or even larger patronage than any college in our State.

The faculty, I sincerely believe, is the best-equipped for special work in the various departments I have ever seen. The general tone of the surroundings is pure, wholesome, good. I would rather risk my boy there than at any other institution of learning within the range of my observation. In fact, I believe a boy is under better influences there than can be found in and about many homes. I have known of boys sent there to escape evil influences which were about them. The work that is being done is first-class. The glory of past achievements is great, but the value and worth of the present work is the need of this day. To this we invite attention and challenge comparison. What makes an education? A leading out or development of a single power of mind or body? Surely not. Like the mathematician's definition of a line, this kind has only length, and is frequently very attenuated. Rather would we say, it is the development to the largest measure of perfection of every power we possess. With the educated man, as with the spiritual man, "By their fruits ye shall know them." Nothing shows the man more than his education.

We ask our people to send their boys to this institution, for reasons given in this article, and for many more too numerous to mention. The recent commencement exercises were "a feast of reason and a flow of soul." Many were entertained and benefited by them. Now, in the words of Dr. Carter, "Send us your boys." S. J. DAVIES.

East Mississippi Female College.

The Board of Trustees of the East Mississippi Female College, at their recent meeting, passed resolutions highly complimentary to that institution under its present management. A visit to the college, a few weeks ago, made so favorable an impression upon me that I feel disposed to endorse the words of praise contained in the resolutions.

That the institution in the first year of its new administration should have had such a largely increased attendance is surprising; but to one who has visited the school the surprise has given place to the confident expectation that the very efficient administration of the affairs of the college will merit and receive still better things in the future.

The president seems peculiarly fitted for his work. He is industrious, aggressive, of more than usual administrative ability, and thoroughly convinced of the possibilities of great usefulness in the college. The members of the faculty are evidently well equipped and faithful, and the pupils are very loyal to the college.

A deeply religious spirit seems to pervade the institution, and everywhere there is evidence of skillful and thorough work.

Kindness.

There is no excuse for the Christian's being unkind; no excuse for making the atmosphere in which he moves heated or exhausting to others; no excuse for adding to the burden of life's work, the friction of life's machinery. The man who is kind will always get the best work out of his fellow-men. We can all be kind, and I charge you to remember that no munificent money-giving, no clever things done or written, no great business or commercial achievement, nothing whatever, compasses the end of kindness. The follower of Jesus who fails in the duty of kindness denies his God.—Rev. W. S. Rainsford.

We may not say of a man that he hates religion—even though he may say it of himself—until we know the type of religion he hates. The probability is that he has mistaken a counterfeit for a genuine sample.—Richmond Advocate.

THE HIGHER LIFE.

BY ADELAIDE PROCTER.

To play through life a perfect part,
Unnoticed and unknown
To seek no rest in any heart,
Save only God alone.
In little things to own no will,
To have no share in great,
To find the labor ready still,
And for the crown to wait

Upon the brow to bear no trace
Of more than common care;
To write no secret in the face
For men to read it there;
The daily cross to clasp and bless
With such familiar zeal
As hides from all that not the less
The daily weight you feel:

In toils that praise will never pay,
To see your life go past,
To meet in every coming day
Twin sister of the last,
To hear of high heroic things,
And yield them reverence due,
But feel life's daily sufferings
Are far more fit for you:

To own no secret, soft disguise
To which self-love is prone,
Unnoticed by all other eyes,
Unworthy in your own;
To yield with such a happy art,
That no one thinks you care,
And say to your poor, bleeding heart:
"How little you can bear!"

O 'tis a pathway hard to choose,
A struggle hard to share,
For human pride would still refuse
The useless trials there;
But since we know the gate is low
That leads to heavenly bliss,
What higher grace would God bestow
Than such a life as this?

Correspondence.

California Letter.

MR. EDITOR: Some weeks have passed since the date of my last epistle. Our District Conferences have all been held, and the California State League Conference has also met and adjourned. Under all the circumstances, the reports from the various districts were encouraging. Some revivals had been witnessed, but for the most part pastors are on a "still hunt." Upon the whole, attendance upon the ministry of the Word has never been better, collections are as well up as usual, and some building and repairing of churches and parsonages has been done. In Hollister the mechanics are putting the finishing touches to a new parsonage. It is an elegant six-room cottage, with all modern conveniences. I do not know of a more desirable parsonage sought after before. Hollister will now be the most desirable appointment in the Conference, without doubt. I will be thankful if it should please Bishop Hargrove to permit me to remain another year, and then—well, possibly the General Conference will grant a further extension of time.

The State League Conference was held in Oakland, and, like the Annual Conference, was self-entertained. The attendance was hardly so large as last year, but Dr. Steel was with us, and more than made up for the absence of others. Everyone, old and young, fell in love with our secretary. We have some brilliant young people.

The young lawyers seem to be much in favor. Waste, of Oakland, our first president, has already made a success at the bar. His successor, Poage, of Ukiah, gives promise of forging to the front in that profession in the northern part of the State. Newby, of Los Angeles, who succeeds Poage, is also a limb of the law. He is sensible and eloquent. Duckworth, another young attorney from the southern part of the State, was a prominent worker, and one of whom we are proud. Next to, or alongside of, the attorneys ranked several young ladies. It would, perhaps, not be best for me to name them. They can talk as well as work. A number of the preachers were present. The Conference was conservative, but not ultra. Our young people think for themselves, as they should, and are thoroughly loyal to the church.

Dr. Steel has visited a number of charges in the two Conferences, lecturing, delivering addresses, preaching. His praise is being sung all along the line. Of course, he visited Hollister—"the hub." He addressed the League, and gave us "Dixie." We gave him a large audience; but if he will return, we promise to fill the opera house.

Two months ago California's crop prospects were never brighter, but the rains ceased too early, and in some sections the grain crop will be almost a failure, while the average will not exceed half a crop.

Rev. T. A. Atkinson, stationed in Santa Rosa, has resigned his charge, and is knocking at the door of the M. E. Church. I am sorry he has seen proper to take this step. He has been honored with the best appointments in the Conference. He is not a great preacher, but preaches well, and is an enthusiastic worker. The main trouble with "Tom" (as he is familiarly called) is, that he is impulsive and nervous, and can't help getting nervous about Conference time, and prying into cabinet secrets. It takes a close cabinet indeed to be proof against his prying. I hope the M. E. brethren will treat him kindly, and that God will abundantly bless his labors among them.

I understand that Bishop Hargrove and his counselors at the last session of the Pacific Conference decided not to allow any evangelists in the Conference during the present year, and that, as a result of this agreement, Dr. Simmons, of the Merced district, has arrested the character of Rev. E. A. Ross for preaching in the town of Merced. Of this particular case I know nothing, and am not prepared to speak of its merits.

However, I have been surprised at the stand taken by some writers in the ADVOCATE as to the rights of local preachers. Preachers are placed in charge of specific fields of labor, having the interests of the church within the bounds of such fields entrusted to their care, and called upon annually to account for the manner in which they have discharged their trust. There can be but one preacher in charge of a single pastoral charge (he being subject to the godly counsels of his superiors in office, presiding elder and Bishop), all junior preachers and local preachers and other officers of the church within the charge being required to work under his supervision. In view of this fact, it seems strange to me that anyone would hold to the view that a local preacher from another charge has a right to enter the bounds of a pastorate and hold a meeting against the protest of the pastor. Wherever this is done divisions and strife can but result, and the rent will be in proportion to the success of the meeting. I regret exceedingly that "holiness" evangelists have acted in accord with this view. By so doing they have greatly hurt the cause. I believe in evangelists and also in the Wesleyan doctrine of entire sanctification.

W. P. ANDREWS.

From Rev. R. M. Blocker.

With Miss Jessie Bussey and Mrs. Lizzie Schexnayder in the lead, my congregation furnished the money necessary to give me a vacation at Sour Lake, Texas, for the restoration of my run-down health and strength. The Thursday's mail brought me a package of the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE for free distribution at the hotel, which has, at once, secured a year's subscription from the proprietors of the property of Sour Lake.

I could not be true to God and the work of nature should I withhold from the many readers of the ADVOCATE my observations while on these grounds. Again, many run-down and sick people will read these lines and come to Sour Lake and get the blessing of rest and health.

This excellent health resort is nine miles north of S. P. railroad, in Hardin county, Tex., near midway between Beaumont and Houston. A hack runs in from the grounds twice a day—meeting all the trains. In case it should be found necessary to stop over at the station right good hotel accommodations can be had only a few steps from the depot. When you reach Sour Lake you find splendid hotel accommodations at reasonable rates. The beautiful grounds are well shaded with forest trees—only a short walk takes you down to the lake that contains thirteen, or more, mineral wells of diversified medicinal properties. The bath-rooms and open pools are well kept. The attractive forest around the lake furnish retreats and protection from the hot sun. There seems to be no time that the breeze is not sufficient to give pleasure and comfort. Hunting grounds are accessible, where game—deer, turkey, squirrels—are found reasonably numerous to delight and gratify the ordinary huntsman. Every surrounding is home-like, and the proprietors spare no means to make one have a good time. The guests that are here this week are quite congenial and pleasant. At this writing I have been here only four days and I feel like a new man.

For a long time there has been no church near the grounds, but now they have a neat little chapel erected, and Bro. Gates, the Methodist pastor in this circuit, opens up a protracted meeting to-night. Much more might be said about the works of God out here, but I must close.

Notes of Encouragement.

Rev. W. M. Williams, P. C., Gallman circuit, reports the Sunday-school at old Crystal Springs organized into a missionary society according to the Book of Discipline. Dr. Lambuth will send them a supply of missionary literature.

Rev. J. M. Weems, P. E., is the first of "our beloved" to send in a missionary bulletin for the second quarter. From it is noted that Crawford Street (Vicksburg) Sunday-school paid $5.51 for foreign missions; Port Gibson congregation, $45; Harriston, $22.60; Utica, $1.95; Rocky Springs, $25; South Warren, $5; but not a single charge reported so much as one cent for home missions.

SUBMISSION.

BY CLIFFORD R. JONES.

Tho' earth and hell combined
To win my heart;
Dear Jesus, it is thine;
Sin hath no part.

My will I give to thee,
Sweet Nazarene;
Thine would I ever be,
However mean.

The world in colors bright
May beckon me;
But thro' the blackest night
I'll follow thee.

Tho' life be agony
And full of pain;
I'll live it willingly
Thy smile to gain.

When fairest hopes float back
From off life's sea,
I'll never, never lack
Sweet faith in thee.

When arrows past me fly,
And tempest roar;
I'll lift mine eyes on high
And fear no more.

When death with icy hand
Takes hold on me,
Soon, soon the glory land
I'll reach with thee.

With golden harp I'll fall
At thy dear feet;
The glad story tell to all,
Thy name repeat.

Evangelism.

Probably no subject in the church has caused more thought and Christian solicitude than the one pertaining to evangelists. We, as a church, hitherto have had no place for them, acting upon the principle that every itinerant preacher is a biblical evangelist. But many gather from the teachings of the Bible, the travels of the apostles, and the present seeming demands of the church, that this mode of procedure is too circumscribed, and from the same cause feel called to travel and preach more extensively. That these men go, and will go as long as there is an opening and support for them, is a settled fact. Many of our itinerant preachers, feeling called to this work, have gone to the local ranks. Taking the law of the church in their own hands, and making their own appointments, they have gone forth broadcast over the land. It is the only appointment in the church where there is no provision made for the support of an active preacher, and no report given in the Minutes of money received and appropriated. It is useless to say they shall not exist, or shall not go, for go they will as long as they feel a call to this work and there is a support in it.

My proposition is this: That the next General Conference make such a place and provisions for the support of these worthy men, and that they be required to make a report of their labors to the Annual Conference to which they belong, with the collections made by them.

When a brother feels called to this work, let him make application to his Annual Conference, or to Bishop and presiding elders, just as a man applies to the Conference for admission, and, if accepted, let the Bishop give him the appointment and so publish it. Then, when a preacher or people want an evangelist, they can call one, backed by the church. Let the Bishop and presiding elders review his former receipts, and make his assessment somewhere in that neighborhood above his traveling expenses. Let the evangelist keep a faithful account of all moneys received, and whatever is above his assessment and traveling expenses turn over to the educational interest of the church. All other traveling preachers are required to take the Conference collections, and why not the evangelist? This will settle the trouble and put everything at ease.

J. F. EVANS.

Vaiden, Miss.

Rev. Archie White.

In the neighborhood of old Macedonia Church, in Wilkinson county, Miss., on the third of September, 1822, Rev. Archie White was born, and died in the same county and community, April 26, 1897. His father, Robin White, was a native of England. His mother was a Miss Cassells, an aunt of Uncle John Cassells, an honorable citizen of Wilkinson county. Bro. White was twice married: first, to Miss Amy Jane Coon, of Wilkinson county, July 20, 1844. His second wife was a Miss Elizabeth Sims, of the same county. He had eleven children, all by his first wife; nine of these—six sons and three daughters—are still living.

In the Summer of 1853 he joined the Methodist Church on probation at old Macedonia under the pastorate of Rev. James Y. Griffin. At a meeting held at Mt. Carmel by E. A. Flowers and Dudley Bonds, during the Summer of 1854, he was converted and baptized and formally received into the church by Dudley Bonds, a local preacher. He was elected steward and appointed class leader soon after he joined the church. Not long after he was received into the church he erected an altar of family worship, and kept the fires constantly burning thereon till the Lord took him to his reward above.

In 1857 at Smyrna Church, in Wilkinson county, Rev. L. Campbell licensed him to preach the gospel. About a month after he was licensed to preach he made his first effort at his home church from Matt. viii, 11, 12, as a text.

At Hazlehurst, Miss., in December, 1874, he was ordained deacon by Bishop Robert Paine. Educational opportunities were very meager in the neighborhood of Macedonia during the youthful days of Bro. White; hence his education was limited. The Lord, however, had endowed him with a good degree of practical common sense. Had he had good educational advantages in early life, and had he given his undivided energies to the work of the ministry, he likely would have been of some prominence in the itinerant ranks. But the Lord had a work for him to do in another sphere, and in that sphere he did his work faithfully and well. For more than a quarter of a century he has been a prominent figure in the Macedonia Church and community. He was largely instrumental in the building of that church. The greater part of the money necessary to build it was given by him. It was manifest in many ways that he loved the church.

As a local preacher, he was no idler. Quite a number of years previous to his death, and as long as his health would permit, he kept up two or three regular appointments for preaching. Some of these appointments were fifteen and twenty miles away from his home. His love for the itinerant preachers was manifested by his hearty co-operation with them in all their work. He fully recognized his relation to them. His house was the itinerant's home. Nor did his interest in them cease with his hospitality. He gave liberally of his means towards their support. Letters from Revs. R. D. Norsworthy, D. C. Langford, J. W. Sandell, J. Wilson Brown, and C. McDonald, former pastors and presiding elder of Bro. White, fully authorize us in making the above statements concerning him.

He was a friend of the widow and orphan. Many of the Lord's poor were aided by him. He was a man of decided convictions and strong will-power. He was not neutral on any question that might arise which involved the welfare of the community or church. One of his former pastors, who was intimately associated with him for several years, says of him: "He was on God's side of every question that came up before him."

During the reconstruction days of 1875 and 1876, when party politics ran high in Wilkinson county, and some would go too far and do too much, he rebuked them for it, denouncing it as being wrong. It is hardly probable that a man with his decided conviction for the right would do everything just to the liking of everyone. It is, however, a compliment to his Christian character that in the very community where he was born, reared, and spent his active life of nearly three-quarters of a century, he should leave such a large host of friends. His neighbors, and those who have known him for years, speak of him as a good citizen and Christian gentleman.

He made an impress for good in his own community. The young people, who generally speak of him as Uncle Archie White, regard him a pious, consecrated Christian minister. He will continue to live in their hearts and lives.

He leaves an impress for good on the hearts of his children. All of his nine children who survive him are members of the church. Some of them are occupying official positions in the Methodist Church. Two of his sons are ministers of the gospel, walking in the footsteps of their father. One of these is a local preacher, and the other, Rev. M. L. White, is a useful member of the Mississippi Conference. Though the Lord has called him to his heavenly home, like the life of every good man, his work and influence will still live. Influences for good have been set in motion by him which will continue to widen till they reach the shores of eternity.

A good man in Israel has fallen. He will be missed in Macedonia Church and community. God takes away his workmen, but carries on his work. May his mantle fall on many of the young men whom he has counseled for good, and for whom he has prayed! He has left a rich heritage to his family, the heritage of a good name, which is rather to be chosen than thousands of silver and gold. Having finished his work on earth, the Lord has called him to his reward on high.

I copy from the invitation to commencement sent out by the faculty and class of '97 of Millsaps College the following: "Sunday, June 6, 11 o'clock A. M.—Sermon by the Rev. J. J. Tigert, D. D., Nashville, Tenn. 8 o'clock P. M.—Sermon by the Rev. J. J. Tigert, D. D., Nashville, Tenn."

It was my understanding, as was that of many others, that the 8 o'clock sermon would be preached to the Y. M. C. A. of Millsaps, but from the ADVOCATE, of June 10, I copy the following: "The commencement sermon" (of Millsaps) "was preached Sunday morning in the college chapel by Dr. John J. Tigert, of Nashville.... At night, in the first Methodist Church, Dr. Tigert preached another commencement sermon, this time for Belhaven Female College."

Now, which is correct—the invitation or the ADVOCATE? In justice to Methodism, you will answer.

The following letter from the energetic secretary of Greenville district will explain itself:

I fear it is believed the overflow has damaged us to such an extent it is not advisable to hold our annual meeting in Greenville district. I have written to the Cleveland society, and am assured the high water will not affect them so seriously. They cordially invite us to come. In regard to our district meeting, it is quite different. This is usually held in April or May, and at that time every society was subject to the flood, and many of us under for two months. The receding waters leave our hands full of home work that could not be carried on while the water was with us. We trust you will kindly see from this why we seem to neglect our duty. Our public meetings are sources of great pleasure to every member of the P. and H. M. S., and our failure to meet this year causes much regret on the district. We hope, however, to have a full attendance in October, and trust each auxiliary will send a better report of their work than ever before made. The great distress around us gives a larger field for home mission work, and I hope each member will use every effort to relieve the needy.

The Religion That Is Wanted.

We want a religion that softens the step, and tones the voice to melody, and fills the eye with sunshine, and checks the impatient exclamation and the harsh rebuke; a religion that is polite, deferential to superiors, courteous to inferiors and considerate to friends; a religion that goes into the family, and keeps the husband from being spiteful when the dinner is late, and keeps the dinner from being late; keeps the wife from fretting when the husband tracks the newly-washed floor with his muddy boots, and makes the husband mindful of the scraper and the door-mat; keeps the mother patient when the baby is cross; amuses the children as well as instructs them—wins as well as governs, cares for the servants as well as pays them promptly; looks after the apprentice in the shop, and the clerk behind the counter, and the student in the office, with a fatherly care and a motherly love, spotting the solitary in families and introducing them to pleasant and wholesome society, that their lonely feet may not be led into temptation. We want a religion that will hold interconrse continually between the ruts and gullies and rocks of the highway of life, and the sensitive souls that are passing over them.

We want a religion that bears heavily, not only on the executive of life, but exceeding rascality of lying and stealing; a religion that banishes short measure from the counter, small baskets from the stalls, pebbles from the cotton rags, clay from paper, sand from sugar, beet juice from vinegar, alum from bread, water from milk cans, and buttons from the contribution box. The religion that is to save the world will not put all the big strawberries at the top and all the bad ones at the bottom. It will sell raisins on stems, instead of stems without raisins. It will not make one-half of a pair of shoes of good leather and the other of poor, so that the first shall rebound to the maker's credit and the second to his cash; nor, if the shoes be promised on Thursday morning, will it let Thursday morning spin out till Saturday night. It does not send the little boy who has come for the daily quart of milk into the barnyard to see the calf, and seize the opportunity to skim off the cream; nor does it surround stale butter with fresh; and sell the whole for good; nor sell off the slack baked bread upon the stable boy, nor dust the pepper, nor "deacon" the apples. The religion that is to sanctify the world must pay its debts. It does not borrow money with little or no purpose of repayment, but concealing or glossing over the fact. It looks upon a man who has failed in trade and continues to live in luxury as a thief. It looks upon a man who promises to pay fifty dollars on demand with interest, and who neglects to pay it on demand, with or without interest, as a liar.—Selected.

The reply of Dr. Morgan, of Oberlin, to a student who asked him whether he could not shorten his course of study for the ministry, is, at least, suggestive. "Whon," Dr. Gordon said, "God wishes to make an oak, he takes many years to complete it; if he would make a squash, only a few weeks are necessary."—Presbyterian Banner.

We should always keep a corner of our heads open and free, that we may make room for the opinions of our friends. Let us have heart and head hospitality.—Joseph Joubert.

To Whom It May Concern:

About three years ago I received a sample bottle of "Mnl-en-ol." I had never heard of it before. I began using it, however, as occasion required, and soon found that it was all that is claimed for it, and more. For cuts, burns, bruises, scalds, and all kinds of sores, it is snperior to any remedy I have ever used. It is also exceedingly efficacious in colic and diarrhœa. For sore throat it is incomparably better than anything I know of. I heartily recommend it as a medicine worthy of a place in every household. W. C. BLACK,

Cure Catarrh in Summer.

Rev. J. W. Blosser, M. D., who has devoted twenty-one years to the study of Catarrh, says that Summer is the best time to make a speedy and thorough cure. He has discovered a remedy which is smoked in a pipe, but contains no tobacco, and cures the worst cases permanently. He will mail a three-days' trial treatment free to any sufferer who will address Dr. J. M. Blosser & Son, 11, 12 and 13 Grant Building, Atlanta, Ga.

FROM THE WORK.

Rev. A. C. Flowers, P. C., Colfax, La., June 10, 1897: "We closed an eight days' meeting in our new church at Nugent. Bros. Hoffpauir, Geo. Jackson and J. A. Parker did the preaching. Results: 13 accessions, 4 conversions, 5 infant baptisms, 6 adults. The church seems greatly revived. Our new church at Nugent was dedicated, June 6, 1897, by Rev. J. A. Parker. Pray for us."

CHILDREN'S DAY SERVICES.

We have just finished our round of Children's Day services on the Hermanville circuit, Vicksburg district, Mississippi Conference. We observed the day at four churches, and certainly had a nice time at all the places. Had a nice program, well prepared and carried out nearly to perfection at all the places. The children did splendidly, showing that they had been well trained. The people of Hermanville circuit do anything well they undertake. We realized from the collections $22.50. Who has done any better? Thanks to the children and all concerned for the pleasant days and collections. God bless them all!

A. D. MILLER.

WHITE CHAPEL CIRCUIT.

On May 9 I began a meeting at Chicot, and was reinforced the following Monday by Bros. Manley and Hughes, of Washington, with the result of five congregations and four accessions to the church. Before the meeting was over Bro. Skipper came and preached once to the delight of all who heard, and held the second Quarterly Conference.

Bros. Manley and Hughes won the affections of the people completely. I never heard Bro. Manley to better advantage. He was so gentle and pathetic.

On the fifth Sunday in May I preached twice at New Haven. We had a good time and had two accessions. This is a live church, with something over fifty members.

The prospect is good for big revivals over the entire circuit. Much of this circuit was dronthstricken last year, but the prospect is good for a crop now, and, if so, we hope to add improvements to the parsonage and build a new church in Chicot.

In the Spring a terrific hailstorm broke out two-thirds of the glass in the windows of White Chapel Church; but a collection was taken the very next service, the glass replaced and nicely painted by Bro. U. T. Blacksher, of Opelousas, so that the windows can not be told from expensive stained glass.

Bro. Blacksher, who was the chief mover in the erection of that church, has our thanks for his trouble. It is our sincere desire that his children and grandchildren living there may profit much by that church being there.

Our next Quarterly Meeting goes to Elm Bayou, at which time we hope to protract. The Mormons have made converts, and are still on hand; but they are operating among a very ignorant class of people.

In Memoriam.

MRS. EMILY PREVOST ROUSEAUX, of Pearl River, La., daughter of Mr. Antoine and Louisiana Prevost.

The years have come and the years have gone since sweet Emily was laid away in "God's Acre;" yet in the hearts of her family and friends the influence of her pure life abides with them still in all its beauty and loveliness.

On Jan. 21, 1867, she was born near Slidell, La. In 1883 she was "born again," under the ministry of Rev. N. B. Young, and joined the church. Dec. 6, 1887, she was married to A. J. Rouseaux, and died July 9, 1892.

To this brief statement of dates and facts one could multiply words; but these would be but a poor expression of the deep loss and bereavement that each one felt when the day of parting came with Emily.

The brief married life that was hers was a happy one. Her husband soon followed after. One little boy was left to find the way to the golden gate, where they are waiting and watching for him. God protect and help him to shun the evil and choose the good, and may his mother be his ministering angel.

When this lovely woman set her face heavenward there was no "looking back" with her, but she "pressed forward to the mark of her high calling in Jesus Christ." To her the little things of every day life were her grand opportunities of doing good. When a young lady she was a member of the writer's Bible Class in Sunday-school. She was thoughtful and ever ready to answer all questions and take a lively interest in the lessons. One Sunday I had asked each one for a verse unexpectedly. She repeated one without hesitating a moment, and when another girl refused she seemed so hurt she suggested one to her, which was the Fourth Commandment.

In all her relations of life she was the same true and loving, Christ-like child of God's kingdom.

When she realized that her days were but few, and that she must give up her darling child and loved ones, she was enabled by the wonderful goodness of God to have the promise verified that "grace sufficient" would be vouchsafed to her; even so it was, and she was reconciled, willing and ready to go when it pleased the blessed Master to call her.

Lovingly she pled with all her relatives, and made them promise to live so they could meet her again where there were no more partings or sad farewells. To everyone she gave a word of hope and comfort, telling them "not to grieve for her," for she was "Oh! so happy and longed to be at rest with her dear Jesus." When even the family physician said it was all over, with her, and they were weeping over her, she revived and told them to send for her brother and wife who had been alienated from the family. Her request was granted, and when they came she saw them all make friends and bade them live in unity and love; then her glad, satisfied soul "left its encumbering clay," and soared away to everlasting bliss.

MRS L. CRARY SADLER.

SELBY—The subject of this sketch, Miss Eunice Selby, was the fourth child born to Mr. and Mrs. T. H. Selby, of Newton, Miss. She was born in Newton on the twenty-ninth of May, 1869. It was under the pastorate of Rev. Geo. Bancroft, of the Mississippi Conference, that she was converted and joined the M. E. Church, South, at the age of twelve years. She was educated at the E. M. F. College, Meridian, under the presidency of Rev. A. D. McVoy, now of the Louisiana Conference, and would have graduated in June, 1888, but for the death of an older sister, Minnie, who was translated on Jan. 24 of the same year. Mother and father were so deeply grieved on account of this affliction, they decided Eunice must remain at home, and from that day she became a companion for mother, entering into all her plans with peculiar interest; and more especially was this true of the last five or six years of her life. The family never thought of her as a mature woman, because of her pure and child-like devotion to the pleasure and happiness that concerned us—having an unselfish spirit with regard to her parent's wishes, whose hearts were strongly entwined round about her life.

She was a pure, sweet Bible Christian, devoting a part of every day to this devotional exercise, and from this source sought the solution of her life's purposes. Though modest and reserved in her nature, she was devoted to the church, heartily entering into all features of work for the betterment of humanity. Her seat in the services of the sanctuary was always filled except in case of illness. She was much assistance and encouragement to her father in Sunday-school work. She was two or three times a delegate to the Woman's Foreign Missionary Conference, also a delegate to the W. C. T. U. Convention of 1896. Her life as an influence for good was appreciated by her pastors and the people with whom she associated.

In her last illness we so much hoped and prayed for her recovery, but the disease had too strong a hold upon her delicate constitution. While her suffering was intense, she complained as little as possible.

On Sunday night, the eighteenth of April, 1897, the doctor said she was passing out from this life, and I called all the family into the room. She talked with each of us beautifully and strongly of her hope and assurance in the Lord—the scene was heavenly—her soul was leaning upon her Savior. She rallied in a short while and lived till Monday night, 12:23 o'clock, of the nineteenth, when her soul was given a happy release from a body tortured with pain. She sweetly fell asleep in Jesus, whom she had trusted in life. Her Christian triumph over the last enemy is our consolation in our bereavement. While she left our hearts sad and desolate because of her absence, the light which shone in her life so radiantly still shines in our hearts, revealing to us the grand secret that we shall see her again. We who watched her in her last hours will not soon forget the sublime impressions that were made in the glory that was manifest in the chamber of death. The Lord was there not only to light up her face for our comfort, but to lead her through the shadows that were outward. We rejoice that her entrance into eternal life was so abundant, and it is this which dispels the clouds which hovered o'er us at the time of her departure from us. Our grandmother—aged eighty-six—preceded her to the Father's house just three months, and the addition of another member of the family here to the family above gives us a stronger insight into the utterance—"There is no death—what seems so is transition." The distance to God's home for his saints is not so great now, and as we see our loved ones gathered home it grows nearer and nearer.

The Lord would refine us and qualify us for better service through these heart-sore experiences. We have learned to say, "Thy will be done," and we are striving daily to exemplify this Scripture in our lives. We bade her good-bye for only a time—we shall behold her face again in righteousness with our Lord.

Bolton, Miss.

The young married couple who are crowned with good health are really a king and queen. They are possessed of an armor that enables them to withstand all the hardships and misfortunes of life. Accidents aside, they will live long, happy lives of mutual helpfulness, and they will be blessed with amiable, healthy children. They will sit together in the twilight of old age and look back without regret over a mutually happy, helpful, useful, successful companionship.

There are thousands of young couples every day who start wedded life with but one drawback,—one or the other, or both, suffer from ill-health. There can be no true wedded happiness that is overshadowed by the black cloud of physical suffering. The man who contemplates matrimony, and realizes that through overwork or worry or neglect, he is suffering from ill-health, should take the proper steps to remedy it before he assumes the responsibilities of a husband. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is the best of all medicines for men who have neglected their health. It makes the appetite keen, the digestion perfect, the liver active, and the blood pure and rich with life-giving elements. It is the great blood-maker and flesh-builder. It invigorates and gives virility, strength and vigor.

No woman should wed while she suffers from weakness and disease in a womanly way. These are the most disastrous of disorders from which a woman can suffer. They break down her general health. They unfit her for wifehood and motherhood. They make her a weak, sickly, nervous invalid. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription cures all weakness and disease of the delicate and important organs that bear the burdens of wifehood and motherhood. It transforms weak, suffering, fretful invalids into healthy, happy wives and mothers. Both medicines are sold at all good medicine stores.

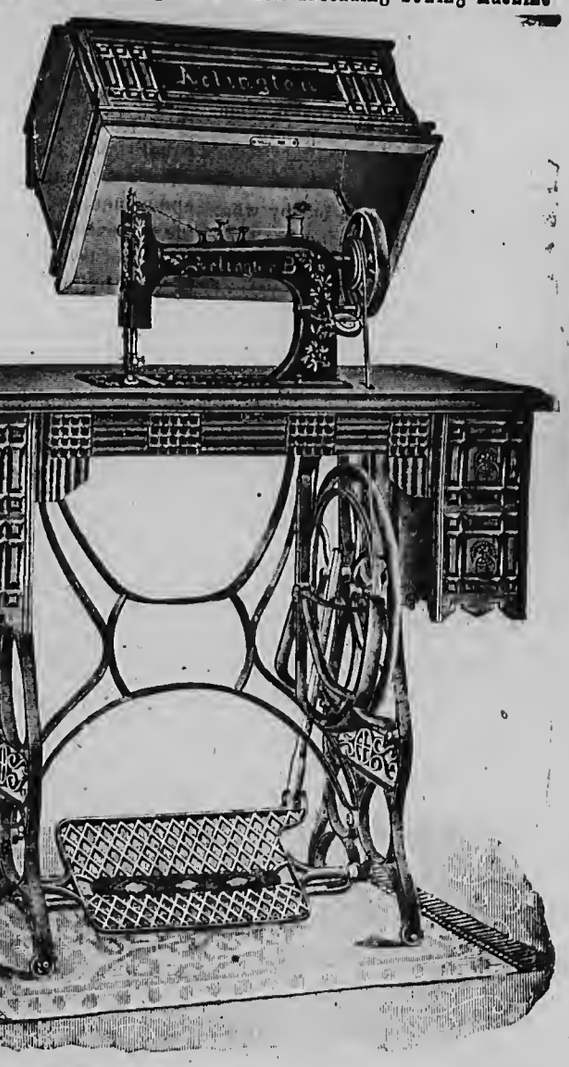
Our Machine Offer.
New Improved High-Arm "Arlington B" Self-Threading Sewing Machine



A recorded certificate of warranty for 10 years accompanies each machine. The "Arlington B" is complete in every detail, combining all modern and late improvements, such as automatic bobbin winder, self-threading shuttle, self-setting needle, upper spring tension, etc.
The "Arlington B" self-threading sewing machine has a large high-arm, its mechanical appearance is perfect, its adjustment is absolute, positive take up, convenient foot-rest, with the best style furniture, either oak or walnut; in addition to which each machine is furnished with the best steel combination attachments free, as follows: One tucker, one foot ruffler, one set of plain hemmers (five different widths up to seven-eighths of an inch), one binder, one shirring plate and one under-braider, packed in a handsome velvet lined case. It is also furnished with one foot hemmer, one screw driver, one wrench, one oil can with oil, one gauge, one package of needles, six bobbins and one instruction book.
THE HEAD is strong and substantial; has large space under the arm for handling bulky goods, is finely japanned, and protected by a hard finish. Has so few bearings and friction points that it is easily oiled and kept clean.
NEEDLE BAR is round, with adjustable bearings polished and fitted, insuring great wear, and can run a long time without oiling. It has a slack dip motion, relieving the strain upon the thread when the shuttle is passing through the loop. Using the adjustable take-up, controlling the threads perfectly on all grades of work.
IMPROVED AUTOMATIC BOBBIN WINDER which is so positive and reliable in its action that an imperfectly wound bobbin is an impossibility. So simple that a child can easily operate it. This valuable attachment renders possible a perfect control of shuttle tension.
SELF-THREADING—THE "ARLINGTON B" is self-threading, requiring no change from light to heavy work. Uses double thread, and makes the lock stitch.
THE NEEDLE is the same as used on the New Home machine, and is self-setting both as to height and position with reference to shuttle, with short blade and long shank, insuring great strength; finely polished.
SELF-THREADING SHUTTLE—A perfect steel cylinder shuttle with delicate and perfect tension, open at one end to allow the bobbin to be inserted without displacing any of the parts; runs loose in the shell without spring centre or point bearings, thus insuring an even tension; can be threaded in the dark, and easily understood.
LOOSE PULLEY for winding the bobbin without running the machine requires no change or adjustment, nor is it necessary to remove the work from the machine.
PARTS SUBJECT TO WEAR are made of the finest steel, case hardened, light and noiseless and are very durable.

Seldom can the heart be lonely
If it seek a lonelier still.
Selt forgetting, seeking only
Emptier cups of love to fill.
—Frances Ridley Havergal.

People who talk the most sometimes say the least.

Let us get the church of God out of the Doubting Castle, and then something will be done.—Moody.

A man's liberality is estimated not by the amount he gives, bnt by what remains after all his giving has been done.—Selected.

God can not do everything. He can not save the man, even thongh he be a front-pew church member, who persists in leading a sinful life.

Difficulties are God's errands; and when we are sent upon them, we shonld esteem it a proof of God's confidence.—Henry Ward Beecher.

Cnltivate the habit of always seeing the best in people, and, more than that, of drawing forth whatever is the best in them.—Theodore L. Cnyler.

Self-restraint can not be attained by a few spasmodic efforts. It can come only as a resnlt of constant watchfulness and self-cnrbing.—Selected.

The little vexations of every-day life fly close to the earth. When we stand erect, onr heads are above them, and they do not keep onr brains in a whirl.—Selected.

It is when great truths have struck great men that great movements have started forth. Every truth of whatever size has breezes for mental sails whenever they are unfnrled.—Tilden.

When yon are tempted to say with reference to yonr fellow-man, "Forbearance has ceased to be a virtne," it would be well to suppose a case. Suppose God should say this concerning you.

The man who excuses himself from all Christian service on the ground that he has only one talent, is doing exactly what the devil wants him to do. God expects the one-talent man to double his talent.

Investigation will reveal the fact that those who have the most friends are those who have displayed the greatest amount of kindness, sympathy, considerateness for the interests and happiness of others.

The best way on earth to conquer an enemy is by kindness, unless that enemy is thoronghly demonized. Satan could not be conqnered on any plan, and there are some demonized men who are equally incorrigible—Baptist Standard.

A Few Words on Education.

We live in an age of wonderful educational opportunities and enthusiasm. Never before in the history of our Republic, or perhaps, in the history of the human race, has there been such general appreciation of the value of intellectnal culture. The thirst for knowledge is unquestionably becoming more intense and widespread with each passing year, and well is it for the country that such is the case.

The rapid growth of onr population, the excessive increase in the foreign element produced by immigration, the congestion of life in the cities, the unrest and discontent of the working classes—all serve to emphasize the urgent need of educating the masses, that they may labor more effectively, that their power of adaptability to circnmstances may be increased, and that they may no longer be a prey to designing demagogues.

It used to be argued that only those who intend to devote themselves to professional pursnits shonld receive a college education. And even now some contend that a college education is useless to farmers, mechanics and tradesmen. Consequently most of boys who do not expect to become lawyers, doctors, or preachers, after learning the three R's, are put to work. The unwisdom of this course is at last beginning to be recognized, and the establishment of agricultural, indnstrial and technological schools is one result of the fortunate change in public opinion. Whatever a man's occupation, a thorough education ought to make him more usefnl in it, and render life ten-fold more enjoyable.

It is sometimes objected that to educate the lower classes would make them more discontented, and unfit them for present occupations. While this may be partly true, a large per cent. of the human race are doomed by circumstances and limitations of intellect to do whatever work they can obtain, not what they prefer. All, it is true, have equal rights before the law, but all have not equal physical and mental endowments. So, then, in the strnggle for existence and supremacy, we need not be snrprised to see those favored by nature and fortnne outstrip their fellow-toilers. The wonderful inventions in the way of labor-saving machinery are making the occnpation of common laborers less and less necessary, and are rendering it possible for the masses to devote more attention to culture.

The time has arrived when not rank nor ancestry nor wealth, but wisdom is accorded the highest place. Her rule is recognized as the most beneficent, her sway the most powerful, her influence the most far reaching. It speaks volnmes for public sentiment that in the face of great financial depression and political excitement the schools and colleges everywhere have been full to overflowing. It indicates in no uncertain way that our people are reaching out after better things, and that a new era is about to dawn.

The young man or woman who in this day has little desire for an education is exceedingly stupid. So great is the competition in life's contests that whoever lacks the training of the schools, or enters the lists half-equipped, unless he is a genius, is sure to be outstripped in the race and crowded to the lowest place. Not all can achieve fame and fortune, bnt he who brings to bear npon his life-work the sharpened and tempered sword of a well-trained mind is possessed of a tremendous advantage. Lord Bacon uttered words of tremendous weight when he said, "Knowledge is power." The marvelous achievements of science, the stupendons discoveries of astronomy, the startling revelations of archæology, the glorious inventions of the nineteenth century—all are products of knowledge acquired by laborious experiment and patient research.

A mere smattering of education will no longer suffice. The parents who wish their sons and daughters to occnpy useful and honorable places in the world must see to it that they drink deep dranghts at the fonntain of knowledge. The best dowry a father can bestow npon his offspring is a liberal education. It is a permanent possession, a gift that can never be lost, stolen or wrested away.

Students are becoming more ambitious to be educated than to be graduated. There are still some sham colleges that offer short cuts to diplomas and to cnltnre, bnt the public is finding out the learning thus imparted is superficial and comparatively worthless. The haste to be educated, like the haste to be rich, has proved a cnrse to many a yonth of fine native abilities. It is greatly to be deplored that such a large percentage of our young men leave school and go into business before their education is half completed, this being due to the notion that the time thus saved is time gained. The youth, however, who remains at college nntil he has completed his course, thongh some neighbor's son who left school at an early age may have several years the start of him in business, will by reason of his superior training soon overtake and distance him. Those who would rise to something higher than menial service, who aspire to be something more than "hewers of wood and drawers of water," must devote themselves assiduously to books as did Benjamin Franklin and Abraham Lincoln.

Acquiring an education, like progress in Christian experience, is never complete. It should go on thronghout life. One reason why college graduates do not achieve what their friends expect of them is that many of them on receiving their diplomas cease to advance in knowledge, foolishly imagining that they know enough, and expecting their past achievements to carry them through. With all snch the world deals hardly.

Most students look with disfavor upon difficult studies and avoid them whenever possible. This is nnfortnnate, since in most cases the greater the difficulties to be overcome the better the drill. Education is not so much the acquisition of a large stock of knowledge as it is the discipline and quickening of the mental faculties. Prof. Hnxley has wisely said: "Perhaps the most valuable results of all education is the ability to make yourself do the thing you have to do when it ought to be done whether you like it or not; it is the first lesson that ought to be learned, and, however early a man's training begins, it is probably the last lesson he learns thoroughly."

So great are the educational facilities of onr country that almost every yonng man and woman who hungers for a college education may obtain it. It is frequently the case, however, that the children of well-to-do parents are the ones who least appreciate their advantages. James Gordon Bennett once remarked to George W. Childs: "How unfortunate it is for a boy to have rich parents. If you and I had been born that way, we would never have done anything worth mentioning." Some boys will pick up a good education in the odds and ends of time which others carelessly throw away.

The boy or girl who finds it impossible to attend college need not despair. Though a collegiate education is extremely desirable, many men, like Andrew Johnson, Henry Clay, Thnrlow Weed, Michael Farady, Richard Cobden, and others, have by close application and persevering study, overcome in large measure the lack of school training, and made themselves a name in the world. What has been done can be done again. In this day of cheap books, Chautauqua assemblies, lectnre courses, etc., those whose school training is deficient have many facilities afforded them for cultnre and self-improvement.

Much as intellectual cnlture is to be longed for and striven for, it is a dangerous possession, unless accompanied by a sound Christian character. The better educated an unprincipled man is the more harm he can do. Scholarship is no safeguard against vice and iniqnity. Some of the most highly educated men have been the most corrupt. If a man be wicked at heart, cnltnre will not refine away his wickedness. Learning apart from the love of God neither insnres happiness nor heaven. Only the man who has been taught of God as well as by the wise of earth is fnlly eqnipped for the battle of life, and ready to meet the issnes of eternity. Parents make a fearful mistake when they send their children to colleges that are not pervaded by a decidedly Christian atmosphere. College life at best is beset with peculiar temptations; hence the great need of positive moral influences. Methodist people ought by all means to patronize our own educational institutions, which are second to none, and which seek to train the heart as well as the mind.

At Hattiesburg.

We spent last Sabbath at Hattiesburg, having been invited by the pastor, Bro. Peebles, to fill the pulpit in his absence. We were greeted by a large audience, morning and night. Hattiesburg has been a growing city from the beginning, bnt its growth was never more marked than during the last year or two. It has been greatly helped by the Gnlf and Ship Island railroad, and the indications are that it will be as much or more benefited by the Mobile and Jackson railroad, the southern end of which, from Hattiesburg to Mobile, will be completed in a few months. A compress will be erected this year, and it is probable that a cotton factory will make its appearance in a short time. The population is estimated at between four and five thousand, with the prospect of a large increase in the near fnture. Methodism is strong in Hattiesburg, not only numerically, but also financially. We doubt if there are more than two cities in Mississippi in which our church has greater pecuniary resources.

Bro. Peebles is in the midst of a prosperous pastorate, having received more than eighty members since Conference. The Sunday-school and the Epworth League are large and flourishing. In keeping with his previous record, he is diligent in the pastorate and in looking after the varied interests of the church.

During our stay we were delightfully entertained in the hospitable home of Bro. J. S. Turner. We also enjoyed the hospitalities of Sister M. E. Hawkins. We met several old friends and made a number of new acquaintances.

Notice.

CENTENARY BUILDING FUND.

One of the moves recently inaugurated by the Board of Trustees of Centenary College looks to the improving of the buildings. As all who have attended the commencements for the past few years know, the property is by no means in the shape that such an institution merits. The main auditorium in particular is in a very unsightly condition—in fact, it is hardly presentable. Recently an inspection of the situation was made by a member of the Board, thoroughly competent to jndge, and his opinion is that the appearance of things can be materially changed for the better by the expenditnre of a few hundred dollars. This will encourage the work on all lines. The faculty will work with greater vim, the students will become more in love with the college—as even a mother needs to be good-looking, in her son's eyes at least—and there will be a greater probability of keeping the boys when they once come. All that can be spent in this direction will pay in this way a threefold interest. A move is now on foot to get such a fund as will be sufficient to put the buildings in good shape. Can you help us to any extent in this matter? Already over $150 has been paid in, and the work needs to be done at once. He gives double who gives qnickly. Who will be the first to address me at Jackson, La.

THOS. CARTER.

The Story of Achan.

Too much has been made of the story of Achan. The children of Israel were beaten before Ai because Achan had hidden a wedge of gold and a Babylonish garment in his tent; and it was not until that crime had been expiated that the children of Israel could conquer in battle. This has been made a parable for the church; and it has been asserted over and over again for generations that one Achan can prevent a revival.

This is pressing the biblical language far beyond what it will bear. It contradicts the teaching of the promise given to the two or three who agree in asking a blessing of God. We must not believe that God would refuse to send his Holy Spirit with converting grace if one believer, or two believers asked for it just because some other professed believer or one hundred others are not living up to the level of their spiritual privilege. God's Spirit works by means, and those means are the Word written and spoken; and the written Word enforced even by an insincere preacher, by one who is himself a castaway, has often been used for the conversion of souls.

In our own belief it is extremely unwise to get into the way of dwelling upon the shortcomings of professed Christians and declaring that it is their sins that withstand the Spirit of God. If they do not come up to the help of the Lord, they should be left behind and the rest of the children of Israel should go forward, even if they are relatively as few as Gideon's band. God does not save by many or by few, we are told; for one with God is a majority.—The Independent.

Popularity is the whim of the populace. It is often superficial and evanescent. Popularity is the judgment of the hour concerning a man. It may die the next day. To depend upon it is to lean npon the staff of a broken reed. To do things just simply to gain the favor and to win the plaudits of the multitude is to miss the way of success and happiness. Not that love and friendship should be despised. Not that a man should be indifferent to public opinion. But popularity as a governing motive is a fatal mistake. One should abide by principle and follow his conscience. If he misses popularity, he will secure a modicum of true fame, which is far better.—Texas Advocate.

Guard your pastor's reputation. Always talk him up, never down. Place a sweetly charitable construction on all his actions and words. Be ready promptly and earnestly to defend him at all times against hurtful, malicious attacks. The devil feels he has achieved a mighty victory when he can damage the reputation of a faithful preacher. Defend your pastor. Never hear him spoken against without taking his part. Express your firm and dignified displeasure with the worlding who would make him ridiculous, the scorner who would render him contemptible, or the base defamer who would brand him as immoral. Your pastor's reputation is his strength. You can help him by guarding it lovingly and courageously.—Baptist Courier.

Nine-tenths of the contributions to foreign missions are given by one-tenth of the church membership, while only one-half of the membership give anything. The average amount per member is fifty cents per annum—only the seventh part of a cent per day for the conversion of a thousand millions of heathen! An average of five cents a week from every member of the Protestant Churches of the United States would bring into the treasury during a single year, $16,500,000. Ninety-eight per cent. of the church's contributions for religious purposes is spent at home, while only two per cent. is applied to the foreign mission field. There are 75,000 ministers in the United States, or one to about every 600 persons, while only one is allotted to half a million in heathen lands. There are 1,500 counties in China without a single missionary.

Dr. Cuyler says: "Others may answer this question as they choose, but my answer, as a life-long teetotaler and foe of the diabolical liquor traffic is, Let us have a fresh education against the deadly evils of the drinking customs. Christ's churches are neglecting this; Sunday-schools are neglecting this too much; parents are neglecting this; temperance societies have largely disbanded; moral efforts are dying out; and fearfully are we paying for this wretched policy. Instead of the idle and easy shout, 'The saloons must go!' suppose we make an immense effort, in God's strength, to keep people from going to the saloons or anywhere else to buy intoxicants. Stopping the use is the true way to stop the sale. Our substantial victories in the past have been won on those lines; they can be won again, and they will be when parents and patriots and Christians all awake to their manifest duty."

A writer in a religious paper is reminded of a conversation he had a few years ago with one of the most eminent statesmen of this country, now a justice of the supreme bench at Washington. Though not a professor of religion, he was a man who thought very profoundly on all religious subjects, and he said: "You ministers are making a fatal mistake in not holding forth before men, as prominently as the previous generation did, the retributive justice of God. You are fallen into a sentimental style of rhapsodizing over the love of God, and you are not appealing to that fear of future punishment, which your Lord and Master made such a prominent element in his preaching. And we are seeing the effects of it in the widespread demoralization of private virtue and corruption of the public conscience throughout the land."—Presbyterian.

NOTES.

Dr. H. W. Featherstun has been assisting Rev. R. F. Witt in a meeting at Brandon.

At the request of several brethren we will postpone the award of premiums to agents from July 1 to Aug. 15.

Major R. W. Millsaps and family took their departure Tuesday, the twenty-second, for a European tour of several months.

Prof. N. A. Patillo, formerly of the faculty of Millsaps College, has received the degree of Ph.D. from Johns Hopkins University.

From the Alabama Advocate we learn that Rev. T. G. Slaughter has been appointed to the Orphanage Agency made vacant by the death of Rev. J. W. Menefee.

The ADVOCATE received an appreciated call last week from Rev. I. L. Peebles, who spent a day in the city en route to Natchez to assist Bro. F. B. Ormond in a meeting.

"Cyclone Clifford" spent last Sabbath in Meridian. Though we have no specific information to that effect, we judge that he presented the claims of the Orphans' Home.

Our friend, Rev. W. A. Candler, had his divinity doctored several years ago. Recently his law has been doctored also. The treatment came from Emory College. As usual, Emory has bestowed its honors wisely.

At the recent Vanderbilt commencement Rev. H. B. Carre, of this city, won the Owen prize medal, as did also Halsey Werlein, of Missouri. Medals were also awarded to G. M. Lovelace, of Kentucky, and W. S. Noble, of Texas.

Mr. Gaston Price Ross, of this city, will be married, June 29, to Miss Laura Young Wilson, daughter of Mrs. P. P. Wilson. The ceremony will take place at Trinity Church. The ADVOCATE extends heartiest congratulations.

At the Mississippi Inter-Collegiate Oratorical Contest, held at Meridian on the fifteenth, the first prize was awarded to M. G. Fulton, representing the University of Mississippi. The second went to F. M. Bailey, of Mississippi College, Clinton.

The Toronto excursionists who go by the I. C. route will be accompanied through the entire trip by one of the high officials of that road, the genial and accommodating L. F. Montgomery, who will do all in his power to promote their comfort.

Rev. F. B. Ormond, of the Mississippi Conference, was married May 19 to Miss Minnie Toles, daughter of J. W. Toles, of Kemper county. The ceremony took place at Linwood Church, Rev. R. J. Jones officiating. We extend hearty congratulations to our young brother and his accomplished bride.

Your people can not be intelligent church members without their church paper, and no member who takes other papers is excusable for not taking his own church paper. More intelligent church members means more money for the church and greater loyalty to it. Keep up the canvass.—Methodist Recorder.

When a man attaches himself to a church he should enter into its spirit, abide by its rules and throw his soul into all its operations. He should join it not to be simply entertained, or to be carried along, or to be humored, or to receive attention, or to be lead a selfish, idle existence; but he should deal out whatever he has of grace, love, purse, time, advice, help, zeal and energy. If all acted upon this principle, what a power the church would be! How the drones would disappear! How the treasury of the Lord would be filled! How Christian work would be advanced! How complaints would cease! How the pastor would be relieved of many a burden, care and anxiety! And how God would be glorified!—Presbyterian

District Conferences at Wilson.

The Baton Rouge District Conference met on Thursday, the tenth instant, at the town of Wilson. A large representation of laymen was on hand and nearly every preacher in the district. The routine business of the Conference was despatched with celerity and harmony. The preaching was all of a high order, and especially noticeable for the emphasis laid on the character and teaching of Christ. In fact, it seemed that the brethren had determined to "know nothing else save Jesus Christ, and him crucified." From the opening sermon by Bro. Davies on the text, "Art thou he, or look we for another?" to the closing discourse of Bro. Lyons circling about the thought "What have I to do with thee, thou Son of the living God?" it all bore the impress of the mind of the Master. Much fruit was the result. We were fortunate in coming to Wilson in the midst of a meeting which was being conducted by Bro. Moore, of the Mississippi Conference.

The claims of our educational institutions were presented. Gratifying reports were heard from Johnston Collegiate Institute and Centenary College. In view of the movement on foot to improve the property at Jackson, a collection of $52.50 was taken. Thanks to Bro. Miller and the good people of Wilson for their royal entertainment!

DELEGATE.

Vicksburg District Conference.

The Vicksburg District Conference will be held at Oak Ridge, on the Warren circuit, July 15–18. The opening sermon will be preached on Wednesday, the fourteenth, at 8 P. M. by the Rev. T. L. Mellen, and his theme will be, "The Holy Ghost in Missions." Thursday will be Sunday-school and Missionary Day, with essays, addresses, letters from "Our Mission Fields," and a sermon at 11 A. M. by the Rev. R. Selby on the "Missions of our Church," and in the afternoon a sermon by the Rev. A. F. Watkins on "The Obligation of the Church to Support Missionary Work."

Pastors will please have the records of their Quarterly Conferences on hand, that they may be examined. If I have failed to supply any pastor with a blank for reports to the District Conference, I hope to hear from him at once.

Let preachers and delegates come prepared to stay over Sunday. Local preachers must be present, if possible, and if not, must sent their license and reports to the District Conference. J. M. WEEMS, P. E.

Harris' Business College.

A business education is a necessity, and one who enters upon the duties of life without its guiding influence has all the chances of success against him. We know of no better place for young men and ladies to go for such a training than to that wonderfully progressive institution, Harris' Practical Business College, Jackson, Miss. It is doing more for the worthy, struggling boys and girls than any other business college. Nineteen of its students recently secured good positions in three weeks.—Jackson Evening News.

Notice.

The Transportation Committee appointed by the Mississippi Epworth League Conference, consisting of A. F. Watkins, T. W. Lewis and J. A. Randolph, have selected the I. C. as the official route. The time of arrival at various points was given in our last week's issue by Rev. J. M. Henry. The round-trip rates are as follows: McComb City, $33.70; Jackson, $32.70; Vicksburg, $33.60; Meridian, $31; Natchez, $34.20; West Point, $27.95; Aberdeen, $27.70; Tupelo, $26.60; Winona, $28.45; Holly Springs, $25.55, Water Valley, $27; Oxford, $26.40; Greenville, $29.95. Rates from any other point will be given on application to Mr. L. F. Montgomery, T. P. A., at Jackson, Miss. It was thought best by the committee to secure a chair-car, as a number of the delegates will not care to go to the extra expense of a sleeper; but if there are any who desire sleepor accommodations a part, or all the way, they can be accommodated. But one change will be made, and that at Cincinnati, at mid-day. Every person who expects to go should inform J. A. Randolph, Macon, Miss., that ample accommodations may be secured for all.

To the Epworth Leaguers of New Orleans.

DEAR LEAGUERS: At the recent meeting of the Union League, held at Parker Memorial Church, on suggestion of our beloved presiding elder, it was decided to urge upon the League members to assist in the erection of the Gouldsboro Church. Gouldsboro is one of the most promising fields in our district. There are in this city more than 400 Leaguers, and an assessment of ten cents per capita would enable us to contribute more than $40. Please pay to your treasurer, and have it at our next meeting, which will be at Dryades Church, July 8, next. With a little self-denial we could contribute $1 apiece. Just think of it: four hundred dollars from the Leaguers of this city. Let us make ourselves heard and felt and appreciated.

Yours in the work,
P. H. FONTAINE.

New Orleans, June 17, 1897.

W. P. and H. M. Conference.

Mrs. J. P. Drake writes: "We are looking forward to the Parsonage and Home Mission Conference with great pleasure. We are anxious to have a large attendance. Exhort each society to send at least one delegate."

If each auxiliary has not already elected a delegate, it is important that a meeting should be called at once for this purpose. To all Aid Societies which contemplate becoming connectional, we suggest this is a favorable time for you to organize a Parsonage and Home Mission Society, and send a delegate to get the inspiration and enthusiasm of the Conference at Bay St. Louis.

Special rates are not given on any line of railroad to less than fifty delegates; but tickets may be purchased to Seashore Camp Ground at reduced fare. Be careful that certificates are signed before leaving home. Spend a few days at the Camp Ground, and go on to Bay St. Louis, July 9 to 12.

We trust that many of the preachers of the Mississippi Conference will give us the encouragement of their presence, and that all our brethren will remember us at the throne of grace, that we may be guided in our deliberations.

TOPIC FOR JUNE 27.

THE DANGER OF DELAY.

1. Delay is Satan's most dangerous and successful device. Conscience says, "You are wrong, sinful, guilty—you ought to be a Christian." The response is, "Yes, I know I'm wrong, but I am not quite ready yet; just hush up and let me alone for a little while, and then I'll accede to your demands." Conscience is silenced, the covering of delay is pulled over the moral corruption, shutting it from view, and all is serene again. To morrow the same colloquy takes place, with the same result. With every delay the hold of evil is strengthened and the tendencies are in favor of its final triumph.

2. Delay is given color and beauty by the good resolutions which attend it. It is hidden beneath the resolutions. This constitutes one of its chief elements of danger. Its nakedness is clothed, its ugliness is covered. It is a beautiful covering for sin—a blanket of violets hiding a rotting corpse.

3. The uncertainty of life makes delay dangerous. "Thou knowest not what a day may bring forth." Observation affords numerous illustrations of this truth. The present only is ours. "Now is the accepted time." The opportunity of to-day may be the last. The issues of eternity are before you. Attention, now!

4. Delay shuts the door of heaven and opens that of hell. Delay rejects Christ and accepts sin. Determination to go to hell will not get you there any quicker than delay in accepting Christ. The sinner is on the devil's train, bound for hell. "I'll get off at the next stop," he says; then lies down and goes to sleep. His station is passed, and another, and another. Still he sleeps! The stops are getting shorter and farther between. Faster and faster goes the train! Aroused from his sleep, he makes an attempt to leave the train, but it has started again before he reaches the door. Fully awake now, he gets ready to leave at the next stop. He waits, but the train does not stop. Faster and faster each moment it goes! Will it never stop again? He will wait no longer, but springs from his seat, pulls the bell cord and starts for the door. But the door is blocked by a hideous guard of hell. His name is Habit. Not to be balked this time, the sinner flings himself wildly upon the guard and a terrible fight ensues. Habit conquers. The sinner is flung limp and helpless back upon the seat, and the train leaps forward.

The sinner is going toward hell during all the time of delay. Habits of evil are growing stronger all the time, and if the delay is too long may become too strong for him to break.

DOTS.

The next meeting of the Union League will be held at Dryades. President Kilnesmith promises a big time. Dryades League is on a boom. Let all the Leaguers attend!

At our last meeting it was decided to have a picnic to be participated in by all the Leagues of the city. Its object is to cultivate the connectional spirit by getting acquainted with each other and to strengthen the Union by the addition of social ties. President Fontaine appointed the presidents of the several local Leagues a committee on ways and means. Have they met yet? If not, why not?

On to Toronto! Large delegations are going from all over the South. Who's going from New Orleans? Why not send a delegate who would give us the benefit of what he saw and heard on his return?

Why don't the preachers attend the Union meetings?

Dr. Sawyer and Bro. Alford presented the claims of the Gouldsboro Church to the interest of the League. Nothing serves better to develop the connectional spirit than to work together for the accomplishment of some end. The erection of this church is a worthy object for our effort. Let every League raise some money for this purpose!

MERIDIAN, MISS.

This institution has just closed by far the most successful session in its history of thirty years. The enrollment is 253, which is 100 more than ever before. The Music Department enrolled 112; elocution, 52. There were 77 boarders in the college, and about 25 in town, making over 100 students from a distance.

The college did a very high grade of most thorough, conscientious work. But, best of all, is the religious atmosphere which pervades the college. When college opened less than one-third of the boarders were converted. When it closed all but four or five were Christians, and nearly all were active Christian workers, leading prayer meeting, rising early to study the Bible in the quiet hours, doing personal work or anything the Master directs. Such a record is rarely seen, even in our most religious institutions.

W. M. S. of Louisiana.

Woman's Missionary Society of Louisiana Conference will hold its annual meeting in Homer, July 9–12. All societies are requested to send delegates, and impress upon them the necessity of bringing statistical reports and the State treasurer's receipts for the amounts they have remitted during the year. All delegates must obtain certificates that they have paid full fare on each road that they use, and we hope to get reduced rates on the return. The V., S. and P., the only road heard from, has kindly offered to reduce, and we suppose the others will also.

The response to the address of welcome will be made by Mrs. W. H. LaPrade. The annual sermon will be preached Sunday, at eleven, by Rev. P. M. Brown. At night there will be a sermon by Rev. P. A. Johnston. A paper will be read on "What Women Have Done for Missions" by Mrs. C. J. Foster. Another, on "Special Work for Juveniles," will be read by Miss Crain. Other topics discussed will be as follows:

An Hour in Our Mission Fields—Mrs. Emma Foster. The Work of Bible Women—Mrs. L. G. Johnston. The Children's Hospital in China—Miss Crain. The Woman's Hospital in Soochow and Its Work—Mrs. Fannt LeRoy. China the Great Mission Field of the World—Mrs. M. M. Hayes. Special Work for the Year—Mrs. Faunt LeRoy.

SEASHORE CAMP GROUND.

The twenty-sixth annual Camp Meeting at Seashore will open (D. V.) on Wednesday evening, July 14, next, and continue for about eight days.

Arrangements have been made for accommodating the multitudes that annually visit this delightful spot. A handsome and commodious two-story lodging-house—Keller Lodge—has been erected and comfortably furnished for visitors, in addition to the other accommodations supplied by the trustees.

The L. and N. R. R. Company will place on sale the reduced rate of fare during the season, from all points on their lines, and secure a corresponding rate from all connecting lines. Tickets will be placed on sale July 5 to 23, inclusive, and be good to return on until August 31. Two daily mail trains stop at the camp grounds, besides the accommodation and excursion trains, during the entire Summer season. All trains will stop at the camp grounds from July 5 to 24, inclusive.

The camp ground is located on the Mississippi Sound, having a frontage of 1,400 feet; fanned by the refreshing zephyrs from the Gulf of Mexico. The sea-bathing afforded is unsurpassed by any resort on the coast. A fine artesian well supplies the grounds with excellent drinking water, which is now "piped" over the entire encampment. An abundance of beautiful shade trees afford shelter from the Summer's sun, while pure and exhilarating sea breezes refresh the fatigued and overheated visitor from our smoke-enveloped and dust-stifling cities and towns.

Persons wishing to secure accommodations before the camp meeting should address W. B. Thomson, New Orleans, chairman Lodging Committee. Questions concerning transportation should be addressed to E. P. Mackie, New Orleans, La.; Dr. M. F. Tucker, Mobile, or J. H. Lakin, Montgomery, Ala.

All itinerant preachers of the Southern Methodist Church will be admitted into the grounds and provided with lodging accommodations in Wesley Hall free of charge. Board will be furnished them at the restaurant at half rate.

The usual entrance fee will be in force this season. No charge will be exacted for entrance on the Sunday of the camp meeting. A cordial invitation is extended to all who desire to attend the camp meeting and spend a while on the camp ground.

PHILIP WERLEIN, Lim, 614-616 Canal, New Orleans, La

"Everything in the Music Line at Werlein's," is an adage.

How to Find Out.

Fill a bottle or common glass with your water and let it stand twenty-four hours; a sediment or settling indicates an unhealthy condition of the kidneys; if it stains your linen, it is evidence of kidney trouble; too frequent desire to pass it or pain in the back is also convincing proof that the kidneys and bladder are out of order.

WHAT TO DO.

There is comfort in the knowledge so often expressed, that Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney remedy, fulfills every wish in relieving pain in the back, kidneys, liver, bladder and every part of the urinary passages. It corrects inability to hold urine and scalding pain in passing it, or bad effects following use of liquor, wine or beer, and overcomes that unpleasant necessity of being compelled to get up many times during the night to urinate. The mild and the extraordinary effect of Swamp-Root is soon realized. It stands the highest for its wonderful cures of the most distressing cases. If you need a medicine, you should have the best. Sold by druggists; price, fifty cents and one dollar. You may have a sample bottle and pamphlet both sent free by mail. Mention the CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE and send your address to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. The publisher of this paper guarantees the genuineness of this offer.

A LITTLE BROWN PENNY.

A little brown penny, worn and old,
Dropped in the box by a dimpled hand,
A little brown penny—a childish prayer,
Send far away to a heathen land,

A little brown penny—a generous thought,
A little less candy, just for one day,
A young heart awakened for life, mayhap,
To the needs of the heathen far away.

The penny flew off with the prayer's artless wing;
It carried the message by Jesus sent,
And the gloom was pierced by a radiant light
Wherever the prayer and the message went.

And who can tell of the joy it brought
To the souls of the heathen far away,
When the darkness fled like wavering mists
From the beautiful dawn of the Gospel day?

And who can tell of the blessings that came
To the little child when Christ looked down,
Or how the penny, worn and old,
To heaven will change to a golden crown?

—Christian Observer.

What Followed!

The old minister closed the Book and looked around the village church. "You are told," he said, "when you make a feast, to call to it not your rich neighbors, but the poor, the maimed and the blind. Now none of you are going to set out a fine dinner or supper this week. Some of us never in our lives gave a great entertainment. Yet the order is to us. I want each one of you, when you go home, to consider what God has given to you besides food with which to make a feast, and who are the poor folk whom you should bid to it."

People glanced, smiling, at each other, for the good man was full of queer suggestions. But the idea remained in the minds of some of his hearers, making their Sunday afternoon uncomfortable.

It bothered Pail Dorrance as he sat alone in his room. He usually sat alone, except when at his meals. Phil was the blacksmith's son, whom his father, by dint of years of hard work and saving, had sent to college. He was grateful to his father, but he felt that his education had made a great gulf between him and the old man. His companions were his classmates. He had meant to spend this afternoon with some of them, discussing a paper he had written on the history of his native State. Instead, he took it down-stairs to the kitchen, where his father and mother in their Sunday clothes sat nodding over the fire. How hare and empty their lives were, —work and sleep!

"I want to read you something I have written," he said, cheerfully.

They drew up their chairs, their eyes sparkling with pride and delight, and listened with a keen, shrewd intelligence that surprised him. They were able, too, to correct some mistakes that he had made, and to give him some facts new to him.

"I haven't had as pleasant a day for years, Pail," said the old man, when the paper was finished. His old mother said nothing, but kissed him, her eyes full of tears.

In another farmhouse Grace Peel sat, also thinking of the old doctor's question. She was a musician from the city, who cared only for classical music. At home her playing gave keen pleasure to friends whose musical taste had been cultivated. "They are my rich neighbors," she thought. Rising, she went down to the parlor and opened the old piano.

"Suppose," she said, "we sing some hymns—all of us?"

The farmer called in the boys excitedly. "We hevn't had the piano opened since Nancy went away," he said. "Come, grandma. I'll move up your cheer. You must jine in."

They sang "Jesus, lover of my soul," and "Nearer, my God, to Thee." Sarah, the black cook, came to the door, and threw in a wild note of triumph now and then. The discord sometimes made Grace shiver, but she played on.

Grandma asked for the old hymns she had sung when she was a girl, and the boys for "Hold the fort." When the afternoon was over, the farmer said to Grace. "It's been a real happy time. You play as well as my daughter Nancy." Grandma laid her wrinkled hand on Grace's shoulder.

"The happy hours are so few at my age!" she said. "God bless you for giving me this one, my child."

Squire Paton was known as the best story-teller in the country. With strangers he was courteous, gay, and always ready with a joke. At home he was often moody and silent. That afternoon he told his wife some of his best stories, leaving her surprised and laughing, and amazed his stableman by speaking to him cheerfully and kindly.

"It's hardly fair," said the squire to himself, "to give all your good things to strangers, and leave the poor in your own household unfed."

So the minister's question was answered.

Be Kindly.

If only men would give to the living some of that which they bestow so lavishly upon them when they are dead, what a different world this would be! Even a little of that which is sculptured on the cold marble would, if breathed from the warm lip, have made many a one happy for life. One of the superstitions of the Seneca Indians is that they can send their love by a bird to their dead ones. When a maiden dies they imprison a young bird until it first begins to sing. They then load it with kisses and caresses, and set it at liberty over the grave of the maiden who had died, believing that it will not fold its wings nor close its eyes until it has flown to the spirit land, and delivered its precious burden of affection to the loved and lost; and it is not uncommon for twenty or thirty birds to be loosed over the same grave. Many and many a husband and wife, many a brother and sister, would give all they have if only they could send to their dead ones an expression of love which might have been so easily made in life. And how many sons and daughters would now send messages unsaying many things which were, alas! left unsaid. Let the song birds of soft looks, of soft words, fly now. Now we know that they can reach, and we shall have this great advantage—the song birds will fly back to us again.—The Churchman.

No Time.

A busy man, recently approached upon the subject of religion, said: "I really have no time to spare from my business for religion. I wish I could get time and hope to do so in a few years from now." This very same answer is so often given by the careless and the indifferent that we must tell the following story picked up from some forgotten source. It carries its own moral and will bear repeating:

A pious farmer was busy clearing his lands. He had a number of hands employed, and was anxious to accomplish a large amount of work while the weather was favorable. He called them early and went out with them before breakfast was ready. A horn was blown, and they came and ate; and returned to their work. The farmer had been accustomed to have prayers every morning in his family. But to keep so many men from chopping and log-rolling while he read and prayed was more than he could afford; so Satan suggested, and the good man yielded. His pious wife saw with grief that the family altar was neglected, and her husband, in his haste to get rich, was departing from God. She talked with him, she pleaded with him, but in vain. At last she determined to try another experiment.

The next morning the farmer and his men went out, as usual, to their work. The sun began to climb up the sky, but no breakfast-horn was heard. They grew hungry, and looked anxiously toward the house; they listened, but the expected summons did not come. After waiting an hour they went into the house. No table was set, no coffee was boiling on the fire, no cook over or before it. The good wife was knitting quietly with the Bible on her lap.

"What does this mean?" cried the husband. "Why isn't our breakfast ready?"

"I thought you were in such a hurry about your work that you hadn't time to eat."

"Haven't time to eat! Do you think we can live without eating?"

"You can live without eating as well as you can live without praying. The spirit needs the bread of heaven as much as the body needs the bread of earth."

"Well, well," said the farmer, "get us some breakfast, and we will have prayers every morning, no matter how busy we are, nor how many workmen I have."

She got the breakfast and he kept his word. The lesson was a good one, and never forgotten. —A. C. Ward, in Christian Index.

A Secret of a Green Old Age.

In a beautiful article by Dr. Cuyler in a recent issue of the Evangelist, he notes the fact that on May 22, Rev. Dr. Newman Hall celebrated, in London, his eightieth birthday. Letters of congratulation came to him from many quarters. Dr. Cuyler says of him that at the age of fourscore he has the vigor and alertness of youth. And Dr. Hall said on that occasion:

"I am not an old man. I take a cold bath every morning all the year round, and have always been a great walker; I can now do ten miles at a stretch without any fatigue. My sight and hearing are perfect."

Dr. Newman Hall has been a hard worker, preaching on an average, even at the age of fourscore, four and five times every week, and writing with frequency and with vigor for the press. His one little tractate, "Come to Jesus," has been considered worthy of translation into about fifty languages, and more than three million copies of it have been circulated.

Now for the secret of his continuing, while not youthful, yet young and vigorous. It is: 1. He says, "I have obeyed the laws of health, retiring to sleep in decent time, and not working hard late at night." 2. He has not been given to indulgences of the palate: "I have never been a diner out, nor indulged in heavy suppers." 3. Teetotalism has had "a great deal to do with my excellent health." 4. Instead of resting on his early mental acquisitions, Dr. Hall continues as a vigorous student.

In this little narrative there is a hint to those of our ministry who do not desire to cross the dead line at sixty years of age or under.—Christian Observer.

A Little Girl with Two Faces.

I heard a strange thing the other day. It was of a little girl who had two faces! When she is dressed up in her best clothes, when some friends are expected to come to tea, or when she is going out with her mother to call on some neighbors, she looks so bright and sweet and good that you would like to kiss her. With a nice white dress on, and perhaps a blue sash and pretty little shoes, she expects her mother's friends will say, "What a little darling!" or, "What a sweet face, let me kiss it!" And so she always has a smile on her face, and when she is spoken to, she says, "Yes, ma'am," "No, ma'am," when she ought, and "Thank you," very sweetly when anything is given her.

But, do you know, when she is alone with her mother, and no company is expected, she does not look at all like the same little girl. If she can not have what she would like, or do just what she wishes, she will pout and scream and cry, and no one would ever think of kissing her then.

So you see this little girl has two faces; one she uses in company, and puts it on just like her best dress, and the other she wears when she is at home alone with her mother.

I also know a little girl who has only one face, which is always as sweet as a peach, and never sweeter than when she is at home, and her mother wants her to be as useful as she can and help her. I think that I need scarcely ask you which of these little girls you like best, or which of them you would most like to resemble.—Olive Plants.

Pretty or Useful.

One bright Summer day, when I was a little girl, my mother and I were in the garden cutting flowers, and as we stopped in front of a bush covered with bloom a butterfly that had rested for a moment on the flower flew up and away. "Was ever anything so beautiful?" I cried. "Mother, do look at its wings! Such lovely colors! I wish I was a butterfly!"

"Dear child," said mother, "wish rather to be like this bee," pointing to a large bee just dipping its bill into a flower cup.

"Heavy old thing!" I said with a scowl.

"Heavy with the load of sweets it has gathered, my dear. But the bee is busy and useful, laying up in the Summer stores for Winter use, and not for itself alone, but for you and me. I would rather be a busy bee than an idle beauty of a butterfly."

I never forgot mother's lesson: "Handsome is that handsome does."

My character to day is, for the most part, simply the resultant of all the thoughts I have ever had, of all the feelings I have ever cherished, and all the deeds I have ever performed. It is the entirety of my previous years packed and crystallized into the present moment. So that character is the quintessence of biography; so that anybody who knows my character—and there is no keeping character under cover—knows what for forty or more years I have been doing and been thinking. Character is, for the most part, simply habit become fixed.—The Rev. Charles H. Parkhurst.

On one occasion, when about to dine with a rich Methodist, one of his preachers, who was present, cried out: "O, sir, what a sumptuous dinner! Things are very different to what they were formerly! There is now but little self-denial amongst the Methodists!" Wesley pointed to the abundantly furnished table, and then silenced the preacher's eloquence by saying: "My brother, there is a fine opportunity for self-denial now." —Northwestern Advocate.

HYGIENE.

The Best Medicine.

"If I were asked what a woman's best friend is," said the doctor thoughtfully, "I should say hot water. If she drinks hot water an hour before her breakfast, she will be able to ward off dyspepsia. If she drinks hot water flavored with lemon and sweetened with sugar, when she has been out in the cold, she will ward off chills. The same agreeable medicine, taken early enough in the progress of a cold, will stop it. When a nervous headache makes the forehead throb, and the back of the neck ache, hot water will relieve the pain. For tired eyes, inflamed eyelids, and sties, nothing is so good as hot water. The eyes should be sopped with a cloth dipped in boiling water. Sprains may be relieved greatly by soaking the afflicted member in hot water for half an hour at a time, and then binding it with a flannel bandage. Bruises yield to much the same treatment, although such long soaking is unnecessary. Wounds and sores may be treated by pouring hot water on them for a few minutes at a time. Very hot water applied to a bleeding cut will stop the flow of blood frequently. Then, for mere comfort, few things equal hot water. A rubber bag full of it makes one indifferent to cold. Wrapped in flannel and put on the floor of a carriage, it is invaluable. She who suffers from cold feet at night has but to fill a hot-water bag to know what comfort is. Sufferers from sleeplessness find themselves deliciously drowsy after a hot bath. Wrinkles flee before it, and blackheads vanish before its constant use. Great is hot water."

It is more dangerous to eat stale fish than meat, because the moment that decomposition sets in in the flesh of a fish exceedingly poisonous products, possibly compounds of phosphorus, begin to form.—Green's Fruit Grower.

BEAUTY IS WEALTH.

Beauty is as essentinl to a woman as any other quality; with hemny of form and featuro comes beauty of mind and character. Physical beauty is a rounded form, the brightly tinted cheek, the vivacious eye, a certain ease and grace of manner, which indicates a superabundance of physical strength. Very few women possess these qualities, but very many more might possess them who do not. If you feel that you are losing vitality, losing your beauty losing your strength, if you feel that your face which once was plump and rosy, is becoming thin and sallow, that wrinkles (which are the terror to all pretty women) are beginning to appear, take our advice and try that greatest of discoveries, the "MASSAGE FACE CUP," which is the only means known to science to convert a thin and sallow expression into a plump and rosy face. It will transform a face with plain or homely features into an expression of grace and beauty. Physiology teaches us that if we would be strong, we must exercise the muscles which feed the developing. Exercise causes the blood to rush to that part of the body called into action, the muscle is fed and strengthened by the fresh blood and will, therefore, develop.

The Massage Cup will do for the face, when properly applied, by contracting and relaxing the muscles, what exercise will do for the other parts of the body.

If you would have a pinkish complexion, if you would like a face plump and rosy, if you would like to remove that "horrid" wrinkle, send One Dollar to us and we will mail you the great "MASSAGE FACE CUP," with full directions for its use. Remember, you can have your money back, if you say so.

BAREFIELD—In her mother's home in Lauderdale, Miss., in December, 1893, I first saw Miss SALLIE BARNES TARTT, a beautiful and attractive girl just entering womanhood. Her father, Elnathan Tartt, was dead. Her training was left to a widowed mother, whose superior skill laid the foundation for a beautiful and noble life. I saw this life develop into the high ideals that had been so wisely planned, and I saw in it my ideal of the beautiful and good, namely: a young lady with a cultivated mind and heart. I saw her in the home as attentive, affectionate, confiding daughter sharing the household duties, bringing cheer and sunshine to all, and gently lifting cares from a mother's heart and placing them on her own. I saw her as a sister in the fullest sense, sustaining her kind entreaties with an almost fentless life, and carrying with her the deep affection of all her brothers and sisters. In society I knew her to be dignified without stiffness, frank without offending, modest without timidity. Her conversation was marked by thoughtfulness and prudence, and was never marred by slang or rough expressions. Her friendship was as pure as that which bound Damon to Pythias. It was never affected by change of fortune. I have seen her friendship for the friendless proven, and know that she was a friend in adversity as well as in prosperity.

On Nov. 21, 1894, I celebrated the rites of matrimony between her and my friend, Dr. Theodore K. Herefield, which union proved to be a most happy one. He who to-day dwells in loneliness alone knows her true worth as a wife. She became the mother of two daughters.

In 1895 she was converted and joined the Baptist Church. After her marriage she united with the Methodist Church—the church of her husband. In the Spring of 1893 she professed entire sanctification, and from that time she lived a most exemplary Christian life. Then a young woman of nineteen, she erected a family altar in her home which continued until her marriage. She volunteered to conduct a juvenile prayer meeting, and made it interesting and profitable. She was a very successful Sunday-school teacher and a most efficient helper in revivals, and was an active member of the W. and H. M. Society and the W. F. M. Society. She enjoyed that faith that made her rich at all times. Her death was preceded by several months of sickness and severe suffering. Of her during this time her husband writes: "She suffered very much, but never complained the least; was bright and happy all the time, praising God and giving thanks for his saving and keeping power. Her faith was perfectly beautiful; so simple and child like; never wavering. She was conscious until the very last moment; was happy, and closed this life with a beautiful smile."

March 11, 1897, in San Antonio, Texas, she laid down her frail body for a glorified one, and now offers a service unhindered by the imperfections of the old nature.

GEO. H. THOMPSON.

FRANKLIN—JAMES W. FRANKLIN was born near Nashville, Tenn., Aug. 22, 1814, and departed this life May 3, 1897, making him at his death eighty-two years eight months and eleven days old.

His parents moved to this State (Louisiana) when he was quite young, and settled on the Ouachita river; and in about the year 1835 they moved to this country, now Vernon parish, but then Natchitoches parish; thus he was one of the old pioneers of this country.

He was married in the year 1836 to Miss Elizabeth Morse, and settled a wilderness place, on which place he lived continuously till his death, which was over sixty years. He raised a family of ten children to be grown and married, all of which, with his companion, yet survive. His children, grandchildren and great-grandchildren number (living) over 131; however, many of his grandchildren preceded him to the other shore.

He joined the M. E. Church, South, about the year 1845, in which church he lived, ever advocating and defending the doctrines of Methodism till death. Two years ago, when it became necessary to build a new church-house, he said to the Building Committee: "Go ahead; put up the house, and I will foot the bill." Thus they went ahead; built a nice, neat church, which he was privileged to see dedicated before he died. He took great interest in his church and Sunday-school. His seat was never found vacant when it was possible for him to be there.

He joined the Masonic fraternity in 1863, and he was ever at his post of duty when able to be at his lodge.

He was a very determined, self-willed man. His motto was, "Know you are right, then go ahead." He was temperate in his habits and consistent in all of his doings—in fact, he was a model man; but, alas! he has gone to reap his reward. He was buried near the southwest corner of Holly Grove Church, where a host of his friends and relatives assembled to see his body placed in the cold and silent grave to await the resurrection morn.

Bro. Franklin was well versed in the Bible; a man that always looked after his preacher's support. It was not the writer's privilege to be with him at his death. He said as one of old, "I have fought a good fight." He served his church as steward, class leader, trustee, for many years, though at his death he was trustee. To love him was to know him. May the Lord's grace comfort those who survive him, and may they say: "The Lord gave, and the Lord hath taken away; blessed be the name of the Lord!" His pastor,

H. C. MURPHY.

TAYLOR—In memory of R. C. TAYLOR, who died May 7, 1897, aged seventy-five years.

Mr. Taylor was born and raised in East Feliciana parish, La. I married Miss NIX, of the same place, in 1848. They moved soon afterwards near Trinity, La., and lived there until after the war of 1861-64, when they moved with their family of three children to Ouachita parish, and resided there near Monroe until after the marriage of all their children, when they moved to Franklin, La., with their daughter, Mrs. Jno. R. Perkerson. In that town he spent fifteen peaceful, happy years, setting a good example to both old and young. He has always been an honored member of the M. E. Church, South, and made many true friends wherever he went. As a Christian, he was always meek, patient, and resigned. Though very feeble for the last year or two, his patient spirit of resignation shown brighter as the weeks rolled by, impressing us more and more with the power of grace. By the grace of God we expect to join him in the realms of eternal bliss. He leaves an aged wife, one daughter (Mrs. Jno. A. Cooper, of Texas City, Texas), and a son (Wm. Z. Taylor, of Eagle Ford, Texas), and many grandchildren to mourn his loss. A FRIEND.

BROWN—CHESTER F. BROWN was born in the State of Maine in 1800, and died at his home on the Lower Coast, Plaquemine parish, La., Feb. 6, 1897. He was married to Miss Julia Cox in New Orleans in 1844. His wife and nine children survive him. He was highly endowed by nature with a clear, strong intellect, and had acquired that degree of culture which prepared him for great usefulness. In the Fall of 1891 he joined the M. E. Church, South, and was made a new creature in Christ Jesus at a revival held by the writer. His was a long life spent in the service of him who is the enemy of all mankind. By nature he was very irascible, and from the habit of a long life it had become so deeply intrenched in his heart and mind that it was a constant battle for the mastery. But he gained a great, a complete victory over the arch-deceiver, but a greater one over himself. He sleeps in peace.

"Like some broad river widening toward the sea, Calmly and grandly life joined eternity."

J. F. SCURLOCK.

LINFIELD—Whereas, The Ladies' Missionary Society of the M. E. Church, Jackson, Miss., has been called upon to yield to the reaper, Death, one of its most beloved and useful members, Miss MATTIE LINFIELD, who was summoned suddenly to her reward on high, May 29, 1897; therefore, be it

Resolved, That we bow in submission to the will of Him who doeth all things for the best.

Resolved, That in the death of Miss Linfield our society has lost one of its most zealous workers, the church a consecrated member, and society the influence of a noble Christian woman.

Resolved, That we strive to emulate the example of the quiet, gentle, unobtrusive friend who so bravely and firmly met every duty of life, and died, as was truly said of her, with "the harness on."

Resolved, That we tender our heartfelt sympathy to the bereaved brothers and sisters in the great loss they have sustained, and commend them to the care of Him who said, "Come unto me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest."

Resolved, That these resolutions be spread on our Minutes, and a copy be sent to the family; also to each of the city papers and the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE for publication. MISS ANNIE BUCKLEY,

HACKETT—Resolutions adopted by Trinity Auxiliary, W. F. M. S., M. E. Church, South, Los Angeles, Cal., May 19, 1897:

Whereas, A loving Father has reached down a hand of mercy and lifted his faithful child, Mrs. M. A. HACKETT, to the place prepared for her in his beautiful home. In her death we feel the loss of one, though a great sufferer and long confined to her bed, still her mind and heart was deeply interested in the Master's work, especially in the W. F. M. Society of the M. E. Church, South, and she contributed to its success by her prayers and means. Her daily life was beautiful, because it was Christ-like. Her faith, cheerfulness and resignation could but be felt by all who came about her.

Resolved, That we, the members of Trinity Auxiliary, honor her work, revere her memory, and bow in humble submission to our Father's will.

Resolved, That we extend our sympathy to the family, and that a copy of these resolutions be sent to them and be spread upon our Minutes.

Resolved, That a copy be sent to the Pacific Methodist Advocate and NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE for publication. MRS. HOOTY,
For Committee.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and, therefore, requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address,

The Holman Self-Pronouncing S. S. Teachers' Bible

Divinity Circuit, Round Corners, etc.

CONTAINS THE FOLLOWING HELPS TO THE STUDY OF THE BIBLE.

Concordance, with Contexts, over 40,000 References; Index to Persons, Places and Subjects, 16,000 References; Scripture Atlas, with Index; Glossary of Bible Words; Bible Calendar; Summary and Analyses of the Old and New Testaments.

A Self-Pronouncing Dictionary of Proper Names and Foreign Words contained in the Bible, comprising about 3,500 words, giving the pronunciation, the meaning, and the location of the text where the word occurs for the first time.

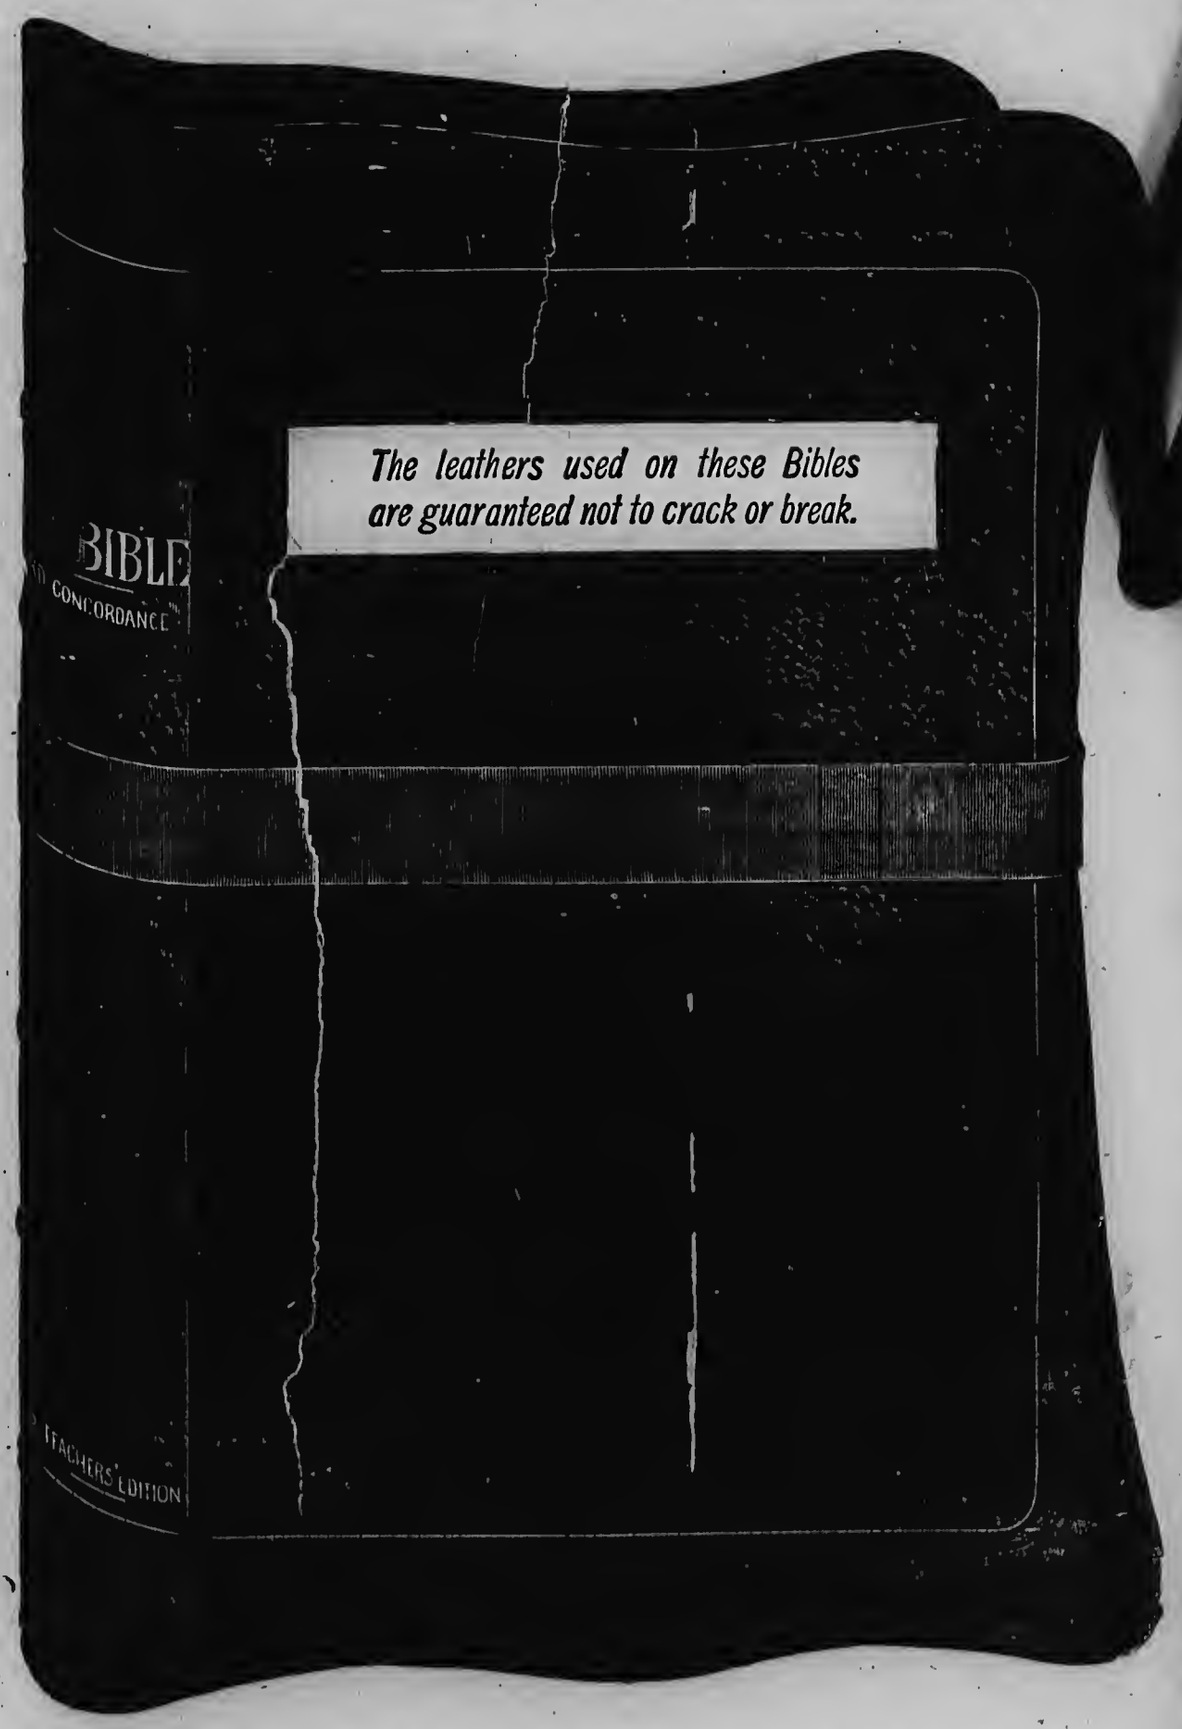
Exhaustive Articles on Biblical History, Geography, Topography, Natural History, Ethnology, Botany, Chronology, Music and Poetry; a Complete Harmony of the Gospels, Tables of Parables, Miracles, Prophecies, Prayers, Money, Weights and Measures, Jewish Sects and Orders, etc.

TWELVE FULL-PAGE MAPS IN COLORS.

Every proper name in the text is syllabified and accented, and has the vowels marked according to the most authoritative modern standards of pronunciation. The text is in exact conformity with that of the world-famous Oxford S. S. Teacher's Bible. All the valuable "Helps to the Study of the Bible" contained in the Oxford Bible are retained.

The only Teacher's Bible with a self-pronouncing text. No similar Bible was ever obtainable heretofore; in fact, no publishers ever attempted its publication.

"The essence of fifty expensive volumes, by men of sacred learning, is condensed in these 'Helps.'"



The large-type (Bourgeois) edition sells to persons who are not subscribers for $5. Our subscribers get it, on conditions specified below, for $2.35. The same Bible in Minion type, which is somewhat smaller than Bourgeois, we offer to our subscribers, on conditions named below, for $1.55. To those who are not subscribers we sell it at $3.15. We also handle an edition in still smaller type (Emerald): Our subscribers get this for $1.00.

In order to get anyone of these at these rates it is necessary to pay your subscription one year in advance, viz., to June, '98. (A little later it will be July, '98.)

For twenty cents we will have your name engraved in gilt letters on the outside of the book.

Many a man who has been sent to an early and even suicidal grave by the tortures of dyspepsia, would be alive and well to-day had he tested the virtues of Ayer's Sarsaparilla. This is no temporary appetizer, but a radical, scientific remedy. It makes life worth living.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

DOMESTIC.

The Pickwick Hotel and annex, this city, was badly damaged by fire on June 20. It is estimated that the damage will amount to $100,000.

The Orleans Levee Board has made up its accounts of the cost of the recent fight against the flood for the protection of this city, and the amount is $171,000.

The citizens of Pittsburg are to erect a monument to Stephen Collins Foster, the composer of "Way Down Upon the Suwanee River," "Old Black Joe," and "My Old Kentucky Home."

Sixty-seven cadets were graduated from West Point the other day, but at present there is not a single vacancy in the army. At the present time there are six of last year's class who are waiting for vacancies.

The system of vertical handwriting adopted by the School Boards of many of the larger cities is said to have scored a triumph in Boston already in turning out pupils who write rapidly and legibly, the two prime qualifications in chirography.

The stockholders of the Maritime Canal Company of Nicaragua have authorized the issue of $150,000,000 5 per cent. gold bonds secured by a mortgage on the property of the company. The bonds are to be issued as required for the needs of the company.

There is a prospect that the annexation treaty between this country and Hawaii will not be considered at the present session of Congress. The treaty is now in the hands of the Foreign Affairs Committee of the Senate, and the chairman of that committee, Senator Davis, has announced that, while he would probably be ready to report back to the Senate before the close of the present session, it was not expected that any serious effort would be made to ratify it.

FOREIGN.

The University of Jena this year celebrates its 350th anniversary.

A score of people were killed, last week, by a cyclone in France.

The announcement that the Sultan of Turkey has issued an irade raising the war strength of his army to 750,000 men, shows that there is a serious purpose entertained of holding Thessaly, even against the wishes of the powers.

Secretary Foster, who has been at St. Petersburg engaged in negotiations with the Russian government for the better protection by mutual agreement of the seal life in the North Pacific and Behring Seas, announces the complete success of his mission.

A few days ago the telegraph announced the death of Barney Barnato, the diamond king of South Africa, reputed to be the richest man in the world. This remarkable person was on a voyage from Cape Town to London, and while at sea he fell or jumped overboard and was drowned.

Heretofore no ambassador has presented his credentials while the Spanish court was sojourning at San Sebastian. Therefore, it is not expected that General S. L. Woodford will arrive before Autumn. In the meantime, Mr. Hannis Taylor accompanies the queen regent and court to San Sebastian.

During this week the interest of the entire world will be centered in the celebrations which will be in progress in Great Britain in celebration of what is called the Diamond Jubilee of Queen Victoria. Tuesday, June 22, was the sixtieth anniversary of the Queen's accession to the British throne.

According to representatives of the Cuban patriots in this country, there is imminent danger that General Ruiz Rivera, the successor of the unfortunate Maceo, and his chief of staff, who were captured some time back in Pinar Del Rio, may be summarily executed, as the prosecuting attorney has asked that the death sentence be imposed upon them.

The British Government has refused to reopen the question of the protection of seal life in Behring Sea, or any phase of the controversy connected with the sea. This refusal is based upon the unsatisfactory outcome of the arbitration proceedings which decided against the United States in the dispute with Great Britain over our claim to exclusive jurisdiction in Behring Sea.

Women as Well as Men Can Make Money.

I have an ice cream freezer that will freeze cream perfectly instantly. The cream is put into the freezer and comes out instantly smooth and perfectly frozen. This astonishes people, and a crowd will gather to see the freezer in operation, and they will all want to try the cream. You can sell cream as fast as it can be made, and sell freezers to many of them who would not buy an old-style freezer. It is really a curiosity, and you can sell from $5 to $8 worth of cream and six to twelve freezers every day. This makes a good profit these hard times and is a pleasant employment. W. H. Baird & Co., Dept 246, Sta. A, Pittsburg, Pa., will send full particulars and information in regard to this new invention on application, and will employ good salesmen on liberal terms.

Who can form the greatest number of words from the letters in the word "INDEPENDENT?"

You can make ten or more words, we feel sure, and if you do you will be well repaid. Do not use any letter more times than it appears in the word. Use no language except English. Words spelled alike but with different meanings can be used but once. Use any standard dictionary. Pronouns, nouns, verbs, adverbs, prefixes and suffixes, adjectives allowed. Anything that is legitimate will be allowed. Work it out in this manner: In, deep, dent, net, nice, etc.; use these words in your list. The publishers of The Sunny South will pay $50.00 in gold to the person who makes the largest list of words from the letters in the word INDEPENDENT; $10.00 for the second, $10.00 for the third, $10.00 for the fourth, $10.00 for the fifth, and $5.00 each for the next eight largest lists. The above rewards are given free and without consideration for the purpose of attracting attention to the South's great illustrated family and literary weekly. It is twelve large pages, seventy-two columns each issue, all original matter with the very best long and short stories, in addition to its numerous departments, such as "Woman's Page," "Children's Page," "Blue and Gray Page" and a page devoted to "Southern Industries," etc. To enter this contest it is necessary for you to send 50 cents for a three months' subscription with your list of words, and every person sending 50 cents and a list of ten words or more, is guaranteed an extra present by return mail (in addition to The Sunny South) of a 162 page book, "The Other Man's Wife," a very fascinating book by John Strange Winter; or, we will send you "The Story of an African Farm," or "Beside the Bonnie Brier Bush." Let us know which book you desire. Satisfaction guaranteed in every case or money refunded. The lists should be sent at once. THIS CONTEST WILL CLOSE JULY 15TH. The names and addresses of successful contestants will be printed in the July 24th issue of The Sunny South.

NOTE—For 75 cents we will send you The Sunny South for three months, allow you to enter above word contest, send you your choice of the books offered in the contest, and also send you free and post paid, our beautiful portfolio, Palestine Photographed, size 11x13½ inches, sixty-four selected views of picturesque and historic spots in the Holy Land, beautifully designed and handsomely bound in heavy paper portfolio covers, illustrated with a map of Palestine and a fac-simile of Hoffman's famous painting, "A Portrait of Christ." The 64 pictures contained in this volume are Actual Photographic Reproductions of the localities in the Holy Land made immortal through Christ's life on earth. Showing where Christ performed His miracles, the place of His birth, Baptism, Transfiguration and Crucifixion, and the places made sacred by the work of His Apostles as they appear today; it should be in every household. HOPE.

Alas for him who never sees
The stars shine through his cypress trees!
Who, hopeless, lays his dead away,
Nor looks to see the breaking day
Across the mournful marbles play;
Who hath not learned, in hours of faith,
The truth to flesh and sense unknown,
That Life is ever Lord of Death,
And Love can never lose its own!

—Whittier.

Communications.

Surely none of us who are "on the ground" can mistake the significance of the wail uttered in the article referred to: nor can we fail to know "whence it came and whither it goeth" (leadeth). And just now, before we complete our plans for work during the Summer revivals, let us see if we can't largely remedy the evils that shock us and hinder our work, and thus remove the reproach from among us.

We have noticed that the "trashy doggerel, namby-pamby," flippant book, which is "foisted on the people, whether they will or not," goes hand in hand with the self-appointed evangelist who foists both himself and his subsidiary song book on many, we think, unwary pastors. These yield often to the sordid demand of "itching ears" as well as to flattering inducements respecting their own salaries or collections, and are thus led into a course which they ever after regret, and regard as a great calamity both to themselves and their people.

We are thoroughly disgusted with this whole business, transacted, as it is, in the name of religion, but in the face of and contrary to the law and order of the church. We enter our protest against it, and beseech the authorities of the church within our bounds to positively remove all such disloyal institutions as irresponsible evangelists and counterfeit song books from our churches and religious and devotional exercises.

How a man claiming the patronage and fellowship (not to mention official recognition) of the Methodist Church can have the face to habitually sell and use any book not authorized by said church, and that, too, with the vow upon him to support its institutions, as well also the ordination obligations compelling him to follow "with a glad heart and willing mind the godly admonitions of his superiors, submitting yourselves to their godly judgments"—this is beyond our conception. He surely presumes either upon the charity or ignorance of the people with whom he deals. We are inclined to conclude the latter, for no intelligent Methodist can be supposed to look with indifference or even charity on a law-breaker, or one who evades the law, which is equally condemnable; nor will such a Methodist pass by any detail of the means by which the law is evaded or broken.

How a pastor can invite or tolerate the imposition of such men, means and methods, is equally puzzling to me. It can only be accounted for on the same score as above mentioned—charity or ignorance. How often do we go to a people newly supplied with these outside-issue song books and find our colporteur shut off at least for a year from supplying our people with our books! How often is it the case that these same people have but recently been tiraded, burlesqued and bemeaned for their stupidity by some general-traveling-local pretender who disregards even the first principles of justice or veracity! Our mind is that never was greater calamity to a young pastor than for him to depend upon such subterfuges in revival seasons especially. The record of the fourth Quarterly Conference for 1896 in a certain mission charge shows, in answer to Ques. 26: "Paid preacher in charge, $264.20; ministerial aid, $265." This solves the financial problem handsomely, in fact. Twelve mouths' work for the preacher in charge; three weeks' work for his assistant. This is a glaring fact, my brethren; and if you will eliminate this feature, soon will be seen the more industrious seeking the pastorate, and the less inclined to labor seeking their level in some other field, where their work will be more enduring and do less harm.

The money feature is that which constitutes the motive in the song book and other book matter also. One who is and ought to be much interested was recently replied to on this wise: "I might handle your 'Young People's Hymnal' if I could get as satisfactory rates on them as on other books." This, too, was said by a Methodist preacher of the style under review. Both our church and our colporteur ought to be protected from such mercenaries; and the colporteur, being the representative of the church in this special field, is looked to for protection at this point.

May the Lord inflame us all with such a spirit of discernment as that we may be able to "try the spirits, whether they are of God!" "Woe unto them that call evil good, and good evil; that put darkness for light, and light for darkness; that put bitter for sweet, and sweet for bitter." (Isa. v, 20.) "For such are false apostles, deceitful workers, transforming themselves into the apostles of Christ. And no marvel, for Satan himself is transformed into an angel of light." (II. Cor. xi, 13, 14.)

Brethren of the Durant district, and North Mississippi Conference, let us continue to agonize for greater success this year than ever before, looking to each other and to God for all needed assistance. The Lord be with us all. W. L. ANDERSON.

Letter from North Carolina.

MR. EDITOR: Pardon my delay in complying with your request to write an occasional letter from the "Old North State" for your valuable paper.

The CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE, of New Orleans, has always stood in the front rank of the family of Advocates; and we are delighted to see it has lost none of its freshness and power. It is connectional in spirit, and swerves neither to the right or left from the truth as to the doctrines, polity, institutions and officers of the Methodist Church. It never fails to raise its voice in trumpet tones against all who would destroy or paralyze their usefulness. You have a number of able correspondents who discuss vital questions pertaining to the present and future prosperity of the church. With an extensive and rich territory; with Bishop Keener, than whom no church has a stronger and more loyal man; the gifted and polished Bishop Galloway living in the bounds of it, and with the splendid effort you are making to keep up its high standard, the ADVOCATE ought to continue to increase in circulation and usefulness.

The North Carolina Conference has 170 clerical and 64,905 lay members. Many of these are strong men, and some, in natural endowments, breadth of thought, thorough scholarship and devotion to the church, are the equals of any in any Conference in our connection.

Our Conference was greatly afflicted last year in the death of eight of its members. Only one has fallen this year—Langhorne Leitch. He was a good man, and full of faith and the Holy Ghost.

Rev. B. R. Hall, presiding elder of Washington district, was stricken a few weeks ago with apoplexy. He is improving, and we are hoping for his speedy and entire recovery. He is a young man of decided ability, and useful and popular as a presiding elder.

The "Advocate question" has been for some time a disturbing element in our church in North Carolina. At the last session of our Conference the matter was compromised, and Rev. T. N. Ivey was elected editor for the North Carolina Conference. In this selection the Conference made no mistake. Upon him Trinity College has conferred the degree of D. D. He is emphatically worthy of the honor.

The commencement of Greensboro Female College was unusually brilliant. Bishop Galloway preached a sermon that captured everybody. Rev. W. C. Norman delivered the literary address. It was carefully prepared and impressively delivered. Dr. Dred Peacock is the best-furnished president this old and prosperous college has ever had. The future outlook of the college is most flattering.

Trinity College is the pride of North Carolina Methodism. Its last commencement was the most successful ever held. There was a larger number of trustees and distinguished men and women present than ever before. Dr. Jas. Atkins, Sunday-school editor, preached a superb sermon. Dr. W. B. Smith, of Tulane University, New Orleans, delivered the finest literary address this scribe has listened to in years. It was, indeed, a rare treat. The last term of the college was a most satisfactory one. More students were matriculated than for a number of years, and the prospect for a larger increase next year is encouraging. That splendid Christian gentleman, Washington Duke, gave to the college this year the munificent sum of one hundred thousand dollars. "A Friend" gave twenty-five thousand dollars to endow another chair in English. Dr. John C. Kilgo, the eloquent and scholarly president, is doing a great work for Christian education. His influence over the students is magnetic, and the moral and Christian standard at the college is of a high order. He believes in no sham work in the school-room nor the chapel. The Doctor has been fiercely assailed by friends of secular and State schools; but he has met them successfully at every point, and is in possession of the field. The large and intelligent Board of Trustees adopted strong resolutions endorsing him and his position most enthusiastically, as did our Conference at its last session.

The cause of missions is being emphasized by Dr. F. D. Swindell, our Missionary Secretary.

The presiding elders and pastors and we are looking for good results.

Our District Conferences will begin in a few weeks. Come up to the Warrenton, which is to be held at Enfield, July 21–25. Leave the Crescent City and spend a while at our Panacea Springs. A cordial greeting awaits you.

Durant District Conference.

The Conference convened in Pickens, Miss, June 10, 1897. The roll showed an average attendance of preachers and laymen. The meeting was deeply spiritual. The reports of the charges testified to the fidelity and loyal allegiance of the presiding elder and pastors. The district has paid for foreign missions to date $613 (more than sixty per cent. of entire assessment and nearly eighty per cent. of amount paid during the whole of last year); has paid for ministerial support about thirty-five per cent. of assessment; has been diligent in building and repairing churches and improving parsonages, and exhibits an earnest purpose to pay the collections in full. Everything is favorable, and the Durant district is destined to rival the best in the Conference (Columbus district, look well to your laurels!).

Six years ago the uncomely fragments of the Columbus and Winona districts—two veritable "ragged edges of despair"—were thrown together, and this district was created—an uncomely field, possessing no "beauty" that any presiding elder (real or prospective) "should desire" it. Rev. R. A. Burroughs and Dr. W. T. J. Sullivan each gave it one year of earnest, sacrificial service, after which Rev. J. H. Mitchell was placed in charge. Bro. Mitchell is now closing his quadrennium, and a contrastive study of the Minutes for '93 (when he took charge of the district) and '96 (the last report) shows a permanent increase in membership of thirteen and thirteen and one-half per cent. (decidedly the largest increase of any district in the Conference); increase in presiding elder's and pastors' salaries of fifty per cent.; increase in foreign missions of one hundred per cent.; increase in domestic missions of one hundred and ten per cent., with corresponding increase in all connectional claims. Beside all this, the presiding elder has raised by personal appeal for district parsonage $1,500, and will turn over to his successor a good home, free of debt, well improved and comfortably furnished.

This startling record caused the District Conference to pass, unanimously and enthusiastically, the following resolution, and order its publication with appropriate data:

Resolved, That we hereby express our appreciation of the faithful and efficient services of our presiding elder during the past three and one-half years, and that we look forward to his approaching change of relation to our district with regret. We also express our appreciation particularly of his services in paying for our district parsonage.

Brethren, henceforth let no man despise the Durant district. It has demonstrated its right to a place, and demands your respect by what it has wrought. We want the second-best presiding elder in the Conference this Fall. The best (of course, ours is the best) is debarred by the law of limitation.

Our recent Conference was addressed by Drs. Murrah and Malone on education; Dr. McLaurin spoke on Bible cause; Bro. Bowen talked to us about the Orphans' Home, after which the Conference complimented his speech with a $145 collection. Dr. H. M. DuBose, pastor of First Church, Jackson; Bros. M. S. Williams, of North Georgia Conference; H. C. Morehead, presiding elder of the Grenada district, preached for us. We noted the presence of Bro. Riddle, of the Mississippi Conference. All these visiting brethren pleased and helped us.

McCullough proved a royal host, Pickens dispensed a kingly hospitality, and the Conference was pronounced the very best by many of the oldest itinerants.

Enpora will entertain the body next year, and M. T. Boswell, F. M. Glass, W. J. Newsom, J. F. Wilburn, with J. G. Hamilton and R. E. Wilburn as alternates, will represent us in the next Annual Conference.

Holly Springs District Conference.

[The following article should have appeared some weeks since. The delay is due to the fact that the article was misplaced, and hence overlooked.—EDITOR.]

This best and most enjoyable Conference was held at Potts' Camp, Miss., May 6 to 9, 1897. Rev. J. D. Cameron, the active presiding elder of the district, occupied the chair, directing with ease and most happily all the business and exercises of the Conference, quite to the pleasure and profit of all present. Notwithstanding his very recent recovery from a severe attack of la grippe, he preached with power and in demonstration of the Spirit. This scribe was called upon to do the work of secretary. Attendance was very good, every pastor save two being present. One, Bro. J. M. Morse, was absent owing to bad health; the other, Bro. B. C. Gray, was kept away by the effects of a severe accident. Bro. Oakley, being unwell, remained but one day. All the other pastors and most of the lay delegates were in attendance throughout the session. There was an unusually good attendance of the lay members, who took lively interest in all the proceedings. The discussions were interesting and profitable. The various reports of committees presented encouraging features in the work of the district, and, although in some interests we are manifestly remiss, we have made evident progress in other matters. As to conversions, accessions, revivals, etc., there is marked advancement. In building and repairing churches and parsonages unusual interest has been taken. A district parsonage was announced as a thing of the near future. The license to preach of several local preachers was renewed. Bro. J. T. Creasy was licensed to preach, Bro. R. W. Evans was recommended to the Annual Conference for admission on trial, and Bro. J. R. Robertson for readmission. Bro. Bachman was present with many useful and good books, and contributed much to the profit of the occasion by his wise suggestions as to Sunday-school and Epworth League work, and by a good sermon. The memory of everyone present will afford many delightful remembrances as we recall the many kindnesses, hearty welcome, abundant hospitality, and religious fervor of the good people of Potts' Camp. Oft, too, will we recall the untiring energy of Bro. Worsham in his entertainment of the Conference and the outpouring of the Spirit upon the congregations.

POTTS CAMP CHURCH.

While serving the Cornersville circuit, Rev. S. A. Ellis organized the Methodists at Potts Camp, Miss., into a society during the Summer of 1888. The charter members were W. P. Wills, wife, daughter and son, Wm. Gallegher and wife, and Charlie Reed. For a time these good people worshiped in a school-house, but the spirit of Methodism burned in their hearts, and thus they were moved to consecrate a part of their means to God's service in the erection of a church. Accordingly, under Bro. Ellis' wise pastoral direction, they secured a good, neat church. The church was next served by Rev. H. C. Edmondson in 1892, whose charge was called Eagle Springs circuit; then by Rev. J. W. Boswell, D. D., in 1893. From 1894 to 1897 the people enjoyed the able ministry of Rev. M. D. Fly, whose charge was called Potts Camp and Myrtle circuit. During his pastorate the house of worship was improved. Now a beautiful church, worth $1,000, adorns the growing town and speaks well for the faithfulness and perseverance of the leaders of the church and liberality of the people. At present Rev. L. D. Worsham is the rejoicing pastor of this growing and very religious congregation. In four years this congregation grew to a membership of eighty, and now numbers one hundred and fifty, or thereabout. During a recent revival conducted by the pastor, assisted by Rev. W. D. Bass, the community has been revolutionized, the church greatly strengthened and renewed in interest in every department, having a large Sunday-school, nearly every pupil in which belongs to the church, an Epworth League with forty members, and about fifty persons who will lead in public prayer. During all these years of conflict and success Bro. S. A. Ellis has stood with this people in defense of right, and now rejoices with them in the glories of the cross.

BY REV. HERMAN W. KNICKERBOCKER.

TOPIC FOR JULY 4.

ST. PAUL AS A CITIZEN.

(II. Cor. xi. 22; Rom. xiii. 1-7; Titus iii. 1).

(1) There were peculiar circumstances surrounding Paul as a citizen. He was a "Jew of Tarsus," yet a Roman citizen—why is not positively known, though the fact that he was born in Celicia is usually assigned as the reason. The Jews were the conquered subjects of Rome, and this argues the improbability of any overweening love for the Roman State. Patriotism usually affording so sure a foundation for good citizenship was lacking in St. Paul. The obligations of citizenship rested upon other grounds. Paul seems to be proud of his Jewish lineage, and refers to it frequently, but only refers to his Roman citizenship when he needed it to get him out of trouble.

(2) Civil government is of God. "The powers that be are ordained of God. Whosoever, therefore, resisteth the power resisteth the ordinance of God." It is the duty of Christians to live in accord with the civil laws of the land where Providence has placed them. "For rulers are not a terror to good works, but to the evil." When they act illegally and are a "terror to good works," the obligation ceases (Acts xxiii, 2 and 3).

(3) Paul argued that we should keep the law from a selfish point of view. The law-breaker is punished. The highest ground of obligation is, however, "for conscience sake."

(4) The essential lesson to be learned from this study is that Christianity not only does not interfere with a man's obligation to obey the authorities under whom he lives, but it lays unmistakable emphasis upon that obligation. Christianity will make better citizens of men under whatever form of government.

DOTS.

Algiers League has 103 members. Is not this the largest in the State?

Why don't the Executive Committee of the State League meet and elect an editor to represent the State?

Bro. E. H. Prescott, treasurer of the State League and president of the Louisiana Avenue (local) League, will leave for the West shortly on account of his health. His going will deprive the League of a consecrated, zealous worker, and will be a distinct subtraction from its moral forces. Let the League pray for his speedy return to health and to Louisiana.

Louisiana Avenue League held its last social for the Summer at the residence of Dr. J. B. A. Ahrens, last Friday night. These monthly functions afford legitimate scope for the gratification of the social instincts of the young people. The young people frequently backslide because of their contact with sinful society. The League provides a society whose tendency is to preserve their Christian integrity.

Hard times bring a peculiar joy to the stingy saint. He can dodge the general collections with great ease. He feels that it is not necessary to pay the preacher's salary in full, as he expects that other charges will not "pay up." He has a large amount of property and everything to make him comfortable, but he is always talking about hard times at church. Everybody knows he is stingy. He has always talked about hard times, but now he can dodge the collections. He is happy.—St. Louis Advocate.

JUST FORGET.

BY REV. M. J. McKON.

O soul of mine! What makes you
Grieve and fret?
Why linger in the shadow
We have met
Why not embrace the hours
Of sunshine, and the flowers?
And all the dreary showers
Of tears, that have been ours
Just forget

What fretful trouble swells thy Waving breast?
Why let it rob thee of Heaven's
Rich bequest
Dost thou not know that calm
Content is the healing balm
That soothes the sharpest qualm,
And makes our life a psalm
Of peaceful rest?

Cheer up then, soul of mine! Be
Not downcast
The troubles, worries—all will Soon be past
Forget the things behind
Press on. The world is blind,
Failure is oftimes kind
Who loses late will find

The Higher Christian Life.

To begin at what we understand to be the true beginning of the subject is, that a person can not grow in grace until he is in grace. Christian life, properly speaking, must be planted in the heart by the Holy Spirit. The fruit of "the Spirit is love, joy, peace, long-suffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, meekness, temperance." An unregenerate man can never grow into grace, or be put into the knowledge of sins forgiven, by any worldly culture, or by the forms or ceremonies of the church.

It is a special gift from God when there is a complete surrender of self to him, or the consecration of himself of present and future powers, and for time and eternity. Henceforth he is to realize that "for me to live is Christ, and to die is gain." He has the birthright to all the spiritual blessings and attainments in the church, both militant and triumphant, provided he will go forth faithfully in the discharge of every duty. As a child born in the United States is heir to all the privileges and blessings of an American citizen only, he must show himself worthy of them. It is the privilege and duty of those who are made spiritually alive to live free from known or intentional sin. "Whosoever is born of God doth not commit sin; for his seed remaineth in him: and he can not sin, because he is born of God." "For whosoever is born of God overcometh the world: and this is the victory that overcometh the world, even our faith." "We know that whosoever is born of God sinneth not, but he that is begotten of God keepeth himself, and that wicked one toucheth him not."

These texts evidently teach us that if a regenerated person sins, it is his fault, and, of course, should be repented of and forgiven. Grace, not sin, is to reign in us. Or adopt the language of Paul: "And will be a Father unto you, and ye shall be my sons and daughters, saith the Lord Almighty. Having these promises, dearly beloved, let us cleanse ourselves from all filthiness of the flesh and spirit, perfecting holiness in the fear of God."

The Christian life is represented as a life-long warfare. We are to fight against the flesh, the world, and the devil. Our enemies are many, wily, and strong. We need to put on the whole armor of God, be valiant soldiers, and we have the assurance that the victory shall continually be ours. The more victories won, the stronger will be our faith. The servant of God is to grow in grace and in the knowledge of God.

"Brethren, I count not myself to have apprehended; but this one thing I do: forgetting those things which are behind, and reaching forth unto those things which are before, I press toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus." "Add to your faith virtue, knowledge, temperance, patience, godliness, brotherly kindness and charity"—a continual cultivation of these graces. The preacher is to "declare all the counsel of God." "Study to show thyself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of truth;" and as the faithful steward, "to give them their portion of meat in due season." As the preacher can only attain to the greatest usefulness by preaching in due season all the counsel of God, so those who are fed by the preacher can attain the greatest perfection by being faithfully taught in all of their duties.

There are some essentials in the Christian life we should never lose sight of. We name, first, humility. "Whosoever, therefore, shall humble himself as this little child, the same is the greatest in the kingdom of heaven." He is cautioned "not to think of himself more highly than he ought to think." And also, "Be not wise in your own conceits."

The lesson to be learned from the Pharisee and the publican praying in the temple is recorded, "For everyone that exalteth himself shall be abased, and he that humbleth himself shall be exalted."

Paul makes a statement in his own life, "And lest I should be exalted above measure through the abundance of the revelations, there was given to me a thorn in the flesh, the messenger of Satan, to buffet me, lest I should be exalted above measure."

If an apostle needed to be reminded of the needed humility, we, who are of so much less importance, ought to be careful to be kept at the foot of the cross.

Let me urge all Christians to be faithful. "Whatsoever thy hand findeth to do, do it with thy might." A true Christian is to be watchful to perform every duty. He ought not to fall short of his duty in every good word and work. God expects you to do your best under the circumstances. If we are guilty of willful ignorance, or omission of duty, there is cause for repentance and amendment. Of course, any Christian ought to be ashamed to commit any known or willful sin. Every Christian ought to be the highest expression of the Spirit under the circumstances in which he lives.

Above all, let us maintain a charitable spirit. Possibly the point to be most closely watched at the present day is to think of our Christian brethren as brethren in the common faith. Charity "envieth not" and "thinketh no evil."

We are to love God supremely, and "Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself." Self is so far in the background that he can adopt the text, "In honor preferring one another." Every Christian should be free from the "holier than thou spirit." Men of brains never boast of their learning, or men of much wealth make a display of their money, and much less let Christians avoid making any unnecessary or immodest display of their piety before the world.

Finally, let us say that the signs of the times are hopeful for the church. There is more general interest in religion and more piety than ever before. There are few strange or hurtful doctrines. The division of opinion has narrowed down to minor doctrines in religion. It may not be long till we all come in the unity of the faith, and realize that there is "one God and Father of all, who is above all, and through all, and in you all." The spirit of division is from beneath; the spirit of unity from above. C. McDONALD.

Sunday Trains.

MR. EDITOR: I have been creditably informed that the third State Epworth League Conference, which met recently at Water Valley, passed a resolution to this effect: "We pledge ourselves not to travel on Sunday trains, unless in cases of dire necessity."

To my mind this is not an insignificant fact. I regard it as an omen of good to the Church and our State. Just think of it! Something like five hundred young people gathered from different parts of the State, and representing hundreds more of young people, pledging themselves to such a resolution. Does this not indicate that the consciences of our young people are being aroused in regard to the observance of the Sabbath? Are we not justified, from the passing of this resolution, in hoping that both Church and State will take advanced steps in this direction in the near future? May not the Lord utilize the young people of the church to develop such a sentiment in regard to Sabbath observance that it will come to pass even in our day that the whistle of the locomotive will not be heard anywhere in our State on the Lord's day?

It is useless to stop here to prove that the running of trains on Sunday is at variance with the teachings of the Bible. Nor is it necessary to raise the question as to whether it can be done. It is not at all impracticable or improbable. It can be done; it ought to be done. If it is to be accomplished, to whom can we look more confidently than the young people? Unquestionably the future prosperity of Church and State is with them. I would earnestly urge the young people to persevere in this good work until the people throughout the State are so thoroughly imbued with this idea that Sabbath desecration of every kind will be stopped. I trust that those who are competent to do justice to this subject will think about it, talk about it, and write about it, till we have a people who fully observe the Fourth Commandment. It is no fanatical idea that the success of Christ's kingdom in our land is largely dependent on the proper observance of the Sabbath. Let the good work go on. M. H. MOORE.

The Mississippi Orphans' Home.

The meeting of the Board of Directors of the Mississippi Orphans' Home, held in Water Valley, April 29 and 30, 1897, was an occasion of unusual interest to all friends of this great enterprise. Our handsome building, nearing completion, was to be solemnly set apart for the purposes of its erection, and steps were to be taken looking to the furnishing and formal opening of the Home and to its permanent management.

At the first session at 9:30 A. M., April 29, in the absence of the president and vice-president, J. B. Streater was called to the chair. Before the close of the session the vice-president, J. M. Wyatt, arrived, and presided throughout the meeting.

The Building Committee presented a report, showing the building almost completed and all bills paid to date. A balance of $600 would be due upon the completion of the contract in about thirty days, and the treasurer's report showed on hand $488.25 to meet this claim. These items will show that the policy of the Board has been to advance in the construction of the Home as rapidly as the funds will allow; but not to go in debt. The committee reported also a lot of surplus material on hand, valued at $300, to be disposed of by the committee as the Board should direct.

An interesting report was presented by the agent, Mrs. T. B. Clifford, showing the valuable work done in securing subscriptions for the completion and furnishing of the Home. The report convinced the Board of the importance of having an agent in the field, and assured them of the willingness of the people to equip and support the institution.

The following resolutions will be of interest as indicating the plans of the Board:

Resolved, That when the Building Committee have received the completed building from the contractor, they shall notify the president and secretary of this fact, and the president shall then call a meeting of the Board of Directors to be held in Water Valley within not less than 30, nor more than 60 days, at which a manager and matron shall be elected.

Resolved, That we need to raise $3,000 more to finish and furnish and open the Home.

The following officers were elected to serve for the ensuing year: President, W. A. Gunning; vice-president, J. M. Wyatt; secretary, A. F. Watkins; treasurers—Mississippi Conference, M. L. Burton; North Mississippi Conference, J. M. Taylor; Executive Committee: W. A. Gunning, J. T. Blount, W. M. Thornton.

The feature of the greatest popular interest in connection with the meeting was the laying of the corner-stone of the new building on Friday afternoon, April 29.

The Board of Directors, the State Epworth League Conference, then in session in Water Valley, and apparently the entire population of the royal little city of Water Valley marched out to the site of the Home, where, after appropriate religious service, conducted by Rev. R. J. Jones, of Jackson, and the depositing of certain objects of interest and value in the corner-stone, the stone was set in its place and the great audience was addressed by Rev. H. M. DuBose, D. D., of Jackson. Short talks were made by Rev. A. F. Watkins, Rev. M. L. Burton, and Mr. Joe Ramsey, of Viola, Tenn., after which the crowd dispersed, wandering over the beautiful grounds or inspecting the commodious building. The handsome corner-stone, appropriately engraved, was the gift of Mr. T. B. Carson, of Jackson.

Resolutions of thanks were passed by the Board as follows: To the Bank of Water Valley for the free use of a box in its safe deposit vault; to Mr. T. B. Carson for the donation of the corner-stone; to Enochs Bros. for reduced prices on building material; to the I. C. railroad for reduced freight rates; to Dr. DuBose and others for their addresses; to the press of Water Valley for the courteous attention and appreciated services rendered; to Rev. and Mrs. T. B. Clifford for efficient and valued service as agents, and to the generous people of Water Valley for their abiding interest in the Home and their many courtesies to the Board of Directors.

Subject to the appointment of the Bishop, Rev. T. B. Clifford was elected field agent for the Home for such time as shall meet the approval of the Bishop and presiding elder of the district.

After the appointment of several committees to attend to certain work necessary, in view of the early completion of the house and the formal opening of the Home, the Board adjourned to meet at the call of the president.

The State Epworth League Conference, during its annual session, evidenced its sympathy for the work of the Home by pledging the Leagues in the State to raise $1,000 for the Mississippi Orphans' Home during the next twelve months.

To the following items of the foregoing report the secretary would ask especial attention:

1. The building is nearing completion, and $3,000 are needed to finish and furnish the house and formally open the Home. Will not all charges that have not done so promptly observe "Orphans' Day" and forward the collection to the treasurers?

2. In view of the pledge given by their representatives, the Epworth Leagues are requested to take up collections for the Home at their earliest convenience, and Leagues, churches and individuals, who wish to furnish rooms or beds or other necessary articles, are invited to correspond with Hon. I. T. Blount, Water Valley, Miss.

3. Rev. T. B. Clifford, our chosen field agent, is commended to the cordial sympathy and co-operation of our people. A. F. WATKINS, Secretary.

Woman's Board of Foreign Missions.

The editor from North Mississippi has had the delightful privilege of attending the Woman's Board of Foreign Missions, which convened for its nineteenth Annual Session in Birmingham, Ala., June 4–10. Its members came from all over the M. E. Church, South. All officers were present, all managers save one, and 34 Conference secretaries or their alternates, there being only three Conferences unrepresented. Besides these were Mrs. Butler, editor of the Woman's Missionary Advocate, and many visitors. A preparatory service was held Friday night, June 4, in the First M. E. Church, South, and many were the testimonies to God's unfailing grace, and gracious presence even in deep affliction. All bore witness to the blessing that had come to them in his work, and pledged themselves to lives of consecration and service.

The first business session was held Saturday morning, and each morning thereafter through the following Wednesday was devoted to business, the afternoons being given to committee work. These business sessions were instructive and pleasant and marked throughout by greatest harmony. The reports of Mrs. Trueheart, secretary of home affairs, and Mrs. McTyeire, treasurer, showed that while we had not reached the $100,000, or 100,000 members, for which we had labored during the past year, still there had been a most decided advance in the work. Several thousand new members had been gained and there had been collected for all purposes $82,880.47, which is an increase over last year of $8,477.31. The conditions of the work at home and in foreign fields were carefully considered and the utmost care taken to learn the real needs of each and pursue the policy most helpful to each.

The report of Miss M. L. Gibson, principal of the Scarritt Bible and Training-school, was received with pleasure. The school has grown steadily from its beginning, and the past year has been a very prosperous one. During the five years of its existence it has given thirty-three diplomas, and sixteen of its former students are now foreign missionaries, while many are doing effective work in the home churches. The hospital does a fine work, and is entirely self-supporting. It has long needed a free bed, and this need seems about to be supplied through the Queen's Diamond Jubilee Association, of Kansas City, which, pursuing the policy of this association in England in compliance with the Queen's request, proposes to celebrate the sixtieth year of her majesty's reign by endowing and helping hospitals, and among those to be benefited in Kansas City through this organization is our own Bible and Training-school Hospital.

New work was projected by the Board for the coming year in Korea and the City of Mexico. Sufficient money was appropriated to buy a lot, erect a building and pay a missionary for Korea. It was decided, as a special incentive for the children, that the work in Korea should be their work, and that where they were not engaged on some other line all their offerings above dues should go to this work. It was also decided that the children of any Conference society raising the largest amount for the Korean work during the coming year should have the privilege of naming the building to be erected, and the children of the Conference society raising the next largest amount the privilege of naming the chapel in the building. Thus the children of our Southern Church have the privilege of raising a lasting testimonial to their love for the Master and the souls for whom he died. May this work obtain a strong hold upon their hearts and prosper in their hands!

The work in the City of Mexico is the Keener Day School, which has been carried on for almost twenty-three years by the Parent Board, and which that Board now turns over into the hands of the Woman's Board. Miss Hardinia Norville, who has been for six years in Laredo, Texas, and who was present at this meeting, was assigned to the charge of this work.

The night sessions of the Board meeting were especially interesting and attractive. On Saturday night Birmingham, through Mrs. Stardivant, eloquently voiced the welcome which had been everywhere so manifest to us from the moment we entered her gates. Mrs. Anson West welcomed the Board for the North Alabama Conference Society. Mrs. S. S. Harris, of Florida, responded on behalf of the Board. After these the president, Mrs. M. D. Wightman, made her annual address.

On Sunday Dr. Gibley Kelley preached an eloquent and appropriate sermon, and on Sunday night Bro. Welling, of Brazil, made an interesting and helpful talk, and Dr. Lambuth gave a wise and suggestive address in regard to the best policy to be pursued by the Board in their work.

One night was full of interest to us as we saw presented to the Board two young ladies, Misses Richardson and Williams, who had finished their courses at the Scarritt Bible and Training-school, and were ready for their work in the foreign field. They stood before us with the dew of the early morning upon their brows and their faces turned eagerly towards their life-work. After Mrs. Wightman, in her inimitable way, had accepted them with sweetest words of tender love, each young lady gave expression in a few earnest words to her joy at going into the Master's service and her confidence in God to guide and bless. After these came those who had borne the heat and burden of the day, but whose faith in God and joy in his service were undiminished. There were present Miss Lula Rose, who had been for six years in Brazil; Miss Hardinia Norville, for six years in Mexico, and Miss Alice Waters, for three years in China. Each young lady told of her work and pleaded for the people among whom she had labored with great earnestness.

Other night sessions were given to the discussion of topics relating to growth of the work.

I feel constrained to say that the Woman's Board of Foreign Missions is composed of extraordinary women. They are strong in intellect, possessed of rare gifts and graces, and deeply spiritual. Great pre-eminence was given to spiritual things at all times. Each business session was opened and closed with a half hour of devotional exercises, and there were always seasons of blessings. Never have I seen a body of women so ready with prayer and testimony as were these. One can not wonder that God has blessed their labors with such abundant success. I was also impressed with their sweet womanly affection for each other. They obey well the apostolic injunction, "Greet one another with a holy kiss."

In closing I would mention the boundless hospitality of Birmingham, which was manifest not only in the homes, but in every place and in every way. Excursions and trolley rides more than could be accepted were tendered the Board and visitors, and I am sure Birmingham and her people will ever be held in most pleasant remembrance by all who attended the nineteenth Annual Session of the Woman's Board of Foreign Missions. MRS. G. H. LIPSCOMB.

Selections.

Dealing in pleasant, but pointed irony, Dr. Berry writes in the Epworth Herald: "Have you ever noticed how many people are taken sick on Sunday morning? They suffer from a very peculiar malady. The symptoms are irresistible drowsiness, followed by lassitude and a strange disinclination to move, and the patient is sure to grow suddenly worse at any mention of church services. Toward noon pulse becomes more regular and temperature drops, and by dinner time convalescence has fairly set in. Monday morning the last trace of the trouble has entirely disappeared, and the victim is able to go about his usual work without pallor of cheek or dimness of eye. Strange disease, very strange disease. Some professors of religion catch it."—Sunday-School Visitor.

It is the easiest thing in the world to obey God when he commands us to do what we like, and to trust him when the path is all sunshine. The real victory of faith is to trust God in the dark and through the dark. Let us be assured of this, that if the lessen and the rod are of his appointing, and his all-wise love has engineered the tunnels of trial on the heavenward road, he will never desert us during the discipline. The vital thing for us is not to deny and desert him.—Theodore L. Cuyler.

To be at work, to do things for the world, to turn the currents of things about us at our will, to make our existence a positive element, even though it be no bigger than a grain of sand in this great system where we live—that is a new joy of which the idle man knows no more than the mole knows of sunshine, or the serpent of the eagle's triumphant flight into the upper air. The man who knows, indeed, what it is to act, to work, cries out: "This alone is to live."—Phillips Brooks.

Oh, what a splendid life this is! To have God see in you a possibility that far transcends your highest hope and divine ambition! To have God say, "I will make him like Christ!" To have God summon you to work with him in making you like Christ! To have God put forth all his power in preparing you for Christ-likeness!

Rise early. Pray for your minister. Pray that the preaching may be blessed to your soul. Do not indulge in trival conversation. Do not criticise the performance of your minister. Spend every Sabbath as though it were your last.—Christian Union Herald.

It needs in us infinite carefulness and watchfulness as we walk ever amid other lives, lest by some word, or look, or act, or disposition, or influence of ours, we hurt them irreparably.—J. R. Miller.

An infidel is one who exhausts himself talking against the Bible, but who, when occasion offers, finds as much pleasure in quoting it to support an argument as the rest of humanity.

To Whom It May Concern:

About three years ago I received a sample bottle of "Mul-en-ol." I had never heard of it before. I began using it, however, as occasion required, and soon found that it was all that is claimed for it, and more. For cuts, burns, bruises, scalds, and all kinds of sores, it is superior to any remedy I have ever used. It is also exceedingly efficacious in colic and diarrhœa. For sore throat it is incomparably better than anything I know of. I heartily recommend it as a medicine worthy of a place in every household. W. C. BLACK,
Editor Christian Advocate.

Cure Catarrh in Summer.

Rev. J. W. Blosser, M. D., who has devoted twenty-one years to the study of Catarrh, says that Summer is the best time to make a speedy and thorough cure. He has discovered a remedy which is smoked in a pipe, but contains no tobacco, and cures the worst cases permanently. He will mail a three-days' trial treatment free to any sufferer who will address Dr. J. M. Blosser & Son, 11, 12 and 13 Grant Building, Atlanta, Ga.

FROM THE WORK.

Rev. J. H. Foreman, P. C., Trenton, Miss., June 21, 1897: "We had our Children's Day services at New Prospect yesterday conducted by our most efficient and devoted superintendent, Dr. V. Russell. A very large crowd attended. All present seemed to enjoy the occasion very much. We used the printed programmes in full, no more nor less. Five dollars and thirty cents was the result of the collection. We are moving along nicely over here. Brethren, pray for us, that we may have a revival on Trenton charge."

Rev. Geo. M. Hull, P. C., Wilkinson circuit: "We are having a marked advance along all lines on this charge. When we came to this work we found things very badly scattered. The former pastor—Rev. L. T. Cole—was called away in the midst of the year, and never returned, but transferred to Kentucky. The work was then served in a very irregular way by local preachers, and, of course, no regular, organized work was done. Our Children's Day was a complete success. At Friendship Church the Sunday school had a fine programme, which was nicely executed. There was one of the largest crowds ever assembled in this part of the country. There was a splendid dinner spread for those present, which, as usual, was enjoyed by all present. The music was managed by the accomplished principal-elect of Edward McGehee College, Miss Swanson. We are very well up in finances, and are expecting to have everything up in full at Conference."

Rev. D. W. Babb, Louisville, Miss., June 17, 1897: "Our work is moving on smoothly, and we think strengthening in most of the departments of church work. We are a little slow about our Children's Day, but think we will come out all right in the end. Our presiding elder is a very faithful servant, both of the Lord and the people. He is finishing his fourth year on this district, and to give him up will rob us of much wise counsel. A model of patience to the erring, a faithfulness to all church work in his jurisdiction. The heavy debt on the district parsonage, which promises to be a thing of the past at the end of the year, through his untiring energy, will certainly give him a place in the heart of every person in the district who desires a home for the presiding elder and his family. Our District Conference is just over, which was one of the most spiritual we have attended. We missed our editor very much. (We mean you, Doctor.) Doubtless a good home was in waiting for you. This would have been necessary to give you equal favors with the other brethren, for we all had good homes, and the fellowship of the brethren was especially sweet. Success to the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE."

Rev. W. T. Woodward, P. C., June 15, 1897: "We are progressing nicely on the Simsport charge. The fright of an overflow is all over. The crops are quite promising. We have just held our second Quarterly Conference. Bro. Skipper was with us, and preached four very fine sermons. Bro. Skipper is quite a good presiding elder. He looks after all the interest of church; nothing escapes his eye. We have held one fine revival at Marksville, La.—a new appointment. We have made improvements on parsonage to the amount of $58; let the contract for painting our church (Riverside); have money on hand for buying chandelier; have bought chandelier and pulpit lamp for Marine Church; have added pulpit and new benches to same church, also altar. We expect to let contract for painting Simsport Church this week. All church services are well attended. All in all, we are doing exceedingly well. Pray for us."

Rev. J. H. Foreman, P. C., Trenton, June 18, 1897: "Our Children's Day exercises at Trenton, May 23, conducted by the superintendent, W. W. Summer, was a success in every respect. It was a spiritual feast from the beginning. The church was filled to overflowing, and all seemed to enjoy themselves. The opening prayer was offered by R. P. Vinson, the superintendent of Polkville school; closing prayer by A. Summer. The service of song was appropriate, and well rendered. Recitation and declamation were well delivered, and very much enjoyed by all present. Our second quarterly meeting is a thing of the past. Our presiding elder was not present on account of being called off to preach a sermon to the Epworth League at commencement exercises of Whitworth College. But our quarterly meeting was a success. Every church on the charge represented; finances fully as well up as we expected it would be. Trenton circuit is coming to the front. Bro. W. M. Sullivan, of Forest, was with us, and preached three grand sermons, very much enjoyed by all that heard them. We are expecting a revival in this country this Summer. Pray for us. Mr. Editor, come to our District Conference, July 9."

Rev. J. C. Lowe, Vernon, Miss., June 11, 1897: "Our protracted meeting closed yesterday gloriously, after ten days of successful and enjoyable services. Nineteen persons professed faith in Christ, and eighteen of them were received into our church. Three of these had been baptized in infancy, as all the others should have been. One young man was converted in the last hour of the meeting, and there and then, kneeling at the altar, was baptized. Immediately after this we all partook of the sacrament of the Lord's Supper. A more spiritual service I have not known. This meeting has stirred the community deeper than anything of the kind for many years. The church was brought to feel her lack of consecration. We hope to give these young people some active work in the League, and through it to keep them employed in the Lord's vineyard. The principal human helper in the meeting was Bro. W. D. Bass, who did all the preaching, which was pointed, plain, forceful and religious. The management of the meeting was put entirely into his hands, and it was done admirably. I have not seen this difficult work managed better. His influence over the young is excellent, and he wins them to God and to the church. Any preacher needing help in his meeting will do well to get Bro. Bass and his brother, William, who directs and leads the singing, and he does it well. What blessedness there is in well-timed song! The ladies determined in the early Spring to build us a much-needed dining-room and kitchen to our parsonage. This improvement cost about a hundred dollars. Our parsonage now is comfortable and convenient, and there are four acres of land belonging to it. Our church edifice at Nettleton, where I also preach, has been greatly improved. The ladies bought ninety yards of carpeting for it, stained the window glass, and rearranged the pulpit, and now the house will compare favorably with any framed house in the Conference. We are doing right well in everything except in our finances, and this cripples us greatly. Oh, for a revival in scriptural liberality!"

WAYNESBORO AND STATE LINE

From Waynesboro station we have developed into a full-fledged circuit of three appointments, with the above title, and including the little town of Buckatunna. This gives the preacher a larger field, more work and a better subsistence. I find it difficult, however, to break from one point to another; for I always am greatly interested in the last appointment. My new appointments seem to feel a lively interest in the services; give me generally good congregations, pay up promptly and show signs of advance. Waynesboro, I think, has suffered somewhat from losing the every Sunday service, still our congregations are good, and we have some truly faithful and pious workers in the church. There are difficulties which we hope by prayerful and earnest effort to overcome; and we expect to see before the year closes a united and spiritual church here.

I have held my protracted services at every church, leading the work and doing most of the preaching in person. Bro. Nicholson was to have helped me at Waynesboro; preached several earnest sermons, and was called home by illness in his family. Our faithful presiding elder was with us during the quarterly meeting included by the meeting, and preached to instruction and edification of the people, as he always does. Bro. W. W. Moore and R. R. Phillips were with us a part of the time, doing faithful and efficient work in preaching, visiting and exhorting (Good help!). The Spirit of the Lord was in the word and among the people; and while there was not a hearty response by all the membership, many were greatly strengthened in their religious experience; my own little daughter converted happily and Bro. Phillips' wife entered joyfully into the "Canaan experience." At State Line I was alone until Wednesday evening, when Bro. N. B. Harmon came to my help. Congregations were large, and from the first interest deepened and the Spirit's presence manifest. We had about fifteen conversions, most of whom were members of the Methodist and Baptist Churches, who by their own confession had never enjoyed religion. One bright profession of entire sanctification, with others seeking. Five members added. At Buckatunna the Lord gave us a glorious victory, stirring nearly the whole town. Men and women were converted and sanctified in their homes and while at work; the songs of rejoicing and shouts of happy souls filled the little church; and the two churches united in love. Sixteen or more testified to pardoning grace and seven to sanctifying power. The cases were very bright. Thirteen joined our church, with others, I trust, to follow. Bro. Phillips was with us during a part of the meeting, and preached with unction and was used of the Lord in personal and altar work; as was also a consecrated Baptist young woman, Miss Nettie Brown, of York, Ala. Miss Brown will prove a blessing to any home where she visits and to any pastor in a meeting.

While I rejoice at the labors of the devoted evangelist, I do thank God that he honors the efforts and preaching of the earnest pastor aided by his own people and helped by brother circuit-riders. I trust I will never so lose the revival spirit as to be disqualified for revival service in my own charge. I will be able to help in several meetings during the Summer if needed by the brethren.

HENRY E. PARTRIDGE.

Nervous

People wonder why their nerves are so weak; why they get tired so easily; why they do not sleep naturally; why they have frequent headaches, indigestion and

Nervous Dyspepsia. The explanation is simple. It is found in that impure blood feeding the nerves on refuse instead of the elements of strength and vigor. Hood's Sarsaparilla feeds the nerves pure, rich blood; gives natural sleep, good digestion, is the true remedy for all nervous troubles.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Is the One True Blood Purifier. All druggists. $1. Prepared only by C. I. Hood & Co., Lowell, Mass.

The way people eat and drink has perilous consequences. Very few people know how to treat their stomachs. Eating too much; or not enough; or the wrong kind of food; or at the wrong time—gets the digestive organs into such a thoroughly disordered condition that at last nothing whatever can be digested.

When the appetite fails and the liver becomes sluggish, the whole system is dragged down and deadened by imperfect nutrition. There is nothing in the world which restores organic tone and vigor so quickly and scientifically as Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery.

It acts directly upon the nutritive organism; it gives the stomach power to extract a high percentage of nourishment from the food, and enables the liver to filter all bilious poisons out of the circulation; it puts the red, vitalizing life-giving elements into the blood, and builds up solid flesh, muscular force and healthy nerve-power.

In all debilitated conditions and wasting diseases it is vastly superior to malt extracts or any mere temporary stimulants. It gives permanent strength. It is better than nauseous emulsions, because it is agreeable to the weakest stomachs.

Whenever constipation is one of the complicating causes of disease, the most perfect remedy is Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets, which are always effective, yet absolutely mild and harmless. There never was any remedy invented which can take their place.

"In August, 1895, I was taken down with what my physician pronounced consumption," writes Ira D. Herring, of Needmore, Levy Co., Florida. "My trouble continued for several months. Four bottles of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery cured me."

SEASHORE CAMP GROUND.

The twenty-sixth annual Camp Meeting at Seashore will open (D. V. on Wednesday evening, July 14, next, and continue for about eight days.

Arrangements have been made for accommodating the multitudes that annually visit this delightful spot. A handsome and commodious two-story lodging-house—Keller Lodge—has been erected and comfortably furnished for visitors, in addition to the other accommodations supplied by the trustees.

The L. and N. R. R. Company will place on sale the reduced rate of fare during the season, from all points on their lines, and secure a corresponding rate from all connecting lines. Tickets will be placed on sale July 5 to 23, inclusive, and be good to return on until August 31. Two daily mail trains stop at the camp grounds, besides the accommodation and excursion trains, during the entire Summer season. All trains will stop at the camp grounds from July 5 to 24, inclusive.

The camp ground is located on the Mississippi Sound, having a frontage of 1,400 feet; fanned by the refreshing zephyrs from the Gulf of Mexico. The sea-bathing afforded is unsurpassed by any resort on the coast. A fine artesian well supplies the grounds with excellent drinking water, which is now "piped" over the entire encampment. An abundance of beautiful shade trees afford shelter from the Summer's sun, while pure and exhilarating sea breezes refresh the fatigued and overheated visitor from our smoke-enveloped and dust-stifling cities and towns.

Persons wishing to secure accommodations before the camp meeting should address W. B. Thomson, New Orleans, chairman Lodging Committee. Questions concerning transportation should be addressed to E. P. Mackie, New Orleans, La.; Dr. M. F. Tucker, Mobile, or J. H. Lakin, Montgomery, Ala.

All itinerant preachers of the Southern Methodist Church will be admitted into the grounds and provided with lodging accommodations in Wesley Hall free of charge. Board will be furnished them at the restaurant at half-rate.

The usual entrance fee will be in force this season. No charge will be exacted for entrance on the Sunday of the camp meeting. A cordial invitation is extended to all who desire to attend the camp meeting and spend a while on the camp ground.

O man, forgive thy mortal foe,
Nor ever strike him blow for blow.
For all the souls on earth that live
To be forgiven, must forgive.
Forgive him seventy times and seven,
For all the blessed souls in heaven
Are both forgivers and forgiven!
—Lord Tennyson.

A wise man makes every failure a stepping-stone on which to mount to higher things.

What do we live for, if it is not to make life less difficult for each other?—George Eliot.

The most magnanimous man is the one who has the advantage of an enemy and yet refrains from using it.

Men do not become holy by a careless wish; there must be study, consideration, liberation, and earnest inquiry.—C. H. Spurgeon.

Under some circumstances about the hardest of all work to an energetic man is patient waiting, but it is often the highest duty.

If a man hasn't got grace enough to keep his temper and live right, the less he has to say for Jesus Christ the better.—D. L. Moody.

An unattractive countenance is a misfortune, but it is better to be a sheep in wolf's clothing than a wolf in sheep's clothing.—Selected.

A man does not usually love himself any less because he has to forgive himself. Ought not the same rule to hold good in regard to others?

Never to give up, but ever to keep up and to keep at it, is the duty and the test of heroism in times that are hard and in hours that are dark.—H. Clay Trumbull.

It may seem paradoxical to say that a man is doing something when he is doing nothing, but this is literally true. A man is making character even when he is doing nothing.

Education is leading human souls to what is best, and making what is best of them. The training which makes men happiest in themselves also makes them most serviceable to others.—Ruskin.

We can never see this world in its true light unless we consider our life in it as a state of discipline, a condition through which we are passing to prepare us for another state beyond.—Standard.

God hides some ideal in every human soul. At some time in our life we feel a trembling, fearful longing to do some good thing. Life finds its noblest spring of excellence in this hidden impulse to do our best.—Robert Collyer.

Letter from Bishop Galloway.

MR. EDITOR: Before this note finds a place in the columns of the ADVOCATE, I shall be on my way to visit our missions in South America. On Saturday, July 3, the steamer "Havelina," of the Lamport & Holt Line, will loose her cables at New York, and twenty-one days thereafter she hopes to drop anchor in the beautiful Bay of Rio de Janeiro. Several returning missionaries will be my traveling companions. Rev. J. W. Wolling and family, because of the increasing demands of the work, have cut short their rest-visit of one year by six months, and will hasten back to their loved employ. Others will also be of our party. When that prosperous and abundant harvest field shall be seen, I will have completed my visits to all the missions of our great church. And to me no official or evangelical work is so attractive, or so stirs the spiritual energies of my being. No wonder the missionaries are so enamored with the sublime enterprise with which God has put them in trust! Theirs is indeed a high commission. My constant concern is that the church at home shall feel the same throb of divine eagerness that thrills the hearts of the laborers in the field.

Before bidding my native land another long adieu, I ask also the privilege of a word about our college in Mississippi. It will be gratifying to all friends of higher Christian education to know that the session of Millsaps College just closed was, in all respects, the most prosperous in the entire history of the institution. The enrollment was the largest, and a more thorough organization secured, of course, better work. During the year a handsome new building—Webster Science Hall—was erected and furnished, thus adding another to the many benefactions of the brother whose name will ever be closely linked with the cause of Christian education in the South. Eight splendid young men were graduated from the Literary Department. The number of young gentlemen receiving diplomas in the Law Department we will know so soon as another of the supreme judges can pass upon their examination papers. The trustees expressed the highest appreciation of the work done by ex Chancellor Mayes and his colecturers in the department of law. Better advantages for this high profession can not be found in the Southwest. The location of our law school at the State capital, where the high courts are always in session, and where the State's magnificent law library can be freely consulted, together with the finest instruction, offer the very best opportunities for thorough professional training.

Our alumni are doing enthusiastic work for the college. The president is receiving requests for catalogues and inquiries about boarding and other accommodations which assure us of a full attendance next term. Some of these requests come from young men to whom our alumni have presented the advantages of the college.

One of the most gratifying facts in the history of the last term was the gracious revival among the students, which continued for weeks just before the commencement. It was inaugurated and conducted by the students themselves. Many were converted, and several made the final decision to devote themselves to the work of the ministry. It is the high purpose of a Christian college to give special attention to the spiritual culture of students, while offering equal scholastic advantages with other institutions. This is the argument for church education—an argument all-persuasive and resistless to a Christian parent. First of all, we must look to the spiritual atmosphere of the school where our children are to be trained for life. Some sad history might here be recited, but I forbear.

I plead for the full educational assessment. Every dollar, and more, is needed to meet present demands. This is a high claim; let us conscientiously meet it.

If a wise Providence so orders, I hope to return from Brazil in October, and bring back a report from that vast field that will greatly strengthen the heart and faith of the church. CHAS. B. GALLOWAY.

Jackson, Miss., June 25, 1897.

The ADVOCATE is printed this week on our own press for the first time in eleven weeks. With new type on the eighth page, the appearance of the paper has been much improved.

At Variance with Facts.

The Times-Democrat, in reporting the proceedings of the Brookhaven District Conference, which was held at Hazlehurst last week, made the following statement:

"Rev. J. W. Chambers read the report of the Committe on Publishing Interests, which was adopted. Pending the adoption of this report, Mr. Chambers requested that the pastors report the number of NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATES. About twenty-five copies were reported."

Were we to allow this statement to go unchallenged, the public would have a right to suppose it to be a correct statement as to the number of subscribers to the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE within the bounds of the Brookhaven district. Such a statement is simply preposterous. The NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE has 36 subscribers in Crystal Springs alone. It has 29 at McComb City, 24 at Magnolia. The number in the district, not counting exchanges, is 352. So the figures reported to the District Conference need to be multiplied by fourteen in order that they may tell the whole truth.

Of course, we ought to have a larger list in all the districts, but when statements so utterly at variance with the truth are published to the world, it is our duty to correct them.

The Louisiana Chautauqua.

The sixth Annual Session of the Louisiana Chautauqua at Ruston will begin July 5, and will last four weeks. The Peabody Summer Normal School will be in operation at the same time. This school has a well-equipped faculty. The curriculum covers all the branches taught in the public schools. It is immensely advantageous to teachers to take this course. Good board can be had at reasonable rates. Ruston is already a famous health resort, and is destined to become more so when its salubrious climate and its health-giving mineral waters become more widely known.

A New Book.

THE DIVINE LIBRARY; SUGGESTIONS HOW TO READ THE BIBLE. By J. Paterson Smyth, B. D., LL.D. New York: James Pott & Co. London: Samuel Bagster & Sons.

The publishers guarantee excellent work as to type, binding and all other items that go to make a book a delight to the reader; and had the author done his work as admirable as the publishers theirs, it would have been not only a book of fine appearance, but also one of magnificent thought, worthy of the grand subject of which it treats. The author treats the subject in four essays: I. Introductory. II. How to Think of the Bible. III. On Studying with the Mind. IV. On Studying with the Heart.

He starts with the false premise that the Bible is to be studied as a library of books not written for the ages, but for the day and time of their authors. It is preposterous to think of the Psalms as written for David's day and time, and equally false the thought to view Isaiah as only written for Israel in the day of their idolatry. To treat the Bible as we would a collection of ordinary works collected and compiled together is altogether erroneous. In fact, the very criticism of this book has to be different from that of all others, for it is "sui generis." To think of it or treat it as an ordinary work will not do, as it has no other in its class. The author handles very freely the great subject of Inspiration of the Scriptures, and puts it on the lowest basis. The point of view from which he would have us read the Old Testament is that of gradually educating Israel, bringing them up in the scale by gradual development. He also treats the doctrines as progressive in all principles, whereas the first laws given were full and complete for that dispensation. The chapter on Studying by Texts is admirable in showing up the perversion of the Scriptures by taking certain passages out of their connection, and twisting them to suit certain theories or false dogmas. But the strangest fact is that the author in the fourth essay, Studying with the Heart, does not bring out the great truth that the Bible is a sealed book until one is converted. It is as dry as a rock; but regeneration, like Moses' rod, brings water out of this rock, and there is a new world of beauty and joy never before seen. None delight in the law of the Lord, none meditate upon it, until they can spiritually discern it. To read the Bible practically, regularly and prayerfully will only be done by those who are converted. If this book will encourage the study of the sacred Book, the author in his very modest preface says he will be amply repaid for all his toil. S. S. K.

Epworth League Echoes.

BY REV. THOMAS B. CLIFFORD.

Our recent trip to Meridian was a very pleasant one, made doubly so by the delightful entertainment which we received in the hospitable home of Bro. B. F. Ormond. His accomplished and consecrated daughter, Miss Eleanor, was for a year the secretary of the Mississippi State Conference of Epworth Leagues. She is now the wife of Rev. H. W. Van Hook, pastor of our church at Landerdale, Miss. Henry was fortunate in securing such a prize.

Sunday morning we preached at the Central Methodist Church and presented the claims of the Orphans' Home. The weather was extremely warm, and some of the male members of the congregation were sick, these two facts going, perhaps, to show why the collection was below our expectations. Another still more significant fact brought to our minds, however, was that Dr. Clay, of New Orleans, had twice visited Central within the past six months in the interest of his "Home" in the Crescent City. Not only did he take collections, but left "reminders" in the shape of mite boxes.

A mass meeting of the Leagues of the four Methodist Churches in the city had been arranged by President Smith, of the Central League, for five o'clock Sunday afternoon in the Central Church. Quite a number of Leaguers were present, and we esteemed it a privilege to talk to these young people on the plans and purposes of the Epworth League. Bros. G. H. Galloway and H. G. Hawkins, pastors of East End and South Side Churches, were present and took part in the service.

Dr. Featherston being absent from home, it devolved upon this writer to fill the pulpit at Central again Sunday night. The large number of young people in the congregation was noticeable, and we were more than ever impressed with the duty of the church toward these young men and young women in training them and utilizing them for God and the church.

Rev. H. G. Hawkins, pastor of the South Side Church, insisted that we attend the literary meeting of his League, Monday night, and deliver the lecture on "Methodism: Its Past, Present, and Future." When we arrived at the church at 8:15 P. M. we found it well filled with an attentive and appreciative audience. Several were there from the other Leagues. Especially did we notice many of the members of the Central League. Bro. Hawkins was for some time in Matsuyama, Japan, and at the close of the services Monday night he entertained several of us (at his home) for half an hour, telling us of "that land beyond the seas," and illustrating his talk by means of the many curios which he collected and has carefully arranged. We have neither time nor space to tell of the many friends whose company we enjoyed and whose efforts were put forth to make our visit (to the Queen City) both pleasant and profitable. May the blessings of heaven rest upon and abide with them forever!

Water Valley, Miss.

Macon, Miss.

The Building Committee has just closed a contract with Mr. T. P. Crymes to remodel our church in Macon. The work will cost $3,230.

J. A. RANDOLPH.

Make the most out of your own church. You are responsible to it and for it. God has put you in it. You have bound yourself to it by solemn vows. Then honor its pastor, love its members, support its ordinances, help on its work, speak well of it, attend its services regularly and devoutly, and take part to your fullest ability in its meetings. Find out your true place in it, and consecrate to it your talents and energies.—Philadelphia Presbyterian.

NOTES.

Rev. F. N. Parker spent several days of last week in the city.

We regret to learn that Bro. and Sister M. L. Burton are quite ill.

Rev. Wilson Moore, of the Louisiana Conference, is visiting relatives in Arkansas.

We leave out our leader this week to make room for the communication of Bishop Galloway.

Rev. R. M. Blocker has returned from Texas. He was much improved by his sojourn at Sour Lake.

Rev. S. S. Keener being absent from the city, his pulpit will be filled next Sunday by Rev. Patrick Henry Fontaine.

Rev. C. H. Ellis occupied the pulpit of Dryades Street Church last Sabbath morning, and preached an edifying sermon.

Rev. J. A. Notestine is being assisted in a meeting at Crowley by Rev. J. J. Smylie. The prospects are indicative of a gracious revival.

Col. D. E. Williams, a brother journalist of Lumberton, Miss., let the light of his genial countenance shine into our sanctum on Tuesday last.

Rev. Eli E. Riggs, of Floyd, La., is off on a three weeks' leave of absence from his charge, which is being spent among relatives and friends in South Louisiana.

We regret to learn that our friend, Rev. J. A. Bowen, is still in feeble health. He will go to Monteagle in a few days to spend several weeks, his generous flock having given him a vacation.

The Crystal Springs Chautauqua opened on Monday, the twenty-eighth, with an attendance of nearly a thousand, and this will be largely increased. There are about a hundred cottages on the grounds.

We are pleased to learn that a gracious revival followed the Epworth League Conference at Water Valley. Excellent work was done by Rev. E. B. Ramsey, and also by that eminent layman, Judge L. H. Estes, of Memphis.

We are pleased to learn that the Mississippi Orphans' Home at Water Valley is about completed. The cost is about $8,000, and it is free of debt. Funds are needed, however, to put it into operation. We shall have more to say on this subject in the near future.

We received an appreciated call recently from our accomplished friend, Miss W. L. Park, one of the principals of Port Gibson Collegiate Institute. Miss Park will leave in a few days for Monteagle, where she has an engagement to teach elocution during the Summer.

From a private letter from an esteemed correspondent, we take the liberty of making the following extract: "We must remember 'the forgotten man'—i. e., the humble, quiet, self-denying man, who is too busy to write or to talk much about what he is doing for Christ. 'The forgotten man' is the Christian for the times."

A candle that won't shine in one room is very unlikely to shine in another. If you do not shine at home, if your father and mother, your sister and brother, if the very cat and dog in the house are not the better and happier for your being a Christian, it is a question whether you really are one.—J. Hudson Taylor.

We regret to see that mobocracy still lifts its hideous head occasionally in Mississippi. The lynching of the negro murderer last week at Crystal Springs was entirely unjustifiable. The culprit was in the clutches of the law, and a speedy trial and execution were assured. Good citizenship ought to bestir itself for the suppression of this sort of lawlessness.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

DOMESTIC.

A large rice mill (the Ernst Mill) in this city was destroyed by fire last Saturday.

Texas is to tax cigarette dealers to the tune of $1,000 a year, the object of the new law being evidently to tax them out of existence.

The next meeting of the Trans-Mississippi Commercial Congress will take place in Salt Lake City, Utah, on July 14, proximo, and is expected to remain in session four days.

It is said in administration circles that the President and heads of departments have become thoroughly disgusted with the wrangles of the Louisiana Republicans over the federal offices.

The eighth reunion of the United Confederate Veterans, in Nashville, came to a close last Thursday. Ten thousand of them were in the parade of that day. Gen. J. B. Gordon was re-elected commander-in-chief of the Veterans.

It is suggested that Senator Hale, of Maine, extend his resolution, which is intended to exclude from the floor former senators who go there for the purpose of lobbying, so as to embrace the House of Representatives; to which ex-representatives are also admitted.

The Board of Foreign Missions of the Episcopal Church has been notified by Mrs. Felix B. Brunot, of Pittsburg, that she will build and endow a hospital for lepers in any part of China the Board may select, the hospital to be under the direction of the Missionary Board.

The United States Church Army, a Protestant Episcopal adaptation of Salvation Army methods, has been thrown out of all official standing in the church. The action was taken by the Parochial Missions Society at its meeting Thursday, and is to take effect on Sept. 28 next.

The St. Louis express on the Wabash Railway plunged through a trestle at Missouri City, Mo., at 7:05 o'clock, on June 26, carrying down the entire train with the exception of the rear car, a Pullman. More than a score of passengers have been killed. None of the trainmen have been found, except the engineer and fireman, who escaped uninjured.

Within a very short time the sugar planters will be in possession of the balance of the sugar bounty due on the crop of 1894. The appropriation made a couple of years ago of five million dollars to pay eight-tenths of a cent per pound bounty on the crop of 1894 did not suffice to pay the full amount of the claims allowed by Congress, and was accordingly distributed pro rata to the claimants.

According to a computation just made there are over 105,000 applications for office under the government on file in the White House and Washington departments, and only about 32,000 places available. Louisiana stands high upon the list at the treasury department in the number of applications from that State for positions under the department; 133 Louisiana patriots ask for a chance to serve the government.

The Mississippi River Commission gave a hearing last week, preparatory to making its allotment of the $2,833,333 appropriated for the river between the head of the passes and the mouth of the Ohio by Congress. The hearing was of more than usual interest, by reason of the extraordinary flood which has passed down the river this Spring and the ravages it made in the levees. A proposition was made that the government take charge of the work and build good, solid levees once and for all.

It is said that the entire Danish expedition to the headquarters of the Nile, including the leader, Baron Dhanis himself, has been massacred by the Mahdists north of the Congo Free State on the White Nile. The force numbered 6,000 men.

Senor Canovas del Castillo, the Premier of Spain, says that in case the Spanish forces in Cuba should suffer severely from sickness during the rainy season, the government will send 20,000 additional troops to the Island in October in order to maintain the army at its full strength and to inflict a final blow upon the Insurgents.

Great Britain's colossal pageant, one of the greatest the world has ever seen probably, was completed without an incident to mar its success. Last week was an anxious week for those in authority, but the whole scheme for the occasion of the Queen's jubilee was planned, carefully carried out, and has been a triumph for the management.

Aberdeen District Conference.

The twenty-eighth annual session of the Aberdeen District Conference of the North Mississippi Annual Conference met in Honston, Miss., at nine o'clock A. M., June 11, 1897, with presiding elder in chair.

When the roll was called quite a number of the members were absent, both clerical and lay; but many of them came in during the day.

Reports from the various charges show that the district is in a very prosperous condition, both spiritually and financially, and pastors are very hopeful of still better things in the future. The report of the work being done by our Sunday-schools was especially gratifying. Reports from most of the committees were encouraging. The report on observance of the Sabbath was an exception. We were pained to hear it; the preamble and resolutions of which are as follows:

Your committee notes with pain the spectacle presented to the world, both Christian and heathen, so recently by the Congress of these United States in session all day on Sunday wrangling over things that they failed to accomplished during a long and expensive session that they were just closing. We think this action of our representative men and law-makers should be condemned by all good people, and, therefore, offer for your adoption the following resolutions:

Resolved, That any profanation of the Sabbath day is in plain violation of God's written law.

Resolved, That the Congress of these United States, men who are law-makers for a great and professed Christian nation, in thus openly profaning God's holy Sabbath, have themselves become law-breakers, and set a pernicious example before our own people and before the nations of the earth.

Resolved, That, as a District Conference, we pronounce our unqualified condemnation upon their action.

The report on temperance was very encouraging, showing a steady advancement in the temperance cause. The report will be furnished the ADVOCATE for publication.

The preaching, which was of high grade, was done by Revs. H. T. Cunningham, J. M. Barnes, R. A. Meek, E. P. Craddock, A. Kendall and W. W. Woollard.

The services on Sunday were very precious. Love-feast at 9:30, and preaching at 11 o'clock by Rev. A. Kendall, followed by the sacrament, were occasions of refreshing from the presence of the Lord.

C. C. Fast was licensed to preach, and E. C. Sullivan was recommended for admission on trial in the traveling connection. A. J. Meador was recommended for deacon's orders.

The good people of Honston and their faithful pastor, J. W. Anderson, entertained the Conference royally. The session was a very harmonious and pleasant one. J. A. POE.

We are all hoping for a full attendance of delegates and pastors here, July 9–12. A cordial welcome and entertainment for all who come. The fullness of sunshine and breeze ought to attract many. Train service on our "L. and N." railroad is first-class. Five passenger trains daily each way from New Orleans to Ocean Springs, and three from Mobile to New Orleans. From and after the fifth of July round-trip excursion tickets to "Seashore Camp Ground" ought to be purchasable at any regular station of any railroad in Mississippi. By interviewing your local agent, a few days before starting, there need be no hitch in getting these reduced rates. No other plan is available. Camp meeting begins just after our meeting adjourns. Just drop down there for such time as you can spare, enjoy its benefit, get your excursion ticket stamped on the "camp ground," and so the trip homeward will cost nothing. Those coming from west of us will have to pay additional fare for the twenty-five miles intervening. (All should look well to the checking of baggage to right place between this place and camp ground.)

Close attention to all these details at right time will insure reduced cost in trip. Be sure to come praying for and expecting a blessing.

The Northern Christian Advocate, commenting on the winning church, says: "The attractive church is not a worldly one. It is not a formal religions club. It is a spiritual church, a church thoroughly quickened by the life divine. A live church will draw. The multitude is burdened, depressed, in trouble, tempted, discouraged; a church full of love, hope, enthusiasm, energy, will attract them. There is marvelous magnetism in intense spiritual earnestness. A wise and witty Scotch preacher is credited with saying, 'What troubles me is not so much the non-church-going as the non-going church.' When the church is in motion, when it is earnest, alive, and full of the fire of the Holy Spirit, congregations will increase, the Sunday-school will grow, and sinners will be won to Christ. Nothing is so winning as life."—New York Christian Advocate.

Harris' Business College.

A business education is a necessity, and one who enters upon the duties of life without its guiding influence has all the chances of success against him. We know of no better place for young men and ladies to go for such a training than to that wonderfully progressive institution, Harris' Practical Business College, Jackson, Miss. It is doing more for the worthy, struggling boys and girls than any other business college. Nineteen of its students recently secured good positions in three weeks.—Jackson Evening News.

BOTTLE THE SUNSHINE.

BY LIZZIE D. ARMOND.

Bottle the sunshine up, my dears,
And lay it safe away;
Hammer the cork in good and tight,
Keep for a rainy day.
For clouds will come and showers will fall,
And earth and sky look sad,
Then fling the cheery rays about,
And make the old world glad.

Bottle the sunshine up, my dears,
Sweet temper lay away;
Carry through life a smiling face,
And let your heart be gay.
There's sorrow plenty in the world,
And strife and bitter pain,
So fling the clouds with golden beams,
And sing a glad refrain.

The Science of "Scratching Out."

In the literary columns of the New York Sun, in a review of Mr. Hardwicke's new work, A History of Oratory and Orators, appears a paragraph concerning Daniel Webster's methods of preparing his speeches which is worthy of attention; especially ought it to be heeded by those who fancy that eloquence is a sort of spontaneous combustion, or that, in the pulpit, a preacher has but to open his mouth and "the Lord will fill it." The paragraph in question says:

"Mr. Hardwicke also does well to inform young men desirous of ascertaining Webster's methods of preparing his speeches, that he did not depend altogether upon the inspiration of the moment for the language or the thoughts which he meant to use. The impression has been current that his great speeches were unstudied. As a matter of fact, he himself said upon one occasion that he would as soon think of appearing before an audience half clothed as half prepared; and at another time he told one of his friends that he would as soon stand up and tell his audience that he had garments enough at home, but did not think it worth while to put them on, as to tell them that he could have made a satisfactory speech, perhaps, if he had taken the requisite pains. The truth is that Daniel Webster was always a laborious student, and in the early part of his career he expended a great deal of time in the preparation of his public addresses. On one occasion, when the first message of an eminent public man, then governor of the State of New York, was issued, Webster was appealed to for his opinion of the document. 'Governor ——,' he replied, 'is a very able man and a very able writer. The only thing he needs to learn is how to scratch out.' A senator of the United States expressed some surprise at this remark, and said that no one who read Webster's addresses or listened to his speeches could suppose that he ever had occasion to alter or amend anything that came from his pen. 'However that may be now,' was Webster's answer, 'a very large part of my life has been spent in "scratching out."' When I was a young man, and for some years after I had acquired a respectable degree of eminence in my profession, my style was bombastic and pompous in the extreme. Some kind friend was good enough to point out that fact to me, and I determined to correct it if labor could do it. Whether it has been corrected or not, no small part of my life has been spent in the attempt.'"

The late Dr. Daniel D. Whedon, for many years editor of our Review, and a writer of singular force, once gave an inquiring youth a glimpse into his methods, which are brought to mind by the above paragraph. To the question, "How did you acquire your ability to use the English language with such terseness, force and compactness?" he replied, in substance, as follows:

"I used to practice the art of erasing words from my sentences until there were just enough left to express my meaning exactly. I found myself prone in my younger days to use many more words than were necessary in order to be understood. So I accustomed myself to go over my literary work, sentence by sentence, striking out every word that could be spared without marring the sense. In due time I mastered the art of saying what I had to say in terse, compact form—reducing my sentences to their lowest terms. It cost me years of labor to achieve this end, and I often had to throw away many beautiful things, metaphors, and other ornaments; but I have been repaid many times over for my pains."

Many a writer may learn from these two examples the science and art of scratching out. Horace knew what it was, for he speaks of the labor limæ—"the work of the file"—as a matter of importance in literary composition.

How Old are You?

You need not answer the question, madam, for in your case age is not counted by years. It will always be true that "a woman is as old as she looks." Nothing sets the seal of age so deeply upon woman's beauty as gray hair. It is natural, therefore, that every woman is anxious to preserve her hair in all its original abundance and beauty; or, that being denied the crowning gift of beautiful hair, she longs to possess it. Nothing is easier than to attain to this gift or to preserve it, if already possessed. Ayer's Hair Vigor restores gray or faded hair to its original color. It does this by simply aiding nature, by supplying the nutrition necessary to health and growth. There is no better preparation for the hair than

"Haven't Got Time."

This is a fast age. Perhaps you have heard somebody say so before. Well, it is so. It is the age of business activity, which simply means a mad rush after money. Of course, there is "method in this madness."

People "haven't got time." A great many are being lost because they "haven't got time" to be saved, and many professing Christians "haven't got time" to be really religious.

There is a man living across the way—you see him come to his dinner; he comes bending forward in the eager effort to get along faster than his legs can carry him. He remains in the house five minutes and comes out with a biscuit in one hand and a piece of meat in the other, and goes rushing on back to the store. He hasn't time to sit down quietly and eat with his family; and he never thinks of time for digestion—he will think of that later, when most of his time is devoted to indigestion. That man is a Baptist deacon, or Sunday-school teacher, perhaps. How long has it been since he sat down for a quiet half hour with God, and devoutly meditated on what God has done for him and for the children of men, in nature, in providence and in grace? I am afraid it has been a long time. It is to be feared that in the hustle and bustle of the life of to-day, the sweet and sacred privilege and duty of devotional meditation is in danger of being eliminated from the experience of God's people. The closet—the silent hour, with its penitential confessions, its blessed tears, its grateful praise, and its warm after-glow as we come down from the mount of communion with shining faces—is it to become archaic and obsolete? Are we to lose from our view that picture of the kneeling Christ in the darkness on the mountain, heedless of passing time, unbosoming himself to God, with no companionship save that of the whispering leaves of the forest trees, and the lonely vigils of the watching stars?

It may be that in this haste to be rich, or to serve somebody that is rich, or that is trying to be, we shall find the cause of any lack of gratitude to God.—Selected.

The Art of Not Hearing.

The art of not hearing should be learned by all. There are so many things which it is painful to hear, very many which, if heard, will disturb the temper, corrupt simplicity and modesty, detract from contentment and happiness. If a man falls into a violent passion and calls all manner of names, at the first words we should shut our ears and hear no more. If in a quiet voyage of life we find ourselves caught in one of those domestic whirlwinds of scolding, we should shut our ears as a sailor would furl his sail, and, making all tight, scud before the gale. If a hot, restless man begins to inflame our feelings, we should consider what mischief the fiery sparks may do in our magazine below, where our temper is kept, and instantly close the door. If all the petty things said of a man by heedless and ill-natured idlers were brought home to him, he would become a mere walking pincushion stuck full of sharp remarks. If we would be happy, when among good men we should open our ears; when among bad men, shut them. It is not worth while to hear what our neighbors say about our children, what our rivals say about our business, our dress, or our affairs.—New York Ledger.

Crab-Tree Christians.

Some there are, presumably on the way to heaven, and whom we shall perhaps be happy to associate with there, that we are very glad to get rid of from the earth. There is no complaint when they die. Everybody is willing, and more than willing, that they should be promoted, transferred to the better land. They have a vast amount of vinegar mixed with their disposition. They conceive it to be their duty to set their faces like a flint against about everything that goes on in this degenerate age. Nothing suits them in church or state. They can not defend religion without getting into a rage. They are so sour that people's teeth are set on edge at the very sight of them. How sadly they misrepresent and dishonor the Master at the very time they claim to be about the only ones that know him. Whatever else the Christian lacks, sweet reasonableness and winsomeness must not be wanting. However cantankerous the natural disposition, there is provision for its change into something good to live with.—Exchange.

Be courteous. Courtesy is simply kindness. When one is at a loss to know what is the courteous thing to do, he only needs to think what is the respectful, kind, helpful, action. The preference of others before self; thoughtfulness of their comfort, pleasure, entertainment; the ready yielding of one's own ease or preference thereto, this is kindness, this is courtesy. Careful attention to the feelings of others, keeping our minds on what may give them ease, or relief, these are the marks of genuine gentlemanliness. Courtesy is a plant of the heart, not of the head. Its great foe is selfishness, love of self-indulgence. Rudeness is simply self-importance in action. Incivility is deep self-conceit working to the outside. Better than all the printed Rules of Etiquette is the simple guide: Do what is kind to others. There is no Scripture that should more touch our hearts and kindle aspirations after loving kindness to others, than the tender words: For even Christ pleased not himself. To be courteous requires careful reflection, consideration for others. When we grow inconsiderate and do not try to think what others will like, we are sure to neglect their wishes and cross their feelings. Then follows rudeness, appropriation to self of the best place, the best things. Boorishness is the result of self-neglect, where natural selfishness of disposition is permitted to run its course unrestrained and uncultured. But true self-respect tends to respect for others. Be courteous, and you will be treated courteously. For genuine courtesy is just doing to others what you would have others do to you.—Mid-Continent.

Learning and religion ought to be rendered attractive. Seeing how essential they are to our happiness it is a crime to shroud them in gloom. Teaching is a noble art, and he who does it well brings his pupils and patrons under everlasting obligations of gratitude. So when religion has been rendered fascinating by cheerful instruction and sunny example the recipients thereof are supremely blessed. There is a great deal in method. God runs the universe in the best possible way. Imitating such precedents we should endeavor so to inculcate both truth and grace as to render them palatable and refreshing. Foolish teachers and parents have done incalculable damage to the young.—Texas Advocate.

The privilege of laboring is to me more and more precious. I would not choose the spot. I would not choose the circumstances. To be able to do something is a privilege of which I am altogether unworthy.—From the Mary Lyon Year Book.

It is a high, solemn, almost awful thought for every individual man that his earthly influence, which has had a commencement, will never, through all ages, were he the very meanest of us, have an end!—Thomas Carlyle.

HYGIENE.

Dr. Nansen's Testimony.

While science and physiology long ago exploded the idea that whisky keeps out the cold, there are still those who hold to the notion that spirits are adapted for cold climates and seasons. To all such we commend the testimony of Dr. Nansen, whose experience abundantly confirms science and physiology. Let it be borne in mind that the explorer is no teetotal fanatic, but a strong-minded, clear-headed, practical man, who is a total abstainer because he believes that if he took alcohol he never would succeed.

Before the doctor started on his long and trying voyage of discovery, he had an offer of two cases of old Scotch whisky from a gentleman who evidently believed in its virtues. In his reply to the person who conveyed the offer, Dr. Nansen said: "As you know, I am of opinion that the use of alcoholic drinks, especially in arctic regions, is to be avoided; so I can not accept the kind offer of Mr J —— to supply me with very fine old Scotch whisky." This was dated May 13, 1893, from Lysaken, Christiana.

On a previous occasion Dr. Nansen had to cross on foot the cold region of Greenland, and, along with several companions, spent several weeks on floating ice. For forty days they tramped over frozen snow with eighty degrees of frost, and in referring to this journey the doctor said: "The only spirits we took was as fuel for our stove to melt the snow, that we might have water to drink. I believe the use of stimulants to be a mistake."

So on this greater journey he took no alcohol with him for drinking purposes, only methylated spirits for the purpose of cooking, in a region where no firewood could be obtained.—Temperance Advocate.

The Deadly Lamp.

When New York was suffering from an epidemic of diphtheria, the Board of Health decided that its prevalence was to be attributed to the fumes of a kerosene lamp turned down low more than any other cause. Whether or not this is so, it is certainly a mistaken kindness on the part of an indulgent mother to allow a lamp to remain in a child's bedroom, with the flame turned low. A turned-down kerosene lamp is a magazine of deadly gas, to which the strongest lungs can not safely be exposed.—Pittsburg Advocate.

BEAUTY IS WEALTH.

Beauty is as essential to a woman as any other quality; with beauty of form and feature comes beauty of mind and character. Physical beauty is a rounded form, the brightly tinted cheek, the vivacious eye, a certain ease and grace of manner, which indicates a superabundance of physical strength. Very few women possess these qualities, but very many more might possess them who do not. If you feel that you are losing vitality, losing your beauty losing your strength, if you feel that your face which once was plump and rosy, is becoming thin and sallow, that wrinkles (which are the terror to all pretty women) are beginning to appear, take our advice and try that greatest of discoveries, the "MASSAGE FACE CUP," which is the only means known to science to convert a thin and sallow expression into a plump and rosy face. It will transform a face with plain or homely features into an expression of grace and beauty. Physiology teaches us that if we would be strong, we must exercise the muscles which need the developing. Exercise causes the blood to rush to that part of the body called into action, the muscle is fed and strengthened by the fresh blood and will, therefore, develop.

The Massage Cup will do for the face, when properly applied, by contracting and relaxing the muscles, what exercise will do for the other parts of the body.

If you would have a pinkish complexion, if you would like a face plump and rosy, if you would like to remove that "horrid" wrinkle, send One Dollar to us and we will mail you the great "MASSAGE FACE CUP," with full directions for its use. Remember, you can have your money back, if you say so.

OBITUARIES.

BARLOW—Miss MARY M. BARLOW was born in Delaware county, New York, Aug. 15, 1820, and died in Baton Rouge, La., May 15, 1897.

When quite a young lady she came South to teach in Virginia. After teaching awhile she attended the Baltimore Female College, finishing her course there in June, 1854, and achieving honorable distinction in the science of mathematics.

In 1855 she again came South, and for several years taught in Jackson, La., and Port Gibson Collegiate Institute. About the close of the late war she taught with marked ability in the well-known school of Dr. W. H. N. Magruder in the city of Baton Rouge. From 1870 to 1884 she resided in the North. Returning to Baton Rouge in 1884, she lived here until her death, her work continuing to a few weeks before the summons came.

As a teacher, Miss Barlow was eminently successful. Her information was exact and her intellectual methods thorough. Her former pupils speak of her work and character with tenderness, appreciation, and grateful recollection.

Her life was a symmetrical blending of intellectual culture and spiritual growth. She was a woman of prayer and unswerving faith. Fidelity to duty exhibited a leading motive in her daily life. Her spiritual life, while deep and strong, was unobtrusive. To her the gates were ajar. She yearned for the fellowship of the life immortal. For some time she had anticipated the end. There was no fear; her house was in order.

She was a life-long member of the Methodist Church, and ever a loyal and generous supporter of its great interests. Though reserved in temperament, to her intimate friends she disclosed a sweetness of character and gentleness of disposition which has diffused through their memories of her a lasting fragrance. No doubt she has entered into the life immortal. F. N. PARHAM.

PERRY—There passed away to the evershining shore on April 25, 1897, the gentle spirit of Mrs. SUE ISABELLA PERRY. Her maiden name was Hamberlin; born near Edwards, Miss., and still nearer to old "Liberty" Church, June 10, 1849. Here she spent nearly all her days of pilgrimage. In early girlhood she gave her heart to God and her hand to the M. E. Church, South. Consistency of conduct marked her daily walk and conversation. The death of mother, and then father, while she was yet young devolved on her the care and training of four younger children. This duty she discharged faithfully, as in the immediate presence of God. Her memory is to them as sweet perfume.

On Dec. 12, 1876, she was happily married to Mr. Columbus F. Perry. To him she was indeed "an helpmeet;" "all that a devoted Christian wife could be." To the young son of a former marriage she proved a mother indeed. One little girl, now twelve years old, is the sacred token and pledge of that union of hearts and lives.

Early in April of this year she and her husband were chosen by that noble friend of homeless children, Dr. Alfred E. Clay, to superintend the "Waifs' Home" at Beauvoir, Miss. Here she spent a few weeks, proving that she was the very person to do a mother's part by these children of distress.

Quite suddenly the messenger summoned the sweet spirit to wing its flight over the sea, above the earth, beyond the stars. By a new and finer sense she now doth "grasp the mighty vision and receive its influence." 'Tis hidden from our tear-dimmed eyes; but soul-sight takes in the jasper walls and crystal sea of that "land of unclouded day." Let us greet her there.

A loving former pastor, J. P. D.
Bay St. Louis, Miss.

ERVIN—SAMUEL WHITTINGTON, son of Samuel and Eugenie Ervin, and grandson of Rev. B. B. Whittington, was born Dec. 19, 1871, and died near Crystal Springs, April 30, 1897.

He was happily married to Miss Kima Funchess, daughter of Dr. G. J. D. Funchess, May 26, 1895. In writing of his death his loving wife said: "We lived as happily together as any two ever did. He never spoke a cross word to me, but always did everything in his power to make me happy."

He was converted under the preaching of Rev. George Stuart at the Crystal Springs Camp Meeting last year (August, 1896), and joined the M. E. Church, South, soon after at Old Crystal Springs, since which time he lived a consecrated, happy Christian life.

I visited him often during his illness. I found him always trusting in the Lord, and submissive to his will. Even when little George was taken from them he could say, "Thy will of the Lord be done." He enjoyed the religious services we had with him. He was ready to go. As I sat by his bedside the evening before he died and sang, "Jesus, lover of my soul," he whispered to his mother-in-law, "Tell him to sing that same piece again." It seemed to lull his pain and quiet him more than anything else. The testimony of all his neighbors is, that he was a consecrated Christian.

May we all be ready to meet him in that "unclouded day!" W. M. WILLIAMS, P. C.
Gallman, Miss.

MCCALEB—MARY WHITNEY MCCALEB, daughter of Mr. D. W. and Mrs. E. B. McCaleb, was born Jan. 12, 1882, and died after a long and painful illness at her father's home, Harristoa, Miss., May 28, 1897.

She bore her intense suffering with most striking patience and Christian fortitude. Never a murmur escaped her lips.

She joined the M. E. Church under the pastorate of Bro. J. W. Crisler, Sept. 20, 1896, coming to us from the Presbyterian Church, which she joined at about eight years of age. She was ever faithful to her church vows, and deeply interested in all the services and enterprises of the church, ever doing all in her power to advance the cause of Christ.

She was a beautiful, bright girl of fifteen Summers. She always had a smile and pleasant word for everyone; obedient, tender and companionable as a daughter, faithful and true as a friend, consecrated and guileless as a Christian. "To know her was to love her, and to name her was to praise."

How we miss her! But our loss is her eternal gain. She is not dead, but sleepeth. She shall awake on the resurrection morn, bright, beautiful and glorious, clothed in garments of immortality suited to the active nature of an animated spirit. Death is swallowed up in victory. "Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord."

May the Holy Spirit comfort the hearts of sorrowing relatives and bereaved parents, and help them to be resigned and submissive to God's will! W. M. STEVENS, Pastor.

Fayette Chronicle please copy.

BARTLETT—Miss L. ELIZABETH BARTLETT was born in the State of Alabama, Feb. 25, 1834, and died April 7, 1897, at her home, Chunkey, Miss.

In her infancy her parents moved from Alabama to North Mississippi. About 1850 they came to Chunkey, Newton county, Miss., where they permanently located, and where the father and mother both went home to heaven some years ago, leaving Miss Betty and her sister (Mrs. Belen) all alone.

Miss Betty joined the M. E. Church, South, during the year 1852, and was a consistent member until death.

She was not very demonstrative, but always cheerful and hopeful, cheering others by her good-natured disposition. She was blessed with a goodly share of common sense, and being a great reader of history and good books, her conversation was both pleasant and instructive. Not only was she liked by those of maturer years, but the children were delighted with her.

She leaves two widowed sisters (Mrs. Belen, of Chunkey, and Mrs. Cook, of Texas) and many friends. E. B. PARTIN, M. D.

ATKINSON—VIRGINIA C. ATKINSON (nee Webb) died at her home in Winston county, Miss., Jan. 25, 1897. She was born in Choctaw county, Jan. 27, 1842. While a girl she professed religion and joined the Cumberland Presbyterian Church, in which she lived many years. She then joined the M. E. Church, South, in which she lived a devoted Christian until she was translated from this to the good world. She was happily married to Robert J. Atkinson, Jan. 19, 1862, with whom she faithfully shared the labors, pleasures and sorrows of life more than thirty-five years. Her Christian life was a living comment on the power of the gospel to keep and to save. Her last days were spent in conversation about her readiness for the future, which was soul-cheering to us all. She talked with much calmness and deliberateness about the burial of her body, and blessed her family with a compendious and motherly benediction; then left us. D. W. BAUB.

ERVIN—GEORGIA STEWART, only child of S. W. and Kima Ervin, was born near Crystal Springs, April 19, 1896, and died April 3, 1897.

This was a very healthy, bright and promising child; the light and joy of the home. It seems that his disease baffled the skill of the physicians from the first, as he grew worse and worse each day for about a month, when God relieved him from all his sufferings by taking him out of this world of sorrow to the home of the pure and the good. Jesus has prepared a place for all the children, that where he is they may be also.

MOODY—Resolutions of South Vicksburg Sunday-school on the death of Miss MARY MOODY:

Whereas, On May 31, 1897, it seemed good to our heavenly Father to take from the midst of us our friend and teacher, Miss Mary Moody; And, whereas, We deeply deplore her loss to our Sunday-school, church and community; therefore, be it

Resolved, That we commend her Christian character as worthy to be cherished in the memory of our people.

Resolved, That to those who knew her no eulogies are necessary; to those who knew her not no words from us can give eloquent expression to the simplicity of her faith and the beauty of her life.

Resolved, That we tender to the family of the deceased our sincerest sympathy, and pray that the loving Father may comfort them in their sorrow.

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be presented to the family in Vicksburg, a copy sent the mother in Georgia, and a copy sent for publication. J. M. OVERTON, Superintendent.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of Testimonials.

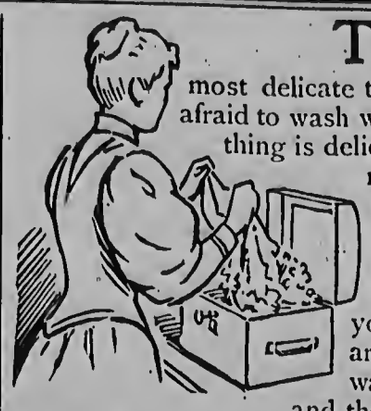
The finest,



most delicate things you have you needn't be afraid to wash with Pearline. The fact that a thing is delicate and easily torn is the very reason why you should take Pearline to it. Nothing else can get it clean with so little rubbing and wrenching.

If you observe carefully, you'll notice that the women who are the most particular about their washing and their housekeeping and their housework are the ones who are the most enthusiastic about Pearline.

Look Out Peddlers and some unscrupulous grocers will tell you, "this is as good as" or "the same as" Pearline. IT'S FALSE—Pearline is never peddled; if your grocer sends you an imitation, be honest —send it back. 536 JAMES PYLE, New York

Divinity Circuit, Round Corners, etc.

CONTAINS THE FOLLOWING HELPS TO THE STUDY OF THE BIBLE.

Concordance, with Contexts, over 40,000 References; Index to Persons, Places and Subjects, 16,000 References; Scripture Atlas, with Index; Glossary of Bible Words; Bible Calendar; Summary and Analyses of the Old and New Testaments.

A Self-Pronouncing Dictionary of Proper Names and Foreign Words contained in the Bible, comprising about 3,500 words, giving the pronunciation, the meaning, and the location of the text where the word occurs for the first time.

Exhaustive Articles on Biblical History, Geography, Topography, Natural History, Ethnology, Botany, Chronology, Music and Poetry; a Complete Harmony of the Gospels, Tables of Parables, Miracles, Prophecies, Prayers, Money, Weights and Measures, Jewish Sects and Orders, etc.

TWELVE FULL-PAGE MAPS IN COLORS.

Every proper name in the text is syllabified and accented, and has the vowels marked according to the most authoritative modern standards of pronunciation. The text is in exact conformity with that of the world-famous Oxford S. S. Teacher's Bible. All the valuable "Helps to the Study of the Bible" contained in the Oxford Bible are retained.

The only Teacher's Bible with a self-pronouncing text. No similar Bible was ever obtainable heretofore; in fact, no publishers ever attempted its publication.

"The essence of fifty expensive volumes, by men of sacred learning, is condensed in these 'Helps.'"

The large-type (Bourgeois) edition sells to persons who are not subscribers for $5. Our subscribers get it, on conditions specified below, for $2.35. The same Bible in Minion type, which is somewhat smaller than Bourgeois, we offer to our subscribers, on conditions named below, for $1.55. To those who are not subscribers we sell it at $3.15. We also handle an edition in still smaller type (Emerald). Our subscribers get this for $1.00.

In order to get anyone of these at these rates it is necessary to pay your subscription one year in advance, viz., to July, '98. (A little later it will be August, '98.)

For twenty cents we will have your name engraved in gilt letters on the outside of the book.

SAVED BY GRACE.

The following poem is a recent production of Fannie Crosby, who, though totally blind, has written more hymns than any human being, unless, perhaps, Charles Wesley be an exception:

Some day my earthly house will fall,
I can not tell how soon 'twill be.
But this I know—my All in All
Has now in heaven a place for me,
And I shall see Him face to face,
And tell the story—saved by grace.

Some day the silver cord will break,
And I no more as now shall sing.
But O, the joy when I shall wake,
Within the palace of the King!
And I shall see Him face to face,
And tell the story—saved by grace.

Some day, when fades the golden sun
Beneath the hazy-tinted west,
My blessed Lord shall say, "Well done."
And I shall enter into rest.
And I shall see Him face to face,
And tell the story—saved by grace.

Some day: till then I'll watch and wait,
My lamp all trimmed and burning bright,
That when my Savior opes the gate
My soul to Him may wing its flight.
And I shall see him face to face,
And tell the story—saved by grace.

Commencement at Mansfield.

By some mistake or misunderstanding, for which the writer is in no way responsible, a notice of our commencement through the columns of your paper has been neglected.

This occasion, opening June 4, and closing June 9, was one of unusual interest, sustaining in an eminent degree the proud reputation of Mansfield Female College.

The art exhibition took place on Friday night, June 4. This exhibition excited great admiration, and many eulogies were passed by lovers and judges of art. It was a revelation to visitors to see such high excellence achieved by young artists, the work being done altogether from nature. Miss M. F. Williams enjoys the proud distinction of being the principal in this department.

Commencement sermon was preached on Sunday, the sixth of June, at 11 A. M., by Rev. Frank N. Parker, taking as his subject: "Let this mind be in you which was also in Christ Jesus." (Philippians ii, 5.) It was a discourse worthy of the occasion, abounding in strong, practical, rich thoughts to stir and elevate the heart of the listener and make life worth living. It was a masterly effort of edifying effect.

The little folks on Monday night, with their cheerful faces and well trained minds, entertained a large and appreciative audience with credit to themselves and teachers. The primary exhibition is very popular here, and the exercises on this occasion displayed a thoroughness equaling, if not surpassing, previous occasions of the kind.

On Tuesday morning the General Board held its annual meeting, re-electing T. S. Sligh as president, and Mrs. T. S. Sligh as vice-president of the college, and transacted the usual routine of business. President Sligh made a very satisfactory report touching the college interest, making glad the hearts of the members of the Board, who adjourned with great encouragement for the future of the school. President Sligh and his accomplished wife fill the positions of president and vice-president of Mansfield Female College with great dignity and ability. Their efforts are untiring in its behalf, and success is the reward of their diligent labors. The faculty is composed of teachers of rare accomplishments, and up to date in their respective capacities.

The annual meeting of the alumnæ was held on Tuesday, at 11 o'clock A. M., in the new session hall; and for this occasion Hon. William Goss, of our town, was the orator, whose discourse was exceedingly appropriate and effective. His effort was a fine one, abounding in facts so essential to the betterment of true womanhood as she moves in the sphere in which God has placed her.

An intelligent and expectant audience filled the spacious new college hall at an early hour Tuesday evening. It was the occasion of the Hypatian Literary Society, which was addressed by the Hon. H. H. White, of Alexandria, La. His effort was both pleasing and instructive, and he impressed his audience with the profound depth to which he descended in his researches to procure food for the occasion.

Wednesday was graduating day, on which great expectation and earnest solicitude were centered. The stage for this occasion was tastily arranged and beautifully decorated. The opening prayer was made by Rev. Paul M. Brown, of Keachie, La. The graduates appeared in the following order: Misses Myriam and Pearce Crowe, of Arcadia, La., and Miss Birdie Edwards, of Granberry, Texas. The essays were well written and gracefully read, attesting how thoroughly these young ladies had been trained. Their essays were highly appreciated by the audience, and many lovely floral offerings were showered upon the members of the class. Miss Edwards being the last to read her essay, bade farewell to the faculty, schoolmates, classmates and friends in language touching and beautiful. After the reading of the essays President Sligh delivered to the graduates their diplomas, presenting each with a Bible, and spoke a few parting words to them that were beautifully suited to the time and occasion. After a well-rendered piece of instrumental music by the skillful Misses Sligh, Hon. J. Backman Lee, of Mansfield, La., in his characteristic, felicitous style, introduced to an anxious audience Gov. Snyder, of St. Joe, Tensas parish, who delivered the baccalaureate address on this occasion. His subject was "Louisiana," a name so dear to every patriot within her borders. The governor is a graceful speaker, and handled his subject in such a manner that his audience was convinced of the fact that he had given it much thought, and was master of the situation.

The annual concert—last, but not least—claims at our hands a most favorable mention. The strains of sweet music, dispensed by the beautiful and cultured young ladies, displayed accomplishments that would be creditable to any conservatory of music of great pretensions. Much praise is due their teachers, the Misses Sligh, for the painstaking and untiring effort in training the young ladies to such a high degree of accomplishments.

All of the exercises at this commencement evinced thoroughness of training and proficiency on part of the pupils, and method and efficiency on part of the faculty, and we bespeak for the college a great degree of usefulness and prosperity. Our untiring and beloved president of the Board of Trustees deserve at the hands of the friends of Mansfield Female College their everlasting gratitude and praise for his grand work. Bro. J. L. P. Sheppard is the right man in the right place. Our people know the material of which he is composed, and will make a big fuss when he is taken from us. Under the most trying circumstances of monetary depressions he has succeeded in repairing our college property and making various improvements, prominent among which is the new spacious and well-designed session hall, which fills a long felt want and stands as a fitting monument to his zeal and love for Christian education.

The outlook for our college is decidedly better than it has been for years, and it should be liberally patronized by every Methodist who has a daughter to educate and is able to do so. Our grand old college building, with its beautiful campus, healthful location and wholesome environments, is indeed inviting, and with our increased facilities we are prepared to offer young ladies seeking a good education, both in mind and heart, superior advantages.

Sardis District, North Mississippi Conference.

The first and second rounds have been completed, and we have already entered upon our third round. The District Preachers' Institute met at Batesville during the latter part of April. The attendance of the pastors was good, and much interest was elicited by the discussions. It was a profitable meeting.

The District Conference was held at Senatobia, May 26–30. One day was given to the consideration of woman's work. Our sisters of the W. F. M. S. and P. and H. M. S. held their meetings, presided over respectively by the district secretaries, Miss Rosa Taylor and Mrs. W. H. Wall. Great good is being done by the consecrated women of these societies. They deserve the sympathy and help of all the brethren.

Our District Conference was largely attended. All the pastors, sixteen in number, many laymen and a goodly number of visitors were present. Senatobia abounded in elegant and cordial hospitalities. The reports showed progress in Epworth League work, Children's Day exercises, and in the matter of collections. A number of the charges reported their foreign missionary collections, in part or whole, provided for. Dr. J. W. Boswell, of the Christian Advocate editorial staff, was present one day, and preached, by request, a sermon on Methodism. His sermon was strong and timely. Our people need to know themselves better, and we hope the Doctor will comply with the request of the Conference, and publish his sermon in pamphlet form. Dr. W. B. Murrah favored us by his presence part of the session. He gave us a favorable report of Millsaps College, and preached an able sermon on Sunday, at 11 A. M. Rev. G. W. Bachman, the efficient Conference colporter, was with us during the session, sowing down good religious literature. Let the brethren purchase their books from Bro. Bachman, and make their orders through him.

Sardis district is in good working order, being served by a band of faithful, earnest pastors. The district has a good and well-furnished home for the presiding elder, and fifteen other preachers' homes. The time is at hand; kings go forth to battle, and our preachers are planning, or in some cases have already entered upon the Summer campaign of protracted meetings. When these captains of the militant armies go forth, may the Lord of hosts go with them and the shout of a king be heard in every camp! Let us preach, pray and work for a revival of the "old-time religion" throughout Sardis district during the Summer and Fall.

Methodism is an uplifting force, a strong power for good, in Mississippi. As a denomination, it is abreast with all evangelistic movements. If not in the lead, it is surely unsurpassed by none of the churches. God be praised for his continued blessings upon the Methodist Church. Great is our opportunity, great our responsibility. Let us see that no man take our crown.

Sunday, June 6, was a red-letter day for Methodism among the colleges—Bishop Hendrix at the State University, Oxford; Dr. Hamner, of Memphis, at the A. and M. College, Starkville, and Dr. Tigert at Millsaps College, Jackson. All preached commencement sermons, and reports say their preaching was at high-water mark.

The State Epworth League Conference at Water Valley, held the last days of April, was a grand success. The attendance was large, and enthusiastic interest was sustained from beginning to end. The corner-stone of the Orphans' Home was laid during the Epworth session with imposing and appropriate ceremonies. Our late District Conference pledged over one hundred dollars for the Orphans' Home. Let the Methodists of Mississippi rally with a liberal and prompt support to this important institution of the church.

Greenville District Conference.

The Greenville District Conference was held at Greenville, June 23–25, 1897. Our new presiding elder, Rev. J. W. Dorman, presided with great credit to himself and to the delight of all present. It was said, by some in position to know, to be the most religious Conference ever held in the district. There was a small attendance of laymen, only seven being present. Four of the preachers were absent; two on account of being engaged in revival meetings, one was sick, the other we did not hear from. Progress in the material interest of the church has been very much interfered with by the disastrous overflow through which we have recently passed. There is general hopefulness of spirit, however, on the part of both preachers and people. What the financial report from the district will be at the end of the year depends, of course, on the favorableness or unfavorableness of the seasons for the late crop.

A movement was set on foot looking to the buying or building of a district parsonage at an early date. While reports from some of the charges indicated growth in grace on the part of the membership, still it was clear that in the district, as a whole, there is a vast deal of worldliness in the church. In view of this fact, a resolution was adopted setting apart the months of July and August as a time of fasting and prayer for a great revival on all the charges. The preaching, all of which was good, was done by Bros. Gladney, Bradley, Crowe, Spraggins, and Countiss.

The delegates to Annual Conference are: Robt. Sommerville, J. B. Pease, W. O. Harris, W. R. Trigg.

At Monteagle.

"The mountains and the hills shall break forth before you into singing." This promise from "chaste Isaiah's holy fire" is literally fulfilled to the visitor to the plateau at this season of the year. From every quarter come the songs of birds, reveling in the green boughs of the trees, and the freedom of the woods; and when the day songsters are stilled, the whippoorwill breaks forth into praise to "God, our Maker, who giveth us songs in the night."

To one visiting Monteagle for the first time there are several surprises. Among these are the number and beauty of the buildings. Here, there, everywhere, are houses, large and small, from the immense Assembly Hotel to the tiny dot of a cottage, so tastefully built that they would form an ornament to a city or suburban street. In these we hear the cheerful hum of preparation for the crowds coming in July and August. But the beauties of nature and of art sink into insignificance in comparison with the pleasant people one meets on every hand. Old friends and new friends, old acquaintances and new acquaintances, everybody, seems to be at his or her best, and determined to find everybody else in the same condition. If there is one thing more than another which impresses one in connection with these, it is the spirituality of most of them, and the freedom with which they that fear the Lord speak one to another—this and the almost obliteration of sectarian prejudices. For example: We were pleasantly associated for a week with a lovely Christian lady, and not till we were about to part did we think to inquire of what church she was a member. To be sure, we were not sorry when she replied, "Methodist;" but we could sympathize with another who we found had been claiming us for the same length of time for her own communion. Truly, the bigot who could spend a Summer in Monteagle and remain a bigot must be made of irredeemable material.

We were rejoiced to meet our friends, the Misses Young, formerly of New Orleans, now of Selma. They still bear the beautiful impress of dear old Louisiana Avenue Church and our beloved Bishop Parker. Their many friends will doubtless be glad to hear from them.

Pending arrangements for getting under our own vine and fig tree, we were delightfully domiciled with Miss Anna Pybas, where a new question presented itself, viz.: What some people will do when they get home to heaven, and have no further opportunities for self-sacrifice and self-abnegation, but must "shine as the stars forever." This, like some other questions, we have postponed to that day when we shall know even as we are known.

Our first visit to Warren's Point was on a lovely Sabbath evening. The after-glow of the setting sun bathed the valley before us with its mists, "rosy while the daylight lingers, purpling as the daylight flees," until the moon, rising over the mountain back of us, brought out the deep shadows of the woods.

We had a sweet praise service led by a Christian worker from far-off Florida, with the texts: "As the mountains are round about Jerusalem, so the Lord is round about his people." "Beautiful for situation, the joy of the whole earth is Mount Zion." "Commit thy way unto the Lord," and, "The Lord is my shepherd." It was good to be there.

Our experience is limited, but such as it is we are inclined to paraphrase Sidney Smith, and say, "Doubtless there may be pleasanter places than Monteagle, but doubtless there are not." FANNIE M. MONTGOMERY.

Epworth League Echoes.

BY REV. THOMAS B. CLIFFORD.

"God is a spirit, and they that worship him must worship him in spirit and in truth."

The Devotional Department of the League proposes to emphasize the truth of this Scripture.

Arrange to make the weekly prayer meeting services of the League interesting. The main purpose of the League is to save souls, and then to train these soldiers for the Lord's army.

We have just received the souvenir programme and souvenir badge of the third International Convention of Epworth Leagues, to be held in Toronto, Canada, July 15–18. They were sent "with the compliments of the Executive Committee."

We regret exceedingly that we will be unable to accompany the Mississippi Leaguers en route to Toronto. The reason is in the fact that it would be inconvenient for us to travel the route they have mapped out. Before coming South the writer of these "Echoes" resided for several months in London, Ontario, Canada, a city just this side of Toronto. We desire to visit friends there on our return, but also desire to visit Niagara Falls, which we will be compelled to do in going, so that we have been obliged to select the route that goes by way of Niagara, and returns via London, Windsor, Detroit, etc. We have, therefore, accepted the kind invitation of Bro. J. R. Pepper, of Memphis (to go with his party), and by so doing we will be enabled en route to fill an engagement in the Bluff City of some months' standing, viz.: to preach and also lecture before the League at Hernando Street Church, of which our friend and brother, Rev. E. B. Ramsey, is pastor. Bro. Ramsey's name appears twice upon the Toronto programme.

The reports of the preachers of the Grenada district made during session of their District Conference recently held brought out the fact that new Leagues were everywhere being organized. This work among our young people is being better understood in the rural districts, and we predict that in the near future a rich harvest will be gathered from this timely sowing. These young people must be trained aright. We need them now, and they will be in still greater demand in the future, when they are called upon to shoulder the responsibilities of those who are now bearing the burden and heat of the day.

We promise our readers a full account of the trip to Toronto and return, and we will also report a synopsis of the proceedings as carried forward during the Convention. Let every Leaguer pray that the Holy Spirit may be present in wonderful power, baptizing all afresh for service, that we may be enabled to do more and better work for Jesus in the future than we have ever done in the past.

Water Valley, Miss.

Selections.

A Mistaken Notion.

Now and then a young preacher is found who is manifestly imitating the eccentricities or idiosyncrasies of noted public speakers. Instances might be easily found without a wide search, exhibiting ambitious and misguided young men who have adopted clap-trap methods of speech, occasionally throwing a bit of slang into their utterances, using grimaces or drawls, or attempting to be dramatic, when to any keen observer it is evident that these characteristics are in each case clear imitations, clumsily assumed, and hurtful to the man and to his ministry. Some of our readers may recall specimens of this sort. Ten or twelve years ago we heard a young man preach at a camp meeting whose imitations of Bishop Fowler's mannerisms were extraordinary. His tones, voice, accent and gestures were all Fowlerish; but he lacked the genius which in the Bishop's case fuses and interblends all his mannerisms with oratorical and histrionic fire, and hence the chief impression which he made upon the congregation was by way of reminding them of the Bishop whose vocal and rhetorical traits were so skillfully reproduced.

In a college or theological seminary it frequently happens that the mannerisms of some one strong personality in the faculty are unconsciously reflected by many of the students. Sometimes these young men carry with them into their professional career as public speakers traces of these mannerisms which in school days they have unconsciously imbibed. These cases are aside altogether from those which we have in mind, where ministers deliberately set out to imitate a successful pastor or lecturer. They seem to say to themselves: "Dr. Jones' strong point is his use of slang, and Dr. Brown's the irresistible way in which he tells a funny story; Dr. Robinson wins his victories by virtue of his peculiar drawl, and Dr. Smith makes a deep impression by his power as an actor. Now, go to, let us also use slang, retail comic incidents, put on a drawling tone, and throw some stage acting into our performances, and we shall be great also!"

Alas for these foolish performers of a borrowed part, their experiment is always a dismal failure. The charm of effective public speaking, especially in the pulpit, is its genuineness. It should be the outgoing of an eager, earnest soul in its effort to utter a message and reach some other soul in need and danger. The effort to imitate somebody else and strut in borrowed plumes is usually manifest to the observer. Even when it is not discovered by others, the man himself is conscious of it, and his work is spoiled by his foolish effort to be somebody else rather than himself. David was wise when as a lad he refused to use Saul's armor; and the old proverb still has a varied application, "Let the shoemaker stick to his last."—Central Christian Advocate.

DO WHAT YOU CAN.

"We can not all be heroes.
And thrill a hemisphere.
With some great daring venture.
Some deed that mocks at fear.
But we can fill a lifetime
With kindly acts and true.
There's always noble service
For noble hearts to do.

"We can not all be preachers
And sway with voice and pen.
As strong winds sway the forest,
The minds and hearts of men
But we can be evangels
To souls within our reach.
There's always Love's own gospel
For living hearts to preach

"We can not all be martyrs
And win a deathless name
By some divine baptism,
Some ministry of flame;
But we can live for truth's sake.
Can do for Christ and dare,
There's always faithful witness
For faithful hearts to bear."

Some Changes Suggested.

MR. EDITOR: Having recently been from home in several directions, I propose to jot down some of the things observed and opinions I've heard expressed. It is too hot to either write or read a lengthy article. This article may be lengthy, but the subject will change so frequently that it will hardly tire the reader.

The first change recommended is that laymen should give preference to the services and meetings of their own church. It is an unseemly thing for a Methodist layman to remain away from the Conference of his own church, which is peculiarly a layman's meeting, when, by his absence, he makes a void in a program prepared and published weeks beforehand. Especially is this so when his absence is because of a desire to attend F. A. M., O. D. D. F., S. S. S. C., Y. M. C. A., or what not.

Now, it is not contended that all or any of above named are not worthy of any man's attention; but, as a man's first duty is to his own household, so. it is also to his own church, and the services and meetings of his own church should always be given preference. It is lamentable for whole charges to be unrepresented at a District Conference. Our laymen should also read our own books, and study our own doctrines and methods. There is much reading and Summer schooling which educates our people, and preachers as well, away from and out of sympathy with our church. Hence much of service and gifts goes into other channels, and is dissipated. Dear brethren of the laity, please be Methodists.

The second change noted as being desired is that pastors should vary their men who lead in public prayer. I know of some charges where, though blessed with young men gifted in prayer, the preacher invariably calls on one of the two or three old standbys, both morning and evening, on Sunday; and Wednesday night hears the same two or three pray-ers, not to say prayers. Now these young men need to exercise their gifts, and mixing them in will give variety to the meeting and relieve a patient and impatient congregation, many of whom can repeat the prayers of the aforesaid two or three.

The third change much desired is for our presiding elders to become acquainted with the laymen in their several districts, and distribute the honors in preparing programs for the Sunday school and District Conferences. If they do not know the men, let them inquire of their preachers. (In my district I can give them names of new, available men.) There are men better prepared by education to address these meetings than those usually chosen. Beloved presiding elders, introduce some new blood, and maybe we will at least not be lectured so much by the laymen, for laymen, like evangelists, when used year in and year out, are liable to become scolds. Bro. J., Bro. R., Bro. H. and Bro. R. have been used almost without a break since programs began. Dear brethren, give us a rest, or, at least, a change.

Having given a piece of my mind, and of other minds, to laymen, preachers in charge and presiding elders, I now turn to the General Conference. First, remove the restriction on the size of presiding elders' districts. The idea of men of the ability of our presiding elders not being able to look after more than fifteen pastoral charges is preposterous. There is no more reason for having a presiding elder going around, as if in a treadmill, among fifteen or sixteen charges, than there would be in having a Bishop in each State. Have we in all our history developed preachers of so little sense that they must at all times have a presiding elder within fifty miles of them? I can not think so.

Some have said: "Contracting the size of pastoral charges has worked well; therefore, we should have small districts." The fact is granted, the conclusion denied. Indeed it proves just the reverse. The very fact that our charges are small is a reason why we can and should have large districts. The preacher does the work, the presiding elder is simply an overseer. He does not perform pastoral work, and is not expected to do so. Our presiding elders know very few families in any given charge. Whether he is expected to do more than oversee the work or not, the fact is evident that he does not. And he could be entirely dispensed with were he not absolutely indispensable in fixing the appointments. This being true, and I think it will not be disputed, he can certainly look after from 20 to 30 preachers and charges.

And when you take down the restriction on the size of districts please, dear brethren, put a limit to the time in which one can remain in the presiding elder's office. Many a preacher makes a first-class presiding elder when he goes in, but by the time he has been in thirty or forty years, or less, he has worn so slick that he "will not make a print." "Oh," you say, "let the Bishop remove him." My dear innocent brother, do you not know how embarrassing it is for a good, tender-hearted Bishop to do this? Take one who has been a Bishop but five years, and is only sixty years old, and let him tackle a cabinet of presiding elders who have been in office 20 or 30 years, and range in age from 70 to 90 years, each clamoring to be allowed "to finish this term," or "just this year, or I die." Let the Bishop suggest one of them for a pastoral charge, and hear all the rest with one voice cry out: "Why, Bishop; he can not now be confined to one church once a month, to say nothing of once a week. He has been in so long he can not now do pastoral work."

Do, dear General Conference, heed this cry for the relief of our Bishops and great good to our beloved Zion.

I heard many other changes advocated, but believe I will not name them till the above reforms shall have been inaugurated. Till then I am,

Your unchanging friend,

JEAMES JONES.

French Mission Work.

Of late we see very little in our church papers of "French Mission work." This is a subject, it seems to me, that should be kept before our people. A year or so ago articles appeared in the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE from the pen of Rev. J. A. Parker, D. D., on the "Comparative Statistics of the Population and Needs of the Protestants of Southwest Louisiana." A short while before this an able contribution from Rev. F. N. Parker's pen on the "Necessity of Reaching the Population in the French Sections of Louisiana;" also the "advisability of one or more of the young ministers of this Conference making special preparation for this needy field." I recite from memory; hence, may not quote verbatim the titles or substance of the above articles. The church has made some flighty attempts at reaching the French people of Louisiana. As a people, the Methodists are largely responsible, in that they have existed with much of gospel privileges in the midst of this people, lo! these many years. That they must face this responsibility, or shirk an open and manifest duty to God and their fellow-man, is a fact patent to all. The necessity of entering and occupying the French sections of our State need, however, no longer be considered as a mere speculative venture, or as a wild fantasy of some sanctified zealot. By this time the advisability of such a work should have demonstrated itself to every thinking mind. Its practicability has been proven by the most futile attempts that the church has made to possess this field, and, consequently, the church should now be able, willing and ready, by persevering, intelligent effort, to enter and take this Canaan for Israel. We should recognize the necessity of an intelligent preparation for such an occupancy before we can hope to accomplish anything. This preparation must express itself first and foremost by a faith that expects to possess, and prepares by such an outlay of resources and personal energy as is necessary for and equivalent to such an enterprise. But, again, if we are to cope with our enemy—a strong man armed—it will be necessary for us to recognize, in a still greater degree, the mutual dependence of Christians upon one another, and to become co-workers in the furtherance of this or any evangelical enterprise that is to be maneuvered or manipulated for God and the church. They, the children of the church, make much better headway and accomplish much more by a united pull, a pull altogether, than they ever will by random and spasmodic attempts to accomplish what can only be wrought out by a united, consecrated effort of the ministry of the church as a whole.

As to just when the Western work of the M. E. Church, which extended to the State of Louisiana, began in this State, I am just now uninformed, but I learn from well-authenticated history that up to 1817, when the question of withdrawing the preachers from this field was being gravely discussed, the harvest of souls had been very scant indeed. And this fatal move of withdrawing the laborers from the field was only prevented by the timely intercession of one man, viz.: Ashley Hewitt. "Was it sound policy," said he, "to lose what little had been gained by so much privation and toil? What would become of those few sheep in the wilderness if the shepherds were all taken away?" "Accordingly the appointments for 1818 stand thus in the Minutes: Louisiana District—Ashley Hewitt, P. E. Attakapas, Thomas Nixon; Washita, Ashley Hewitt." (From "History of Protestantism in Mississippi and the Southwest," by Rev. Jno. G. Jones.)

These few words of history show plainly the difficulty with which the territory of Louisiana was manned and held as early as 1817. Is not our French Mission territory more easily reached and held now than any section of this State was then? And was not the church confronted from the start with such a field in Louisiana, as compared with the rest of the work, seemed difficult indeed? And should a field be abandoned or neglected on account of its difficulties? Had that noble man of Israel—Ashley Hewitt—not interceded with the church in behalf of this State, would it have made the strenuous efforts which it did for this field? Are there not young men in the Methodist connection of Louisiana who could well afford to spend eight, ten, or even more years in the French Mission work in this State as a preparation for future usefulness? Can the church not afford to qualify and prepare some of her young ministers for this special field? Why should our church papers teem with letters burning with the warmth of appeal to her sons and daughters to prepare for its needy fields, and then make no provision for the occupancy of the field, or the preparation or utilizing of such as are willing and ready to go? Why is it that the Conference Boards, like the General Mission Board, often gives no response to those who volunteer to go? Is the urgency of such appeals made like the exhortations in some sermons, not to move sinners to repentance, but rather to show the eloquence of him who pleads? Let the church utilize her resources, and she will soon be like unto an army with banners.

Here, at Centenary College, a "special course in French" could be had. And in the ranks of the young men of the Conference there may be those who would hear gladly the voice of the church should the call be made, and would answer, "Here am I; send me." And if the policy of the past has worked poorly, why could not a new plan be tried? Why could not special appropriations be made for this field, and laborers appointed who could go, even though they should be detained a few months from the field in preparation? Or are our efforts in behalf of this vast multitude that lie at our very doors only a myth? Shall we go up and possess the land or not?

Growth in Grace. What Does It Involve?

1. It presupposes a state of imperfection or immaturity, to begin with. A tree, a horse, a man, does not grow after it is grown.

2. Growth in nature involves accretions to the substance of the growing thing or animal. Hence time is a necessary factor of growth.

3. Whatever is added in the gradual process of growth is in quality like the substance to which it is added. Nature guards against admitting anything into the growing organism that would retard its growth.

4. If growth be arrested by unfavorable environments, decay sets in resulting in disorganization and decomposition.

5. As Christian life is represented in Scripture as a growth, and we are commanded to grow in grace and the knowledge of Christ, we are concerned to know what is involved in Christian growing.

We are in a state of grace when born into the kingdom of God, but imperfect and immature, and hence under a necessity of growing to maturity—not holiness—by a gradual process. We are exhorted to grow in grace as it manifests itself in patience, meekness, gentleness, brotherly kindness, etc.; but nowhere are we commanded to grow in holiness. Why? Because holiness is a moral quality that can not be added to as can other things that grow. We are commanded to be holy; not to grow into holiness, for that we can not do. Strictly speaking, there are no degrees in holiness. Every moral, accountable creature is either holy or unholy. If the latter, it is because of unholy principles in the nature not yet destroyed or subdued. This state of things may exist in the justified believer which renders him unholy, but innocent as long as he maintains a justified state.

W. F. M. S. and P. and H. M. S.

The annual meeting W. F. M. S. and P. and H. M. S. of Winona district was held in Greenwood, Miss., June 5. The meeting having been deferred from May 15 on account of high water, it was feared the attendance would be very small, but the majority of Auxiliaries were represented, and reports showed general interest in the work. The morning session was devoted to W. F. M. S. and afternoon given to P. and H. M. S.

The devotional exercises were conducted by Rev. L. Lipscomb, of Carrollton. His appropriate Scripture lesson and earnest prayer were indeed a beautiful beginning. Our president, Mrs. B. L. Jones, occupied the chair, with Miss Ella Grider as secretary. The "Address of Welcome" by Mrs. Joe Bew cordially extended to all visitors the hospitality of Greenwood, where hospitality was royally dispensed.

Mrs. L. Lipscomb, of Carrollton, in her "Response," expressed the deep gratitude and appreciation of the visitors for such beautiful and regal entertainment.

The president's annual report showed the year's work well done. She reported in our district 9 Auxiliaries, with membership of 129, taking 56 copies of the Advocate; 6 Juveniles, with 118 members, taking 43 copies of Little Worker. Our district ranks high in financial standing, having paid the past year $1,084,34. Carrollton claims banner Juveniles, having paid $109.50, and Winona banner Auxiliary, reporting $588.30 paid. Of the $588.30 paid by Winona, one $40 scholarship, a $150 Day School and $300 for honorary life members were contributed by the generous and consecrated Mrs. J. T. Lay.

An interesting letter from Miss Holding, of Laredo, Texas, was read. It gave much information concerning our Bible woman, whom we have pledged to support another year.

After all reports were heard, a short time was given to informal talks by different delegates, whereby we learned of the various ways different societies were conducted and various means by which funds are raised.

Our earnest president, in a last few words, impressed upon all representatives of the Auxiliaries the great importance of reorganizing where needed, and sustaining, where organized, the Juvenile Societies.

A motion to adjourn until 2:30 P. M. being carried, the meeting was dismissed by Rev. L. Lipscomb.

The afternoon session was opened with devotional exercises by Rev. L. Lipscomb, after which Mrs. J. B. Stone, of Winona, occupied the chair, Miss Mary Sweatman being absent. By request Miss Ella Grider did work of secretary.

Mrs. Stone, in her review of home missions, gave us many interesting and instructive facts and figures. She reported 64 Auxiliaries, with from 700 to 800 members, in our Conference. They had paid past year $1,000, of which $450 was given to Mira Smith Scholarship and $75 each to Panola circuit, Corinth circuit and Sturgis.

After hearing all reports, Mrs. Thayer, of Greenwood, mentioned Baby Roll that had been reported by other Auxiliaries, and asked why her society could not have one, too? Immediately six names were given.

The audience was then entertained by a very sweet recitation, "Which One," by little Ruth Stone, of Winona.

Place of next meeting was discussed, and although Vaiden extended cordial invitation, yet Winona was so fortunate as to secure the next meeting, it being thought best to meet in conjunction with District Conference, which will be held in Winona.

Miss Streater, in a short talk, told us something of the Training-school societies, how they are conducted and how made interesting. She also mentioned the great advantage to that school in securing as a member of its faculty our beloved Mrs. Hargrove, our loss being their gain.

On motion to adjourn the meeting was dismissed by Mr. Thayer.

At 8:30 in the evening, after a beautiful song service by choir, a recitation, "The Waif," was sweetly rendered by little Rowena Thayer. Miss Streater, in an easy and graceful manner, entertained the audience with an earnest, beautiful paper concerning the Training-school at Kansas City. A practical and well-written paper by Mrs. Shivers, of Black Hawk, was read by Miss Ella Grider. Miss Annie Belle Thayer read, very effectively, a poem, "Unawares."

Resolutions of thanks to the hospitable people of Greenwood and to choir for such faithful and beautiful service were read by Mrs. B. G. Williams, chairman of committee. This programme properly closed the district meeting, which was truly an occasion of happiness. Sunday afternoon, however, was given to the work; Miss Streater giving the children a delightful talk, after which the W. F. M. S. of Greenwood held an enthusiastic and interesting meeting.

Aberdeen District Sunday-School Conference.

The Sunday-school Conference of the Aberdeen district, of the North Mississippi Annual Conference, convened in Houston, Miss., June 10, 1897, at 9 o'clock A. M. Rev. S. M. Thames, P. E., presided. The attendance was not very large, but the meeting was very interesting from beginning to close. The programme was very earnestly discussed to the profit of all present. The preaching, which was forcible, clear, and edifying, was done by Bros. J. D. Newsom, B. F. Phillips, and D. L. Cogdell. Altogether, the Conference was a very pleasant, profitable, and harmonious one; and we advise all who are in any way interested in the great and noble work of the Sunday-school of our church to attend our Sunday-school Conference, and get information and new inspiration for the work.

What Christians Are For.

I remember hearing of a blind man who sat by the wayside, with a lantern near him. When he was asked what he had the lantern for, as he could not see the light, he said it was that people should not stumble over him.

I believe more people stumble over the inconsistencies of professed Christians than from any other cause. What is doing more harm to the cause of Christ than all the skepticism in the world is this bold, dead formalism, this conformity to the world, this professing what we do not possess. The eyes of the world are upon us.

I think it was George Fox who said that every Quaker ought to light up the country ten miles around him. If we were all brightly shining for the Master, those about us would soon profit by the light. They have an idea that the church is a place of rest. Instead of going there to work for God, they go there to rest.—D. L. Moody.

Aggressive, But Not Repulsive.

Few things are more worthy of close study than the question, How can we war and yet be winsome? How can we be intense in our love for Jesus, and yet maintain thoroughly cordial and sympathetic relations with those who are not his friends? How can we be loyal to the truth, and yet loving to neglecters or opponents of the truth? How can we feel and show due appreciation for the good there is in sinful people without in any way condoning their sins or giving them encouragement in their vain excuses? A very delicate and difficult line of conduct is here hinted at, requiring much tact. Few are equal to such straight walking. Nearly all lean unduly to one side or the other. There is either some indifference to the right, some laxity as to principle, or there is a failure in charity, a touch of Pharisaism. Blessed is he who has the wisdom to strike the golden mean, or is so comprehensive in his make-up as to include a full and equal development of those opposite qualities! We know of nothing better to recommend for progress in this direction than a study of the mind of the Master, the one perfect Model.—Zion's Herald.

The word "revival" is a much abused term. People talk about "holding a revival" with little thought of what the declaration means. A revival can no more be held than a man can grasp the wind in his fists. They mean, however, that a series of meetings is being held, the object of which is a revival. But the holding of such meetings, even though they may be accompanied or followed by many conversions, does not prove that a revival is being experienced. A revival implies previous life. It is a re-awakening of Christian people. Its presence is shown by unsparing heart-searchings, a forsaking of sinful habits and courses of conduct, a new and higher sense of Christian obligation, the disappearance of feuds, reconciliations between those who have been estranged—these and many other things that might be mentioned show that Christians have experienced the season of refreshing which is usually styled a revival.—Selected.

The doctrine of the resurrection is full of joy to the bereaved. It clothes the grave with flowers, and wreathes the tomb with unfading laurel. The sepulchre shines with a light brighter than the sun, and death grows fair as we say, in the full assurance of faith, "I know that my brother shall rise again." Rent from the ignoble shell, the pearl is gone to deck the crown of the Prince of Peace; buried beneath the sod, the seed is preparing to bloom in the King's garden.—C. H. Spurgeon.

God is often lost in prayers and ordinances. "Enter into thy closet," said Christ, "and shut thy door." Shut thy door means much. It means shut out not only nonsense, but business; not only the company abroad, but the company at home. It means let thy poor soul have a little rest and refreshment, and God have opportunity to speak to thee in a still small voice—or he will speak to thee in thunder.—Robert Cecil.

The only sin which is beyond the reach of absolution—the one only sin which the precious blood can not absolve—is the sin that is not repented of. That is the sole and only sin that shall not be washed as white as snow.—Manning.

The man who waits till he is better before beginning a religious life is like the debtor who supposes that it will be easier to pay his obligations after they have been doubled by accumulated interest than it is now!

Remember that if the opportunity for great deeds should never come, the opportunity for good deeds is renewed for you day by day. The thing for us to long for is the goodness, not the glory.

To Whom it May Concern:

About three years ago I received a sample bottle of "Mul-en-ol." I had never heard of it before. I began using it, however, as occasion required, and soon found that it was all that is claimed for it, and more. For cuts, burns, bruises, scalds, and all kinds of sores, it is superior to any remedy I have ever used. It is also exceedingly efficacious in colic and diarrhœa. For sore throat it is incomparably better than anything I know of. I heartily recommend it as a medicine worthy of a place in every household. W. C. BLACK,

Cure Catarrh in Summer

Rev. J. W. Blosser, M. D., who has devoted twenty-one years to the study of Catarrh, says that Summer is the best time to make a speedy and thorough cure. He has discovered a remedy which is smoked in a pipe, but contains no tobacco, and cures the worst cases permanently. He will mail a three-days' trial treatment free to any sufferer who will address Dr. J. M. Blosser & Son, 11, 12 and 13 Grant Building, Atlanta, Ga.

From Rev. W. H. Moss.

I was readmitted into the traveling connection by the Louisiana Conference in 1862, at Bastrop, having been located by the old Georgia Conference at my own request. I had served the North Bossier circuit as a supply that year. I remained on that circuit till the close of the war, when I was appointed to the Pleasant Hill circuit at the Conference (Bishop Andrew presiding), held in Mansfield, 1866, where, with C. W. Carter, I was ordained to elder's orders. I traveled the Pleasant Hill circuit two years; was then sent to the Keachie circuit. After serving that circuit three years, I transferred to the East Texas Conference, and was stationed at Marshall. I was transferred to the North Texas Conference in 1873. In 1887 I was transferred to this, the Northwest Texas Conference. That year I was married, the second time, to Lou Wagley, whose acquaintance I made at Pleasant Hill, where she was brought up. Last year she left me for heaven.

Many conflicts have I passed since I left Louisiana. I loved the State, the Conference and the people, but was influenced by Bishop Marvin and others to transfer. I am still in the itinerant ranks, where I hope to live and die.

At our last Conference, presided over by Bishop John C. Keener, the brother who was appointed to this station failing or refusing to come to it, the Bishop gave him my circuit and his station to me. And so I am here at Coleman, nearly two thousand feet above the sea, in one of the prettiest countries one ever saw. They have been greatly afflicted with drouth here for a few years past; but this year we have had rain enough, and the prospects are flattering for a good crop. But this is largely a cattle country. Now the grass is fine, the cattle fine and bringing a good price. We have a good church and a good parsonage here well furnished, and nearly two hundred members, some of whom are a fine type of Methodists. Methodism does well here, although it has wars without and some within. It is not far from here to Dublin, where the Morrison trouble had its beginning. But there are many noble heroes with the old ship who will stay with her till she has put to flight every foe or sinks under the waves.

They (some) call me old Brother Moss now; but, thank the Lord, I am still able to fight his battles. I shall never forget Louisiana and her noble people. Some of my old comrades—John Pipes, B. F. Alexander, and others—have obtained the prize after fighting the good fight. I hope to meet them by and by. I have four children sleeping in Caddo parish, near Shreveport. Louisiana gave me one of the most cultured and devoted wives a man ever had. I never will cease to love Lonisiana.

W. H. Moss.

FROM THE WORK.

L. L. Chevalier, Superintendent, Vidalia. June 25, 1897: "Vidalia Sunday-school celebrated Children's Day, June 20 Rev. T. H. McClendon officiated. Song service by the Sunday-school; prayer, music, recitation. Thanks to the children and all who assisted. Collection, $4.40. May God's blessings rest upon the little mite from pure hearts and the mission, is my prayer."

Rev. W. J. Porter, Eunice, La., June 19, 1897: "We closed a good meeting in Prudhomme City last week. Bro. Saunders, of Plaquemine Brulee, did most of the preaching. Sinners were convicted, mourners converted, and a number of the most spiritual were sanctified. Had a considerable cleaning up on the tobacco line. Lord, help my people to see and turn from the sinful billion-dollar tobacco lust, while millions perish for the bread of life."

Rev. J. D. Crymes, Mt. Carmel, Miss., June 24, 1897: "Rev. D. C. Rawls spent the month of April with us at every place on this charge. The Spirit of God was manifest in the meetings. At Mt. Zion Church, near this place, the work is most remarkable. Near the close of the meeting a number came clearly into and testified definitely to the experience of entire sanctification. The spirit of prayer came upon them. According to the testimony of some at regular intervals during the day, they retire to secret places, and as they labor in the fields, or rest at noon, or return at eventide, the spirit of prayer prevails. A Sunday-school and weekly prayer meeting spontaneously came into existence. On the latter, which is held every Wednesday night, large crowds—some from a long distance—assemble. Powerful conviction seems to be coming upon the people. There have been some bright conversions and reclamations, and at every service many publicly acknowledge that they are seeking peace with God and request the prayers of Christian people. If all the membership of this charge will get the 'inwrought prayer' and 'pray everywhere, lifting up holy hands,' there will be a great spiritual upheaval. Bro. Rawls has a great heart and brain, and his spirituality is refreshing. A good many of our people are fasting and praying, and looking forward with pleasure to Bro. Carley's visit on Wednesday next."

NOTES FROM WAYNE COUNTY.

Rev. W. W. Moore, of Mathersville circuit, has had a gracious meeting at Winnifred Church, assisted by Revs. H. E. Partridge and R. L. Phillips. The Conference resolution regarding a missionary sermon and collection was regarded; Bro. Partridge preached the sermon and lifted a good collection.

Rev. R. L. Phillips has held a protracted meeting at Chicora with fine results; a number converted, some sanctified and several joined the church. A good society has been organized here this year and the church much strengthened. Bro. W. W. Moore assisted in the preaching and other work, while a most efficient worker in home, personal and altar work was found in Miss Brown, of York, Ala. Bro. Phillips begins this week at Winchester with strong faith of victory.

Mother Turnage was born in Anson county, N. C., on the twenty-eighth of April, 1821; joined the M. E. Church, South, in South Carolina, June, 1833; married Nov. 9, 1837.

From their Mississippi home during the late war her husband passed to his final reward. The mother of eleven children, the four eldest of whom had gone forth to battle, Mrs. Turnage was left a widow to struggle for a living for herself and children. To add to her bereavement, in the terrible conflict that waged between the North and the South, one of the four brave sons surrendered his life on the battlefield. Other members of the family have followed this heroic son to the better rest beyond, and now there are left seven brave Christians as living monuments to a mother's earnest prayers and careful admonitions.

For more than threescore years and ten this precious mother lived to brighten a world of sorrow and of sin. In her death the neighborhood has lost a good neighbor; her devoted sons and daughters, an affectionate mother; her church and pastor, a true friend. For years she had gone in and out among the people, a faithful, consistent follower of the blessed Master and a true representative of the great church to which she belonged. She loved her church and those who from time to time saw her, even when she had grown faint and feeble, attending upon its meetings and ordinances that she might join in praises of thanksgiving and unite her prayers with others of the church she loved for the salvation of her children and grandchildren, her neighbors and her neighbors' children, can never forget the touching picture—the beautiful picture.

For some months previous to the death of this sainted mother increasing infirmities and bodily suffering bore heavily upon her. She anticipated the summons, and was ready when it came. Her steady faith in God triumphed over suffering and over death. In all her troubles she trusted in the Lord who never forsook her. Her children and friends are comforted by the precious thought that she has joined the loved ones in the better land, when there is no more sickness, nor sorrow, nor pain, nor death.

How we would enjoy seeing her sweet, smiling face and how we would love to hear her gentle voice! But, no; we would not bring her back from her haven of rest. Imitating her noble example, we will press on to the mark for the prize of our high calling till we meet her again in the bright world above.

A YOUNG FRIEND.

THE WHEELS OF HEALTH.
There is no better exercise for a young woman in thoroughly good health than bicycling. On the contrary, if she suffers from weakness or disease of the distinctly feminine organs, if she rides, at all, such exercise should be very sparingly indulged in. Women are peculiarly constituted and their general health is peculiarly dependent upon the health of the specially feminine organism.
It is the health of these delicate and important parts that "makes the wheels of general health go round." Their strength and vigor are as important to a woman as a mainspring to a watch, or a sprocket and chain to a bicycle. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is the best of all medicines for delicate women. It makes them strong where they most need strength. Taken during the "interesting interval," it banishes the usual squeamishness and makes baby's admission to the world easy and almost painless. It fits a woman for in-door work and out-door sports. Honest druggists don't advise substitutes.
"I cannot say enough in praise of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, as it has undoubtedly saved my life," writes Mrs. Florence Hunter, of Corley, Logan Co., Ark. "I miscarried four times; could get no medicine to do me any good. I tried the 'Favorite Prescription' and after taking several bottles, I made my husband a present of a fine girl. I think it is the best medicine in the world."
A man or woman who neglects constipation suffers from slow poisoning. Doctor Pierce's Pleasant Pellets cure constipation. One little "Pellet" is a gentle laxative, and two a mild cathartic. All medicine dealers.

SEASHORE CAMP GROUND.

The twenty-sixth annual Camp Meeting at Seashore will open (D. V. on Wednesday evening, July 14, next, and continue for about eight days.

Arrangements have been made for accommodating the multitudes that annually visit this delightful spot. A handsome and commodious two-story lodging-house—Keller Lodge—has been erected and comfortably furnished for visitors, in addition to the other accommodations supplied by the trustees.

The L. and N. R. R. Company will place on sale the reduced rate of fare during the season, from all points on their lines, and secure a corresponding rate from all connecting lines. Tickets will be placed on sale July 5 to 23, inclusive, and be good to return on until August 31. Two daily mail trains stop at the camp grounds, besides the accommodation and excursion trains, during the entire Summer season. All trains will stop at the camp grounds from July 5 to 24, inclusive.

The camp ground is located on the Mississippi Sound, having a frontage of 1,400 feet; fanned by the refreshing zephyrs from the Gulf of Mexico. The sea-bathing afforded is unsurpassed by any resort on the coast. A fine artesian well supplies the grounds with excellent drinking water, which is now "piped" over the entire encampment. An abundance of beautiful shade trees afford shelter from the Summer's sun, while pure and exhilarating sea breezes refresh the fatigued and overheated visitor from our smoke-enveloped and dust-stifling cities and towns.

Persons wishing to secure accommodations before the camp meeting should address W. B. Thomson, New Orleans, chairman Lodging Committee. Questions concerning transportation should be addressed to E. P. Mackie, New Orleans, La.; Dr. M. F. Tucker, Mobile, or J. H. Lane, Montgomery, Ala.

All itinerant preachers of the Southern Methodist Church will be admitted into the grounds and provided with lodging accommodations in Wesley Hall free of charge. Board will be furnished them at the restaurant at half-rate.

The services during camp meeting are in charge of the presiding elders of the three patronizing District Conferences.

The usual entrance fee will be in force this season. No charge will be exacted for entrance on the Sunday of the camp meeting. A cordial invitation is extended to all who desire to attend the camp meeting and spend a while on the camp ground.

Words spelled alike but with different meanings can be used but once. Use any standard dictionary. Pronouns, nouns, verbs, adverbs, prefixes and suffixes, adjectives allowed. Anything that is legitimate will be allowed. Work it out in this manner: In, deep dent, net, nine, etc.; use these words in your list. The publishers of The Sunny South will pay $20.00 in gold to the person who makes the largest list of words from the letters in the word INDEPENDENT; $10.00 for the second, $10.00 for the third, $10.00 for the fourth, $10.00 for the fifth, and $5.00 each for the next eight largest lists. The above rewards are given free and without consideration for the purpose of attracting attention to the South's great illustrated family and literary weekly. It is twelve large pages, seventy-two columns each issue; all original matter with the very best long and short stories, in addition to its numerous departments, such as "Woman's Page," "Children's Page," "Blue and Gray Page" and a page devoted to "Southern Industries," etc. To enter this contest it is necessary for you to send 50 cents for a three months' subscription with your list of words, and every person sending 50 cents and a list of ten words or more, is guaranteed an extra present by return mail (in addition to THE SUNNY SOUTH) of a 192 page book, "The Other Man's Wife," a very fascinating book by John Strange Winter; or, we will send you "The Story of an African Farm," or "Beside the Bonnie Briar Bush." Let us know which book you desire. Satisfaction guaranteed in every case or money refunded. The lists should be sent at once. THIS CONTEST WILL CLOSE JULY 15TH. The names and addresses of successful contestants will be printed in the July 24th issue of THE SUNNY SOUTH.
NOTE—For 75 cents we will send you THE SUNNY SOUTH for three months, allow you to enter above word contest, send you your choice of the books offered in the contest, and also send you free and post paid, our beautiful portfolio, Palestine Photographed, size 11x13½ inches, sixty-four selected views of picturesque and historic spots in the Holy Land, beautifully designed and handsomely bound in heavy paper portfolio covers, illustrated with a map of Palestine and a facsimile of Hoffman's famous painting, "A Portrait of Christ." The 64 pictures contained in this volume are Actual Photographic Reproductions of the localities in the Holy Land made immortal through Christ's life on earth. Showing where Christ performed His miracles, the place of His birth, Baptism, Transfiguration and Crucifixion, and the places made sacred by the work of His Apostles as they appear today; it should be in every household. The strongest argument in favor of the trnth of Christianity is a holy life.

Do not imagine that every man is a child of the devil who does not say "shibboleth" just as yon do.

The devil is never anxious abont the man whose hope of heaven is his wife's chnrch membership.—Exchange.

The liberality that never makes a sacrifice for the benefit of others is a sham, and so is the love that never speaks a kind word.

Cultivate the habit of always seeing the best in people, and, more than that, of drawing forth whatever is the best in them.—Theodore L. Cuyler.

Hnmility is one of the cardinal graces of the Christian character. The Lord knoweth "the proud afar off," but he hath "respect unto the lowly." We must stoop to rise.

Some people seem to imagine that their religion is all right, even though their daily lives may be all wrong. The devil will be perfectly content as long as he can keep them in this frame of mind.

Each of us is bound to make the small circle in which he lives better and happier; each of us is bonnd to see that ont of that small circle the greatest good may flow.—Arthnr Penrhyn Stanley.

I do believe the common man's task is the hardest. The hero has the hero's aspiration that lifts him to his labor. All great duties are easier than the little ones, though they cost far more blood and agony.—Phillips Brooks.

He that hath never known adversity is bnt half acqnainted with himself or with others. Constant success shows us but one side of life, for as it snrrounds us with friends, who tell us only of our merits, so it silences those from whom alone we can learn our faults.—Cotton.

It is easier to get up than to get on. There are people who pick themselves np during a revival, and shake the dust of the world off their feet, and then spin around without going anywhere. The horse you want is not the one that lifts his feet highest, bnt the one that can get on.—Baltimore Advocate.

Is it not wonderful that God should make the spread of his kingdom depend upon hnman effort? Yet he does. Jesus could do no mighty works in a certain heaven-favored place because of the nnbelief of the people. May it not be that many of us are limiting the gracious power of God by our unbelief and inactivity?

Teachableness.

A teachable spirit and the acqniring of knowledge go hand in hand. The student who thinks he knows more than his instructor is in a bad way, but the pupil who is in an indifferent, unreceptive state of mind as regards learning is in a far worse condition. A boy of right mind, though he may have the best of teachers, will grow up to be an ignoramus in spite of his opportunities, if he lacks a willingness to receive instruction. A dull, but knowledge-loving pupil will soon outstrip a quick-witted, but unteachable one. There is much force in the old saying, "You can lead a horse to water, but you can't make him drink." Not all who are led to the Pierian spring thirst for its waters, or will drink therefrom.

Unteachableness may arise from several causes. It may be due to self-contentment, prejudice, or conceit. The most successful students, other things being equal, are those whose minds are ever receptive, and who eagerly glean from any and every source, from nature and from human life, as well as from books. Teachableness is as essential to the Christian as to the student. Grace, like knowledge, is not for the unreceptive and self-satisfied, but for the hungry and teachable. No man can be a disciple of Christ who does not desire to learn of him, and be taught of God. The Spirit convicts men of sin and convinces them of the truth, but compels no one to obey.

The more teachable we are, the more perfectly our wills are subjected to the will of God, and the clearer is our grasp of the truth, and the more rapid is our development in the Christian graces and virtues.

A great many Christians are at a stand-still in their religious experience because of a species of pride which renders them unteachable. Believing themselves to be better than the average, they indulge in feelings of self-congratulation, and look with a sort of condescension and pity on the rest of the world.

Whenever a Christian begins to flatter himself that he is above his fellow-Christians, or that he is good enough, he has lost the teachable spirit, and is likely to fall an easy prey to the tempter. "The Lord resisteth the proud, but giveth grace to the humble." The student or the apprentice who is inflated with an idea of his self-importance and superior knowledge, is almost incapable of being taught, and, therefore, of making progress. Well said the writer of Proverbs: "Seest thou a man wise in his own conceit? There is more hope of a fool than of him."

A Christian, old or young, who believes himself possessed of superior attainments in grace and in knowledge of the divine will, is almost certain to become unteachable, unmanageable, and, therefore, incapable of further development. Paul was not talking to the wind when he said, "Knowledge puffeth up, but charity edifieth." The believer who thinks that few are good enough or wise enough to instruct him in spiritual things may be conscientious, but he is pitiable in his ignorance and weakness. A bigot will not listen to any except those who hold to his particular tenets, and utter his shibboleth. A Christian of the New Testament type rejoices in the truth wherever found, and because he is teachable, receives good from a multitude of sources.

Sometimes teachers find it almost impossible to instruct their pupils on account of dislike or prejudice. So many a hearer derives little or no good from a powerful sermon on account of ill-conceived dislike to the preacher. It is astonishing how unteachable prejudice renders men. Not unfrequently church members are docile and attentive to the truth so long as things go their way, but when the pastor or others in authority venture to do or say what they disapprove, instantly they set themselves up as teachers, sit in judgment upon all who differ with them, and contend so fiercely that one might imagine that the Christian religion is in jeopardy.

While a Christian ought to be strong in faith and abundant in good works, he must also be meek and teachable, seeking daily "the wisdom that comes from above, which is first pure, then peaceable, gentle and easy to be entreated."

At Water Valley.

We had the pleasure of looking in on the Grenada District Conference, held in Main Street Church, Water Valley. We will not attempt a report of the proceedings, as that will be furnished by the secretary. The attendance was remarkably good. Every pastor was present, and there was a good attendance of local preachers. Every charge was represented by laymen except two. Presiding Elder Morehead is a capital presiding officer, taking ample time to look after every interest, and yet dispatching business with sufficient rapidity. The secretarial work was efficiently done by Bros. Savage and Geddie. The reports that we heard show the district to be in fine condition. The increase in the number of Epworth Leagues is especially gratifying. We had the privilege of hearing two good sermons—one by Rev. A. P. Leech, and one by Rev. W. T. Browning. We also heard a capital missionary address by "Gilderoy." On Sunday morning we dispensed the word at Main Street; on Sunday night at Wood Street. Methodism is strong at Water Valley, and is steadily on the increase. Wood Street, Rev. J. A. Bowen, pastor, has a membership of about four hundred. Main Street, Rev. T. B. Clifford, pastor, has a membership of about one hundred. This church was organized only last year. It has quite a handsome house of worship, and is well organized and in fine working order. The Sunday schools of both these charges are in a prosperous condition.

We do not think there is any place in Mississippi that can approximate Water Valley in the matter of League work. Each of the churches has two Leagues, a Senior and a Junior. In Wood Street the Senior League has a membership of about a hundred, while the Junior has more than eighty. The two Leagues of Main Street aggregate a membership of more than a hundred. All these are well attended and are doing fine work.

Through the kindness of Rev. J. A. Bowen we had a drive to the Orphans' Home. We were gratified beyond our power of expression with what we saw. As our readers know, we have been an enthusiastic friend of this enterprise from its inception. The institution has materialized fully as soon as we expected, and begins on a larger scale than we had hoped for. The building is about completed. It is 130 feet long by 48 feet wide. The height is 38 feet. It is surmounted by an observatory that commands a magnificent view of the town and of the surrounding country for many miles. It has a capacity for a hundred inmates without crowding. A hundred and fifty can be accommodated. The building is admirably constructed. It is as well ventilated as any building we have ever seen. The entire interior arrangements seem to be almost perfect.

The two Conferences were wise in their choice of a Board of Managers. Not a dollar of indebtedness has been incurred. The Board desire to put an agent in the field in the near future to raise funds for furnishing the institution. About $2,000 will be needed. The experience of the past two years demonstrates the fact that there is no cause to which our people will respond more readily than to this. Almost anywhere a good collection can be taken if the claims of the institution are properly presented.

We are glad to see that the people of Water Valley, regardless of denominational affiliations, are deeply interested in the welfare of the Home. Besides giving an admirable site of fifty acres, they have contributed generously in other ways. They go in troops to visit it, and carry strangers and visiting friends.

With our genial friend, Rev. R. M. Standifer, as co-guest, we were delightfully domiciled part of the time in the hospitable home of Bro. and Sister F. L. Waldron, to whom we are indebted for many courtesies. We also enjoyed the hospitalities of Bros. Clifford and Bowen and their delightful families.

On account of feeble health Bro. Bowen will take his departure this week for a season of rest at Monteagle. "Cyclone Clifford" will be off for Toronto, where our readers will hear from him.

A Little Breeze.

The Protestant Episcopal Church in Jackson, Miss., is in a turmoil. The rector, Rev. R. E. L. Craig, recently preached a sermon, in which he took strong ground against churchmen abetting the liquor traffic in any way, even to the extent of signing a petition for a local-option election in a dry country (Hinds is now dry). He expressed the hope that if any of his vestrymen had signed the petition pending before the Board of Supervisors, they would either withdraw their signatures or else resign. Thereupon the vestry, most of whom had signed the petition, held a meeting and passed a series of resolutions strongly condemning the course of the rector, only one of the vestrymen, Judge Brame, siding with the rector. The rector then tendered his resignation, as did Judge Brame. At a subsequent meeting the vestry accepted these two resignations, and then tendered their own resignations to the church. Last Sunday the church accepted the resignations of the vestrymen, but by a vote of 110 to 27 requested the rector to withdraw his resignation. The resignation has been withdrawn, and the rector is going on with his work. The recalcitrant vestrymen and their friends, it is said, claim that this action will result in the dismemberment of the church. The affair proves that the Protestant Episcopal Church is moving in the right direction, though its progress may be slow.

A prominent educator in a recent address laid stress on the fact that people usually succeed in attaining what they really consider worth while. This is strikingly illustrated in the Chautauqua Reading Circle, whose membership is recruited from the busiest mortals the world over. Yet once convince the busy man that he needs the four years' training of Chautauqua Literary Scientific Circle, and the alacrity with which he adjusts his other plans and self-imposed duties to his new endeavor makes him quickly master of the situation. Few people appreciate that a few months or years of systematic mental training will often open up to them unsuspected powers. It is one secret of the far-reaching influence of the C. L. S. C. that the comprehensive nature of its course with its historical, literary and scientific aspects, touches humanity on many sides, and so has developed undreamed-of possibilities in many lives.

Bishop Whipple tells the following story: "A young Englishman on a P. and O. steamer, returning from India, said publicly, at the dinner table: 'Missions are a humbug. I have been in India eight months, and I haven't seen an East India Christian.' A quiet man sitting opposite said: 'May I ask for what you went to India?' The answer was: 'I went to hunt tigers.' The other replied: 'I am a missionary. I have been in India twelve years, and I have not seen a tiger.' The young Englishman did not know that there are more Christians in India than there are communicants in the Protestant Episcopal Church in the United States."

Giving is as essential to spiritual life as breathing is to physical life. God has no place for the man who does not freely give. True greatness and pure religion both consist in giving. We honor men and call them great because of what they have given to the world, not because of what the world has given them. So, at the judgment, the ones who will hear the Master's benediction, "Well done," will not be those who are receiving most from the world, but those who are giving most to the world.—Rev. Charles D. Anderson, Klemme, Iowa.

Millsaps College Law Graduates.

The following special from Jackson, Miss., to the Picayune will be read with great gratification. By a factions and unwise opposition on the part of misguided friends of the University, a measure was defeated before the Legislature which would have placed the alumni of Millsaps College Law Department on the same footing in their immediate authority to practice in the courts with the graduates of the State School. So these students of Millsaps have the honor of wearing double honors and carrying double diplomas. They are not only approved by the distinguished faculty of the Department of Law, but are also endorsed by the judges of the Supreme Court. All honor to these splendid young men! We wish for them the greatest success in their professional career. That special statute which gives exclusive privileges to one school will not long remain. The sense of fairness in the public mind will not long tolerate unjust discriminations. Read the following:

The judges of the Supreme Court have to-day announced that the following young gentlemen who were students in the law class of Millsaps College, and sustained their examination before the chancellor at Raymond on the first Monday of this month, as applicants for license to practice law, as required by the code of this State, have passed on the merit of their papers and will be licensed accordingly: F. M. Austin, of Utica; W. A. Culledge, of Durant; John C. Hardy, of Newton; William H. Hughes, of Trenton; Thos. C. Kimbrough, of Carrollton; A. J. McCormick, of Vosburg; J. A. Saul, of Gillsburg; Paul D. Ratliff, of Jackson; E. G. Robinson, of Raleigh; W. H. Scott, of Camden; Robert L. Ward, of Jackson; William Williams, of Westville; John Q. Hyde, of Greensburg, La.; M. S. McNeil, of Crystal Springs; R. D. Peets, of Fort Adams. This class of fifteen includes every young man who applied to the clerk for license, and it is a great credit to the Law Department of the college that every candidate presented by it was successful in his application. An interesting feature is the fact that three of the young men were one year students, being members of the junior class. It seems to be demonstrated that, as the president of the Board of Trustees remarked on the platform of the college on last commencement day, this school is able to make lawyers on their scholarship, even if it is not allowed to do so by statute.

Rev. W. L. Watkinson in an article in the Methodist Review gives his opinion concerning those preachers who resort to strange devices in order to draw a crowd, or to gain notoriety. He says: "I believe that many a preacher who resorts to eccentric and sensational strategems does so from the consciousness of the meagerness and frailty of his theological and philosophical resources. No truly great actor becomes a Blondin, walking a tight rope to draw a crowd; no really great singer blacks his face and joins the minstrels to secure popularity; no great artist renounces academical law to astonish the world by danbing nightmares. Men of a much inferior order condescend to theatricals; gifted men have no need. And it is the same with respect to the Christian pulpit."—Baltimore Advocate.

Changes of the most marvelous kind have been wrought on the Congo since Stanley made his famous boat trip down that stream twenty years ago, and discovered the Inkissi. It took him about five months to work his weary way around the cataracts between Stanley Pool and Boma. To-day the most difficult part of this journey—170 miles of it—can be made in a comfortable car in less than ten hours. On the upper waters of the Congo and its affluents, comprising some 7,000 miles of waterway, forty steamboats and as many towboats, transported thither in sections around 235 miles of cataracts, are plying. Swifter progress elsewhere it would be hard to find.—Zion's Herald.

A good many pastors have felt as Mr. Beecher when he was about to take a ride behind a hired horse at a livery stable. He regarded the horse admiringly, and remarked: "That is a fine-looking animal. Is he as good as he looks?" The owner replied: "Mr. Beecher, that horse will work in any place you put him, and do all that any horse can do." The preacher eyed the horse still more admiringly, and then humorously remarked: "I wish to goodness that he was a member of our church."

If young people could be as fully conscious of their intellectual and moral poverty as they are pretty sure to be should they live to be old, it would doubtless have the effect of making them less assertive of their capacity of rightly doing some things. But a consciousness of one's limitations and weaknesses is a matter of growth, and in many instances this is slow and requires a long experience of trial and failure. A very learned man, possessing a mind of profound acuteness, said: "If I had been as fully conscious in my younger years, as I am now in my old age, of my incredible intellectual poverty, I could not have endured the prospect of my life as a university professor." Coming from such a source, this is very significant. And are not some Christians capable of seeing a lesson here?—Zion's Herald.

A life based upon the closest economy of time would prove an astounding revelation. Suppose one, beginning with childhood, should utilize every opportunity and appropriate every minute. The result would be instructive. John Wesley's journal throws much light upon this problem. The vast rending which he records there was done during horseback rides. The stupendous literary achievements which have amazed the world were the result of the industry of odd moments and insignificant half-hours. If a man fails, he can not plead a lack of time. He has all the time that God has made. His failure is the fruit of indolence or misapplication.—Texas Advocate.

Our churches need to remember that their pastors are men of both heart and sense. The soul-warming enthusiasm with which a church in good condition receives a new pastor will not feed his heart and inspire his ministry for a term of years. The little courtesies, day by day, as the years go by, count for much more in winning his heart, and calling out all his consecrated powers, than do the brilliations of the first month or two.—Standard.

Methodists in the United States, white and colored, 5,653,289; Baptists in the United States of every name, 4,153,857; Presbyterians in the United States of every name, 1,460,346; Lutherans in the United States, 1,420,905; Disciples of Christ, 1,003,672; Protestant Episcopalians, 636,773; Congregationalists 622,557.

Falsehood and error may have the longer legs and outrun truth and righteousness for awhile, but being short of breath, they soon become exhausted, and in the end truth and righteousness reach the goal first and truth stands vindicated.—Methodist Recorder.

No man can hinder our private addresses to God; every man can build a chapel in his breast, himself the priest, his heart the sacrifice, and the earth he treads on the altar.—Jeremy Taylor.

Not until you make men self-reliant, intelligent, and fond of struggle—fonder of struggle than of help—not till then have you relieved poverty.—Phillips Brooks.

"At Variance with Facts."

In to-day's issue of the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE, under the above caption, there is an editorial correction of a very simple mistake in the proceedings of the Brookhaven District Conference as published in the Times-Democrat. "About twenty-five copies were reported" ought to have been "about two hundred and fifty copies were reported." In the report I gave the number in figures, as I usually do. In rapid type-setting "250" is very easily put down "25." I wrote the proceedings for the Times Democrat. The error escaped my attention.

Free Scholarships.

The Luray College, located at Luray, in the Valley of Virginia, has, through its president, Rev. H. M. Wharton, D. D., made an announcement that will be very acceptable to young women who are struggling to prepare themselves for their life-work. A number of free scholarships will be given the coming session, and the basis upon which these scholarships are given is as follows: The young lady must be a Christian of good standing in her church, of fair abilities, and depending upon herself for her support in the future. Preference will be given where one is an orphan; but if parents are living, there will be no objection, provided they are absolutely unable to give their daughters the education that she requires. A letter addressed to the president will bring the desired information in detail. The further announcement is made that the daughters of ministers will be taken free of charge. Luray College has just closed its eighth session, and is becoming a well-known institution of learning. Any information with reference to it may be obtained by writing to the president at Baltimore, Md., or to Prof. M. M. Hargrove, at Luray, Va.

Harris' Business College.

A business education is a necessity, and one who enters upon the duties of life without its guiding influence has all the chances of success against him. We know of no better place for young men and ladies to go for such a training than to that wonderfully progressive institution, Harris' Practical Business College, Jackson, Miss. It is doing more for the worthy, struggling boys and girls than any other business college. Nineteen of its students recently secured good positions in three weeks.—Jackson Evening News.

Virginia College,

ROANOKE, VIRGINIA.

The Virginia College for Young Ladies located in the beautiful city of Roanoke, Virginia, is one of the foremost institutions of learning in the South. Its magnificent new buildings with all modern improvements, on a campus of ten acres, amid gorgeous mountain scenery in the Valley of Virginia, famed for health; its ample course of study, European and American teachers, make the Virginia College for Young Ladies one of the most attractive and beautiful colleges in the South. It is attended by pupils representing twenty States. Opens Sept. 9th. For descriptive catalogue address

Prosperity may come and go. It stays with the Normal. Past year best of all. Boarding patronage increased. Students grown more. Work of a higher grade. Faculty stronger.

Will you enter school in September? Do you want growth? Come to the Normal. It will do you good. See "the drummer" in another column. Investigate the Normal. You will find it strong. It is growing stronger.

Conservatory of Music

IN CONNECTION WITH EAST MISSISSIPPI FEMALE COLLEGE.

East Mississippi Female College is to have another advance step. President Beeson has determined to establish a Conservatory of Music in connection with the College, where young ladies can have as good instruction as they can get in Cincinnati, Boston, New York or Chicago, and at about one third the cost. For director of this Conservatory he has, at great expense, secured the services of Prof. R. P. Conrad, a native of Berlin, Germany. Brought up in this great musical city of the world, graduated at Kullak's Conservatory, and for seventeen years a teacher and concert pianist in the cities and musical centers of this country, he seems to have the right man for the place. Prof. Conrad was once teacher in Cincinnati, where he taught some of the professors in the College of Music. He stands among the first teachers and pianists of this country. Besides being a fine musician, he is an elegant Christian gentleman. He is quite a scholar, a pleasant man socially, and always makes friends. So say those who know him. He is now in the State, and will give public concerts in some of the towns and cities and Summer resorts during vacation, and at the same time assist Pres. Beeson in establishing the Conservatory at Meridian.

Musicians need no longer go to Cincinnati and Boston for musical instruction; they can get it at home much cheaper. The charges at the Conservatory will be the same as expenses at any first-class female college, and there will be no comparison as to advantages. While the expenses of establishing the Conservatory are great, the charges will not be increased.

Why He Didn't Pay.

A story was recently told of how a preacher tested the effect of the hard times upon his congregation. At the conclusion of one of his sermons he said:

"Let everybody in the house who pay their debts stand up."

Instantly every man, woman, and child, with one exception, arose to their feet. He seated the crowd, and then said:

"Let every man who is not paying his debts stand up."

The exception noted, a careworn, hungry individual, clothed in his last Summer's suit, slowly assumed a perpendicular position, and leaned upon the back of the seat in front of him.

"How is it, my friend, that you are the only man in this large congregation who is unable to meet his obligations?"

"I publish a newspaper," he meekly replied, "and my brethren here who have just stood up are my subscribers, and—"

"Let us pray!" exclaimed the minister.—Independent Herald.

Washington College for Young Ladies.

The announcement of this noted school will be found in another column of this paper. It is the only institution of a college grade for young ladies at the National Capital, and is one of the leading schools of the country. It has also a Preparatory School in connection with the College. Its charming location, its healthful surroundings, its lovely buildings and superb grounds are said to be unsurpassed within the District of Columbia. The buildings are heated by steam, lighted by electricity, and most elegantly furnished. The value of a year spent in this school in Washington City can not be estimated.

BY REV. HERMAN W. KNICKERBOCKER.

TOPIC FOR JULY.

ST. PAUL IN SOCIAL RELATIONS.

JULY 11.—HIS RELATION TO INDUSTRY.

Acts xviii, 2 and 3; xx, 33 and 34. I. Thes. ii, 9; Rom. xii, 11; II. Cor. xii, 14.

1. All Jewish boys learned a trade. Paul learned that of tent-maker. This was not considered incompatible with the highest education. It gave him something to fall back on and solved the problem of physical existence.

2. How to make a living is a problem which confronts the young men of to-day. The so-called higher professions are full, but the industrial pursuits present a legitimate and easy solution of the problem. Education and manual labor are not incongruous. The college-bred laborer is a realized type.

3. The utilitarian idea of education is largely responsible for the antipathy of the educated to manual labor. Education is looked upon simply as a means of making money—a commodity exchangeable for money. To fit a man to get on in the world is the lowest aim of education. The development of manhood is its primary and comprehensive end. Work for your daily bread, and consider yourself well-paid when your education yields not gold and silver, but mental and spiritual coin.

4. Paul used his trade as a means to an end. He did not live to make money, but made money to live. His business was subordinate to his life-work. Oh, that the world could learn this lesson to-day! Business of whatever character should simply be the support of the physical stage upon which the drama of life is enacted.

5. The ministry is not, in the worldly sense, a business; it is not a profession. He who enters it as a means of making a living falls far below the standard of Paul. He says, "I covet no man's gold and silver," and again, "I seek not yours, but you."

6. A lazy Christian is a contradiction in terms. He must "provide things honest in the sight of all men" and "be not slothful in business." Religion is expressed better by doing with thy might what thy hand findeth to do than by shouting.

DOTS.

Mr. J. W. Daniels has been appointed treasurer pro tem. of the State League by President White.

Remember the meeting of the Union League at Dryades Street Church, next Thursday, July 8, at 8 P. M.

Rev. Jno. F. Foster will attend the convention at Toronto. Rather slim, but good-looking delegation from New Orleans.

Bro. E. H. Prescott, treasurer of the State League, was married to Miss Enla Ball, of this city, on Saturday morning, and left immediately with his bride for Colorado City. The best wishes of the League go with them.

At the business meeting of the Louisiana Avenue League, Friday night, the following officers were elected for the ensuing half year: Willard Cushman, president; W. R. Hummel, first vice-president; James Welsh, secretary; F. Barringer, treasurer.

IF YOU WISH to purify your blood, you should take a medicine which cures blood diseases. No other medicine has such a record of cures as Hood's Sarsaparilla.

Hollins Institute, Va.

This well known institution, ripe in years and experience, is for the exclusive use of young women. Here the female mind and body are given that careful attention and development they require and demand. As a school for young women, it has always elicited the highest commendation, and its many years of work, well done, should commend it to all who are looking for or are considering a place of education for their own daughters or young women under their guardianship. The courses of study and discipline at Hollins Institute have advanced with the demands of the times so far as the judgment of the institution recognize that those demands are in keeping with scholarship and a high standard of morality, for both of which this school is eminently noted. There is no other school in this country offering better facilities, giving higher training and having more accomplished instructors than Hollins Institute.

The continued increase in the number of young ladies in attendance at this college is evidence of the satisfaction of its patrons with its management. The equipment consists in part of 38 upright and 2 concert grand pianos, a six-inch object glass, Alvan Clark & Sons telescope, and probably the best chemical and physical laboratory of any female college in the South. With its 6 male and 11 female professors, it offers unusual advantages for mental training, and the lovely grounds, ornamented with two fountains, a lily pond and beautiful shrubs and flowers, is conducive to happiness and æsthetic culture. The dormitories are home-like and equipped with all modern conveniences. We believe that Louisiana girls would find the climate here pleasant and healthful. College Songs

EDITED BY

THOMAS G. SHEPARD,

Instructor of Glee Clubs for Twenty-five Years.

TWO EDITIONS:

Mixed Voices. Male Voices.

PRICE OF EITHER EDITION 50 CENTS.

While all books of this class before have included, beside the songs supposed to be found in them, many not at all to be classed as college songs, this contains only those that have been adopted for use in some college or university, either by its students as campus songs, or by its Glee Club as concert pieces, or both.

It includes the present songs of a larger number of different colleges than any book yet offered. Among them are several very popular glees that have never before appeared in print.

Both editions contain a complete and easy piano accompaniment to every song, so that a player not accustomed to reading from vocal parts, may be in a position to accompany the voices without difficulty.

WHEN I HAVE TIME.

When I have time, so many things I'll do
To make life happier and more fair
For those whose lives are crowded now with care,
I'll help to lift them from their low despair,
When I have time.

When I have time, the friend I love so well
Shall know no more these weary toiling days,
I'll lead her feet in pleasant paths always,
And cheer her heart with words of sweetest praise,
When I have time.

When you have time! The friend you hold so dear
May be beyond the reach of all your sweet intent,
May never know that you so kindly meant
To fill her life with sweet content,
When you had time.

Now is the time! Ah, friend, no longer wait
To scatter loving smiles and words of cheer,
To those around whose lives are now so dear,
They may not need you in the coming year—
Now is the time.

Genuine Panaceas for Trouble.

Harper's Bazar has a good article on occupation as a never-failing panacea for trouble. Illustrating it, the writer says that idleness is the greatest foe to happiness, and work is the most undoubted comforter and helper in times of depression and sorrow. The Bazar gives an instance of a woman of wealth and luxury, of whom sympathizing friends said, "If she had to go out as a laundress, there would be hope for her; but she has nothing to do but to sit still, bewail herself, and lament the day she was born." Discreetly the caution is given, that work must be a weapon in one's hand, not a whip held over one's head. With this qualification, loneliness, bitterness, ennui, grief yield to this medicine of daily occupation.

Count Tolstoi has recently written a paper, however, to show that work becomes a great evil when, like dissipation, it shuts out from the mind the contemplation of the higher spiritual realities and diverts attention from the great question of personal responsibility. If work is pursued chiefly for the sake of oblivion, it has no pre-eminence over any other form, except the incidental benefits it produces. Yet the spiritual consolations of religion, without work, unless, idleness be enforced by disease or weakness, are not adequate to the needs of a wounded spirit. The two must unite, communion with God, and occupation pursued because of its results. Then in the necessary intervals from work the spirit does not sink into dejection, and work itself becomes a means of grace.—New York Advocate.

One Girl's Work.

A few years ago a little girl applied to a pastor in one of our large cities for admission into his Sunday-school. She was told that the classes were so full that there was no room for her, and that the church was so small that no more classes could be organized. Much disappointed, the little girl began to save pennies (her family were poor) for the purpose of enlarging the church, in order that she and other children like her might be accommodated. She told no one of her ambitious purpose, however; so that when the pastor of this church was called to her bedside a few months later he saw nothing unusual, only a frail child of six and a half years.

The little sufferer died, and a week later there were found in her tattered red pocketbook (which had been her savings bank) fifty-seven pennies and a scrap of paper, which told in childish print the story of her ambition and the purpose of her self-denial.

The story of that little pocketbook and its contents, and of the unfaltering faith of the little owner, got abroad. It touched the heart of saint and sinner alike. Her inspiration became a prophecy, and men labored and women sang and children saved to aid in its fulfillment. These fifty seven pennies became the nucleus of a fund which in six years grew to two hundred and fifty thousand dollars; and to-day this heroine's picture (life size) hangs conspicuously in the hallway of a college building at which fourteen hundred students attend, and connected with which there are a church capable of seating eight thousand, and a hospital for children named for the good Samaritan, and a Sunday-school room large enough to accommodate all the girls and boys who have yet asked to enter it.

A fairy story? It reads like one, but happily it is not one. The little girl's name was Hattie May Wiatt, and the splendid institutions described are located in Philadelphia.—Harper's Round Table.

Courage to Live.

A cheap sentimentality is apt to look upon him who, in full possession of his faculties, destroys his own life as being a man of courage. But he is not. He is a slave of cowardice. He seeks in death a way of escape from the duties and responsibilities of life. Was it an act of courage on the part of a man the other day to remove himself from the world while three small children were dependent upon him? By no means. It would have been courageous and praiseworthy in the deluded and disheartened man to have continued the struggle for the sake of those who were dependent upon him, but for him to desert them in their hour of sore need was cowardly. Courage is of various sorts, but the sort that endures hardship for the sake of others wins the applause of men and angels. The Sunday-School Times said some time ago, "All men admire courage, but not all men know true courage when they see it. One temperament demands courage for the performance of an act which to another temperament calls for no display of this virtue. No two persons, indeed, can be exactly estimated from the same sort of action. Many a child displays indomitable courage in going down a dark hallway when that hallway is peopled with specters of the child's fancy. Many a person, on the other hand, commits suicide, not because of the courage in meeting death, but because of the want of courage in meeting life. As Carlyle says, 'The courage that dares only die is, on the whole, no sublime affair. * * * The courage we desire and prize is not the courage to die decently, but to live manfully.'"—New York Advocate.

Those Astounding Adverbs.

One evening a gentleman came home with a budget of news. An acquaintance had failed in business. He spoke of the incident as "deliciously sad." He had ridden up town in a car with a noted wit, whom he described as "horribly entertaining," and, to clap the climax, he spoke of the butter that had been set before him at a country hotel as "divinely rancid."

The young people stared, and the oldest daughter said: "Why, papa, I should think that you were out of your head."

"Not in the least, my dear," he said pleasantly. "I'm merely trying to follow the fashion. I worked out 'divinely rancid' with a good deal of labor. It seems to me rather more effective than 'awfully sweet.' I mean to keep up with the best of you hereafter. And now," he continued, "let me help you to a piece of this exquisitely tough beef."

Adverbs, he says, are not so fashionable as they were in his family.—Boston Post.

The amount of volitional energy required every day to meet the temptations which face the men and women of our day can not be computed in any mathematical way. The most gifted imagination can not conceive of the terrific difficulties which have to be overcome in order to nobility of life. Historic heroes are most of them less worthy of our plaudits than scores and hundreds of those whom we pass daily without a nod of recognition. Character, if secured at all, has to be cut out of the flinty rock. The sculptor disentombs his angel by laborious processes. The bright jewel of a lustrous life, which shines like a diadem in the light of heaven, gains its glory only through long processes of polishing, which demand undying resolution and continuous self-sacrifice. In the work of securing human perfection, it is an unspeakable blessing to know that God is infinitely more desirous of such perfection than we can be. Our temptations are legion. We are tempted to self-indulgence. Drifting is easy. The ascent of a swift current is fraught with more or less of danger and always accompanied with toil. We are tempted to lend our ears to defamers and give comfort to reputation-destroyers. We are tempted to lend our tongues to the base work of rolling on slanderous utterances. We are tempted to retaliation, to carping criticism, to indifference where the call of common humanity should awaken our speedy assistance. We are tempted to pride, self-assertion, presumption, Pharisaism, covetousness, and especially to indulgence in pleasures which cloy and seek a temporary satisfaction which is without the quality of permanence.—A. Z. Conrad, in New York Observer.

Misjudged.

Speaking of how we often misjudge people's motives, and how, sometimes, because we see at the moment but a part of what they are about, we reach harsh conclusions, The Quiver cites the following: "Among the lots put up at auction was one, 'A pretty pair of crutches.' In the crowd was a poor crippled boy, and the crutches were just the thing for him. He was the first to bid for them. An elderly, well-dressed man bid against him. There were cries of 'Shame! shame!' in the crowd. The boy bid again, and so did the old gentleman. The boy bid all he had, but the old gentleman outbid him once more, and the poor little lad turned away with tears in his eyes. The crutches were knocked down to the elderly man, who, to the great surprise of all, took them to the poor little cripple and made him a present of them. The crowd were now as enthusiastic in their praise as they had been in their abuse, but the old gentleman heard nothing of it; he had disappeared even before the little boy could thank him. To judge by a part is often to misjudge the whole."—Everybody's Magazine.

There is one sin which, it seems to me, is everywhere and by everybody underestimated, and quite too much overlooked in valuation of character. It is the sin of fretting. It is common as air, as speech—so common that unless it rises above its usual monotone we do not even observe it. Watch any ordinary coming together of people, and see how many minutes it will be before somebody frets—that is, makes more or less complaining statement of something or other which probably everyone in the room, or in the car, or on the street corner, it may be, knew before, and probably nobody can help. Why say anything about it? It is cold, it is hot, it is wet, it is dry; somebody has broken an appointment, ill-cooked a meal; stupidity or bad faith somewhere has resulted in discomfort. There are plenty of things to fret about. It is simply astonishing how much annoyance may be found in the course of every day's living, even of the simplest, if one keeps a sharp eye on that side of things. Even Holy Writ says we are prone to "trouble as sparks fly upward." But even to the sparks flying upward, in the blackest of smoke, there is a blue sky above; and the less time they waste on the road the sooner they will reach it. Fretting is all time wasted on the road.—Helen Hunt.

For Over Fifty Years

MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP has been used for children teething. It soothes the child, softens the gums, allays all pain, cures wind colic, and is the best remedy for Diarrhœa. Twenty-five cents a bottle.

"Do not drift into the critical habit." writes Ruth Ashmore in the Ladies' Home Journal. "Have an opinion, and a sensible one, about everything, but when you come to judge people remember that you see very little of what they really are, unless you winter and summer with them. Find the kindly, lovable nature of the man who knows little of books. Look for the beautiful self-sacrifice made daily by some woman who knows nothing about pictures, and teach yourself day in and day out to look for the best in everything. It is the every-day joys and sorrows that go to make up life. It is not the one great sorrow, nor the one intense joy; it is the accumulation of the little ones that constitute living; so do not be critical of the little faults, and do be quick to find the little virtues and to praise them. So much that is good in people dies for want of encouragement. As I said before, have an opinion, and a well-thought-out one, about everything that comes into your life, but do not have too many opinions about people. Their hearts are not open books, and as you must be judged yourself some day, give them the kindest judgment now."

The Rev. Theo. L. Cuyler says: "For two reasons every conscientious young man ought to pledge himself to total abstinence. First, for his own sake, for he does not know how soon he may become a tippler. Secondly, for the sake of others whom he may tempt to ruin by his example. The reform of inebriates is difficult and rare. The one time to stop drinking treacherous intoxicants is to stop before you begin."

It is not by turning over libraries, but by repeatedly perusing and intently contemplating a few great models, that the mind is best disciplined.—Macaulay.

HYGIENE.

Effect of Cold Feet on the Health.

Cold feet, we are told by The Hospital, mean cooled blood, a lowered bodily temperature, and hence, often, pain and illness. The moral is obvious: we should at all hazards keep the feet warm. The journal named expatiates on this text as follows:

"The difference between cold feet and warm is a difference which has an important effect upon the general temperature of the body, and an equally important effect upon both health and comfort, alike in the night and in the day. The blood, propelled by the heart, circulates, as we know, throughout the whole body. If a considerable portion of the body, like the two feet, is very cold, the warm blood has to pass through a large cold area, and it becomes cooled in passing. But, in the case of cold feet, not only is the area cold, but the flow of blood, in consequence of the remoteness of the feet from the cardiac pump, is at its lowest. There is, consequently, the element of time to be considered; and when this is considered, it is perceived how very much really cold feet may lower the whole temperature of the blood, and so of the body. On the other hand, when the feet are warm, very warm, they will not lower, but actually raise, the temperature of blood, and thus make a very important difference indeed in the warmth of the whole body. Thinking of these things, one may readily see why a small degree of coldness in the feet may produce in some persons colic pains, and even diarrhœa, while a greater degree of coldness in the feet may bring about in others even a typhlitis or peritonitis. Now, it is not worth while for any of us in the wintry season to run the risks of serious discomfort and of grave illness if we can prevent such risks. As a matter of fact we can and ought to do so both by day and by night. In these columns we have often advised the aged and those of feeble circulation to resort to a hot bottle or to wrap their feet in flannel during the hours of sleep. Our more immediate purpose at the present time is to suggest the necessity for and a means of keeping the feet warm during the day for persons who have to stand in the street, sit in ill-warmed offices, or travel by train, and so on. Snow-shoes, india-rubber snow-shoes, lined with skin or even flannel, furnish a sovereign remedy for cold feet. The writer has been surprised at the boldness with which certain aged people, gouty men, and delicate women of his acquaintance have faced the recent snowy and slushy roads when armed, or rather 'footed,' with snow-shoes. The means proposed are simple, and as scientific as simple; but the comfort and safety secured by their use can not be valued in money."—Literary Digest.

PRICE'S CREAM BAKING POWDER

MOST PERFECT MADE.

A pure Grape Cream of Tartar Powder. Free from Ammonia, Alum or any other adulterant.

40 YEARS THE STANDARD

How to Find Out

Fill a bottle or common glass with your water and let it stand twenty-four hours; a sediment or settling indicates an unhealthy condition of the kidneys; if it stains your linen, it is evidence of kidney trouble; too frequent desire to pass it or pain in the back is also convincing proof that the kidneys and bladder are out of order.

WHAT TO DO.

There is comfort in the knowledge so often expressed, that Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney remedy, fulfills every wish in relieving pain in the back, kidneys, liver, bladder and every part of the urinary passages. It corrects inability to hold urine and scalding pain in passing it, or bad effects following use of liquor, wine or beer, and overcomes that unpleasant necessity of being compelled to get up many times during the night to urinate. The mild and the extraordinary effect of Swamp-Root is soon realized. It stands the highest for its wonderful cures of the most distressing cases. If you need a medicine, you should have the best. Sold by druggists; price, fifty cents and one dollar. You may have a sample bottle and pamphlet both sent free by mail. Mention the CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE and send your address to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. The publisher of this paper guarantees the genuineness of this offer.

Low Vacation Rates.

Every day from June 1 to September 30, inclusive, the Queen and Crescent Route will sell excursion tickets at low rates to the Mountains and Seashore; return limit October 31, 1897.

This route offers tourists the most perfect train service in the South. Through Pullman sleepers on solid vestibuled trains with latest appointments.

Inquire of your nearest Queen and Crescent ticket agent for descriptive matter, rates and full information.

BEAUTY IS WEALTH.

Beauty is as essential to a woman as any other quality with beauty of form and feature comes beauty of mind and character. Physical beauty is a rounded form, the brightly tinted cheek, the vivacious eye, a certain ease and grace of manner, which indicates a superabundance of physical strength. Very few women possess these qualities, but very many more might possess them who do not. If you feel that you are losing vitality, losing your beauty losing your strength, if you feel that your face which once was plump and rosy, is becoming thin and sallow, that wrinklee (which are the terror to all pretty women) are beginning to appear, take our advice and try that greatest of discoveries, the "MASSAOE FACE CUP," which is the only means known to science to convert a thin and sallow expression into a plump and rosy face. It will transform a face with plain or homely features into an expression of grace and beauty. Physiology teaches us that if we would be strong, we must exercise the muscles which need the developing. Exercise causes the blood to rush to that part of the body called into action, the muscle is fed and strengthened by the fresh blood and will, therefore, develop.

The Massage Cup will do for the face, when properly applied, by contracting and relaxing the muscles, what exercise will do for the other parts of the body.

If you would have a pinkish complexion, if you would like a face plump and rosy, if you would like to remove that "horrid" wrinkle, send One Dollar to us and we will mail you the great "MASSAOE FACE CUP," with full directions for its use. Remember, you can have your money back, if you say so.

ROGILLIO—Died in West Feliciana, La., April 29, 1897, JAMES ROGILLIO, aged eighty years.

To him the summons was not unexpected. For many years he had been trying to walk in the footsteps of the Master. Just a few days before his departure he was heard to say: "There is only one tie that binds me here. It will be so hard for my poor wife to be left alone." He was sick only a few days. In the dying hour he held out his hand, saying: "Come, mother; we will go together. The great river is crossed; we have only a little stream more; I will help you over." It seems as if God, in his goodness and love, had given him this presentiment to soothe the parting moments. That very night the dear one who, for forty years, had shared life's joys and sorrows with him, was taken suddenly and seriously ill. Only two short days more of suffering passed ere she joined him on the other shore.

His wife, Mrs. SARAH JANE ROGILLIO, was born in Natchez, Miss., Dec. 25, 1830. Her maiden name was Paine. At the early age of fourteen she was married to J. M. Baker; six years later left a widow. August 14, 1857, she was married to James Rogillio. She was the mother of ten children—three by the first marriage, seven by the second. Buried two of the first family, three of the second.

She united with the M. E. Church when quite young; was devoted to her church, her children, and her God.

When all was over with her husband she said to me of her children: "I feel thankful that God has let me live to nurse him through. Now I am ready to go." She peacefully passed away Sunday morning, May 2, 1897.

It is hard—oh, so hard!—for us to give them up, dear father and mother; but we realize that it is not an enemy who hath done this but a kind and loving Father, who chastens not in wrath. God help us to so live that we may meet, an unbroken family, in that bright land where parting shall be no more.

ONE OF THEIR CHILDREN.

HYATT—Capt. C. J. HYATT was born Jan. 1, 1833, in Lauderdale county, Ala.; came to East Port, Miss., about the year 1860, and was engaged in merchandising. He was a soldier in the Confederate Army, and rendered faithful service, rising to the rank of captain. At the close of the war he returned to his native state.

He was married to Miss Mary Thomas Price in Summerville, Ala., Aug. 25, 1863. In 1866 he came to Tuka, Miss., and accepted a position as bookkeeper for Hemmerly & Price. In 1873 he went into the mercantile business for himself. He was converted and joined the M. E. Church, South, in 1862 under the preaching of Rev. J. H. Mitchell. His first wife died in 1868, leaving him with seven little children. In 1885 he was married to Miss Ida Lee White, of Lauderdale, Texas. In 1889 the Bank of Iuka was organized, and he was made president, which position he held until his death, March 7, 1897.

As a husband, he was devoted and faithful; as a father, affectionate and gentle; as a neighbor, just, congenial, helpful; as a citizen, loyal and upright; as a Christian, he was a consistent member of the church, faithful to her vows, safe counselor as steward, and much beloved as a Sunday-school teacher; a man of even temper and sterling worth, gifted with the graces of faith, patience, and love. He loved ones with unbounded confidence leaned upon his strong arm and safe counsel. He daily consecrated himself and family to God in prayer. J. H. SHUMAKER, P. C.

MCCORMICK—Miss BERTHA MCCORMICK, daughter of our distinguished physician, Dr. Frank McCormick, of Vossburg, was in attendance at E. M. F. C. of Mississippi when she was taken ill. Her father brought her home, where she gradually grew worse, and, in spite of all that human skill could do, died May 14.

She was a young lady of remarkable beauty, possessing many noble traits of character, of which modesty (the greatest of virtues) was predominant; that, joined to her extreme sweetness and amiability, made her a favorite with all. "To know her was to love her," and her gracious smiles of greeting to all alike, irrespective of rank or color, will be missed sadly. She was courteous, attentive, and polite. It must be a comfort to the bereaved family to know she was willing and ready to go. She was possessed of that rare fruit of religious character which consists in doing good to all rather than in mere pretensions, her good example shining brightly, a light to all.

They have our deepest sympathies as well as all her schoolmates. May they be comforted with the thought that:

"Some day, when work is o'er and ease is won,
They with folded hands can wait,
While their eyes look up, and through the sunset bars
They'll see her at the gate."

GEO. L. HARBOUR, M. D.

BRANCH—Mrs. REBECCA HUNNICUTT BRANCH, whose maiden name was Fletcher, was born in Nashville, Tenn., Sept. 23, 1808, and died at her home near Washington, Adams county, Miss., April 8, 1897.

She came to Adams county with her parents when a child, while the State was a Territory, and lived in the county until death summoned her home.

She was married to Dr. John Branch by Rev. John Burris, Feb. 7, 1828. Dr. Branch preceded her to the land of the blessed a number of years.

Sister Branch was the mother of three children. All of these lived to be grown. Two of them had gone before, and were waiting at the beautiful gate for mother. She was a devoted wife. Although the doctor had been gone a number of years, and her reason had partially gone, she retained the memory of the doctor, and often spoke of him and expressed a desire to do those things that were pleasing to him during his life.

She joined the M. E. Church in 1846, and embraced religion at the same time, under the ministry of Drs. Drake and Winans. Her pew was always filled until disease and old age forbade. She loved the house of God, and, like David, was always glad to go into the same.

Her home was the home of the preacher, and he was always made to feel at home around her. She was a good neighbor, always looking after the afflicted and distressed. She was loved by all. She leaves one child, a widowed daughter, and a number of grandchildren, with the community, to mourn her loss. Allow me to say to you, loved ones: Weep not as those who have no hope. Your mother and grandmother is not dead, but sleepeth. D. F. GUICE, P. C.

MCCALEB—Whereas, An all-wise Providence, who doeth all things well, has lately removed from our Sabbath-school and from the church militant to the Sabbath school and church triumphant one of our brightest and best scholars, one of our most consistent members, and it is but right and proper that we express our appreciation of her worth and purity of character; therefore, be it

Resolved, That in the death of MARY MCCALEB, Harriston Sabbath-school lost one of its most punctual and conscientious scholars, the Methodist Church one of its purest and Christ-like members, fond parents a most devoted and dutiful daughter, their children a kind and careful sister, and we, her associates, a guileless, considerate friend.

Resolved, Never was the adage, "The good die early," better exemplified, for Mary, being ready and fit for the Master's kingdom, was soon taken safely into the pearly gates of the celestial city ere the contaminating influences of this wicked, sinful earth soiled the innocence and purity of her spotless character.

Resolved, That while deeply deploring our great loss, we meekly bow to the will of God, and will henceforth try to love and serve him as Mary did, for, as the Master said of one other, "She hath done what she could."

Resolved, That we tender the bereaved family and relatives our heartfelt sympathy, and that these resolutions be spread upon the Minutes of our Sabbath-school.

FLOWERS—Written in memory of FOSTER L. FLOWERS, whose gentle spirit took its flight from the home of his parents at Auburn, Miss., Jan. 3, 1897.

No sweeter blossom ever grew to cheer the hearts of more devoted parents than little Foster. Not theirs alone, but many were the hearts made sad by his untimely death, and desolate that home for a season. Though young in years, by his singular attractiveness of manner he had made many friends, and was the general favorite of both old and young. His unusual quickness of perception made him a play-fellow especially genial and much sought by his companions. But now

"A household band is broken,
One little form is missed.
When sweet good-nights are spoken,
And rosy lips are kissed,
When evening prayers are said,
'I lay me down to sleep,'
This dear one in a narrow bed
Sleeps a long, deep sleep.

"And when the night is ended,
And morning brings the glee
Of childish voices blended
In playful harmony,
His voice can not be heard,
So far beyond the skies,
Beyond the sound of mortal ear
It blends in paradise."

M. A. DAVIDSON.

BENTON—Mrs. SARAH A. BENTON died at the home of her father, James Crawford, of Hineston, La., May 27, 1897, in the thirty-eighth year of her age.

She moved from Mississippi with her parents to Rapides parish, La., in early childhood, where she resided to her death.

In January, 1883, she was married to Leroy Benton, from which marriage sprang four children, of whom three and the father still survive.

She was converted and joined the M. E. Church, South, when quite young, and it was always her chief delight to contribute in some way to the interests of her church, and with earnest zeal and willing hands she entered joyfully into all its enterprises for the salvation of souls.

She was a model wife and mother and a devoted Christian, and was kind to all with whom she came in contact. In her long and painful illness she never murmured. She had no fear of death, but welcomed the message when it came. Her spirit is praising God in the home of the blest. May her loved ones meet her where parting will be no more!

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of Testimonials.

THERE is a right way to paint and a wrong way. The right way is to have the best paint—Pure White Lead (see list of genuine brands) and Linseed Oil—applied by a practical painter. The wrong way is to get some mixture about which you know nothing and apply it yourself or have some inexperienced, irresponsible person do it.

Senator Caffery spoke for over an hour, on July 2, in the Senate, in which he made another vigorous attack on the sugar trust, and again called attention to the fact that the basis of the drawback estimates on sugar used by the treasury department was the figures furnished by H. O. Havemeyer, of the American Sugar Refining Company.

The most powerful and sensational address ever delivered before the Georgia Bar Association was that made, last week, by Judge Simeon E. He took the almost unprecedented ground that the President of the United States is the greatest despot on earth.

An unusual feature of the fight being made against the confirmation of John Goodnow, of Minneapolis, as consul general to Shanghai, is the number of protests being made to President McKinley and to the Senate by women and women's organizations. Seven W. C. T. U. Unions of the State have wired protests. The ground of this action is the character of the evidence introduced in the divorce suit in which Mr. Goodnow was recently an unsuccessful defendant.

In the litigation between the city and the receiver of the Garbage Company, the latter party claims from the city full pay upon a contract for removing and disposing of garbage in this city, although no service as required by the contract has been rendered. Judge Parlange shows that a sum of $68,000, which had been unlawfully appropriated from the revenues of 1897 to pay certain expenses of 1896, can not be used for such a purpose, and is, therefore, available for emergency use in the removal and disposing of garbage; but he releases from the moneys tied up by order of the court the further sum of $25,000, making a total sum of $93,000 to clean the city.

EVERY LADY SHOULD READ THIS

I will send free a positive cure for all female diseases, peculiar to our sex. A simple home treatment, a common-sense remedy that never fails. Free with valuable advice.

Mrs. L. HUDNUT, South Bend, Ind.

To reach and win the multitudes outside the church require not more relief committees of philanthropic societies, but more love at the band. These multitudes need not your basket of provision, sent by a servant, so much as they need yourself. They hunger for love more than for bread, and must be reached by Christ, who, like Christ, go about doing good, and possess what Theodore Cuyler says is needful above the world—"religion in shoes." F. Kaeuey.

Hogsett Academy, Danville, Ky.

Parents who are undecided where to send their boys at school can not do better than send them to this splendidly conducted and equipped boarding-school. A school that rises far above the average in everything connected with a boy's mental, moral and physical development and welfare. The stand its boys have taken in Eastern Colleges and Universities, Annapolis and West Point, and the recognition accorded by these Colleges and Universities speak the standing of this Academy.

SABLE AND SILVER.

Sable clouds have silver linings;
Half the globe is always bright;
Flowers we miss when daylight passes
Live by drinking dew at night.

Would we only look above us,
Watch the sky from day to day,
We should find, in every season,
There is more of blue than gray.

In the rear of fleeting storm-clouds
There is set the beauteous bow;
And the rain that spoils our pleasure
Makes the fragrant violets grow.

When the crashing thunder ceases,
How the glad birds sing of trust
In the branches, where the raindrops
Gleam like scattered diamond dust!

When the fierce and stormful Winter
Seems to hold the world in thrall,
Spring is lying 'neath the snowdrifts
Listening for the cuckoo's call.

Look upon the bright side ever;
Better 'tis to sing than sigh;
Downcast eyes see flints and brambles;
Eyes upturned see angels nigh.

Sixth Annual Session of Louisiana Chautauqua.

Last Monday, the fifth, teachers from fifteen parishes met in the Chautauqua auditorium and organized for the month's work. Prof. C. E. Byrd, on the part of the Chautauqua management, gave the teachers a feeling welcome. Then each member of the faculty spoke appropriately of the necessity of teachers striving to progress in their profession, and of the special advantages offered by our Chautauqua. Prof. Himes, State Institute conductor, said that it is a rare treat to leave for a month the cares of the school-room, the dust and noise of busy city, and come to the Chautauqua, where the trees are beautiful, and the air is filled with sweet odors, and the teachers can become acquainted and form friendships that will strengthen them as teachers and add to their pleasure and interest in life.

Prof. R. L. Himes, institute conductor, is manager and teacher of geometry; Prof. C. E. Byrd, principal of the Shreveport High School, is giving some interest lessons in the normal method of singing; Prof J. E. Keeny, principal New Iberia High School, has charge of the students in algebra, arithmetic, and grammar; Prof. W. Edgar Taylor, of the Industrial School, teaches science; Prof. E. L. Stephens, Louisiana State Normal School, has the psychology, and Prof. F. H. Harris, principal of Opelousas High School, has literature. Each teacher is doing his work with great skill, and it is gratifying to see that all the teachers attending are deeply interested and doing their work faithfully.

One of the most interesting features of the school is Miss Schuster's model school. Miss Schuster is by nature a primary teacher. Little children love her as soon as they hear her speak. It is a happy scene to see her surrounded by the little boys and girls, whose eyes are sparkling with delight because they have found something interesting to do.

Monday evening the teachers met in the auditorium and listened to delightful talks from Mrs. Williams, "Mother of the Chautauqua," and Prof. Himes. Mrs. Williams spoke of the Chautauqua's history, and how its growth has been a necessity for Louisiana teachers. Prof. Himes held up to the teachers the life of Bishop Vincent, in beautiful language. Their speeches were just what the teachers needed to fill them with inspiration and love for the month's work. The next day everyone went to work with a will, and the will grows with each day's work. Every lesson is a treat; you can almost see the teachers growing in their work.

Those who expected to find hot weather out here on these high hills have been pleasantly disappointed. Nearly every day a refreshing rain falls.

One of the most important features of this Summer school is the good feeling existing among the teachers. Each teacher seems determined that everyone shall have a delightful time. But who could be associated daily with the genial managers and Prof. Himes, and not enjoy life?

The typical Chautauqua spirit is manifested everywhere—in the classroom, on the campus, under the beeches at the springs, the same cordial, courteous, friendly intent is shown.

It is pleasant to see the guests, among whom a large per cent. are teachers, gathered on the long hotel galleries engaged in animated conversation. In one corner a dignified young lady amuses a circle by telling funny stories. In another corner sits a tall young man talking to a short young lady. They seem to be having a nice time.

On off nights there are funny games, calculated to make the pessimist laugh and grow fat.

A regular series of Chautauqua entertainments, consisting of musical, elocutionary and literary attractions, are arranged for the season. In addition to these attractive features is a fine course of platform lectures. The first lecture was delivered yesterday, at 11:30, in the auditorium by Hon. Luther Manship, of Jackson, Miss. It was not in any sense a lecture, but a song and story recital full of humor, pathos and eloquence. Mr. Manship's character delineation is inimitable. He is achieving a great reputation in this line, and as an entertainer of a high order has few equals.

Prof. Chas. Lane, of Atlanta, Ga., the great Southern humorist, is dated for the fifteenth and sixteenth. Mr. Lane is beyond all question one of the most natural and spontaneous wits in America. He has an inexhaustible fund of stories, illustrating types of Georgia life, which he tells as no one else can.

July 16, Press Day, is a red-letter occasion, when Louisiana journalists occupy the platform, and are royally entertained.

Sunday-school Convention of Lincoln, Pa., and Ruston, will be held in the Chautauqua auditorium to-morrow, beginning at 9:30 o'clock. Mr. R. O. Alexander, of Monroe, field secretary of the State, will organize the work and deliver an address. The Sunday-school promises to be interesting and enthusiastic.

Dr. L. P. Bowen, of Monroe, will preach at 11 o'clock.

And so the Chautauqua, as a Christianizing as well as educational agent, grows in usefulness each season.

July 9, 1897.

Brookhaven District Conference.

The Conference convened in Hazlehurst, Miss., June 24, 1897. Rev. E. H. Mounger, P. E., faithfully and impartially filled the president's chair, and under his directing hand the work of the Conference was made so interesting that nearly all of the members remained through the last service.

H. C. Brown was elected secretary, and was ably assisted in the work by Rev. L. E. Alford.

Every pastor save one was present, and he (Rev. M. L. Burton) was confined to his bed.

Every charge in the district save one was represented by at least one lay delegate. The majority of the charges had two delegates present.

Rev. J. W. Chambers, president of Whitworth Female College, was present, and not only represented the claims of the college, but as chairman of Committee on Publications rendered special service to the Conference.

The various interests of the church were discussed freely, and reports received from every charge. These reports showed, on the whole, an increase in spirituality and in attendance upon the ordinances of the church, financial condition better than at same time last year, quite a number of conversions and additions to the church, improvement in condition of parsonages, several churches repaired, completed preparations for building several new churches, and an intense zeal for the upbuilding of God's kingdom.

We do not intend to convey the idea that the district has reached the ideal, but that we are pressing towards it. There are many points at which we need quickening, especially touching the Epworth League, the Sunday-school Missionary Society, the Woman's Parsonage and Home Mission Society, and the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society; and we think that the reports and exhortations from the committees appointed in these institutions of the church will produce the desired result.

Prof. R. S. Ricketts, of Millsaps College, was present, and gave a very interesting account of the work of the college during the past year, and a bright prophecy for the future.

Rev. J. W. McLaurin earnestly presented the claims of the American Bible Society, and his speech will, doubtless, be an inspiration to many pastors when we present this cause to our people.

The licenses of ten local preachers were renewed. Licenses to preach were granted to Robert Z. Germany, S. N. Young, and J. E. Gray.

Henry A. Gatlin and Lucius E. Alford were recommended to the Annual Conference for admission on trial.

Summit was selected as the place for holding the next session of the Conference.

Mr. T. L. Venable, Dr. J. T. Butler, Judge R. P. Willing, and Mr. J. E. Carruth were elected delegates to the Annual Conference, with J. T. Suddoth, T. A. Lee, and Dr. B. D. Hennington, alternates.

The preaching during the session of the Conference was done by Revs. W. B. Lewis, C. McDonald, J. M. Morse, J. W. McLaurin, J. W. Tinnin, and your scribe.

Several papers, reports and resolutions were read and adopted, some of which were ordered printed in the ADVOCATE. The report from Committee on Publications will show the sentiments of the Conference toward our organ. H. C. BROWN, Sec.

Beauregard, Miss., July 2, 1897.

Mansfield Female College.

As one of the Visiting Committee to Mansfield College, I desire to relate some impressions received while in attendance at the recent commencement exercises.

The year has been one of decided improvement in every respect. Through the indefatigable labors of Rev. J. L. P. Sheppard, President and Mrs. Sligh improvements have been made in the college property, notably in the erection of a new session hall, neat and commodious, and other work of general repair on other buildings. This work will be carried on during the Summer, so that the opening of the next session will find things in better condition than the close of the last.

The regular college work has given very general satisfaction. We believe that the work done has been thorough and conscientious. The religious tone of the college is marked. An excellent spiritual atmosphere prevails throughout the institution. In a service conducted by the writer this aspect of the work was conspicuous.

We were much gratified by the evidences of interest in the college exhibited by the people of Mansfield. The attendance upon the exercises was large. The Sunday morning audience more than filled the session hall, some being unable to secure seats. And all the various exhibitions down to the close had fine audiences.

Quite a number of the preachers were in attendance: J. L. P. Sheppard, J. A. Miller, J. D. Harper, J. B. Cassity, B. T. Crews, W. F. Henderson, J. M. Brown, P. M. Brown, J. C. Sligh and P. O. Lowery, a goodly company, and all cordially interested in the prosperity of the college.

I desire to commend the college to the patronage of our people, and urge upon all to do what they can towards the further improvement of the buildings. Much remains to be done, and by the cordial co-operation of the friends of Christian education we can succeed. Bro. Sheppard, president of the Board of Trustees, will be glad to receive contributions to this work.

F. N. PARKER.

To the Methodists of Louisiana Who Have Daughters to Educate.

We have heretofore appealed to your loyalty and sense of justice to stand by, support and patronize your own Conference institution of learning, feeling that if you could be induced to do so Mansfield College would be made equal to the very best schools in Southern Methodism.

Now we appeal to your own interest, and give you some facts worthy of consideration.

First, Mansfield is located far out in the hills, between Red and Sabine rivers. The health record of Mansfield can not be excelled anywhere in the State. The altitude is said to be the highest in the State. The college campus embraces about 10 acres of ground, and a more beautiful spot would be hard to find. The buildings are elegant, ample, and comfortable. Never in the history of the college were they in better condition and in a more thorough state of repairs than they will be when the school opens in September.

Since about the first of April from three to twelve workmen have been steadily employed in rebuilding and repairing the buildings of the institution, and at the present carpenters and painters are busy doing work which could not be done while school was in session, and we are determined to leave no stone unturned to have everything ready for the reception of your girls in September.

Our curriculum is abreast of the times, and every one of our faculty are fitted by grace and culture for their positions, and a more thorough Christian institution can not be found in Southern Methodism.

Rates have been reduced to the lowest possible minimum, and the construction of the K. C. and G. railroad, with its depot within less than one third of a mile of our grounds, makes Mansfield College of easy access.

Therefore quit the suicidal policy of sending your girls off to other schools outside of your State, and give your patronage and support to your own institution, and you will have the approbation of God and the answer of a good conscience.

Cordially, J. L. P. SHEPPARD.

Grenada District Conference.

The Grenada District Conference convened at Main Street, Water Valley, July 1, 1897; Rev. H. C. Morehead, P. E., in the chair. The attendance was first class. All the pastors in the district were in attendance, and twenty-seven laymen and local preachers. The delegates elected to the Annual Conference were: O. F. Lawrence, R. W. Jones, John Woods, W. M. Boddie. Alternates: G. D. Shands and T. H. Haines. The interest of the work of the district was reviewed and carefully looked after by the presiding elder.

The reports of the pastors of the district shows a decided advance in all church work. We were honored by the genial presence of Bro. W. T. Browning, L. P., of the Columbus district; W. O. Saddler, L. P., of the Corinth district, and W. C. Black, editor of the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE. We are working and praying for a great revival in the entire district.

Epworth League Echoes.

BY REV. THOMAS B. CLIFFORD.

Ere this meets the eye of our readers the third International "Convention" of Epworth Leagues will be in session at Toronto, Canada.

We heard a few days since of a young Jewess who would accompany some of the Leaguers. Let us pray that she may accept Christ before the great Conference closes.

En route to Artesia to attend the Columbus District Conference we met Bro. J. E. Thomas and family. He gave a good report of the League at Greenville. Not a single meeting had been missed during the high water, and the young people are diligently engaged looking after the sick and poor.

Nearly all of the children in the Starkville Sunday-school are members of the church. What an opportunity (and likewise a responsibility) for the League to thoroughly train these young people for God and the church!

The Committee on Epworth Leagues brought in a good report at the recent session of the Columbus District Conference. We appreciated the opportunity afforded to speak with regard to this very important department of church work.

Much was said at this Conference about putting a copy of the Bible into the hands of every Sunday-school scholar. Let us see to it that our children know how to both reverence and use the Word of God. May they read, mark, learn, and inwardly digest it!

The newly organized League at Winona is doing good work. Pastor Dye is assisting his young people in planning for much work that will be both pleasant and profitable to all who participate.

The only way to take care of our young people in the church is to organize them into an Epworth League, and then put them all to work. Arrest the growth of a tree, and it dies; arrest the growth of a Christian, and he will backslide. "Herein is my Father glorified, that ye bear much fruit."

We trust that the Toronto Conference may result in a kindling of fresh enthusiasm for the work, and we shall pray that every Leaguer who attends will return a more efficient worker. Let us make it a season of spiritual refreshing, and to this end let every Leaguer pray. Next week we will furnish an account of the trip.

TOPIC FOR JULY.

ST. PAUL IN SOCIAL RELATIONS.

JULY 18.—AS A PREACHER.

(Gal. i, 1; II. Cor. xi, 23; Acts xvii, 22; xx, 27.)

1. Paul's call to preach was from God. Men had nothing to do with it. He held a commission from the Sanhedrim to persecute the church, but his orders were countermanded by higher authority. He acknowledges that authority and stands ready to obey when he asks, "Lord, what wilt thou have me to do?" Henceforth his course is directed from on high. No obstacles are able to check the mighty onward flow of his life. "Thus saith the Lord" was a sufficient reason for him. His complete surrender to God issued in the grandest life of man the world has seen.

2. Christ was to him more than compensation for all that he lost for His sake. He never grieved over the bright prospects given up for Christ's sake, but counted them less than nothing "that he might win Christ." A life of suffering with Christ was infinitely better than a life of luxury and ease without him.

3. (a) He was direct in his preaching. Usually spoke in the second person. Standing on Mars Hill, he did not preach at the people in Corinth, but beginning, "Ye men of Athens," he talked to the people before him. (b) This sermon could not have been preached at any other place. It was not one of a select repertoire. It met present local conditions. If a sermon is a means to an end, then this is the best type; and the grand sermon of pointless generalities, applicable anywhere and any time, is the poorest. A preacher should study his people as much as he does his Bible in order to make a timely and appropriate use of the truth.

4. (a) He declared "all the counsel of God," no matter what the consequences were to himself or others. No man could hold him responsible for his loss. "Repentance toward God and faith toward our Lord Jesus Christ" was his theme. He dwelt upon reward and punishment, appealing to love and fear—preaching a full gospel. (b) His preaching was both doctrinal and practical. He realized the necessity of the framework of doctrine for the support of spiritual life. He was not satisfied, however, with the conviction of the intellect, but always sought to transmute the conviction into conduct, thus completing the circle of life.

5. In the prosecution of his work he was undaunted by the persecutions heaped upon him. He was scourged, imprisoned, made to fight with wild beasts; but none of these things moved him. He was willing to suffer for Christ; yea, he "gloried in tribulation." He was willing to do Christ's work, no matter what it was, and he never thought of the consequences. His zeal for the work was unquenchable by the world's persecutions. God give us more of the Pauline spirit!

The picnic, the picnic! Where is the picnic?

There are over four hundred Leaguers in the city.

The next meeting of the Union League will be held at Rayne Memorial.

President White, of the State League, will soon call a meeting of the Executive Committee to transact important business.

The president of each League was appointed a solicitor to take up a collection for the Gonidsboro Church. Let them remember this.

There were only four preachers present at Union meeting. Enthusiasm begets enthusiasm, interest begets interest, life begets life. See the point?

Tchoupitoulas League is doing good work through its Charity and Help Department. It has a large and needy field to cover. The example of this department of the Carrollton League in giving a pound party at a poor home is worthy of emulation.

At the meeting of the Union League, Thursday night, the following officers were elected for the next half year: P. H. Fontaine, president; W. B. Thomson, first vice-president; W. R. Klinesmith, second vice-president; Miss Susie Lyons, third vice-president; Willard Cushman, secretary; Miss Elise Ahrens, treasurer; H. W. Knickerbocker, editor. President Fontaine's popularity was attested and his administration endorsed by his unanimous re-election. Reports were received from Carrollton, Rayne Memorial, Louisiana Avenue, Dryades, Tchoupitoulas and Moreau, which showed these Leagues to be doing good work. After the business session the Leaguers were invited down stairs, where refreshments were served. Dryades has a reputation for hospitality, and it was fully sustained on this occasion.

TRUSTING.

Trusting, I come to thee,
Thou Lamb of Calvary;
O, I would ever be
Pure, strong, and true to thee.

Trusting, by faith I see
Where'er thou leadest me,
To follow always thee,
It will be best for me.

Trusting, thy will be mine,
I bow to love divine,
And see love's mercy shine
Through those dear eyes of thine.

Trusting, I bring to thee
What thou hast lent to me;
For time, eternity,
Thy servant I would be.

Trusting my Lord, I bring—
E'en though so small a thing—
All to my precious King,
And to thy cross I cling.

"The Benefits Derived from a Well-Organized Sunday-School."

BY J. R. BINGHAM.

The benefits to be derived from a well-organized Sunday-school are manifold. The present occasion gives opportunity for the statement of a few only.

1. It secures a systematic study of the Bible, substituting for the hurried glancing at the lesson on Sunday morning, or the yawning dawdling over it on Saturday night, a daily study of the text, with a careful scrutiny of the context and all parallel passages and necessary references. This will be followed by a prompt attendance on Sunday morning, teachers and pupils being early in their places. The careful study of the lesson during the week having resulted in saturating the mind and heart, all give earnest attention to the exercises of the hour; and this benefit is further evidenced in the songs used, they having been selected beforehand, and not chased down after the time when the school should have been opened, and is observed in the prayer offered, which voices the present condition, needs and aspirations of the school, and is not the same prayer which the superintendent used before the war. This benefit will be seen in that the entire conduct of the school brings the teaching down to present time conditions, showing the bearing of the truths taught on our own people in their present surroundings.

2. A benefit to be derived from a well-organized Sunday-school is the use of the school as an agency for the promotion of the missionary cause as represented by the Board of Missions. Our Book of Discipline says: "Let every Sunday-school, so far as practicable, be organized into a missionary society, auxiliary to the Board of Missions." Our women have done a great work, and so have our children, in their societies, for which they deserve and have hearty commendation. But a well-organized Sunday-school will work for missions in connection with our Board of Missions. The organization of our church seems to be well-nigh perfect; but that the working thereof can be improved, no one will deny. And here is one department in which improvement can be made.

Again: A well-organized Sunday-school will bind our children to the church, and will secure their loyalty to their own pastor and presiding elder. The members of a well-organized Sunday-school will attend the regular preaching service, and be found in place at the Quarterly Conference. It is a serious reflection on any Sunday-school for its members, after the Sunday-school hour, to go away from the preaching service; and it is a perversion of any agency of the church when such agency becomes a substitute for the church itself, and supplants in the estimation of its members the preaching of the gospel. The paramount authority and teacher in every church is the appointed ministry; and this the ministry dare not vacate, and let no other presume to usurp.

Again: A well-organized Sunday-school will foster the connectional spirit, which is absolutely necessary to the success of Methodism. Other churches are congregational and independent, and may succeed in that way. Not so with Methodism. We must be connectional, or we fail. One of our great needs is the further development and nourishing of a spirit of true, genuine loyalty to the connectional principle of our great church; a spirit which, while ignoring no worthy call, will always give preference to the recognized and organized benevolences of the church as represented by our various Boards, education, church extention, etc.; a spirit that will patronize our own institutions, subscribe and pay for our own church papers, buy and read our own books, and use our own hymn books. But the object of the Sunday-school is the conversion of the pupil and the development and training of Christian character. And here the Sunday school finds its broadest and most inviting field. Indeed, if any agency will successfully prosecute this work, all else may be taken for granted, for it will follow as surely as effect follows cause; and a well-organized Sunday-school will aid in giving us that greatest of all blessings—an intelligent, trained piety in our church membership. And this is a desideratum of this, as it has been of all times. No agency, other than the faithful preaching of a full gospel, is so adapted to develop a healthy, normal, continuous piety, when the tendency in many quarters is to periodicity in religion; when much of popular teaching runs in hyperbole and extravagancy, and discounts the faithful use of the ordinary and stated means of grace, crying, "Lo here!" and "Lo there!"—when in many instances the work of the Spirit seems to be substituted by mere mechanical manuvers, which occasioned, if it did not justify, the following incident: A brother, arriving at the scene of a protracted meeting, asked, "How is the revival progressing?" To which question the answer came: "Oh, fine! fine! I've accepted every proposition they've made yet."

We sometime indulge in criticism of the practice of ritualistic churches because of their manner of observance of Lent, and of their action prior to and following this season. And the periodical piety that gives a big ball, or a wine and card party just before Lent, and during Lent attends special services, and abstains from some of the grosser sins commonly practiced, and from some article of diet, and then, before the echo of the Easter anthem has died away, is busy preparing to again partake, with renewed zest and sharpened appetite, of the broth of hell, which makes of "fasting and abstinence" a farce, and of Easter an occasion for the display of millinery, can not be too severely condemned. But how much better is the periodical piety that is confined to days in July or August, and exhausts itself in rhapsodies during dog days, and leaves no taste for the stated church services, and no strength for regular church work? And if not entirely killed by indifference, the last remnant is danced out in a Christmas hall, or drowned in that of all things most unseemly—a Christmas eggnog.

Now, the benefit of a well organized Sunday-school will be the supplanting of so false and perverted a view of religion by substituting a true idea of spiritual religion, biblical piety; and will correct so base a divorcement of faith and works by establishing the "faith that works by love." A well-organized Sunday-school will instruct our people in the doctrine and polity of our church, thereby fortifying them against the assaults and seductions of any ecclesiastical sheep stealer who may seek to entice them; and will also instruct them in loyalty to their own pastor, so that he will not be put aside for every cheap sensationalist whose chief ability is displayed in the agility with which a congregation can be put through a manual of arms, now holding up one hand, now the other; now standing on the right foot, now on the left. Nothing in this paper is intended, nor will it be understood as being against revivals, but only as a protest against the perversion of revivals, both as to their methods and aims. Converted in a revival meeting a score of years ago, and working in one or more such meetings each year since, palsied be the arm and paralyzed the tongue that would write one sentence or speak one work against them. But jealous for our holy cause, I would protest against the fanaticism that would make the Bible a talisman and prayer a fetich, and would see forever reprobated any tendency to substitute any kind of manipulation for the work of the Holy Spirit, and to make of evangelism a mercenary thing.

Methodism is an organized evangelism. And this protest is not against evangelists, but against professional evangelism, for which there is no place in our economy, and for which, if we are wise, no place will be made. The fact that evangelists with whom we may have had to do were personally good men, and accomplished much good, in no wise proves that we should engraft by law professional evangelism on to our wise economy, or encourage the development thereof without law, to say nothing of in opposition to the law.

I most heartily hold with Dr. Geo. G. Smith that the only way to permanently build up the church is for each pastor to build up his own charge. And a well-organized Sunday-school will help in this work, and will stand for the integrity of our system, especially as represented by our faithful pastors and presiding elders. The passing comet may be more brilliant, and attract more attention by the eccentricity of its movement, but is not to be preferred to the steady light of the fixed star. Dr. Smith also said we lose annually more children from sheer neglect than we gain members from all these big meetings, however successful, so widely advertised. A well-organized Sunday-school will largely correct this evil, will save our children to the church and develop them into intense, loyal, earnest Christians, and build them up in vital goodness, making them polished pillars in the temple of our God.

Orphans' Home.

Report of the committee on the Mississippi Orphans' Home, made to the District Conference of the Grenada district, North Mississippi Conference, in session at Main Street Church, Water Valley, July 1 and 4, 1897.

Whereas, It is apparent from an examination which your committee has made this day into the affairs of the Mississippi Orphans' Home, that further progress in the matter of furnishing and opening the Home will soon be suspended unless additional funds be provided; for the Board of Directors have by resolution decided that they will not go in debt, and there is in the treasury barely enough money to pay the debts already contracted; And, whereas, We learn from the report of Rev. A. F. Watkins, secretary of the Board of Directors of the Mississippi Orphans' Home, as published in the Nashville and NEW ORLEANS Advocates, of July 1, 1897, that the said Board at its late meeting elected Rev. T. B. Clifford as field agent for the Home, subject to the approval of the Bishop in charge; And, whereas, The Bishop has not as yet been able to find a suitable man to serve as supply in the place of Bro. Clifford at Main Street Church, Water Valley; And, whereas, We are informed by said report that the sum of three thousand ($3000) dollars is urgently needed to complete, furnish and open the Home; And, whereas, Your committee recognize the vigorous further promotion of this work as a matter of value and importance scarcely inferior to our most cherished church projects; therefore, be it

Resolved, That we earnestly urge the appointment of Bro. T. B. Clifford to be a field agent of the Orphans' Home from now until the next Annual Conference as soon as a suitable and available supply can be had for the pastorate of Main Street Church, Water Valley.

Resolved, That after a careful inspection of the ground and the buildings for the Home, we highly approve the same, and with pleasure report to the Conference that we believe the expenditure of all funds heretofore made has been wisely and well done; that the building now approaching completion is spacious, suitable and beautiful; that the grounds are elevated, undulating and attractive.

Resolved, That we most heartily commend this institution to all our people and to all charitably disposed people everywhere, and most earnestly appeal to them to continue their gracious support until this Home shall speedily furnish a good religious abiding place for all orphans who need help.

Resolved, That we commend the efforts of the presiding elder of this district and the Bishop in charge for their faithful efforts made in the promotion of this great church enterprise.

Respectfully submitted.

Delegate's Report of the W. F. M. S. at Birmingham.

The nineteenth Annual Session of the Woman's Board of Foreign Missions was held in Birmingham, Ala., June 4–8, 1897. With the three returned missionaries, two candidates, and the editor of our Woman's Missionary Advocate, we had forty-nine present.

As ambassadors of our Lord, we were royally received and given homes where Christian hospitality was extended in his name.

The opening session was one of sweet communion around the table of our Lord, where all partook of the broken body and shed blood in remembrance of him; and a more earnest desire possessed our souls that it should be passed to all—to earth's remotest bounds.

The report of our foreign and home secretary, Mrs. Trueheart, was encouraging. She reports at the close of nineteen years decided progress in the building of this grand spiritual temple. The wise planning, the lofty aim from the foundation stone up, have secured strength and solidity as well as beauty. The sure promise is that the cap-stone will be placed upon it amid shouts of victory.

In Washington, a year ago, the Board pledged an effort to increase our membership to one hundred thousand, and to raise one hundred thousand dollars. While this had not been accomplished, the effort to attain it brought gratifying results, in the fact that 307 new auxiliaries had been organized and 5,731 new members added. An increase of $8,477.31 had been collected. But for the revision of the rolls in nearly all the Conference societies, dropping the non-paying members, the number of members (100,000) might have been attained; yet the secretary highly commended the more accurate reports. The total membership this year is 73,752. Treasurer's report shows $82,880.47; brought forward from last year, $47,564.27; paid out during the year, $100,600.58; appropriated for this year, $91,416; an increase in the demand for missionary literature, showing a greater desire for information was another sign of life that brought encouragement.

We have now 46 regularly appointed missionaries occupying stations in China, Brazil, Mexico, and the Indian Territory. Aiding these, we have 116 assistant teachers and helpers, 12 boarding-schools, 46 day-schools, 2 hospitals, 24 Bible women, over 60 scholarships, and about 4,000 women and children under instruction.

Value of property owned by the Woman's Board is estimated at $266,800 in foreign fields, and the Scarritt Bible and Training-school at $75,000, making a total of $341,800 owned by the W. B. M.

Each field was represented by a "live missionary." From Brazil, Dr. Welling and Miss Lula Ross brought tidings of much good accomplished, but urged the great need of more workers. Dr. Welling told the following story, showing how prejudice had been overcome. Some years ago a missionary was sent to the cities of Brazil to distribute Bibles. Thinking to interest those who, perhaps, would not read the Bible, he took a bundle of religious papers printed in Portuguese. One day, finding the bundle tiresome, he gained permission to leave the papers in a store. After awhile the merchant used them as wrapping-paper, and in this way the gospel was spread. Reading these, they soon called for more literature that told of the wonderful Savior, and in a short while a church was organized with thirty members.

From Indian Territory, Mrs. H. Spaulding brought cheery messages from the workers who are striving to give the gospel of love and peace to the wild tribe.

Miss Alice Waters, from China, reported an increased interest in Christian education. Conversions more frequent and church memberships increasing.

Miss Hardynia Norville reported the wonderful work accomplished in our Mexico Border Mission by our consecrated Miss Holding and her co-laborers. The sweetest note which was sounded in her report was that of the spiritual elevation that teachers and pupils had had by a gracious outpouring of the Holy Ghost, and of its abiding presence and guidance.

Dr. Lambuth, secretary of the General Board of Missions of the M. E. Church, South, who was born in China, and is the son of the great Chinese missionary whose body now awaits the resurrection morn in Japan, made a talk full of interest. Though he labors now in our home land, it was evident that the spirit of Christ so fills and thrills him that his heart yearns also for China and Japan.

The missionary candidates present with us were: Miss Mary L. Richardson, of the Southwest Missouri Conference, sister of our Helen Richardson now in China, and Miss Susie E. Williams, of the Pacific Conference. Both having completed the course in the Scarritt Bible and Training-school, were accepted and recommended for work in China. They both gave evidence of their call, and were grateful for the privilege of going out to do this grand work for the Master. Miss Laura V. Wright, of the Baltimore Conference; Miss Nora Smith, of the Alabama Conference, and Miss Annie Churchhill, of the Northwest Texas Conference, were all accepted and assigned work. Mrs. Campbell, Miss Waters and Miss Ross will soon return to their respective fields of labor. Misses Roberts, Dorsey and Elderling were granted a "rest at home" when they desired. Miss Susan Littlejohn resigned her work as a missionary.

The Committee on Extension of Work recommended the acceptance of the "Keener School" tendered by the Carondelet Street Church, New Orleans.

The Board having prayerfully and carefully considered this field, appropriated $2,600 to carry on the work, and Miss Norville was transferred from Laredo Seminary and put in charge; Miss Roidan to remain as an assistant.

Three thousand seven hundred and fifty dollars was appropriated for a lot, building, and the support of one missionary in Korea. It is desired that our juvenile workers take special interest in this new work, and the society giving the largest amount will have the privilege of naming the school.

Though anxious to enter the inviting doors of Japan, the Board decided it was best not to add other new work this year, but look to the time when we may, with the host of God's elect, go up and possess this land for our Master also.

It was urged if each district secretary would obtain one hundred new members, the problem of enlarging our borders would be solved.

The Committee on Extension further recommended that the McGavock Institute be built as soon as $5,000 was in hand, and to be on the same compound with the MoTyeire School in Shanghai, China. Miss Haygood suggested it should be called the McGavock Hall in lieu of institute. A motion was carried to call it the McGavock Memorial.

To meet the ever-growing demand in the foreign field, the Board insisted upon a more thorough consecration of the workers at home; deeming it important that every Conference have an organizer or a substitute to visit each auxiliary at least twice a year where the district secretary could not. The Conference corresponding secretaries were urged to insist upon the public meetings, and, if possible, to secure one life member in each auxiliary.

The organization of the children was considered all-important, but it was thought expedient that each Conference plan for the wisest method, but insist that the treasurer report separately the collections of the Young Peoples and Juveniles.

A resolution was carried that the books of the recording secretaries of auxiliaries should be sent to the District Conference, and those of the district secretary to the Annual Conference, for examination.

The Little Worker special was discontinued, but the Little Worker and the Woman's Missionary Advocate were both highly commended as the best means of instructing our people.

Invitations for the next annual meeting were extended from Owensboro, Ky.; Memphis, Tenn.; Roanoke, Va.; Fayette, Mo.; Birmingham, Ala., and Greensboro, N. C. The latter was chosen.

The following pledges were given by the corresponding secretaries for their Conferences, to be raised as a special, and appropriated to any special authorized by the Board, choice to be made by the auxiliary, but in every case instructions to be sent with the money:

Alabama, $300; Arkansas, $500; Baltimore, $500; Florida, $400; Holston, $500; Kentucky, $1,000; Little Rock, $250; Louisiana, $250; Louisville, $650; Memphis, $500; Mississippi, $200; Missouri, $700; West Virginia, $300; North Alabama, $1,100; North Georgia, $2,000; North Carolina, $300; North Texas, $200; Northwest Texas, $500; South Carolina, $300; South Georgia, $1,000; Southwest Missouri, $1,700; St. Louis, $300; Texas, $500; Virginia, $750; Western North Carolina, $300; White River, $200; total, $14,290.

Bishop Wilson so highly commended the woman's work and management in steering clear of debt by the small, but regular offering of ten cents a month per member, that he intimated that the General Board might profit from the lesson, or in the future it would be wise to turn the whole mission work over to the women.

Altogether, the nineteenth Annual Session of the Woman's Board of Foreign Missions was a benediction to each one attending.

The annual sermon by Dr. Kelly upon the housewife seeking the lost coin we feel sure will ever inspire all who heard it to seek more diligently for the lost and erring children of our Father's love.

Unexpected Blessings.

If we had only to demand from God just what we desire, and in the way and time that suits our pleasure, then we would be snatching God's scepter and trying to rule the ruler of the universe. Did you ever know a child that ruled its parents without ruining itself? And if it spoils our children to have their own way, I am sure that it would be for our ruin if we could bend God to all our wishes. If this be our expectation of God, then the sooner we abandon it the better. God keeps all his promises, but he has never promised to let you and me hold the reins. He answers prayers, but in the way and at the time that his infinite wisdom determines. Some prayers are not answered at once; more than one faithful mother has gone to her grave before the child for whose conversion she prayed has given his heart to Jesus. Some prayers are answered in a way so unlooked for that the answer is not recognized.

Eternity will make it plain, for many petitions are answered according to the strict letter of the request; the blessing granted has been something different from what the believer expected. Jacob, when he blessed the sons of Joseph, laid his right hand on the son who stood at his left side. So God sometimes takes off his hand of blessing from the thing we prayed for and lays it on another, which is more for our own good and for his own glory. He often surprises his people with unexpected blessings; and heaven will have abundance of such surprises.—Dr. Theodore L. Cuyler.

A holy life is made up of a number of small things; little words, not eloquent speeches or sermons; little deeds, not miracles of battle, nor one great heroic act of mighty martyrdom, make up the true Christian life. The little constant sunbeam, not the lightning; the waters of Siloam, "that go softly," in the meek mission of refreshment, not the "waters of the rivers, great and many," rushing down in noisy torrents, are the true symbols of a holy life. The avoidance of little evils, little sins, little inconsistencies, little weaknesses, little follies, indiscretions and imprudences, little foibles, little indulgences of the flesh—the avoidance of such little things as these go far to make up at least the negative beauty of a holy life.—Bonar.

Kindly words, sympathizing attentions, watchfulness against wounding men's sensitiveness—these cost very little, but they are priceless in their value.—F. W. Robertson.

Good temper, like a Summer day, sheds a brightness over everything. It is the sweetener of toil and the soother of disquietude.

It is one thing to wish to have truth on our side, and another thing to wish to be on the side of truth.—Whately.

If some of us would pray more we would grumble less.

To Whom it May Concern:

About three years ago I received a sample bottle of "Mul-en-ol." I had never heard of it before. I began using it, however, as occasion required, and soon found that it was all that is claimed for it, and more. For cuts, burns, bruises, scalds, and all kinds of sores, it is superior to any remedy I have ever used. It is also exceedingly efficacious in colic and diarrhœa. For sore throat it is incomparably better than anything I know of. I heartily recommend it as a medicine worthy of a place in every household. W. C. BLACK,

FROM THE WORK.

Rev. Wm. T. Beall, Moss Point, July 5, 1897: "Having served the Escatawpa circuit for two months, to the best of my ability, during Bro. Huff's illness, I surrender it to him today, as he has sufficiently recovered, I hope, to serve his work the remainder of the Conference year. Results: four accessions by profession of faith, two infants baptized, and held one protracted meeting on the work at Big Point Church."

Rev. W. G. Backus, P. C., Bogue Chitto, July 5, 1897: "We have just closed our fourth protracted meeting on this work. Forty-eight accessions, quite a number of bright conversions, and the church greatly strengthened. 'Children's Day' was observed at each of our churches with fine results. This is a delightful work and people to serve. We have lost several of our best and most useful members this year. 'God buries his workmen, and carries on his work.'"

Rev. G. W. Gordon, Columbus, Miss., June 30, 1897: "Columbus circuit has six appointments, and we have held a 'Children's Day' service at each place. The collections on 'Children's Day' aggregate $20.80, which is $4.55 in advance of last year. Our foreign mission assessment ($106) has been raised and forwarded to Conference treasurer. This is $16 more than last year. We begin our round of revival meetings second Sunday in July. Join us in prayer for a great work of grace."

Rev. H. M. Young, P. C., Sturges circuit, Columbus district: "This is our first year on the Sturges circuit. We have just passed our third Quarterly Conference, which was an occasion of much interest. Our presiding elder, Rev. R. A. Burroughs, was with us to our comfort and profit. Bro. Burroughs preached us three excellent sermons: two at Pleasant Hill (where the Conference was held), and one at Sturges, Sunday night. It gladdened our hearts to be able to report our foreign mission assessment raised in full. We are hopeful of securing our Conference assessment in full by the time of our annual gathering again. We have made some greatly needed improvement on our parsonage. We feel profoundly thankful to God that he put it into the hearts of our women of the W. P. and H. M. Society of the North Mississippi Conference to aid us. May our heavenly Father abundantly bless them in their great and grand work!"

Rev. Robt. L. Phillips, Waynesboro, Miss., July 6, 1897: "On May 23 we opened a meet at Chicora, Miss., which was protracted until June 6. This town is the seat of the Roberson Land and Lumber Co., employing several hundred men. We were assisted by Rev. W. W. Moore, a Holy Ghost preacher, and Sister Nettie Brown, a fire-baptized worker. 'Personal work' and 'definite results' were the watchwords of the meeting. Men were prayed with at their work and in their homes. The 'new birth' and 'Christian perfection' were stressed, and by the fourth day the heavens opened and the Lord came to Chicora. Service after service was the scene of the power and glory of God to save from sin. Stern men were softened, hard hearts were melted, and callous faces irradiated with heavenly joy. Glory to God! There were at least thirty conversions, five sanctifications, many reclamations and convictions, and seven accessions to the church. June 21 our meeting at Winchester was opened. Sister Brown was with us here, working faithfully from house to house. The fire fell at the first service, and soon there was a deep conviction on the town and a hearty response from the people, and as they swept into the kingdom and into the 'Canaan experience' what happy faces! what shouts and songs of joy! These testimonials thrill me now. Results: about twelve conversions, six sanctifications, several reclamations, and three accessions to the church. Bro. D. C. Farmer preached once for us to the edification of all."

Rev. R. A. Sibley, Jr., P. C., Chunkey station, Miss., July 5, 1897: "We have just closed our sixth round of appointments on this work. Have had in some respects a very pleasant year. So far our finances are not altogether what we would like to see them; but, taking into consideration the fact that we were stricken with a drouth here last year, we have no room to complain. We have just finished ceiling our new church at Chunkey, which is a model of neatness and durability. Steps have been taken to repair the parsonage, which we hope to see comfortably and conveniently finished before the close of the year. Two of our Children's Day services have been observed up to date, with more to follow. Children's Day at Chunkey was observed June 6, and was a decided success, conducted by the faithful and efficient superintendent, Bro. W. J. J. Ross. The church was beautifully decorated, which, with the sweet music rendered by the choir, contributed much to the inspiration of the occasion. Children's Day at Sequalena was observed June 26, which was a season of refreshment and joy. The house not being large enough to hold the congregation, a spacious platform and seats were erected in the grove near the church. The programme was carried out in full, supplemented by many appropriate pieces. The recitations were interspersed with music by the choir, all of which were excellent, and reflect creditably upon the untiring zeal and faithful efforts of Bro. F. M. Jones, the superintendent, who spared no pains to make it a success. Pray for us."

DOWN AT THE JETTIES.

We finished our second round of Conferences at Port Eads, in sight of the Jetties. Leaving Algiers, Saturday, on the 8 A. M. train of the New Orleans, Fort Jackson and Grand Isle railroad, we reached F. sling, or Buras, at 1 P. M. The day was intensely warm and the ride on the cars uncomfortable, so that the Rev. Chas. T. Munholland and this writer were glad to board the little tug "Duloot." Though of very limited capacity for passengers or freight, we were made quite at home by the kindly attentions of Capt. Florain and the refreshing breeze made by the fast moving tug. The very genial captain and Bro. Munholland seemed to be the best of friends, the commander of our craft often yielding the wheel to Capt. Munholland, of whom it is said he was in former days one of the most skillful of our river pilots. At the Quarantine Station there were several large steamships anchored in the stream, and we recalled the fact that no seaport has a more efficient quarantine than the one established by our Board of Health, of which Dr. S. R. Oliphant is the president. We noticed that extensive work was being done upon the Forts, made memorable during the war between the States by their gallant, through unsuccessful resistance to the passage of Commodore Farragut and his fleet. It is wise action on the part of the government to put the coast defenses of our seaboard cities into as perfect condition as possible.

Alighting at six o'clock, we were met by Capt. C. H. Merritt, who extended to us many appreciated favors during our stay in Port Eads. Dr. Thomas before going to New Orleans left with Capt. Merritt an invitation for us to occupy a most comfortable room in his house. Thanks to the kind physician, we enjoyed greatly our delightful quarters. After supper with Capt. and Sister Merritt, we crossed the river in a skiff and preached in a private dwelling to an attentive congregation. Returning, we held in our room the second Quarterly Conference of the Lower Coast circuit. The reports of the pastor indicated that he was having success, and that the prospects are brightening in his hard field of labor, as is the case at most points in the New Orleans district. After a fish breakfast next morning at Capt. Merritt's, we rested at our quarters most of the time in a hammock well hung to catch the slightly stirring breeze, until 2:30 P. M., when we crossed to West Port Eads to preach. Those people never have divine service at 11 o'clock, as elsewhere, the afternoon hour being more convenient for them. We trust good was done. We went up into the lighthouse. In our ascent we had several times to stop and get our breath. Bro. Leonard Edgecomb, a young gentleman of affable manners, and who is one of the keepers of that important lighthouse, politely showed us everything of interest and let us look through the marine glass out upon "the briny deep." Byron's lines came to me at once: "Roll on, thou deep and dark blue Ocean—roll!"

The South Pass is the one having the Jetties, and, of course, is the most used by navigators. The Jetties were only a mile or so away, with another lighthouse just beyond. The Southwest Pass was off to the right, and the Pass a l'Outre on the left. Edgecombe directed my attention to a solid white beach close by where the people enjoyed the finest surf bathing. I went inside of the revolving light and could easily move about in it. The glasses are so arranged as to reflect their light upon the round glasses about the centre circle; and thus, as the great light revolves, most powerful rays are shot athwart the darkest night and can be seen many miles at sea. At 8 o'clock we preached on the Port Eads side of the river in the large hall of the hotel.

At 5 o'clock, Monday morning, we were again on the tug, arriving at Buras on time, there to wait from 10 A. M. until the up-train came and started for Algiers at 1:30 P. M. The orange groves, with their leaves of variegated green and their growing fruit, presented to the eye a beautiful sight. I take it there is promise of a fair crop of oranges. The cane seemed well advanced and the corn is doing well. At Socola, on the way down, the train remained awhile that the trainmen might kill an alligator, and coming up on the tug another alligator swimming out into the river went below in time to escape being hit by the bow of our boat. Bro. Munholland and I crossed on the Canal street ferry about dark.

It would be a good thing if a church-building could be erected at Port Eads, as then it would be much easier than now to bring together the few Protestant Christians and those of no faith who are living in that section. Bro. Munholland is in favor with Romanists as well as Protestants; and, backed by Capt. Merritt and Leonard Edgecomb, he will doubtless have some results. May God abundantly bless his labors all along the Lower Coast, and even from so hard a field as Port Eads may he win for his Master many precious souls!

Intelligent people in this day and age almost without exception, protect themselves against small-pox, by vaccination. Consumption kills 5 a year more people than small-pox, cholera, yellow fever and all known plagues kill in fifty. Tens of thousands of intelligent people recognize that they are threatened by this deadly disease, but take no precautions against it.

Consumption approaches its victim step by step. First there is a little "out of sorts" feeling, the digestion isn't just right, the appetite falls off, the liver is inactive, the assimilation of the life-giving elements of the food is imperfect, the blood gets impure and the body is improperly nourished. These conditions get worse and worse. The heart through the arterial system is pumping thin, poisonous blood into every organ of the body. The organs that are inherently weakest break down first. Ordinarily the lungs. As the last straw that breaks the camel's back comes a cold, however slight. This, with the accompanying cough, completes the work and an invasion of the germs of consumption follows. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery cures 98 per cent. of all cases of consumption. It corrects the conditions that lead up to it. It is the greatest blood-maker and flesh-builder known.

K. C. McLin, Esq., of Kempsville, Princess Anne Co., Va., writes: "When I commenced taking your 'Discovery' I was very low with a cough, and at times spit up much blood. I was not able to do the least work, but most of the time was in bed. I was all run-down, very weak, my head was dizzy, and I was extremely despondent. The first bottle I took did not seem to do me much good, but I had faith in it and continued using it until I had taken fifteen bottles, and now I do not look nor feel like the same man I was one year ago. People are astonished, and say, 'well, last year this time I would not have thought that you would be living now.' I can thankfully say I am entirely cured of a disease which, but for your wonderful 'Discovery,' would have resulted in my death."

No man is born into the world whose work
Is not born with him. There is always work
And tools to work withal, for those who will;
And blessed are the horny hands of toil.
James Russell Lowell.

The best preparation for the labors of the day is a short season of communion with God.

It is a most egregious mistake for a man to tell everything he knows to anybody, much more to everybody.

It is a great mistake for a Christian to suppose that faithfulness to God requires us to be invariably disagreeable to men.

It is in the nature of things that mole-hills should appear as mountains to very small creatures.—Baltimore Advocate.

It is one of the immutable laws of our being that every faculty of our nature gains strength by exercise and is weakened by disuse.

Let us dignify the lowliest duties by a noble nature. It takes a greater man to do a common thing greatly than to do a great thing greatly.—F. B. Meyer.

Souls are made sweet not by taking the acid fluids out, but by putting something in—a great Love, a new Spirit, the Spirit of Christ.—Henry Drummond.

To keep back the sharp word which you are tempted to speak may require more grace than to face a great danger, or to resist a terrific temptation.—Selected.

The man who goes to his Bible to find a passage to back up his preconceived notion, generally succeeds, even if he has to garble Scripture to do it.—Baltimore Advocate.

All Christians are not happy, but the fault is with themselves. They are only half Christians. Implicit trust, entire consecration, brings a perennial sweetness and joy.

All the sin that darkened human life and saddened human history began in believing in falsehood; all the power of Christianity to make men holy is associated with believing truth.—John A. Broadus.

The true idea of Christian giving is that God owns us and all that we have, and when we give to his cause we only render unto God the things that are God's. We are bought with a price, and the purchase includes all of our belongings.—Baptist Standard.

There are a few people in the world who seem to have been born with enough sunshine stored up in their hearts to last a life-time; but with most of us the supply on hand can be used up in an hour. We need to cultivate cheerfulness as assiduously as we generate electricity to supply the city with light.—Selected.

One-Sidedness.

Symmetrically developed men are rare, whether regard be had to the physical, the intellectual or the spiritual nature. The athlete usually has one set of muscles trained far out of proportion to the others. The blacksmith, though mighty in the strength of his arm, may be but an indifferent pedestrian. Not every swift runner can bear off the palm in boxing or weight throwing. Every man has his strong as well as his weak point, it being a difficult task to develop all parts of the body in due proportion. Occupations and inclinations are such as to call into play particular organs and faculties, while the others remain unexercised and, therefore, undeveloped. No man who has stooped shoulders, a deformed foot, or any other defect, though well formed otherwise, could be called an Apollo. The beau ideal of physical manhood is that of a man whose every organ, muscle and feature exhibits the most perfect symmetry. In order that we may have an able-bodied and effective soldiery, our government wisely admits to her military schools only those youths who are well-formed and without physical blemish.

In matters intellectual we find the same lack of symmetry. One man of education has a highly cultivated imagination, but poorly developed reasoning powers. Another is a fine argumentarian, but a bad rhetorician. Many a man is well-versed in Greek and Latin lore who is little acquainted with the English classics. A student who devotes himself exclusively to mathematics or to any branch of learning exclusively may become wise in that particular branch, but he can not be called a thorough scholar. The best-educated men are not those who have only one faculty, as the memory or the imagination, thoroughly trained, but those whose culture is broad and deep, who are both practical and literary, whose powers of reflection are not out of proportion to their powers of observation.

Since we live in an age of specialization, he who would forge to the front must concentrate his energies upon some particular line of effort. Every man must learn to do at least one thing well, if he does not wish to be pushed to the wall. The more special a man's occupation, however, the more narrow he is likely to become in his views and productivities, until at last he gets to measuring everything by a Procrustean standard. While specialization is in large measure necessary, it is apt to result in limited vision and restricted effort. A man may devote himself so uninterruptedly to his special line of work as to dwarf all the faculties and sensibilities not called into play by his profession.

The world is full of one-sided men and women. The intellectual and spiritual development of many is good as far as it goes, but unfortunately it is not extensive enough to make them broad spirited and liberal minded. Well-rounded men, like Franklin and Gladstone, are exceedingly scarce. Although education is more general than ever before, how infrequently do we meet with men of diversified culture? The ancient Roman proverb, "Beware of the man of one idea," is not without force or without application to modern times. Many of the conflicts between labor and capital are due to selfish, one-sided thinking and action. The rich, in carrying out their plans, fail to put themselves in the places of the poor; and the wage earners, on the other hand, frequently fail to consider that the wealthy have rights to be respected. Not a little political turmoil is caused by short-sightedness and lack of broad statesmanship. The various classes of citizens clamor for legislation in favor of their special industry, not considering or caring what would be the effect upon other industries and classes. A solution of present political difficulties can never be reached until our people and their representatives in legislative assemblies become more deeply imbued with such principles of unselfish patriotism and statesmanship as will lift them far above party, class, or sectionalism. As long as each class has its pet scheme which it is proposed to foist up upon the country, irrespective of the rights and wishes of others, so long will there be contention and unrest. The man who cultivates but one faculty, or who pursues one idea alone, is more than likely to run off into hurtful extremes.

One-sidedness also manifests itself in the sphere of religion. Christians of courage, honesty and orthodoxy are easily found; but who does not know that it is far more difficult to find Christians whose characters are symmetrically developed? Here is a brother who prides himself upon his temperance and truthfulness, but his stinginess is proverbial. Another is well reported of for generosity and zeal, yet in patience he is sadly deficient. A large number who are above reproach in most respects have pride and selfishness for their besetting sins. The tendency with many, we might perhaps say most, Christians is to cultivate particular graces and virtues to the neglect of others equally important. The best Christian is not always the one who towers above his fellows in some particular gift of grace. Rather he is the man who exhibits all the fruits of the Spirit in due measure.

In character we are no stronger than our weakest point. We may be far more charitable and patient than many of our fellows, and still be ill-developed Christians, dwarfed at other points. Temperance will not atone for untruthfulness, nor can meekness make amends for covetousness. As the Christian life embraces not one virtue, but many, the Apostle Peter speaks on this wise: "And besides this, giving all diligence, add to your faith virtue, and to virtue knowledge, and to knowledge temperance, and to temperance godliness, and to godliness brotherly kindness, and to brotherly kindness charity." Let us beware of making the religion of Christ a one-sided affair—a matter of words and not of deeds, of creed and not of character, of experience and not of practice, of moods and not of obedience, of feeling and not of faithfulness, of grace and not of goodness. In the pursuit of godliness, as in the pursuit of knowledge, the best results are secured only through diversified effort.

Great one-sidedness occasionally manifests itself in the pulpit in the undue magnifying of one pet doctrine to the obscuring of other doctrines equally important. Preaching a full gospel means the proclamation of all the great truths of Christianity, not the constant harping upon one string. Bread is nutritious and necessary, but there are very few people, we judge, who would like to be fed upon it exclusively.

An Open Letter to Col. John Smith.

COL. JOHN SMITH, Anywhere, Mundus—

MY DEAR COLONEL: Your name is a very illustrious one, and has been ever since the days of Pocahontas and Powhatan. You ought, therefore, to be very careful not to do anything that will bring reproach upon that honored name. Are you thus careful? Let us see. You are in arrears with your church paper, and have been for about two years. Why don't you pay up? Of course, you will not plead poverty. Some men can make that plea, and such men usually write to the publisher and ask an extension. But a man who lives as you do can not afford to make such a plea. Why, then, don't you pay that debt? Do you know any firm that is furnishing paper and ink "without money and without price?" Do you know of any printers that are willing to work for nothing and board themselves? Or do you know of any who are willing to wait a year or two for their hard-earned money? "Oh!" you say, "$4 is such a small sum that it makes no difference whether I pay it now, or a year or two hence." Hold on, Colonel. There are two or three thousand other subscribers who wear a hat just about the same size as yours, and have just the same sort of stuff inside their craniums (or crania). Now, Colonel, multiply $4, or even $2, by 3,000, and when you get the product, read the figures along, and then read along the Golden Rule, "Do unto others as you would have them do unto you;" and as you read look into a mirror and see if a blush mantles your cheek. If so, there is some hope for you. If not—well, Colonel, you may finish the sentence.

Yours faithfully,

A PUBLISHER.

It is said that Bishop Keener, senior Bishop of the M. E. Church, South, will ask to be placed on the non-effective list at the General Conference next Spring.—Zion's Herald.

Maybe that is so and maybe it isn't. But, of course, Boston ought to know.

By the will of Harrietta A. Dillaye, late of Ogontz, Pa., the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society of the Presbyterian Church, 1334 Chestnut street, Philadelphia, gets $3,000, and the Board of Ministerial Relief, Philadelphia, $2,000.

A learned Chinaman said to a missionary: "I like your doctrine, though I never heard you preach. I have seen it: my servant was a devil before he professed your religion, and now he is like an angel. I can trust him with everything, and he is in love with everybody."

A correspondent, writing a few days since from Nashville, says, "We roast all day and boil all night." The "we" in this sentence no doubt includes hosses as well as men. Hence, we are not at all surprised to learn that the Hoss that pulls the great Jerusalem Connectional has left his stall for a trip to the Seashore Camp Ground, where he can cool off.

The pastor who enters into the feelings and circumstances of his people—being one with them in their sorrows as well as in their joys—will live in their affections, and is all the more likely to have a long and useful pastorate. He may not be so eloquent and able as other ministers, but he has the heart-power which draws to him those whose welfare he seeks in sweet and lasting bonds.—Presbyterian.

The leading article in the July-August number of the Southern Methodist Review is from the pen of Bishop J. C. Keener. It is entitled "Job, A Prince of the East, and His Inspired Epic." It is just such a production as one would expect from the vigorous pen of our senior Bishop; and this is very high praise. This number of the Review also contains a portrait of the Bishop, which, as a likeness, will probably never be surpassed. Not only are the features there, but there is an amount of expression which is rarely given on paper.

For the best and most lasting impression the preacher must work, not upon the feelings, but upon the conscience. This monitor, properly aroused, will stir the entire being and life. It is God's vicegerent, and does grand and efficient work when properly instructed and moved. Truth directed to it plainly, faithfully and persistently is sure to be followed with reformatory and saving results.—The Presbyterian.

The nation is thirty-three years from the end of the war and has a pension list of $150,000,000 per annum to satisfy claims which Gen. Grant and Gen. Garfield declared the opinion could be justly met by an annual outlay of $40,000,000. Yet the applications to Congress are pouring in, besides appeals to the Pension Office, which at last accounts reached the number of 1,200 a day.—Boston Herald.

An old newspaper man says: "No sensible man should or ever does get angry because a man duns him for money. A dun is not impeachment of a subscriber's integrity, but is simply an outpouring of a publisher's necessities. For instance, 1,000 men owe a man from $1 to $10; he has to dun them in order to pay his expenses. Instead of getting angry and having paper stopped because the publisher asked for what was due, the subscriber should thank the editor for waiting so patiently and pay up like a man." All of which we steadfastly believe.—Central Methodist.

Earth is not a wandering star; it is bound to heaven, not by the golden chains of which our Laureate sings; not by the iron fetters of necessity, as a slave-ship to its captor; not by the silken ties of gravitation which thread the worlds—but by a ladder, denoting communion and fellowship. That ladder sways beneath a weight of blessing for you. Oh, that you would send away your burdens of sin and care and fear, by the hands of the ascending angels of prayer and faith!—so as to be able to receive into your heart the trooping angels of peace, and joy, and love, and glory.—F. B. Meyer.

There are now on file at Washington more than 100,000 applications for office, and the rate at which they continue to pour in is said to be about 600 per day. The worst thing that could happen to many of these applicants would be to receive the appointments they seek. The best thing that could happen to them would be to be struck conclusively with the conviction that if they were to devote a fraction of the energy and patience to individual enterprise which they apply in petty office-hunting, they could become prosperous and independent.—Pittsburg Commercial Gazette.

The editor of the Memphis Christian Advocate has had a severe attack of ecclesiastical economy. He lifts his clarion voice for retrenchment and reform. He is positive that we have too many Bishops, too many missionary secretaries, too many presiding elders, and even too many pastors. "Fewer and stronger men" in these places he thinks would be a great saving. There are a great many people who honestly and candidly believe that what we really do need is "fewer and stronger" church papers and editors. But of this crying need our esteemed confrere says not one word, and we read his "piece" clear through.—Baltimore Advocate.

An English church paper says: It seems scarcely credible that at the end of this nineteenth century in enlightened Britain, Roman priests should lecture in public halls on the reality of the miracles of their sacred wells, etc., yet "Father" Bernard Vaughan has been doing so at the new "Catholic" Hall at Holywell, declaring that the blind saw, the dumb spake, the lame walked, the maimed became whole, the crooked had been made straight, and had remained cured by simple application of the waters of St. Winifred's Well; and, instead of laughing at him, the St. James' Gazette gravely reports it with a prominent heading. The success of this pious fraud is a strong evidence of the truth of Scripture, which declares that the Apostasy shall deceive the people by its lying wonders.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

DOMESTIC.

A working girls' home has been established in Denver, at which furnished rooms can be had for $2 a month.

The new bronze statue of Columbus, which Mr. Paul Bartlett, of Paris, has designed for the Congressional Library, is to be cast in New York.

The Christian Endeavor Convention opened in San Francisco, on July 8, with about 20,000 people in attendance. Over 35,000 visitors were in the city on July 9.

Governor Mount, of Indiana, the "Farmer Governor," who was recently blackballed by the Indianapolis Literary Society, has been elected a member of the Western Association of Writers.

The various Confederate veteran camps in the city have combined to establish an intelligence bureau for securing employment for Confederate veterans and their sons and daughters.

The faculty of the Yale Medical School has raised the standard of that department of the university, and as a result a third of last year's Freshman class has been dropped on the basis of their marks at the recent examinations.

Last week the Tariff bill passed the Senate by a vote of 38 to 28 against. The bill will now go back to the House, and as there are 764 amendments, the Conference Committee will have to do considerable work to reconcile all the differences between the two branches of Congress.

At the central conference of American rabbis held in Montreal, on July 9, these officers were elected: President, Dr. Wise, of Cincinnati; first vice-president, Dr. Leucht, of New Orleans; recording secretary, Rabbi Levi, of Cincinnati; treasurer, Dr. Heckt, of Milwaukee. The conference declared for simplicity in funeral corteges.

The miners' strike is causing the price of coal to still advance, and on July 12 it was selling at $1.80, an increase of about 150 per cent. since the commencement of the struggle. The feature at present in matters pertaining to the strike is the presence in Pittsburg of the Joint Arbitration Board, who are endeavoring by every means possible to bring to a peaceable conclusion the strife now in progress.

The fierce heat under which the greater portion of the country has sweltered since the first of July moderated in many localities on July 10. The records of prostrations and deaths resulting from the long-heated term approaches in magnitude that of a general epidemic. Reports from all sections of the country show prostrations numbering in the neighborhood of 2,000, with fatalities close to 350.

The greatest gathering of labor leaders that ever assembled in this country during a national strike was held in Pittsburg, on July 9, to devise means to assist the miners in their contest for increased wages. The conference was called suddenly, but the officials responding represented nearly every branch of organized labor in the United States. The session was secret, and it was almost midnight before it was over.

The Pennsylvania Legislature recently enacted a law for the protection of home labor, and it is not in the form of a tariff on foreign goods, but is a tax on foreign laborers. The law provides that all persons, firms and corporations employing one or more foreign-born, unnaturalized male persons, over 21 years of age, shall be taxed 3 cents per day for each day that such persons may be employed. One-half of the tax is to be used for school purposes, the other half for defraying the general expenses of county government.

President Faure, of France, who will visit Russia, has been granted $100,000 for his expenses.

A lighthouse has been built in Japan of bamboo, which is said to have greater power of resisting waves than any other kind of wood, and does not rot in water.

The Empress of Austria has erected a marble statue of Heine in the grounds of her villa at Corfu. The statue has been placed on a rock 2,000 feet above the level of the sea, and it is to be surrounded by 50,000 rose trees.

Acting upon instructions received from their respective governments the ambassadors of the powers to-day presented a collective note to the Turkish government, demanding a cessation of the obstruction of the peace negotiations.

It is estimated that the damage done by storms and floods in central and southern France during the last week amounts to $10,000,000. Three hundred persons have lost their lives, and thousands have been made homeless.

Major-General Pedro Diaz has assumed command of the insurgent forces in Pinar del Rio province, Cuba. The rebel army of the province is being thoroughly reorganized and put in fighting trim to co-operate with the eastern army if the latter succeeds in reaching Havana province.

Board of Missions, North Mississippi Conference.

The treasurer of the Board of Missions of the North Mississippi Conference herewith encloses to you his second quarterly report. As in first quarter's report Corinth district leads, and far in the lead, only lacking $272.50—having assessment for foreign missions paid, and more then fifty per cent. of assessment for domestic missions paid, and this mission district, too. Certainly what can be accomplished by the Corinth district can be done by other districts. Is it a question of poverty that causes the shortage in the other districts?

A conscience on missions is what many of our preachers, as well as people, need. A growth in conscience along this line does not lessen, but increases our desire and qualifications for soul winning.

Nothing less than paying full assessments for missions will satisfy Corinth presiding eider, preachers and people.

Notice.

To the Preachers and Delegates to the District Conference, Arcadia District, Louisiana Conference:

DEAR BRETHREN: I appoint Wednesday, July 21, as a day of fasting and prayer for a gracious outpouring of the Holy Spirit upon our District Conference, and upon all the churches in the district. I ask all the members of the church in the district to join us in this fasting, or abstinence and prayer, that God may pour his Holy Spirit upon us all, that we may be able to do his will and win sinners to Christ.

Dear brethren, I have made two full rounds on the district, and am on the third, and I find the one thing above all others that is needed is a great awakening, a sweeping revival of religion—a revival that will save the people from their sins. May we all prostrate ourselves at the throne of grace until the power comes!

Doctor, come to our District Conference. Your brother in Christ,

B. T. CREWS.

Arcadia, La., July 9, 1897.

Notes of Encouragement.

My third call has brought me postal cards from three more brethren, so that eight out of all the pastors in the Mississippi Conference have complied with my very reasonable request to send me names and postoffice addresses of Methodist physicians and Methodist druggists in our Conference bounds. At the same rate it will take over three years for me to get the desired information. O brethren, please attend to this matter!

Dr. E. H. Monnger, P. E., Brookhaven district, has sent me his second quarterly bulletin. There are 17 pastors; 29 copies of The Methodist Review, 131 copies of The World for Christ reported. Brookhaven station reports $13.27 for foreign missions; Adams circuit, $30; China Grove, $6.50; Bogue Chitto, $20.15; Wesson, $25.38; North Wesson, $5; Martinsville, $12.15; Gallman, $2 for foreign missions; Whitestown, $15 for foreign, and $17.60 for domestic; McComb City, $15 for foreign, and $17.60 for domestic: Pleasant Grove, $3.75 for foreign, and $3 for domestic missions. "Poimenos" reports nothing for domestic missions and nothing for foreign. He is still suffering "ad nauseam."

President J. W. Chambers has offered to take one daughter of a missionary to Brazil and educate her free of charge for tuition, board, etc. For $300 a year he will educate a daughter of a missionary to Japan, a daughter of a missionary to China, a daughter of a missionary to Korea, a daughter of a missionary to Mexico—four girls for $300. Have we no wealthy laymen willing to pay the $300 yearly? or two to pay $150 each? or three to pay $100 each for so good a purpose?

We closed revival services last Sunday, July 4. Rev. J. J. Smylie was with us two weeks, and did the preaching. The Lord was with us in power, and the church was quickened into a better life and renewed activity. From thirty to forty were saved, and there are fifteen candidates for membership in the church. Bro. Smylie's work was highly satisfactory. He works with the pastor. We have moved into our new parsonage, an eight room, two-story house, well built, convenient, cool and roomy. We have a goodly heritage.

A. J. NOTESTINE.

Notice.

I take this method to inform my friends and correspondents that my postoffice now is Louisville, Winston county, Miss.

I do not poise for an evangelist; but if any of the brethren think I can be of any real help to them in their work this Fall, I will be glad to go to any point I can reach to aid in revival work. J. D. NEWSOM.

Harris' Business College.

A business education is a necessity, and one who enters upon the duties of life without its guiding influence has all the chances of success against him. We know of no better place for young men and ladies to go for such a training than to that wonderfully progressive institution, Harris' Practical Business College, Jackson, Miss. It is doing more for the worthy, struggling boys and girls than any other business college. Nineteen of its students recently secured good positions in three weeks.—Jackson Evening News.

Delhi District Conference.

We have just hold ono of the most pleasant and, I trust, profitable District Conferences that I ever attended. We were royally entertained by the good people of Taliniah and vicinity, and although just out of the overflow, we found the people cheerful and hopeful. Our pastors' reports show diligence and consecration in the work. Although my district has suffered, both by drouth and high water, we are very hopeful now for success in both the temporal and spiritual departments of our church work. We have a noble band of workers, and are hoping for great success. Our very efficient secretary, Bro. F. S. Parker, will furnish you with encouraging information.

HOME CIRCLE.

TO-DAY.

BY SUSAN COOLIDGE.

Be swift to love your own, dears,
Your own who need you so;
Say to the speeding hour, dears,
"I will not let thee go Except thou give a blessing!"
Force it to bide and stay.
Love has no sure to-morrow,
It only has to-day.

Oh, hasten to be kind, dears,
Before the time shall come
When you are left behind, dears,
In an all-lonely home;
Before in late contrition
Vainly you weep and pray.
Love has no sure to-morrow,
It only has to-day.

Swifter than sun and shade, dears,
Move the fleet wings of pain;
The chance we have to-day, dears,
May never come again.
Joy is a fickle rover,
He brooketh not delay.
Love has no sure to-morrow,
It only has to-day.

Too late to plead or grieve, dears,
Too late to kiss or sigh,
When death has laid his seal, dears,
On the cold lip and eye.
Too late our gifts to lavish
Upon the burial clay;
Love has no sure to-morrow,
It only has to-day.

Letter from Mrs. A. Walter-Fearn.

Dear Dr. Yates:

This letter is a copy of the one I have just written Bishop Hendrix. As I know, you are all interested in hearing about our new home. I send it to you and will ask you to forward to Dr. Smiley, my mother, Irene and Mrs. T. G. Hudson, Yazoo City, Miss.

That "man proposes, but God disposes" has been verified in our visit to Chang Chow. We went by Soochow to replenish our stock of drugs in expectation of clamorous demands from the thronging multitudes for the foreign physicians with their wonderful healing art—for such we had been led to suppose would be the state of affairs there. The Sunday before we left home was spent in fasting and prayer, that we might go in the fullness of the Spirit. We do believe that God, in his wisdom, directed us in every way. It seems very wonderful to me that in no respect were our anticipations realized.

We had several hundred posters printed to the effect that we would hold a two days' clinic, but these were not distributed. On our arrival we learned that the officials were in every way kindly disposed toward us and our religion, but they were afraid of us, as every clinic held there threatened a riot. Large crowds are conducive to excitement, which leads to worse things, resulting in trouble for the foreigner and loss of position for the official; so we treated only those who came, and spent the time largely in making ourselves agreeable to all with whom we came in contact.

Possibly you know that Mr. Woodbridge, of the Southern Presbyterian Mission, has been for a year in this place teaching English in some of the wealthiest families of the city. He is doing a splendid work there, and through his influence and kindness we were introduced into the official families. Here we were treated with the utmost courtesy and respect. Dr. Fearn was several times asked to see the young men, socially and professionally. At one home where we were invited for the evening we found everything elaborately foreign and elegant—that is, if one could forget the bed-spread artistically draped over the sofa and the unbleached sheeting which did service for the dining-cloth. As a tribute to Western customs, I was treated like a gentleman, while outside the windows, with faces pressed tight to the glass, herded the ladies of the family. Finally a request came for me to visit them upstairs, to which I gladly responded. Even these rooms were Anglo-Chinese, with a lovely sugar bowl doing service as a bureau ornament, and clocks galore—every hand at a different hour. The remarks about my personal appearance were interesting, inasmuch as they show the vivid imagination of the Chinese woman—an international failing among us. "Her waist is as fine as a thread!" Now, my most ardent admirers have never considered my waist one of my fine points, but, then, they had heard that small waists were a peculiar characteristic of foreign women. A matter of much moment was the number of garments I wore, and their inspection, like ugliness, would have gone to the bone but for prompt and active measures of self-defense. I don't think I was once called anything worse than a dwarf, and that, too, I flatter myself was because they had heard that foreigners were tall.

We were very much pleased with the general appearance of the city. Although not as large a place as we had expected to see, it was in many respects more prepossessing. The streets are wide and relatively clean, tea shops and loafers fewer, business brisker, opium and wine not so "en evidence" as in other cities, while the language was distinctly polite. We felt almost like denizens of another world, so seldom did we hear "foreign devil," that several times I felt impelled to ask, "Where am I at?" One native helper was with us; through him we heard of only one unpleasant remark. He told some one that our boat was at the small South Gate, where we would hold a clinic the following day, and the man replied, "Oh, it is their kind that we drive out of our city!" As Catholics and Protestants are one and the same to them, we felt that we would have to be very constantly on the watch for trouble, as they have driven the Catholics out with vigor and determination. This confusing us with the Catholics reminds me of an amusing little experience we had in our first days in Yang Yok, and which shows the lack of discrimination of this people. They very audibly decided that I must be a woman since my appearance was not like that of the other foreigners they had seen, but later on, where Dr. Fearn appeared in his long overcoat, in spite of his six feet and full beard, they showed they were a little mixed by calling him the foreign woman! One young man of much wealth and little courage asked Dr. Fearn to remove a nasal polypus for him, but very eagerly asked: "How long will it take? Will it hurt? Will it bleed?" When the last two questions were answered in the affirmative, he threw up his hands and, backing off, at once declined to have his nose touched, but finally agreed to submit to an operation on our next visit—about April 14.

While our visit was not a successful clinic—as we have been used to them—yet we feel deeply that we did our best work, with God's help, in first winning the confidence and not the opposition of the powers that be. We feel that we are working for the future, and if we only succeed in making friends during our next two visits, we will have opened the door to an entrance in the Fall. Of course, we did nothing towards getting a house more than to keep our eyes and ears open, and we hope that when the time comes for decisive action we will meet with no opposition—even if they do not welcome us with outstretched arms.

The "Epworth" is magnificent. To Dr. Fearn's delight and my undisguised terror she sails in the very teeth of a head wind. It is not conducive to one's peace of mind nor health to sit for hours freezing on deck because one is afraid to stay inside when the boat rides at an acute angle with the water. I hope some day you may test its speed and comfort for yourself.

It is with genuine regret that we think of leaving Yang Yok. When I first knew that there was a possibility of our being sent from Soochow I felt as I could not endure it; but we have been so happy here that I feel encouraged about our move to Chang Chow. Our little home is home; but aside from this fact we feel that any change of house could not but be an improvement. Dr. Fearn has been much with the people and already "Fi I-sung" is quite well known. It delights me to go out with him and to hear the welcome greetings from all we meet. He was out until late last night with an opium case, and as time passes we find that the demand for the foreign physician is rapidly increasing. The fact that they are willing to trust us at all is a constant surprise to me. We do so hope that this station will not be left without a foreigner. The people are so friendly and so willing to accept what we do for them, that it seems wrong to let this opportunity slip. We have a very interesting little day school, and would have opened two others but for your letter. We thought it best not to extend the work until the prospects of its continuance were better. We think the trouble about this place is that the work has been so sporadically done that very little lasting good has grown out of it. I have started an industrial department in the school, and to-day will extend my invitation to the mothers of the children to come and learn to knit and crochet, as there is quite a demand for foreign socks, etc., and this would give them a better and more profitable source of income than embroidering or making ghost money, besides giving an opportunity for holding little impromptu meetings with the women.

I would give you an account of our singing school, but that the sudden blasts of horrible discord are still ringing in my ears; the remembrance of which is too distressing to dwell upon. Suffice it to say that each child has his own peculiar idea of time, pitch and a reckless disregard for harmony. If every fresh attack on the hymn book did not leave them in such a blissful state of self-satisfaction, we might feel more encouraged about the result.

I had thought that I could not write another letter about this trip to Chang Chow, but copying this has convinced me that I could never make a living as copyist. I would rather teach school.

Will love from us both to each one who reads this, I am always,
Your sincere friend,
A. WALTER-FEARN.

Soochow, March 18, 1897.

Sweetness and Light.

Put a pill in the pulpit if you want practical preaching for the physical man; then put the pill in the pillory if it does not practise what it preaches. There's a whole gospel in Ayer's Sugar Coated Pills; a "gospel of sweetness and light." People used to value their physic, as they did their religion,—by its bitterness. The more bitter the dose the better the doctor. We've got over that. We take "sugar in ours"—gospel or physic—now-a-days. It's possible to please and to purge at the same time. There may be power in a pleasant pill. That is the gospel of

The Keener School, Mexico.

The regular session of the Woman's Mexican Missionary Society of Carondelet Street Church, held Monday, June 14, was of more than usual importance, it being the final meeting of the organized society, and a brief review of its work was in order. The meeting was opened with reading the nineteenth Psalm by the president, Mrs. Carre, and prayer by Mrs. Holmes. Minutes read and approved. Mrs. Carre reported an executive session held the early part of the month, when the failure to obtain financial help from the Parent Board toward the support of the Keener School was announced. This, and the withdrawal from the Mexican Mission work of a sister society in June, 1893, continued the entire responsibility of current expenses upon the Carondelet society—a responsibility too great to be assumed in the present condition of its treasury. After deliberate consideration, it was decided, in justice to the school, with its increasing demands and duty to the church at large, to yield the control and support of the school to the Woman's Board, so well equipped in systematic work and financial ability, to enlarge the usefulness of the Keener School.

At this date we gladly announce through letters from Mrs. Trueheart, secretary of Woman's Board of Missions, the trust has been accepted, support assumed from June 8, the date of acceptance, the name retained as an expression of respect to our senior Bishop, and our young Mexican teacher, Miss Julio Roldan, continued.

It is no strange thing that with sadness we tender the charge of years to other hands. Early in January, 1878, Mrs. Keener, moved with a desire for united mission work among the women of the church, called a meeting, when a society of twenty five members was organized, with Mrs. John Mathews as president, and, like the builders on the wall at Jerusalem, "they had a mind to work." The first collections of $61.40 was sent Dr. Kelley to aid in sending Miss Rankin to the work in China. At the May session, through a motion of Mrs. R. M. Walmsley, it was resolved to send $25 per month to aid in supporting the recently established school in Mexico, and through the intervening years this school has been the objective work.

Mrs. Mathews' removal to a distant city necessitated the election of another president, and Mrs. Walmsley was unanimously chosen to fill the place; the wisdom of this choice was shown in unfailing interest in the work, the readiness with which collections were met and generous response to a call from Mr. Ransom for $50 for Brazil, a donation of $25 to Dr. and Mrs. Lambuth for China, as well as raising $125 to assist in defraying the expenses of our first young missionary to Mexico. Failing health compelled Mrs. Walmsley's resignation after nine years' service, and in 1888 Mrs. W. W. Carre was elected her successor, and has been the zealous, energetic president through the remaining years.

Before final adjournment, Mrs. Moss claimed the attention of the society, stating she had been commissioned by Mrs. Keener to read a note expressing her high appreciation of the work and sacrifice of our president, and her desire to present Mrs. Carre, through the society, a beautiful Mexican onyx slab. Mrs. Carre acknowledged the gift in heartfelt words, and the secretary was instructed to thank Mrs Keener for this last evidence of the sympathy and generosity that has endured since our organization.

The Woman's Board will build on a well-laid foundation; the prayers and sacrifice of years have borne fruit, souls have been born of God, whose after lives attest the fact, in many instances. Death has lost its sting, the grave its victory, and the work will grow; but "neither is he that planteth any thing, or he that watereth, but God that giveth the increase. For we are laborers together with God."

A young gentleman having sent for his physician, said: "Now, sir, I wish no more trifling; my desire is that you at once strike at the root of my disease!" "It shall be done," replied the doctor, and lifting his cane, smashed the wine-decanter which stood on the table.

BEAUTY IS WEALTH.

Beauty is as essential to a woman as any other quality; with beauty of form and feature goes beauty of mind and character. Physical beauty is a rounded form, the brightly tinted cheek, the vivacious eye, a certain ease and grace of manner, which indicates a superabundance of physical strength. Very few women possess those qualities, but very many more might possess them who do not. If you feel that you are losing vitality, losing your beauty losing your strength, if you feel that your face which once was plump and rosy, is becoming thin and sallow, that wrinkles (which are the terror to all pretty women) are beginning to appear, take our advice and try that greatest of discoveries, the "MASSAGE FACE CUP," which is the only means known to science to convert a thin and sallow expression into a plump and rosy face. It will transform a face with plain or homely features into an expression of grace and beauty. Physiology teaches us that if we would be strong, we must exercise the muscles which need the developing. Exercise causes the blood to rush to that part of the body called into action, the muscle is fed and strengthened by the fresh blood and will, therefore, develop.

The Massage Cup will do for the face, when properly applied, by contracting and relaxing the muscles, what exercise will do for the other parts of the body.

If you would have a pinkish complexion, if you would like a face plump and rosy, if you would like to remove that "horrid" wrinkle, send One Dollar to us and we will mail you the great "MASSAGE FACE CUP," with full directions for its use. Remember, you can have your money back, if you say so.

OBITUARIES.

McGREGOR—In memory of Miss ANNIE LAURA MCGAHOOM, organist of Zion Church, Meridian circuit.

One beautiful flowery morning in May
Cold and silent in death she lay;
An angel had passed by that way,
And Annie went with him up the shining way.

She was good and beautiful and bright,
And was her parents' and friends' delight;
More beautiful now beyond sorrow's night,
Clad in flowing garments of spotless white.

A beautiful life has ebbed away,
But gone to a home where none ever stray.
Oh, how sad for one so young and gay
To be laid in her casket with the lilies of May.

Farewell, Annie; life's sorrows are all o'er now,
Death's shadows and portals are passed,
And a starry crown you shall wear on your brow;
You were washed in His blood and saved at last.

Now she sleeps in the new-made grave
Close by the church she loved so well,
Where she labored and toiled in Jesus' name;
No more to be called by the sweet-toned bell.

Her sweet voice is hushed in church and home,
No more to be heard with the organ's deep tone;
But when snow she stands by the throne,
Joining with the angels in her heavenly home.

GEO. W. HUFF.

Escatawpa, Miss.

HAUFF—J. K. HAUFF was born in South Carolina, April 23, 1845, and died at Illawara, East Carroll parish, La., Oct. 22, 1896.

Enlisting under the flag of the Confederacy as a mere boy, Mr. Hauff was left at the close of the war but illy equipped for the battle of life. But with the bravery and determination which have characterized his whole life, he went to work with his own hands on a farm to provide for a mother and dependent family. God blessed his well-directed efforts with success, and while he never became rich, he accumulated a sufficiency of this world's goods to satisfy all his needs. He might have been rich had he not given so bountifully of his means to help others. His life was a rare exemplification of devotion to the welfare of others; his hospitality was princely; his home was a place where everybody felt "at home." No men in the community where he lived was more universally respected and loved. His negro laborers loved him, and wept when he died—a beautiful commentary on his life. A mean or low deed was beneath him. The phrase is trite, but true of him, "He was one of nature's noblemen."

Just eight days before he died, during a meeting held by the writer, when he was in vigorous health, he came as an humble penitent to the altar, was converted, and made application for membership in the Methodist Church. By the providence of God he was never received into the church militant, but angels opened the gates and he was led by the Master's hand into the church triumphant. Praise the Lord for his goodness and mercy!

He leaves a son by a former marriage, and a devoted wife and five children, to mourn his loss. May God verify his promises unto them!

HERMAN W. KNICKERBOCKER.

McPHATTER—Mrs. MARY IANNE MCPHATTER, daughter of J. A. and Adaline Row, was born June 4, 1848, in Wilkinson county, Miss.; was converted and joined the Methodist Church, under the ministry of Rev. C. R. Godfrey, at Tunica, La., in 1868; married Mr. George W McPhetter, Aug. 29, 1869, of which union eight children were born, four of whom are living.

Sister McPhatter died at Hazeville, La., May 23, 1897, in full faith, and triumphant. She was not demonstrative in her religion, but was conscientious, and her piety was deep. She loved the house of God, the songs of God's people, and to mingle with God's people. Her home was always open to the preachers of her church, where they were welcomed with old-time fervor.

A few days before she died, in a vision her departed children appeared to her, and said, "Mama, come on!" She knew then her time was near, and gave directions for the burial. We buried her in the graveyard near Eola, La., where her remains may rest "till the appointed time" for quickening.

May God's comforting grace rest upon the husband and children!

H. S. JOHNS.

OWENS—At the home of her daughter, Mrs. John Warren, Pickwick, Marion county, Miss., Mrs. SARAH A. OWENS died June 5, 1897. An appropriate service was conducted by the Rev. Mr. McKowen. She was born April 10, 1824, near Columbia, Marion county, Miss., and resided there until after her marriage in 1847 to Mr. Jesse Owens, of Simpson county. Being left a widow, she removed with her mother to the southwestern part of the county, and there spent her remaining years.

She was ever willing to spend and be spent for the welfare of others. A sweet memorial are her labors of love—her faithful vigils at the bedside of the sick, the needy supplied by her liberal hand, her sweet sympathy that soothed the distressed.

During the war she and her mother were active in support of the church. In their house the itinerant minister found a home; and there being no place of public worship, they furnished a house, in which he continued to fill regular appointments.

In later years she bore without a murmur a complication of misfortunes, together with the torture of a lingering disease; yet with smiles and pleasant words greeted those around her till the dying hour. She spoke of death with the calmness of one preparing for a journey. Taking the hand of each of her children, she said: "I want both of you to meet me. Live as Christians, and be prepared. Oh, the friends I shall meet! I shall soon see mother."

A FRIEND.

HALEY—HUGH ERWIN HALEY departed this life on April 27, 1897, in Madison county, Miss., near the place where he was born, on July 5, 1849. He married Miss M. G. E. Bryant on Jan. 3, 1876. Among the bereaved are his widow and five children, his aged mother, a sister, and three brothers. Most of his life was spent in Madison county, the greater part of the last nine years having been spent in Washington county, Miss. His family being detained in the overflowed Delta, the last five weeks before his death were spent in illness under the same roof with his mother, sister, and one or more of his brothers. In God's merciful providence it was his to enjoy their nursing and comfort, and theirs to be benefited by his death. He joined the church at seventeen years of age, and told me on his death-bed that he was converted later in life. Personally of splendid physique, and one of a family to whom large possessions once belonged, to undergo the ordeal of reduced circumstances and a mortal disease became his lot, like that of thousands of our land. The grace of God alone could suffice. The fond hope is indulged that in the end he enjoyed the comfort of the religion of Jesus Christ, whose name was upon his dying lips.

J. WILSON BROWN.

Madison Station, Miss.

McCRAINE—ROBERT SHAW MCCRAINE was born near Centreville, Miss., on the fifth day of February, 1815. He was married twice—the first time to a Miss Elizabeth Cupit, from which marriage he leaves five children. The second time he was married to Miss Mary Ann Shropshire. From this union he leaves six children. According to his notes, he was converted and joined the Methodist Church on the sixteenth day of November, 1834. His life ended at his home—the same place on which he was born a little over eighty-two years ago—on the twenty-second day of April, 1897. He was buried in the same yard in which he was born.

His long and useful life was not marked by many unusual changes. His disposition was so pure and mild, until his life was one of peace and love. He won and held his friends by kindness. His administration of discipline in his own family was purely Christian, and consequently his children are all good men and women, and reverance his memory. He was heard to remark a few weeks before his death that his children were all careful to see that he wanted nothing. His death was a fitting end to a life like his. The wheels of life stood still, and God took the weary spirit, but his quiet life and example is still perpetuated in the life of children and loved ones.

HIS PASTOR.

NEWSOM—WESLEY CHAMBERS NEWSOM was born Jan. 4, 1826, and died at his home in Livingston parish, La., May 7, 1897. He was married to Miss Elizabeth Lea, Nov. 1, 1848, with whom he lived happily for nearly half a century, and preceded her to their home beyond. He was happily converted and joined the M. E. Church, South, in his youth, and remained faithful till death. He was a steward and trusted counselor in matters of the church. His life was without reproach; possessed of a kind and gentle nature, a mild and even temper, and a spirit of thoughtfulness for others, characterized every act. The cause of Christ, and particularly his pastor and circuit, had a special place in his memory and prayers.

His health had been bad for some months before his death. He was conscious the end was nigh, and spoke confidently of his assurances of an inheritance among the saints in light. While visiting him just before he was stricken down, with feeble voice he sang, "O tell me no more," and, "My latest sun is sinking fast."

Is your life what you want it to be? Is it satisfactory? I hear people sometimes say in prayer meeting, "I want a few crumbs from the Master's table." Well, you may have them if you want to; crumbs are good for cats and dogs; but I am going for the "whole loaf." The Lord doesn't want his people to live on crumbs; he is longing to give them a whole loaf.—D. L. Moody.

North Texas Female College,

SHERMAN, TEXAS.

The continued increase in the number of young ladies in attendance at this college is evidence of the satisfaction of its patrons with its management. The equipment consists in part of 33 upright and 2 concert grand pianos, a six-inch object glass, Alvan Clark & Sons telescope, and probably the best chemical and physical laboratory of any female college in the South. With its 6 male and 11 female professors, it offers unusual advantages for mental training, and the lovely grounds, ornamented with two fountains, a lily pond and beautiful shrubs and flowers, is conducive to happiness and esthetic culture. The dormitories are home-like and equipped with all modern conveniences. We believe that Louisiana girls would find the climate here pleasant and healthful. For catalogue of this live and progressive school address

MRS. L. A. KIDD KEY, President.

P. S.—I desire to call especial attention to the fact that Mr. Harold Von Mickwitz will be Director of the Conservatory of Music. He was a pupil of Leschetizky, who was also teacher of Paderewski. He is personally recommended by Leschetizky, Fanaie Bloomfield Zeisler and Victor Herbert.

The Holman Self-Pronouncing S. S. Teacher's Bible.

Divinity Circuit, Round Corners, etc.

CONTAINS THE FOLLOWING HELPS TO THE STUDY OF THE BIBLE.

Concordance, with Contexts, over 40,000 References; Index to Persons, Places and Subjects, 16,000 References; Scripture Atlas, with Index; Glossary of Bible Words; Bible Calendar; Summary and Analyses of the Old and New Testaments.

A Self-Pronouncing Dictionary of Proper Names and Foreign Words contained in the Bible, comprising about 3,500 words, giving the pronunciation, the meaning, and the location of the text where the word occurs for the first time.

Exhaustive Articles on Biblical History, Geography, Topography, Natural History, Ethnology, Botany, Chronology, Music and Poetry; a Complete Harmony of the Gospels, Tables of Parables, Miracles, Prophecies, Prayers, Money, Weights and Measures, Jewish Sects and Orders, etc.

TWELVE FULL-PAGE MAPS IN COLORS.

Every proper name in the text is syllabified and accented, and has the vowels marked according to the most authoritative modern standards of pronunciation. The text is in exact conformity with that of the world-famous Oxford S. S. Teacher's Bible. All the valuable "Helps to the Study of the Bible" contained in the Oxford Bible are retained.

The only Teacher's Bible with a self-pronouncing text. No similar Bible was ever obtainable heretofore; in fact, no publishers ever attempted its publication.

"The essence of fifty expensive volumes, by men of sacred learning, is condensed in these 'Helps.'"

The large-type (Bourgeois) edition sells to persons who are not subscribers for $5. Our subscribers get it, on conditions pecified below, for $2.35. The same Bible in Minion type, which is somewhat smaller than Bourgeois, we offer to our subscribers, on conditions named below, for $1.55. To those who are not subscribers we sell it at $3.15. We also handle an edition in still smaller type (Emerald). Our subscribers get this for $1.00.

In order to get anyone of these at these rates it is necessary to pay your subscription one year in advance, viz., to July, '98. (A little later it will be August, '98.)

For twenty cents we will have your name engraved in gilt letters on the outside of the book.

Corinth District Conference.

The Corinth District Conference was held at Baldwyn, Miss., Jnly 1–4, 1897. Onr faithfnl presiding elder, Rev. H. R. Tucker, presided with credit to himself and to the satisfaction of all present. In his address to the Conference he stated that the district was in better condition than at any previous time, spiritually and financially, which statement was verified by the reports of the several committees.

Rev. W. T. J. Sullivan, D. D., preached the opening sermon on Thnrsday, at 11 A. M., from Matt. xvi, 18, to the edification of all. He preached a most excellent sermon.

Bro. J. D. Simpson was recommended to the Annual Conference for deacon's orders.

James D. Boggs, James D. McWhortor, Edgar Bizzard, Wm. N. Duncan and Earl A. Tucker were licensed to preach.

Earl A. Tncker and W. R. Williams were recommended to the Annnal Conference for admission on trial into the traveling connection.

Bishops' fund was paid in full; $723.50 of onr assessment of $1,000 for foreign missions, and 50 per cent. on domestic missions, have been provided for, most of which has already been collected, and onr preachers vouched for all subscriptions. We believe this will be the most prosperous year ever experienced in the history of the Corinth district. The Board of Education raised abont $35 to aid worthy yonng men in preparing themselves for the ministry. Seventy-nine dollars was raised for our Orphans' Home at Water Valley. Onr district is $270 in advance of last year on ministerial support.

The following paper, offered by Rev. W. T. J. Sullivan and Dr. J. Y. Murray, was unanimously adopted:

The Corinth District Conference, in session at Baldwyn, Miss., Jnly 2, 1897, hereby send fraternal salntation to the local preachers of the district. This District Conference is moved to express regret that so many of you are absent from this Conference. Your presence is dne and needed. It is a matter of regret that so many of our local preachers are seldom present at their Quarterly Conferences, and that some of them seem disinclined to preach within the bounds of their own charges, and to be helpers to the preacher in charge. We think it right and proper in itself, and eminently due the District Conference, that a local preacher whose license is to be renewed shou d himself be present, or make the request in writing through his pastor. We regret that any local preacher should fail to present to the fonrth Quarterly Conference the written report, required by law, of his work for the year, then closing. We seriously believe that the name of the local preacher who neglects this report shonld not be put to vote for the passage of his character. Our great desire is to see the complete and hearty blending of the local and itinerant ministry in one great compact movement for the advancement of onr evangelical Methodism and for winning the world to Christ.

Resolved, That the presiding elder and preachers in charge are requested to convey the substance of this paper to the local preachers, and to nrge the importance of a faithfnl discharge of their duties. We also regret the absence of so many of our laymen from this Conference, and urge the importance of electing delegates who can and will attend.

Sister Bynnm, district secretary of W. P. and H. M. S., read an interesting paper on their work, which she was requested to send to the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE for pnblication.

Dr. J. Y. Murray, W. R. Ramsey, L. T. Carpentor and E. C. Hinds were elected delegates to the Annual Conference; Rev. M. T. McLain and L. W. Worsham, alternates.

Our League work is advancing, and we will have a District League Conference at Booneville before a great while.

Dr. J. W. Malone, president of Grenada Collegiate Institnte, and Rev. G. W. Bachman (colporteur) were with ns, looking after the interest of the chnrch; Bro. Malone soliciting patronage to our school at Grenada, and Bro. Bachman distributing good books and literatnre. Glad to learn that Bro. Bachman sold abont $50 worth of good books while in Baldwyn.

Mr. Editor, we were sorry yon conld not be with ns, bnt our paper, the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE, was well represented.

The following resolntions were adopted:

Resolved, That the thanks of this District Conference are eminently due and are hereby tendered to the citizens of the growing town of Baldwyn for their many courtesies and royal entertainment of the members of the Conference and all visitors; to the officials and membership of the several churches for tendering to the Conference the nse of their respective houses of worship; to the organist and choir for their sweet, soul stirring music, and to onr secretary (J. W. Treadwell) for faithfully and so cheerfully performing the arduous dnties of his office.

Resolved, That we desire to make special mention of Bro. W. M. Robinson for his untiring and very successful labors in looking after the personal comfort of the members of this Conference, and many other things, among which was the fnrnishing of an abundance of refreshing ice-water.

Resolved, That onr presiding elder be instrncted to request the Baldwyn Indicator and NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE to pnblish these resolutions.

Kossuth was selected as the place for the next District Conference.

Mr. Editor, I will add that we have closed a meeting of — days, assisted by Bro. G. H. Lipcomb. While there were only two conversions, we believe mnch good was accomplished. Bro. Lipscomb is an earnest, practical, Holy-Ghost preacher. Our association with him was a blessing to our life. Sister Lipscomb made an earnest appeal for missions to onr W. M. Society of Baldwyn, Tnesday, the sixth. We enjoyed her most excellent address.

To improve the appetite, restore healthy action to the bowels, promote digestion, and regulate all the bodily functions, Ayer's Pills are the best. As a mild, but effective aperient, no pill is in greater demand or more highly recommended by the medical profession.

Mansfield Female College.

As I write I hear the steady continued stroke of the hammer as it is plied riveting on pickets around our beautiful campus. The fifty-foot street that is being opened just south of the college campus will add much to the appearance of the property from that street. The campus will now have two entrances instead of one. The new session hall standing about fifteen feet to the right of the walk entering the building from the south. Arrangements have been made for work to continue during the Summer.

All who visited us during our commencement were delighted to see the changes that had been and were being made on the buildings and grounds.

We have a good body of faithful Christian workers as teachers for next year. We think we shall have to employ one or two more. We expect to have three canvassers in the field during the Summer, and are sanguine enough to hope to have our present rooms all taken by Christmas.

HUMILITY.

The bird that soars on highest wing
Builds on the ground her lowly nest;
And she that doth most sweetly sing
Sings in the shade, where all things rest;
In lark and nightingale we see
What honor hath humility.

When Mary chose "the better part,"
She meekly sat at Jesus' foot;
And Lydia's gently opened heart
Was made for God's own temple meet;
Fairest and best adorned is she
Whose clothing is humility.

The saint that wears heaven's brightest crown
In deepest adoration bends;
The weight of glory bows him down
Then most, when most his soul ascends;
Nearest the throne itself must be
The footstool of humility.

Delhi District Conference.

This body met in the Union Church at Tallulah, July 1. The lack of a pleasant place to hold the Conference sessions, by reason of the smallness of the church and the intense heat, was supplied by the courteous tender of the parish court-house for the use of the Conference. Rev. B. F. White, P. E., was president, having failed in his efforts to secure the attendance of Bishop Hendrix. His interest in the welfare of the district constantly appeared here, as in his quarterly rounds, upon which he spends almost his whole time. Mr. White jocosely remarks that he is now an occasional visitor at Mrs. White's. The kindly, considerate and genuinely helpful character of this presiding elder's words and work has endeared him to the people and preachers alike, and on the Delhi district, at least, there is no open question about the modification of the presiding eldership.

The attendance of about one-half the members of the Conference upon the first day's session was prevented by a wreck on the V., S. and P. R. R., and the well-prepared program was on this account not fully carried out. Rev. E. N. Evans' sermon on missions was equal to our expectations of this genial preacher. Rev. T. H. McClendon was to have delivered a special sermon on church extension, but, failing to carry out the program, he preached Saturday morning on "The Spirit of Christ." Other brethren preached to the edification of the excellent congregations that assembled in the spacious court-room to hear the Word.

Attendance upon the sessions of the Conference by the residents of Tallulah was very poor, owing probably to the great heat; thermometer sometimes 102 degrees Fahrenheit in the shade. But the business of the Conference was carefully attended to in every detail. The ADVOCATE came in for words of commendation. Reports and resolutions touching all the general interests of the church were received and passed. One resolution I wish to insert.

Whereas, In view of the low spiritual condition of the church in the bounds of the Delhi district; therefore, be it

Resolved, That Friday before the fourth Sunday in July be set apart as a day of fasting and prayer by the District Conference; and that this resolution be brought by the ministry before all their congregations, that the baptism of the Holy Spirit may come down upon our ministry and people.

(Signed) J. B. CASSITY,
T. H. MCCLENDON.

The "whereas" by which this resolution is introduced, as humiliating as it may seem, is the inevitable conclusion of an analysis of the reports of the preachers. One exception to this gloomy view is found in the report of the consecrated and enthusiastic Conference host, Rev. P. R. Knickerbocker, whose people are said to be in "splendid spiritual state." The adjective is well chosen. It is the privilege of the children of the kingdom to have resting upon them "the Spirit of glory and of God." The profound concern for the growth of the church in holiness, indicated in the remarks that followed the introduction of this resolution, seem to point to the set time when Jehovah will arise and have mercy upon Zion.

Further analysis of the reports reveals the great neglect of the church machinery. Two works only reported a financial system. Mr. Hatfield said that the DeSaird work had a financial system, and that was Dr. Helmick. This noble Methodist layman is a host in himself, and to such as he the permanence of the church in many a locality may be accredited. The discussion of the financial problem was free, and it is hoped that the preachers will take in hand the matter of organizing their Boards of Stewards. The suffering and anxiety that has been caused by sheer neglect and indifference of the temporal necessities of the ministry will one day appear as a weighty account to settle.

The Epworth League has not been much in use on the Delhi district. At present there is but one chapter in operation—that at Lake Providence. The League has been shown to be specially adapted to the circuit and country work, and is demonstrably a necessity to the effectiveness of our system. It has come none too soon. As the result of the Conference discussion of the subject several Leagues will be organized before long. If a district organizer for each Conference district could be secured by the Conference League Board, it is probable that organizations could be effected on nine-tenths of the works in the Louisiana Conference.

The Sunday-school interests were carefully considered. Many difficulties lie in the way, and the preachers are working nobly to save the children; but the circuits are large—only one station in the district—and skillful and consecrated laymen are few. Bro. S. Whited, one of the most successful Sunday-school workers in the State, has demonstrated at the Colony what can be done on the circuits. Others will be encouraged to do as he is doing.

The interests of the W. F. M. S. and of the W. P. and H. M. S. were well looked after. Both organizations are represented within the district.

S. L. Riggs, a scion of one of the most prominent Methodist families in Southwest Louisiana, was licensed to preach, and recommended to the Ministers' Education Aid Society for assistance in completing his college course at Centenary. The work of this society should receive the most cordial support, as nothing is better calculated to increase the efficiency of our ministry. Rev. J. M. Martin was recommended for admission on trial.

The following laymen were elected delegates to the Annual Conference: S. Whited, H. C. Voss, A. S. Helmick, D. T. Chapman; alternates, J. M. Martin, A. E. Adams.

FITZGERALD SALE PARKER,
Secretary.

Jackson District Conference.

The Jackson District Conference met at Flora, July 8 and 9; Presiding Elder Norsworthy in the chair. R. S. Ricketts and C. C. Campbell were elected secretaries. All the pastors were present except one, who was prevented by sickness. The attendance of laymen was not so good. Reports from the charges gave gratifying evidences of improvement in the various departments of church work. There are, however, several hard places, strongholds of the enemy, which are yet to be taken, whether by siege or storm remains to be seen; but the brethren who are at the forefront in the battle are true men, and the prayers and sympathy of the church are with them.

Special programs had been arranged on Sunday-schools, missions, and Epworth Leagues, and carefully prepared papers were read and discussed with interest. The opening sermon by Bro. T. L. Mellen was a strong presentation of the condition and claims of our foreign missions, and the speech of Dr. DuBose on Epworth Leagues, which closed the business of the Conference, was bright and full of hope for this new arm of church service.

Our schools were represented in stirring addresses by Bro. J. W. Chambers and Prof. J. A. Moore for Whitworth and Millsaps College, respectively, both of which institution have just closed successful sessions.

The report of the Committee on Education highly commended the management of the two colleges, and emphasized the obligations of our people to patronize our own schools. The following resolutions by Bro. T. L. Mellen in reference to Millsaps College were adopted and ordered sent to the ADVOCATE for publication.

"We commend Millsaps College as worthy of the patronage of our people. The faculty is able and efficient. All expenses are low, and every facility is afforded for the obtaining of a superior collegiate education at a minimum cost. The Law Department, under the charge of Dr. Mayes and his distinguished assistants, affords the best opportunity to be had in this State for a law student to be thoroughly equipped for his life-work, and we are glad that our college undertakes to 'make lawyers by merit and not by statute.' And as citizens of this State, we urge our legislators to repeal the inequitable statute which gives the law students of the University of Mississippi an unfair advantage over the students of other colleges of equal or superior merit."

Mrs. R. R. Parker, district secretary of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society, was present, making friends for the good cause she represents, and stirring up the minds of the brethren by way of remembrance. An excellent report from the Parsonage and Home Mission Society, also, was read by Mrs. Parker, the efficient secretary, Miss Addie Purnell, being unable to attend the Conference.

Another effort will be made to improve the home of our presiding elder, and there is good prospect that the old house will be remodeled, or a new one built in a more pleasant locality.

The licenses of R. L. Webb and W. E. M. Brogan, local preachers, were renewed, and W. A. Terry, having been duly examined, was recommended to the Annual Conference for deacon's orders.

The ADVOCATE was duly remembered, as the following extract from report of Committee on Publishing Interests will show:

Whereas, . . . The wisdom, ability and conservatism which characterize the present management of the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE, together with its denominational claim, merit and maintain an almost undivided sway throughout the district; therefore, be it

Resolved, That with gratitude to God for this instrumentality, we pledge ourselves to increase its circulation and usefulness.

The hospitality of the people of Flora abounded. It was good to be there.

Delegates to the Annual Conference were elected as follows: W. H. Cassell, W. E. Harris, C. C. Campbell, and L. A. Magruder; alternates, R. S. Ricketts and E. Middleton.

The next session of the Conference will be held at Canton.

R. S. RICKETTS, Sec'y.

Brandon District Conference.

The Brandon District Conference was held at Morton, Miss., July 9–11, 1897. The presiding elder of the district, W. W. Simmons, presided with his usual grace and dignity. He possesses in an eminent degree the qualifications of head and heart requisite to fill successfully his responsible position. While the Conference was business from beginning to end, that religious fervor and brotherly love so characteristic of our beloved Methodism pervaded all its proceedings. The preaching was of a high order, and full of the Holy Ghost. All of the traveling preachers except three were in attendance. Sickness of families prevented these three from coming. Of the thirty-two local preachers within the bounds of the district, fourteen were present. The delegation of laymen was unusually large.

Most of the first day was spent in hearing reports of pastors. From these reports we gather the following statistics and facts: Number of active Epworth Leagues in district, 7—others to be organized soon; 40 Sunday-schools; 64 (?) organizations; 54 (?) church-houses, 16 parsonages. Most of church houses and parsonages in good condition. Several new churches recently built, and church property added to and made more valuable. About 250 NEW ORLEANS and 28 Nashville Advocates taken. Finances of the district, as a whole, in good shape. Considerable missionary territory. Some of it unoccupied on account of lack of means to pay missionaries to preach the gospel to these destitute localities. Spiritual condition in most of the charges good and improving. This is evidenced by large congregations, the increase of prayer and class meetings, the number of family altars, and accessions to the churches.

Bros. Edward C. Bott, Jno. R. Summers and Robt. L. Moore stood approved examinations, and were licensed to preach.

Bro. R. W. Burton was recommended to the Annual Conference for elder's orders.

Delegates to Annual Conference: Dr. Irvin Miller, W. M. Thornton, A. A. Breckinridge, and S. D. Miller.

Among the prominent visitors were President Jno. W. Chambers, of Whitworth Female College, and President J. W. Beeson, of the E. M. F. College. Each made appropriate remarks explaining the work done by his school, and telling of its prospects. Bro. Chambers preached at 11 A. M., Friday. It was a fine effort, and much enjoyed by all who heard it.

The good people of Morton of all denominations vied with each other in entertaining the Conference. We place Morton against any town of its size on earth for kind, hospitable people.

The session, as a whole, was a complete success. It was one of the largest, most enthusiastic and religious in the history of the Brandon District Conference.

The session of 1898 will be held at Lawrence.

Surely God is blessing the labors of his people in Brandon district. Let us show our appreciation of his mercies and blessings by humble, godly lives, and an increase of zeal for his glory.

F. B. WOODLEY, Sec.

The Louisiana Chautauqua.

With each passing day the interest manifested by those in attendance at the Chautauqua shows that this session is to be one of great results. The majority of persons present are taking the course in the Summer School. While there are others who are not so engaged, yet none who have come to spend a few days among the picturesque hills of Ruston will leave without saying they have gained something which will be of value during the coming months. As the bee gathers sweets for use during the days far distant, so the Chautauquan is now treasuring up food for the future. The association, with the different teachers present, will be helpful to both young and old. Social life here is very different from that met with at ordinary Summer resorts. None of those at the Chautauqua seem to be "Summer people" at all, and it is this which should draw persons who are desirous of having the fellowship of such cultured minds to this place.

Mrs. Williams, the noble manager, is doing a work that will cause every Louisianian to be proud of her name.

The lectures of the past week have been exceedingly attractive. On the fourteenth Mr. H. M. Furman, of New Orleans, gave an address on "National Unrest," which was really masterful. He spoke of the American people, and especially of the restlessness that is shown by the masses in the national politics of today.

Prof. Chas. Lane, of Atlanta, Ga., gave two lectures during the week. The subject of the first lecture was, "Analysis of Laughter," and the effect upon the audience during the whole discourse showed that, as a humorist, Mr. Lane has no superior and scarcely an equal. The second of his lectures was entitled, "Lessons Not Learned in Books." There was a vein of humor running through the whole discourse, and the lessons mentioned were ones to profit every hearer. One thing he mentioned for the teachers to learn was "thoroughness," and his words, "Learn to know that you know what you know," were just the ones to express his idea. He also urged them to learn not to be idle in any respect, and "instead of needing a larger acre, we often have many an untilled corner." To the boys and girls of to-day Mr. Lane spoke of learning to live within their parents' means, and of learning to lead a life of activity, and remember that "things slowly obtained are retained."

On Sunday, July 11, Mr. R. O. Alexander addressed the Chautauqua on "Sunday school Work." His earnest remarks about how to build up Sunday-schools when they are apparently dead were eagerly listened to by the audience, and many teachers were given new ideas to carry away to various parts of the State.

Although the session of the Assembly will last only a few weeks, yet draughts of knowledge taken during these Summer days will cause all present to carry home a fresh desire to "drink deep at the Pierian spring."

Epworth League Echoes.

About 150 Mississippians, and in all between fifteen and twenty thousand Leaguers from all parts of the United States and Canada, are now in Toronto attending the third International Convention of Epworth Leagues. What a mighty host! What a band of workers! What a vast army of young soldiers assembled in this Queen City of the North to learn how to do more and better work for Jesus in the future than they have ever done in the past!

It was my privilege and pleasure to conduct one of the sunrise prayer meetings this morning. How impressive to me was the scene! Testimonies to the saving power of the same blessed gospel were given by Leaguers from Maine and Florida, Rhode Island and Wisconsin, Kansas and Pennsylvania, Canada and England, beside nearly every State in the Union not heretofore mentioned.

Many touching incidents have occurred during the Convention, showing how loving the feeling and tender the sympathy that exists between the people of Canada and those of the United States. Of these and other things in detail I hope to write for benefit of your readers upon my return to the South.

I hope to be able to look in upon the workers and students at Chautauqua, N. Y., on my return home.

In company with Rev. J. P. McFerrin, I am being delightfully entertained in one of the finest homes in the city, just opposite the Metropolitan Cathedral. Our host (Dr. Sweetnam) is one of the leading physicians of Toronto, and he, with his charming wife, are prominent members of the Metropolitan Church.

The weather is delightful. We are all happy, and we trust that the same heavenly Father who has brought us thus far will guide us safely home.

TOPIC FOR JULY.

ST. PAUL IN SOCIAL RELATIONS.

JULY 25.—THE PRISONER OF JESUS CHRIST.

(Eph. iii. 1; Acts xvi. 23; xxiv. 23–27; xxviii. 16.)

Paul's life is related to Christ on all sides. The relation was that of cause to effect. Paul worked for Christ, taught for Christ, suffered for Christ, and was imprisoned because of his allegiance to Christ. This relation was eminently personal. Paul did not fight or suffer for abstract principles, but for his Master, the personal Christ. Principles are all right, but they fail to dominate the heart until they enter it wrapped in the warm bosom of personality. God give us a view of the Master and help us to let him into our hearts!

1. (a) The period of Paul's imprisonment is probably the most important of this wonderful man's history. Although there is some difference of opinion, it is our view that this was the most prolific of his life. We believe that from Rome he wrote several of his letters. (b) His imprisonment was conducive to mental and spiritual activity. Freedom of soul is compensation for imprisonment of body. The prison was a blessing to him and to the world. Bunyan wrote Pilgrim's Progress in prison. The rainbow is fashioned in the horrid womb of the storm. "Paradise Lost," with its sublime imagery, was born in a blind man's brain. This dark experience of Paul may have shut out the beauties of earth, but it revealed the glories of the skies. Within the darkness of the prison was fashioned an experience that arches the firmament of Christianity to day.

2. (a) How is it, you ask, that God allows Paul, after devoting his life to his service, to spend his old age in prison? This seems strange to some. The answer is, "Spiritual debts are not paid in physical coin." Man reaps what he sows. He is not paid for his goodness by prosperity and physical happiness. Paul was compensated for his service in spiritual coin. His body was humbled, but his soul exalted. (b) His external life is in dark contrast to his internal. It is lost in the dim light of the prison, and finally goes out in the darkness of obscurity. Not so with his spiritual life. His path shines brighter and brighter unto the perfect day. Though we know not how he died, and have no dying message from his lips, his life points inevitably to heaven.

THOUGHTS.

What doest thou more than others?

"Religion is age in youth and youth in age."

"Paint an angel black, and it is enough to make him pass for a devil."

"Soldiers are made for service, not for brass buttons and epaulets." Christians likewise.

"The greatest genius is he who consumes the most knowledge and converts it into mind."

HOW GRACIOUS AND HOW WISE.

How gracious and how wise
Is our chastising God!
And, oh, how rich the blessings are
Which blossom from his rod!

He lifts it up on high
With pity in his heart,
That every stroke his children feel
May grace and peace impart.

Instructed thus they bow,
And own his sovereign sway;
[illegible] steps back
To his forsaken way.

Communications.

The Teacher's Province in the Promotion of Christian Enterprise in the Minds and Hearts of His Pupils, and in the Upbuilding of Christian Character.

(Speech delivered by J. A. Lewis before Sunday-school Conference, Aberdeen district, and ordered published by the Conference.)

Sunday-school teachers, especially in the country, have many difficulties to contend with. Some of these must be overcome before real success can be realized. In many localities the idea prevails that the Sunday school is a kind of side-show, gotten up for social entertainment of the older people, and to keep the children out of mischief. It is expected for all to meet and have a good time, while the weather is good in the Spring and early Summer. As the weather gets warmer it begins to decline, and by the first blast of September it has gone to seed, there to remain till the whip-poor-will sings his melody the next year.

Another difficulty is this: So many people are opposed to the expense of the literature. They say the Bible and the old catechism are so much cheaper. Another difficulty is, so many think the Sunday school necessary only for children, and that grown-up people, especially if married, know enough. If they attend, they go as so much baggage, and not to work. It is the duty of the teachers to disabuse their minds of these foolish notions and to teach them that we live in a new era.

Sunday schools are of the church, and should be by the church and for the church, and the teacher is the sub-pastor. What we need at this time is shepherding. What would we think of all the preachers going into Winter quarters and hibernating till the flowers send forth their fragrance in the Spring? It takes twelve months in the year, with all the improved implements of mental and moral culture, to meet the growing demands of the people. A Sunday-school teacher should be ready and willing to look after the mental and moral welfare of the people in the absence of the pastor.

Who should be appointed Sunday-school teachers? The best men and women of each community. Let us consider for a moment the qualifications necessary for a teacher. The teacher should be the best man or woman of the community. It is an easy matter to get good work if the pay is good. But good and efficient work is not apt to be done unless the heart is in the work, where there is no compensation. This inward qualification that prompts men and women to work for the Master, for the glory of God and the prosperity of Zion is essential. They should be social. The gospel is persuasive. We should cultivate the social elements of our nature; make ourselves have a kind word for every one, and especially the poor. Teachers should be prompt. Winter and Summer, rain or sun, should not keep them from their place. A teacher should have common sense. He should know how to say the right thing at the right time and in the right way. He should know when to begin and when to quit. Quitting sense is essential. Teachers must read. A teacher to be successful must be up to date. He should not only read the Bible and other good books, but he should read first-class periodicals. This is a progressive age. The world is moving along almost on every line. Sunday-school teachers must keep up with the procession. In education, from the country schools, among the poor, to the highest universities, we see progress. In business lines we find great progress; time- and labor saving implements; and each year supercedes all other years in the past, by producing something better. Such is the progress of this rapid age, that the man or woman that reaches the fiftieth or sixtieth year of their lives, is older than Methuselah was, if you will count thoughts and deeds for years. While such progress is being made in business and education, the church can not afford to fall behind. The progress of the age is not confined to chartered schools and crowded cities. No. Many of our country boys and girls are coming rapidly to the front. Many of the bare-footed boys that are driving the mule now will help to man the ship of Church and State in days to come. In view of all these facts teachers must read. We must educate or be left.

How are we to teach to promote a spirit of Christian enterprise in the hearts and minds of the pupils? The teacher that reads the questions to the class from the Quarterly, then quits, may be and should be regarded as a back number, and placed on the supernumerary list. To illustrate: After the Scripture lesson has been explained, other good thoughts should be presented, and each lesson should be made personal. Let us illustrate: Not long since we had a lesson on forgiveness; I, as teacher, tried to teach each member of the class that he must personally forgive his enemy and not hold malice against anyone. Again, we had a lesson on faith and works. After the Scripture lesson was brought out, we made it a personal matter and asked how each one could evidence their faith by their works. We mentioned the bringing of irreligious children and the children of irreligious parents into the Sunday-school, visiting the sick, helping the poor and supporting the gospel. Again, we have a lesson each quarter on temperance. After discussing the Scripture lesson, we try to teach the class what an enemy the rum power is to our country; how it has blighted so many homes, how it has broken so many hearts of mothers and pauperized so many children. Then our duty as individuals is discussed, and each one is made to understand that he could not afford to vote a whisky ticket, nor sign a whisky petition or to vote for any person that would do so. Again, we have lessons on missions. We not only teach what Paul and his associates did in their day, but the great missionary movement of the present day. How and by whom the gospel has been sent to China, Japan, Corea, Brazil, Mexico, and other countries where they knew not Christ. How the glad news of salvation, first proclaimed to the shepherds on the hills of Bethlehem, is now being preached by our missionaries, from the burning sands of the Torrid Zone to the snow-capped mountains of Scandinavia. We try to make each one feel that he has a part in this great work; that they, one and all, must go or send.

Pardon a personal reference. For thirty-two years I have tried to do my duty as a teacher and superintendent. While the results have not been as satisfactory as desired, yet I have lived to see seven of my class licensed to preach the gospel. Sixteen others are teachers, and many others, though following the humbler walks of life, are faithful and liberal. After a careful review, I have the pleasure to state that not a single member of Friendship Sunday-school has made a drunkard or a gambler or has ever been indicted for violation of the laws of our country. My humble prayer is for greater usefulness in the future.

Correspondence.

Letter from Mrs. A. Walter-Fearn.

Dear Dr. Yates:

Such experiences! You know I wrote you we would make our second trip to Chang Chow about April 12. Well, we went, and while our stay in the city was marked by little beyond the usual, our experiences by the way were worth recounting. For the last year our boat-trips have been marked by a strange fatality in the shape of head-winds; but this time we had a spanking wind straight from the back, and so reached our destination long before we had expected. We held a clinic, which was small on account of the rain, but removed a nasal polypus for the richest man, and the most influential, in the place. This was a wonderful thing in our favor, and we expect to reap the benefits in a material way by his renting us a house in the Fall. Our going to Chang Chow to live is still sub rosa, except among the missionaries, and while the natives are seemingly not averse to our visiting their city, we don't know how they will receive us when they know we are coming to live among them. The wind changed and blew us back half our journey in four hours; but from this half-way point, Wu-sih, it was a head-wind to Yang Yok, but splendid to Nanzing; so we decided to go and take tea with Mr. Pilley, who is living alone there, and is not very well just now. No one knew of our change of plan, and no one would expect us at home for two or three days more—this because of an unexpected good fortune in the wind.

At eleven o'clock A. M. we started across the Great Lake. This lake is about one hundred and fifty miles long, and interspersed with seventy-two rock-bound islands. No one knew the road any more than that we had to go directly south, but we supposed we would meet boats and enquire. In the middle of the lake is a mountain, Dong Ding San, where for years our mission has had a station, and for this mountain we were looking. The wind continued fine, and for hours we sailed and sailed under a cloudless sky with not another boat in sight. Mountain after mountain, barren of all signs of life, loomed up in the shadowy distance; revived our hope that our island was found, only to make our disappointment greater when the outlines became distinct. Night came on, and the full moon, encircled by a ring, shone out brightly. Our preacher's boat was lashed to our side to make it safe for us to venture on such a large body of water. Little choppy waves, together with the ring around the moon, reminded us of all the shipwreck tales we had ever read, and we anticipated a storm on the morrow. At nine I went to bed, and left them still looking for Dong Ding San. At ten Dr. Fearn followed, with the remark that he had given the Law-da (captain) orders to sail on until he found something. Hardly had he gotten in bed before I remarked that it was not pleasant to sleep standing on one's head, and as the boat suddenly lurched further on her side, I demanded that the sail be lowered. As Dr. Fearn got up to speak to the Law-da, sudden crashing noises began. Before he got to the door I was behind him, but even before this from the back of the boat came the sound of that awful funeral wail that precedes death and accompanies a funeral. Just in these twenty minutes everything had changed. The wind had become cyclonic, our sail almost swept the water across the small boat at our side, and the moon, our only hope, was fast becoming lost in the clouds. The boatmen dropped the ropes and wailed. On one side waves several feet high beat us unmercifully, and on the other the small boat crashed against us with terrific force. The waves swept over it, and occasionally almost sucked it under the "Epworth," our boat. "Put that sail down," I screamed to the Law-da. I will never forget how he looked—a black figure standing straight against the mast—and never will I forget the answer, "If I do, we will be capsized or driven against the rocks!" Just then we got in a trough of the waves, and the crashing was awful. Dr. Fearn and the preacher sprang out on deck and grasped the rope that lashed the boats together, and in this way held the boats steadier. The wind became almost like a hurricane and the night blacker; death stared us in the face. Miles and miles off in the shadowy distance, and directly in our path, we saw the dim outline of a mountain. For this we were making. "Can't you stop at one of these small islands?" I asked, but was told we had to go where we were being driven. Dr. Fearn only had on his pajamas, and the north wind was almost icy cold. He called to me to bring him his coat, and I vaguely wondered what difference it made whether he was cold or not, since there could be but a question of minutes between us and eternity. I got my warm-wadded, fur-trimmed cloak around him, which protected him some as he sat on the floor of the deck. I have always heard how one's whole life passes in review before one's mental view when facing death; so I stood in the door and tried to think of my life, but, to save my life, I couldn't. I kept thinking of how cold Dr. Fearn must be, and of how little use all the clothes in the boat would be a little later. Then it occurred to me that no one knew where we were, and how long, how long it would be before our twelve bodies would be found—if ever! In the midst of my thoughts Dr. Fearn called, "Annie, do you feel nervous?" and when I said, "Yes," he asked if I couldn't have faith in God. "Oh, I have faith," I answered, "but I also thought that we only had one time to die, and it might suit the Lord to make it this time." The storm increased, but the greater the wind the greater our speed, and after two long hours our boats shot in behind the mountain, and the sudden calm seemed almost supernatural. As we neared the mountain we thought its outlines looked familiar, and a little later we found we had been driven, without our knowledge, to Dong Ding San. Here we anchored just a little after midnight, with thankful hearts and tired bodies. We decided, when morning came, to keep in the direction of the wind, which seemed still in the direction of Nanzing. From here we knew the route, so continued without further trouble. We reached Nanzing just twenty-four hours later than we expected, took tea with Mr. Pilley, and almost at once started for home. No one dared go back by the Great Lake, so we returned by canal, which took us by Soochow, but, like the "ships that pass in the night," we passed our old home early Saturday evening and reached Yang Yok, Sunday morning. Dr. Fearn had fever for several days, rheumatism in his knees until to-day, and is still miserable with a bad cold. This may give you some idea of the experiences we are apt to meet with at any time; only I don't think very many enjoy the weird privilege of listening to their own funeral wail, not even in China.

The following Wednesday was the anniversary of our wedding. Miss Haygood and Dr. Polk came from Soochow, and Archdeacon and Mrs. Thomson from Shanghai, to spend this time with us. Tuesday we spent at home, and that night Miss Haygood and Dr. Polk returned to Soochow. Wednesday the Thomsons spent the day climbing and rambling with us on our splendid mountain. Just now there are flowers of every description and color, and in the greatest profusion. We had tiffin on the projecting point of a precipice, which overlooks the lake in front and forms a part of the great amphitheatre of rugged rocky heights around. Here we found the egg shells and other reminders of the day two weeks before, when the Hearns had taken this same trip with us. We visited some magnificent old temples, and came back home down a mountain-path steep enough to make us shudder as we looked down its rocky depths below. How I wish you could see this place and enjoy these climbs with us! This Wednesday was a great feast and worship day among the Chinese. The temples were full of worshipers. Everybody we met was loaded with strings of ghost money for burning on the graves, and as we neared the City Gate we saw great masses of people. The city wall seemed a seething, living mass, and for a moment we thought we could never get through; but Dr. Fearn went ahead and opened the way, while we followed in single file. I was the last, and as Mrs. Thomson's figure disappeared through the gate I almost screamed, until I saw Dr. Fearn's mountain-stick waving a foot or two before me, and I knew he was very near. I had never seen such a crowd, except that time when we accidentally got into an execution at the Great Pagoda in Soochow; but then I didn't have sense enough to be afraid. Now I know how little it takes to excite a crowd and cause trouble. I was so glad the Thomsons were with us that day. While they were really no protection, it is undoubtedly true that it is comforting to have companions during exciting times.

Well, next Monday we leave for a hurried business trip to Shanghai, and will return by Saturday night. The following week we will spend in packing and in getting our work in order to leave for the Summer—then Soochow! We will make visits here every two weeks or so, as long as it is safe, on account of the weather. I will be so glad to be again in dear old Soochow; but I love this place, and sincerely hope we can come back here in the Fall.

This is such a long, long letter, and I have written so many long letters to you lately, that I am almost ashamed to send it; but all of our experiences seem so interesting to me that I imagine they must be the same to you. Please forward to my mother, Holly Springs, Miss.

Lovingly, A. W. F.

Notes of Encouragement.

Dr. C. G. Andrews, P. E., Meridian district, reports for the second quarter as follows: Meridian, Central, Dr. H. W. Featherstun, P. C., $29.55 for foreign missions; West End, N. B. Harmon, P. C., $13.50 for foreign missions; Binnaville circuit, C. M. Crossley, P. C., $6.45 for foreign missions, and $2.50 for domestic missions; North Kemper circuit, J. J. Golden, P. C., $20; Chunkey circuit, R. A. Sibley, Jr., $5.95; Lauderdale circuit, H. W. Van Hook, P. C., $7.50; Daleville circuit, A. T. Bell, P. C., $10; Porterville circuit, H. Mellard, P. C., 65 cents; Meridian, South Side, H. G. Hawkins, P. C., $2.03; Neshoba circuit, D. Scarborough, P. C., $12.20; Toomsuba circuit, F. L. Crowson, P. C., $3.50; and Rose Hill circuit, D. C. Langford, P. C., $6.25—all for foreign missions; only one charge in the district reporting any collection for domestic missions. Vinville, DeKalb, East End and Linwood report nothing for either cause. Meridian, Central, reports 4 subscribers to The Methodist Review of Missions; North Kemper, 10 subscribers to The World for Christ; Daleville, 5 subscribers to The World for Christ. No other charges report on these subjects. (Turn on the light, brethren!) Dr. Andrews also reports 5 W. F. M. Societies, 2 Young Women's F. M. Societies, 5 Juvenile Missionary Societies, and only three Sunday-school Missionary Societies. (Let every preacher turn to paragraph 247, page 107, of the Book of Discipline, read and act accordingly. Wherever there is a Sunday-school, it is "practicable" to organize a missionary society; and if we do not do it, we simply perpetuate the present unfortunate condition of deadness to the great missionary cause. The hope of our church is in the Sunday-schools and Epworth Leagues.) Dr. Andrews further reports 4 W. P. and H. M. Societies, and 1 Juvenile P. and H. M. Society, and one pastor who preached on missions all around his circuit, and two others who reported sermons on the same great subject. (What have the others been doing?)

Not a preacher in the Meridian district has sent the names and post-office address of Methodist physicians and druggists. T. L. MELLEN,

About the Sam Jones Camp Meeting.

MR. EDITOR: The time is rapidly approaching—Aug. 27—for the opening of the annual camp meeting at the Sam Jones Camp Ground, near Gloster, Amite county, Miss., on the line of the Yazoo and Mississippi Valley railroad, a short run from New Orleans and other important points; and it is the primal object of this letter to awaken in the minds of those who are partial to primitive methods and primitive religion and religious experience, as exemplified in the earlier times of our Methodism, a desire to mingle again with those who have a religious experience in consonance with those things.

It is pleasant to know and be able to state, positively, that the camp meetings at Sam Jones and Bethel are run entirely in the interest of the salvation of human souls; that neither a desire to make money, or celebrate the greatness of anybody but God and his cause, cuts any figure at all in the thoughts and desires of either the association or the tenters.

The grounds are beautiful for situation, being in a valley watered by a stream, and streams of as pure and wholesome water as ever flowed from our Mother Earth. Two springs of this best of all drinks supply the grounds with an abundance for all purposes. Coupled with its excellence as drinking water, it has the faculty of greatly relieving sundry ills to which our frail humanity is heir, and to entirely cure others. Comfortable tents can be rented at the most reasonable rates by addressing Bro. Jno. F. Cassels, Gloster, Miss., from now on. Tenters can do their own cooking, or board at the hotel, which is run by the association at such rates as will just leave them square at the end of the meeting—as I said above, there being no desire to speculate on the gospel of Christ.

It occurs to this scribe that an effort on the part of our pastors in the Natchez and adjoining districts to induce their members to accompany them to this meeting, swell the number of the tenters and those interested in the advancement of the cause of God, will result in much more religious benefit and advancement than the advent of half a dozen alleged "evangelists" who too often have an eye more to the loaves and fishes than they do to the glory of God and the advancement of his cause in the world. The revival spirit radiated over most of the habitable globe from the camp meeting held on the day of Pentecost, and before it, and in the early times of Methodism similar results followed the camp meetings, and I can see no reasonable reason why the same shall not obtain in our day. Aside from the spiritual benefits likely to result from this meeting, the social and fraternal features of these annual reunions are most delightful. Some may say that the time is inopportune, too late in the Fall, and likely to interfere with the work on the farm; but this objection is not valid, for the reason that no man ever lost a cent by his devotion to God, or by consecrating time, money and energy to his service. We have and enjoy nothing but what comes direct from the divine hand, and a failure to devote such part of our time and means to his service as we can savors too strongly of ingratitude to be at all pleasant. We hope to see every tent occupied from start to finish; to behold multitudes throng the "Tabernacle" of such as are earnestly seeking for a "city that hath foundations, whose builder and maker is God." The ear of our God is not deaf, that he can not hear; his eye is not heavy, that he can not see, nor his arm shortened, that he can not save. Hence it only remains for the church to come to the Lord's help by discharging all its duties, when a revival wave will start at Sam Jones that will spread over all the surrounding coasts and swell the multitudes that surround the "great white throne" in that "upper and better country."

Let everyone who possibly can—saint and sinner—be on hand at the opening service on Friday, Aug. 27, proximo, and with the intention (D. V.) of staying until the last prayer is prayed, and we have sung the parting hymn, "God be with you till we meet again." May he be with and bless us abundantly! Amen!

Progress in Purity.

Progress in purity is marked by the increasing quickness with which we detect impurity and by the increasing hatred which we feel towards it. He who in his unrenewed state thought nothing sin except vice and crime, comes first to see that a multitude of overt acts once deemed right are really wrong, has his eyes opened to the sinfulness of manifold omissions, and afterwards his "well-instructed soul" discerns that he is somewhat to blame for living in any degree below his highest privileges or losing any available opportunity of doing kindly deeds and filling his life with usefulness. Thus that which to the novice seems overstrained punctiliousness and needless care, to the advanced believer is a matter of much importance, neglect of which will bring a cloud on his spiritual sky and pain to the face of his Savior. He who is not putting an ever finer, closer meaning on the word "sin" has reason to doubt his genuine growth in grace.

There may be saints who have no higher missions than to sit still and wrap themselves in ecstatic dreams, but those who are closest to their Lord's heart know that his life, when it beats through theirs, moves their hands irresistibly toward acts of tender human sympathy like his "who went about doing good."

A great number of our wants are simply wants of the imagination. We want them simply because we want them. They give us no enjoyment when we obtain them. The want of them is simply known by the disagreeable feeling that we are without them.

Many a life has been injured by the constant expectation of death. It is life we have to do with, not death. The best preparation for the night is to work while the day lasts diligently. The best preparation for death is life.—George McDonald.

Kindness is the golden chain by which society is bound together.

To Whom It May Concern:

About three years ago I received a sample bottle of "Mul-en-ol." I had never heard of it before. I began using it, however, as occasion required, and soon found that it was all that is claimed for it, and more. For cuts, burns, bruises, scalds, and all kinds of sores, it is superior to any remedy I have ever used. It is also exceedingly efficacious in colic and diarrhœa. For sore throat it is incomparably better than anything I know of. I heartily recommend it as a medicine worthy of a place in every household. W. C. BLACK,

Letter from Mexico.

The following letter from Bro. Yearwood is an indication of what the Lord is doing in our Mexican Mission field. Bro. N. E. Joyner needs no introduction to the readers of the ADVOCATE. He is a young man of splendid ability, zeal and consecration. His record as a student in the Theological Department of Vanderbilt University augurs his future success.

Monterey, Mexico, July 1, 1897.
Rev. W. R. Lambuth, Nashville, Tenn.—

MY DEAR BROTHER: The Mexican brethren and the missionaries of our district enjoyed a very profitable time during our District Conference. On Sunday, June 13, we began a series of meetings among the Mexicans of Monterey. Every morning we had prayer meetings. I preached every night. We closed the meeting on the night of June 20 with eight receptions by profession of faith as a result of our work. So much for the lay members. During the day the preachers met for Bible study. St. Matthew's Gospel was the portion of Scripture selected. The brethren read excellent papers on the subject assigned them, and the discussions were interesting and instructive. The biblical discourses were based on the following questions:

1. Who was St. Matthew? Relate his call, first, to discipleship, and then to apostleship.

2. For whom is the Gospel of St. Matthew especially written? Give some illustrations to confirm your statement.

3. What miracles, parables, discourses and incidents are peculiar to St. Matthew's Gospel?

4. Mention the members of the Herodian family as named by St. Matthew.

5. Distinguish between our Lord's genealogy as given by St. Matthew and St. Luke.

6. Explain the significance of the visit of the Magi and of the oft-repeated expression, "It is written."

7. Explain the following: "He shall be called a Nazarene," "The kingdom of heaven," "Ye are the salt of the earth," "Ye are the light of the world," "One jot or one tittle," "In danger of the judgment . . . of the council . . . of hell fire," "The gift that Moses commanded," "Foxes have holes and the birds of the air," etc., "The harvest truly is plenteous," etc.; "Blasphemy against the Holy Ghost."

8. On what occasion was the first prediction of our Lord's sufferings given to his apostles? Show the connection between it and what had just occurred.

9. What does our Lord teach us in the Sermon on the Mount about the meaning of the Ten Commandments?

10. Where in the Discipline are references made to the following passages: "Let your light so shine," etc.; "Come, ye blessed of my Father," etc.; "Lay not up treasures," etc.; "All power is given me in heaven and earth."

11. How did our Lord enjoin the observance of the Sabbath as related by Matthew?

12. In the story of the passion, how did our Lord gain victory over the Sanhedrin, the Pharisees, the Sadducees, and the lawyer?

There were also papers on church building, the history of Methodism, and self-support. Bro. Joyner's papers on "Methodism," and "The Duties of Lay and Official Members, Pastors and Presiding Elders," were much enjoyed. The brethren asked that the papers be published in the "Evangelista Mexicana."

On Monday, the twenty-first, we left here for the Nadadores circuit and the Monclova station, accompanied by the Revs. T. del Valle S. Tafolla, Andres San Miguel, Santos Romo, and Julean Castro. We held meetings in those parts up to Monday, June 28. The members were greatly revived. Four persons were baptized during these meetings, and three of them united with the church.

During the District Conference at Monterey a plea was made for the Monclova Chapel, and donations to the amount of $147.50 (Mexican) were promised. Also $22.50 were promised towards the construction of the Laredo Building.

Laredo has also had its revival, and glorious things were heard and done there. Fifteen persons were converted and received into the church by profession of faith. Last quarter several persons were received into the church at Saltillo.

Bros. Tafolla and Andres San Miguel are working hard on their circuits, and we entertain every hope of a good harvest from their fields. We praise God for the good accomplished in his name, and in his strength we will continue the fight against our threefold enemy—the world, the flesh, and the devil.

Cordially yours,
K. J. YEARWOOD.

Dublin, Texas.

MR. EDITOR: In your issue of April 8 you publish a letter, or part of it, of C. H. Strong's, which was published in The Methodist of March 24. I feel it is due me and our church here, and my brethren generally, that I make some corrections. The meeting about which Bro. Strong wrote was in no way connected with the Morrison meeting. It was not a holiness meeting. It was commenced and ended by Bros. Ward and McAnally, two of our class leaders. These brethren opposed the Morrison meeting, and are still opposed to such meetings. To say this meeting that was conducted by these men was a holiness meeting, is to tell an untruth. Bro. Strong stated yesterday, before the Church Conference, that he did not write that, "The holiness meeting was put on foot by the class leaders." But that the prayer meeting was put on foot by the class leaders. He also stated that he had written to The Methodist asking that the correction be made, and that he waited some time and wrote again, but up to date The Methodist has not corrected it, neither have they written him a word.

I took part in this meeting, but have never attended a "holiness meeting." Some of the converts of this meeting joined the various churches of the town, but this was not a "holiness meeting."

The clipping in your issue of March 25, from the Pacific Methodist, that the Morrison meeting at Dublin, Texas, resulted in only one accession to the church, is true. This only one joined, not our church, but the Campbellites. If anyone doubts this, let him write to the various pastors here.

The Morrison meeting made it possible for the M. E. Church to organize here. On account of his meeting, we have lost fourteen members and have gained none.

Methodism in Dublin is doing well, not by the help of the "holiness movement," but in spite of it. If all our Methodist preachers should succeed for one year just as H. C. Morrison has for the last year, our church would be greatly diminished in members and spirituality. The schools, papers and publishing interests of our church would be badly crippled.

FROM THE WORK.

Laura L. Chevalier, Vidalia, June 9, 1896: "Mr. Dunbar H. Ogdon, the son of Capt. W. F. Ogdon, who is studying for the ministry, held a prayer meeting Sunday, June 26, in the Vidalia Methodist Church, and delivered a talk on the central doctrine of the Christian religion to a large interested congregation. A bright future is before Mr. Ogdon. He treads a flowery path. We wish him success."

Rev. Ira B. Robertson, Lake, Miss., July 13, 1897: "The Preachers' Institute and District Conference of the Brandon district were held at Morton, July 7-11, 1897. Our presiding elder, W. W. Simmons, presided with credit to himself and profit and pleasure to all present. One notable feature was the spiritual interest manifested from the first to the close. We had a time of refreshing from the presence of the Lord. The sermons preached had the true gospel ring. The hospitality of Morton abounded. W. L. Linfield makes a good host. The secretary will furnish you with a full report."

Rev. W. C. Harris, Friar's Point, Miss., July 10, 1897: "Our third Quarterly Conference has just been held. There were several encouraging items reported. The stewards had made fairly good collections; more than $150 had been expended in improvement on parsonage; the assessments for Bishops and domestic missions had been paid in full, and a good Epworth League had been organized. The foreign mission assessment was paid early in the year. The Conference kindly voted the pastor a vacation at his pleasure. I love these clever people, and I do pray that before the year closes I may be able to make an encouraging report of the spiritual state of the church."

Rev. C. H. Ellis, Roxie, Miss., July 12, 1897: "Last night we closed a ten days' meeting with Rev. R. A. Breland, at Roxie, Miss. The Holy Spirit was present from first to last, and many found the Lord in salvation. God's hand of affliction had fallen heavily on Bro. Breland and family in the recent death of his consecrated wife. One could realize the chastened, subdued sorrow, but Christian resignation. Bless God, some sweet day there will be a blessed reunion in our Father's house of many mansions. Rev. E. T. Breland and wife, of Percy's Creek charge, and Rev. R. S. Gale, of Meadville, were with us part of the time, and did good service. Sister Gale was with us one service. She came for the great blessing of entire sanctification. If not fully satisfied, she returned to her home strengthened and established in the faith. Bro. E. B. Baker, of Natchez, and sister E. T. Breland led the song service effectively. Mrs. L. A. Flowers and Miss Ellen Garret, of Meadville, consecrated workers, came and helped much, the latter conducting three afternoon services in which the Holy Spirit was manifestly present in great power. Praise God for the help of quite a number of others whose names are written in the Book of Life. Bro. Baker and myself were delightfully entertained by Sister J. A. Davis, of the Commercial Hotel. God bless her and her dear children who only a few months since were called to give up a devoted husband and father. I go to day to Fernbank, Ala., to join Rev. W. T. Danil, of the Alabama Conference, in a ten days' meeting. It will ever be a green spot in memory's page to call to mind our fellowship with the people of God at the Roxie meeting."

A mother is always ready to sacrifice herself for her baby. But nature does not often call for any such sacrifice. On the contrary nature calls upon every mother to carefully protect herself and in that way to protect her baby.

During the critical period when a woman is looking forward to motherhood, the best protection she can give to the tender little life which is dependent upon her own, is to fortify herself with the health-bringing "Favorite Prescription" prepared by Dr. R. V. Pierce, chief consulting physician to the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, of Buffalo, N. Y., and sold by all dealers in medicines.

All the dangers of motherhood and most of its pains and discomforts are entirely banished by the use of this rare "Prescription." It gives elastic strength and true healthful vitality to the special organs and nerve-centres involved in motherhood. This healthful condition is transmitted to the baby both by the improved quality of the mother's secreted nourishment and by the child's increased constitutional vigor.

It is a perfect health protector to them both. No other medicine was ever devised by an educated, scientific, physician for the express purpose of bringing health and strength to the special feminine organs. No other preparation ever accomplished this purpose so scientifically and effectually.

A more particular description of its remarkable properties with a full account of some surprising cures of female difficulties is given in one chapter of Dr. Pierce's great thousand-page illustrated book, "The People's Common Sense Medical Adviser," which is sent free paper-bound for the mere cost of mailing: 21 one-cent stamps; or, cloth-bound, for 31 stamps. Address the Doctor as above.

The continued increase in the number of young ladies in attendance at this college is evidence of the satisfaction of its patrons with its management. The equipment consists in part of 38 upright and 2 concert grand pianos, a six-inch object glass, Alvan Clark & Sons telescope, and probably the best chemical and physical laboratory of any female college in the South. With its 6 male and 11 female professors, it offers unusual advantages for mental training, and the lovely grounds, ornamented with two fountains, a lily pond and beautiful shrubs and flowers, is conducive to happiness and æsthetic culture. The dormitories are home-like and equipped with all modern conveniences. We believe that Louisiana girls would find the climate here pleasant and healthful. Some Current Notions of Sin.

The complacency with which sin is regarded by many in this age is one of the dangerous signs of the times. The laxest notions prevail as to its heinousness and as to the certainty and duration of its punishment. Instead of being looked upon as terrible in its nature and awful in its final consequences, it is designated by euphonious terms and treated as a thing of little moment. There is a deplorable absence of clear-cut, intense conviction and thorough repentance, and, in consequence, a large percentage of new converts lack in earnestness and in steadfastness. It has come to pass that iniquity is little condemned unless it assumes gross, repulsive forms. Many have drifted so far from the Bible view of sin that the term signifies nothing more to them than indiscretion or unwise indulgence. We find all shades of opinion, from that of the libertine who knows no law save that of his own lust, and that of the atheistic moralist who would characterize it as a deviation more or less culpable from the pursuit of the common good, to that of the so-called liberal Christian, who looks upon it as a disease which man will outgrow, or as a necessary evil from which he will be relieved in course of time by the process of evolution.

The iniquity of popular sins is largely concealed by the names applied to them. Covetousness and stinginess go by the name of prudence and economy. Lying has become prevarication, or fibbing. Gambling, which in its basic principle differs little from stealing, is called speculation, or something of that sort. A drunkard, to speak after the current fashion, is merely an intemperate man, while a debauchee is a "man of irregular life," or "a little loose in his habits." It is high time that we were taking off the masks under which sin disports itself, and that we call things by their right names. Let us not for a moment imagine that iniquity has been driven out from the upper circles, or from any circle, through the medium of education or of civilization, because we hear sin spoken of in soft terms. It is the most persistent thing on earth, and is the same wherever found, though as changeless in form as the waves of the sea.

It is amazing that with an open Bible before them and with the shadow of the cross upon them, any in this enlightened Christian land should speak of sin as a disease or an infirmity of the flesh. If sin is a mere accident, or a necessary evil involving no turpitude and non-deserving of punishment, then the gospel is a meaningless fable, and Christ's agony upon the cross a senseless sacrifice. Only in the light of the cross can we properly interpret the guilt and awfulness of man's disobedience to his Creator. Since it was necessary for the Son of God to suffer on Calvary in order to effect man's redemption, what more striking demonstration could we have of the enormity of man's transgression of the divine law? The true believer realizes in the depths of his heart the truth expressed by the poet:

"For me he bore the shameful cross,
And carried all my grief."

Not until we recognize that the sins of humanity caused him who was without sin to be "made a curse for us that he might redeem us from the curse of the law," do we apprehend the true meaning of sin. Wicked, selfish living and lax views of the criminality of disobedience go hand in hand. "Because sentence against an evil work is not executed speedily, therefore the heart of the sons of men is fully set in them to do evil." Because the wicked do not like to retain God in their knowledge, his commandments being grievous unto them, they are given over unto a reprobate mind that they should "believe a lie." When rebuked for their iniquity, the unrighteous say, "Wherein have we done evil?" "Woe unto them that call evil good and good evil; that put darkness for light and light for darkness."

There is constant danger that our conviction of the sinfulness of sin will become so lessened by association with the worldly and the ungodly that we will "first endure, then pity, then embrace," and at last go down to everlasting destruction.

The remembrance of our past sins should ever be grievous unto us. The convert who refers in a boastful way to his former evil deeds is one whose sincerity and stability are to be distrusted. The parading of past wickedness is not characteristic of a contrite heart. Nor does a man who is under deep conviction tell the Lord how good he has been, but he exclaims as did David of old, "Against thee, thee only, have I sinned and done this iniquity." Whether a man sins little or much, in so doing he flashes the sword of rebellion in the face of the great Jehovah, who is "of purer eyes than to behold evil iniquity."

It is not for one or many acts of evil that the sinner will be punished, but for his spirit of rebellion. One transgression unrepented of severs the soul from God, and will result just as surely in its destruction as the severance of a branch from the vine will cause the branch to perish. As to the criminality of sin in the sight of God, and as to the necessity of its forgiveness and extirpation, let the pulpit give forth no uncertain sound. The leaven of the gospel is the only hope of the race. To use the language of Bishop Warren: "Christ did not teach that sin and its effects, as the one great evil of human nature, came from mere ignorance that could be instructed, or poverty that could be enriched, or debt that could be forgiven." He proclaimed the truth, never to be lost sight of, that man, in order to be freed from the curse of sin, must be born again. Sin can not be civilized out of the heart and the life, neither can it be lessened or eradicated by being ignored. It is well to strive for better environment, and to look forward to a grander civilization; but unless man is cleansed from sin and his nature regenerated through faith in a living Christ, progress will be but temporary, and happiness but a flitting delusion.

If the sinner is wrong, he is tremendously so. Any notion of sin that leaves God out of the account is false and dangerous. The man who lives for the flesh and dies in his sins goes out into the blackness of darkness forever. God spared not even the angels that sinned, but cast them down to hell. Moreover, he spared not his own Son, when that Son became a substitute for sinful man. The two great Bible themes are sin and salvation. There is urgent need of dealing with the truths of the gospel as momentous realities. A tone of doubt will throw discredit upon religion and encourage men to live as they list. Let us beware of abating one jot or tittle of the law. Let us be careful to teach men that all sin is criminal, and that, unforsaken and unforgiven, it will involve them in eternal ruin. Skepticism and indifference will never be successfully combatted until Christians are fully alive to the heinousness of disobedience and to the world's great need of Christ.

Local-Option Election.

For the third time Chickasaw county has turned up "dry." Four years ago Rev. N. G. Augustus led the movement that put the saloon out. Last year the whisky men made an effort to order an election, but they were defeated before the Board of Supervisors. This year they reorganized and tried again. After twenty days' hard work of investigating the registration books, etc., the Board ordered an election to be held July 18. A thorough canvass of the county was made; every place was well organized save one or two. On the day of the election our men worked like Trojans. The victory was no surprise to us. The county voted "against the sale" nearly two to one. It would have gone wet but for the faithful and unremitting work of some of our preachers and people. Amongst them I mention especially Rev. J. W. Anderson.

SOME REFLECTIONS.

I want to pay tribute to the negroes in this matter. This is the fourth local-option contest I have been in, and every time the negro has been almost a unit against the saloon.

God is in the hearts of his people. An appeal to the heart and conscience of the individual is stronger than an appeal to partisan prejudice or political affiliation.

In this question—purely a moral one—the people will wait for and, to a great extent, depend on the leadership of the ministry. The preacher of whatever church who withholds his active support from this cause is a traitor to his Lord. I am glad it is everywhere known that when a Methodist preacher comes to town, whether he is a circuit rider or a Bishop, an enemy of the saloon has arrived.

In fighting the saloon, namby-pamby, goody-goody work will not do. Only fearless, aggressive, unremitting work will meet the demands. Here is required more of the wisdom of the serpent than of the harmlessness of the dove. The saloon is unscrupulous in its methods and means. We must be prepared to meet and overcome its trickery. Yet we can not afford to resort to any questionable method.

These local-option contests are productive of great good. The prohibition question wants agitation and discussion. Every time a contest is had the prohibition cause comes out stronger.

Mississippi has dealt more wisely, perhaps, with the saloon question than any other State. Public sentiment has driven out the saloon, and it is that which keeps it out. On this public sentiment must we rely for the enforcement of the law. One by one the counties fall from the saloon side. Only nine remain now. These nine are fast becoming a bitter curse to the adjoining ones. They become distributing points. We must get rid of them. I mean the saloons in these counties. They are a constant menace to the prohibition cause in the dry counties. The Whisky Trust last year gave not less than $7,000 to defeat prohibition in one county alone. These few counties where the saloon lives have intrenched themselves behind the Whisky Trust. It is a herculean task to defeat them. But it must be done. We who live in the counties adjoining them know the urgent need. If it can not be done by local option, it must be done by statutory or constitutional prohibition in the State.

Preachers and Presidents.

If our colleges had ample endowment, they would need patronage. Since very few of them have, even approximately, sufficient endowment, it is of the utmost importance that they have patronage. The patronage can be made to support the institution until that time shall arrive when, so far as the current expenses of our institutions are concerned, they shall be able to live independently of tuition fees. I do not believe that even education ought to be gotten for nothing, but I am sure that education can not now be given by our colleges unless their patronage is sufficient to pay their faculties. It is the purpose of our colleges to instruct the youth of the land from a Christian standpoint, and so to minister to a Christian civilization. We ought to crowd their halls with pupils.

At this particular time our preachers can help our presidents to very great advantage. Whilst our teachers are active during the Summer months in preaching and speaking and canvassing for our institutions, our preachers ought to be equally active in assisting them.

Patronage can be turned to our institutions by our preachers if they will several times during this college vacation season preach upon the matter of Christian education, making, upon the highest grounds, the strongest possible argument. While attention should be called to the cause generally, and to all our institutions of learning, our pastors will naturally magnify those colleges—male and female—which have more particularly a claim upon their assistance. When sermons have been preached, and frequent incidental mention has been made of this matter from the pulpit, there is another very valuable means of turning our boys and girls to our institutions. If, as pastors, we will carefully survey our congregations with the view of finding out in which families there are boys and girls who ought to go to school, and if then we will go to parents of such children and make a personal appeal to them to give their children the opportunities which our colleges extend, many of them can be turned to our institutions. An hour's talk with a father who, perhaps, has not thought much about the value of a Christian education for his child, will frequently result in the sending of that child to college. I will not say that each of the six thousand preachers in our connection can secure at least one pupil for one of our institutions, but I think that such a result is very probably possible. It is impossible to make an extravagant estimate of the good that man does who turns the feet of a boy or girl into the walks and ways of a Christian school.

While I write to my brethren I remember that, so far as I myself am concerned, I did not do, as a pastor, much of this kind of work. I am sorry. I intend to do better. Let each one of us undertake at once, by the means above mentioned, and by other means which will occur to us, to secure at least one boy or girl for some one of our institutions.

Literature, specially prepared upon the subject of Christian education, will be very useful if put into the hands of our members. The Board of Education will in a short time have literature of this kind for distribution. If any of the pastors will send me names and addresses of men or women who ought to send their children to our institutions, I will gladly send them some literature which I think will help them in influencing parents to give to their children a Christian education.

NOTES.

President L. T. Fitzhugh, of Belhaven, let the light of his genial face shine into our sanctum recently.

Dr. W. H. Ballard, son of the late Rev. W. E. Ballard, of the Mississippi Conference, died on the sixth at his home at Leota, Miss. A memoir from the pen of Rev. L. S. Jones will appear in due time.

A brother of Dr. E. E. Hoss, editor of the Nashville Advocate, was murdered near his home in Arkansas a few days ago. We deeply sympathize with our brother in his affliction. This affliction prevented Dr. Hoss from attending the Seashore Camp Meeting.

We had the promise of a gifted correspondent to send us a report of the Seashore Camp Meeting for this issue. Up to the time of going to press it had not been received. It is now too late to prepare a report from the accounts in the dailies. A report may be expected in our next issue.

Rev. J. Lovett, of Muscogee, Indian Territory, passed through the city last week en route to the Seashore Camp Meeting. After the camp meeting he will make a visit to relatives in East Mississippi before going home. We regret to have been absent when he called at the ADVOCATE office.

Young men all know that the ladder must be climbed round by round to reach the wide elbow-room at the top, which is the grand desideratum of the male sex. But too many start well, reach the third or fourth round, and then gradually succumb to an attack of mental strabismus by which the ladder appears to be turned upside down.—Selected.

We are in receipt of an invitation to attend the marriage of Miss Marguerite Herring, daughter of Mrs. M. L. Herring, to Mr. James Franklin Wray. The ceremony will be performed on Thursday, the twenty-second, in the Methodist Church at Brookhaven, Miss. We extend our heartiest congratulations. May their pathway through life be strewn with flowers!

Mrs. M. B. Candler, mother of Dr. W. A. Candler, president of Emory College, died at Cartersville, Ga., a few days since. She was a woman of marked individuality and great force of character, and was a Methodist in the very best sense of the word. To her, more than to any other human being, the distinguished preacher and educator is indebted for all that is best in his noble character.

Dr. Joseph Parker, of London, speaks of "The danger of reciting poetry and living prose;" by which we suppose he means the talking of high things, and the living on a lower plane. Sometimes very high pretensions are found with very low practice. One may talk well of lofty ideals, and live a mean and disappointing life. It is also a danger, perhaps much more common in the world, to "live prose" and never recite any poetry. We are in daily need of the ideal, that we may be lifted above the prose and drudgery of life. Burdens are lightened, the dark day is brightened, if there be some flower to bloom, some word of love or hope spoken, some memory of sweet verse to ring its chimes all through the weary day. The plainer and harder the life, the more we need the help of imagination, the sweet support of poetry recited.—Central Presbyterian.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

DOMESTIC.

Half a million sewing machines are manufactured yearly in this country, giving employment to nearly 100,000 operatives.

The sensation of the day is the interest excited by the rich gold mines of Alaska. Explorations have developed mines of extreme richness on the upper Yukon river.

President McKinley has planned to visit the Yellowstone Park next September, and steps have been taken to induce him to extend the westward journey to San Francisco.

The library of the University of California has received a gift from Collis P. Huntington of more than 4,000 documents in Spanish and English, covering the early history of California.

The Behring Sea problem evidently will not down. It has again led to a misunderstanding between this country and Great Britain, and has afforded Secretary of State Sherman an opportunity to do a little twisting of the British lion's tail.

The United States government has directed United States Minister Woodford to formally present to the Spanish government and press the claim of the family of the late Dr. Rulz for indemnity of $75,000 on account of his death in jail in Cuba.

The Drainage Commission of this city, on last Saturday, considered the bids of proposing contractors for work to be done on the drainage system, and received the report of the commission's engineer on the subject. There was a large competition for the work, bidders from various parts of the country being represented.

On Monday the Conference Committee completed its work on the Tariff bill, and made its report to both Houses of Congress. The report was promptly railroaded through the House, with no regard whatever to the rights of the minority, and it is pretty certain to meet with prompt action in the Senate; so that the measure will become law before the end of the week, and Congress will then be ready to adjourn.

The representatives of the sugar and rice interests are well pleased with the outcome of the Tariff fight. The cotton producers do not fare so well, as bagging and ties go back on the dutiable list, with reduced rates, however. The 20 per cent. ad valorem on raw cotton also is knocked out. The only difference between the original House schedule on rice and the conference committee's schedule as adopted in conference is the retention of the Senate amendment of one-fourth of a cent per pound on broken rice, instead of one-half cent, as in the House schedule.

FOREIGN.

The National Legislature of Switzerland has just passed the bill of the federal council providing for the purchase by the state of all the railroads in the country.

There were 1741 co-operative societies in Great Britain in 1896, with shares aggregating $85,000,000, and doing business to the extent of about $300,000 per annum.

The Supreme Council of Education of France has adopted a proposal by which foreigners are enabled to obtain doctors' diplomas by undergoing an examination at French universities.

Emperor William is making room rapidly for his young men. On June 17 he summarily retired fifteen generals, which makes thirty general officers retired in the past three months.

An American flag flying at the City Hall in Toronto, in honor of the visiting delegates to the Epworth League Convention, was torn down by an ultra-British artisan on July 16. The man was at once arrested and locked up.

The London Standard considers the situation in Southeastern Europe extremely grave, and thinks perhaps Europe is on the verge of a general war. It suggests a compromise with Turkey, as the rehabilitation of Greece is not worth the risk of war.

It is said that the powers have fixed the indemnity to be paid to Turkey by Greece at $4,000,000, and have accepted a compromise, giving Turkey a more liberal line of frontier. Turkey and Greece have been left to settle the question of the capitulations between themselves.

Five of the eight Sunday preachers at Westminster Abbey during July will be American Bishops. Those selected are Bishop Potter, of New York; Bishop Walker, of Western New York; Bishop Thompson, of Mississippi; Bishop Whipple, of Minnesota, and Bishop Seymour, of Springfield, Ill.

Miss Sea, daughter of a lighthouse-keeper in Victoria, British Columbia, rescued a yacht's crew a few days ago. The yacht had capsized in a squall; but Miss Sea lowered the lighthouse boat, rowed out to the scene of the accident and rescued the party. She will receive the medal of the Humane Society.

Domestic and Foreign Missions.

I have just read the report of the North Mississippi Board of Missions as given in the ADVOCATE. In the report there are two colnmns of figures—one giving the amonnt paid by each district for foreign missions, the other showing amonnts paid for domestic missions. Adding the amonnts in the two colnmns, I find that $1,126 have been paid on foreign missions, and only $124 on domestic missions.

Now, why shonld there be this difference? Is it becanse foreign missions is the most important? I can not see it that way. Sonls are to be saved, the gospel preached, and the cause of Christ advanced in both foreign and home mission fields. Christianity is missionary in spirit and purpose. This spirit shonld not be divided with reference to the different fields of its operation. The spirit of unity mnst govern mission work, and should not be diversified becanse the fields lie in different quarters of the world. There is bnt one mission work, and that is to the world at large that lies in wickedness, whether at home or abroad. Recognizing this truth, shonld not the words "foreign" and "domestic" be dropped, and let us simply say "missions"?

The treasurer of the Board says in his report that we need a conscience on missions. There is no donbt of that. But is it not trne that we are cultivating a conscience on foreign missions, and letting onr conscience on home missions die? Is it not trne that onr zeal for the one is causing us to neglect the other? The canse of foreign missions is talked, preached and written abont in every direction; bnt when have any of us had much to say with reference to home missions?

The missionary returns home, and he is heralded as a returned missionary from China or Japan, and his lectnres, missionary talks, etc., are in demand; bnt the home missionary, whose work is as laborions and as important, labors from year's end to year's end on a meagre salary, and that very uncertain. He toils hnmbly, yet snccessfnlly. He wins victories nnnoticed by man, bnt rejoiced over by the angels. Let him toil on nnnoticed, unobserved, for he shall be rewarded by and by. His shall be the victory, for which he will ascribe all praise unto the Lord of hosts.

I do not mean to disparage foreign missions. No; bnt I do mean to lift home missions to a level with foreign missions.

"We need a missionary conscience," I say, Amen; but let it be a symmetrical conscience—a conscience on home missions as well as foreign missions.

The Little Boy Who Died.

BY ERNEST GILMORE.

"The little toy dog is covered with dust,
But sturdy and stannoh he stands;
And the little toy soldier is red with rust,
And his musket molds in his hands.
Time was when the little toy dog was new,
And the soldier was passing fair,
That was the time when our Little Boy Blue
Kissed them and put them there.

"'Now, don't you go till I come,' he said,
'And don't you make any noise!'
So, toddling off to his trundle-bed,
He dreamt of the pretty toys.
And as he was dreaming an angel song
Awakened our Little Boy Blue—
Oh, the years are many, the years are long,
But the little toy friends are true.

"Aye, faithful to Little Boy Blue they stand,
Each in the same old place,
Awaiting the touch of a little hand,
The smile of a little face.
And they wonder, as waiting the long years through,
In the dust of that little chair,
What has become of our Little Boy Blue
Since he kissed them and put them there?"

No mother who has been bereaved of a little one can read the above poem by our lamented and beloved Eugene Field without eyes dimmed with tears. How he loved the children! And how we love his memory because he loved the children!

These little ones, who are beholding the face of their Father in heaven, how we long for a look into their sweet faces! How we yearn for a touch of their little hands! How our hearts would leap if we could catch even one whisper of the loved voices that are still!

But whatever our agony may be, let us never be guilty of saying that we have lost our children. We have only parted with them, and, however great may be our sorrow to lose their sweet companionship, we have the inexpressible joy of knowing that they are saved. As Bishop Hall says: "That is properly lost which is past all recovery, which we can not hope to see any more. It is not so with this child for whom thou mournest. He is only gone home a little before thee. Thou art following him. You, too, shall meet in your Father's house, and enjoy each other more happily than you could have done here below."

Some one tells the story of "a nobleman who had a spacious garden, which he left to the care of a faithful servant, whose delight it was to train the creepers along the trellis, to water the seeds in the time of drouth, to support the stalks of the tender plants, and to do every work which could render the garden a paradise of flowers. One morning he rose with joy, expecting to tend his beloved flowers and hoping to find his favorites increased in beauty. To his surprise, he found one of his choicest beauties rent from its stem, and, looking around him, he missed from every bed the pride of his garden, the most precious of his blooming flowers. Full of grief and anger, he hurried to his fellow-servants, and demanded who had thus robbed him of his treasures. They had not done it, and he did not charge them with it, but he found no solace for his grief till one of them remarked, 'My lord was walking in the garden this morning, and I saw him pluck the flowers and carry them away.' Then he found that he had no cause for his trouble. He felt that it was well that his master had been pleased to take his own, and he went away, smiling at his loss, because his lord had taken them."

Dr. Cuyler gives the best of advice to bereaved mothers and fathers. He says: "Parents, spare your tears for those whom you have laid down to sleep in their narrow beds of earth with the now withered rose bud mingling with their dust. They are safe. Christ is their teacher now, and has them in his sinless school, where lessons of celestial wisdom are learned by eyes that never weep."

"My little one, my sweet one,
Thou canst not come to me;
But nearer draws the numbered hour
When I shall go to thee;
And thou, perchance, with seraph smile,
And golden harp in hand,
May'st come the first to welcome me
To our Immanuel's land!"

The Amenities of Daily Life.

I think one of the most common forms of incivility as seen in daily life is the failure to show interest in what people are saying to you. This lack of interest, excused on the score of preoccupation, or absence of mind, or inattention, throws an effectual chill on family or social intercourse, and acts as a wet blanket wherever it is found. The fact is that when people are together, they should be interested in each other's talk and each other's concerns. Letters, the morning paper, one's own thought and plans, should be put aside in the family, and whether in the sitting-room or at the table, a common life shared should make possible common conversation and polite intercourse.

I was a very little girl when my father gave me a rule for conduct which has never ceased to have with me the force of an obligation. "Always look at the person who is speaking to you. Always look straight at the person to whom you are speaking." The practice of this rule makes one a good listener, and a good listener is as essential to pleasure in conversation as a good raconteur.

The whole secret, or nearly the whole secret, of personal magnetism and popularity is in this habit of giving deferential attention to what is going on about you. Next to this comes, and it has a high place in family amenities, the keeping in the background your grievances.

Where people are sensitive, and the greater the scale of refinement the greater is apt to be the sensitiveness to others' moods and to praise or blame, it is inevitable that feelings will be hurt. But my grievance, even if it be positive and well grounded, is my personal affair, and must not be permitted to intrude upon the peace of the household. It is mine, and therefore it is my privilege to put it with other unpleasant things quite out of sight. No personal slight, no personal sorrow, no individual infirmity, should be allowed to cloud the general happiness.

Among the neglected amenities of life, one finds often the scarcely veiled indifference of the young to the old. Younger people are so full of vitality, so occupied, so rushed, in these busy days, with their engagements and their pleasures, that they too frequently have scant consideration for their seniors. But age has its rights as well as its privileges, and it has a claim on the courtesy, the patience, and the respect of those who, however young they may be now, will, if they live long enough, in time be old themselves.

Among the needless brutalities of daily life is a habit of brusque and indiscreet candor. "What a hideous bonnet you have. Pray, where did you get it? You look like a fright!" I heard one sister say to another; and I felt most indignant. The bonnet may or may not have deserved the comment—that was a matter of preference; but the young woman capable of so rude a remark should have been made to wear a penitential sheet with holes for her eyes until she had learned better manners. "You are looking very ill," if repeated often enough, will make even a well person a temporary invalid, and, where disagreeable truth will do no good, and no principle is involved in their expression, it is best not to utter them. Silence is sometimes—not always, but often—golden.—Christian Intelligencer.

Evil Speaking.

Do you govern your tongue? Do you really make it a point of conscience to speak evil of no man? The Word of God commands this just as plainly as it says, "Thou shalt not steal." What would you think of a man's religion whom you caught stealing! To rob one of his good name is often a far greater injury than to steal his money. Be careful what you say about an absent person. Weigh your words before you put them in circulation.

James makes the proof of Christian perfection to consist in the government of the tongue. "If any man offend not in word, the same is a perfect man, and able also to govern the whole body." (Jas. iii, 2.)

Observe carefully, and you will find this statement true. Sinful tempers may be smothered by a determined effort. But let them, through the medium of the tongue, come out into daylight where they are fanned and fed, and they will rage with fury. "You may as well say it as think it," is one of the most pernicious maxims that the devil ever set afloat.

"Speak not evil one of another, brethren." (Jas. iv, 11) "If thy brother trespass against thee, go and tell him his fault, between thee and him alone."—Earnest Christian.

General Lee's Retort.

Early in the war, before General Robert E. Lee had proved his pre-eminence as a general, he was severely criticised on more than one occasion by a General Whiting. Whiting had stood at the head of his class at West Point, and was considered a bright and capable man. One day President Davis, wishing an officer for some important command, called upon General Lee for advice.

"What do you think of Whiting?"

Lee answered without hesitation, commending Whiting as one of the ablest men in the army, well qualified in every way for the most responsible place.

One of the officers present was greatly surprised, and at the first opportunity drew Lee aside. "Don't you know what unkind things Whiting has been saying about you?" he inquired.

Lee's answer was of the best. "I understood," he said, "that the President desired to know my opinion of Whiting, not Whiting's opinion of me."—Golden Censer.

Are You Kind to Your Mother?

Who guarded you in health, and comforted you when ill? Who hung over your little bed when you were fretful, and put the cooling draught to your parched lips? Who taught you how to pray, and gently helped you how to read? Who has borne with your faults, and been kind and patient in your childish ways? Who loves you still, and who contrives and works and prays for you every day you live? Is it not your mother—your own mother? Now let me ask you, "Are you kind to your mother?"—Michigan Advocate.

Skepticism is simply not believing. It is denial, negation, darkness. There is only one cure for darkness, and that is coming to the light. If you will persist in putting your eyes out, or in barring God's daylight out, there is no help for you; you must die in the dark. Sin has made your soul sick, and if you will not even try some of Christ's medicine, then the blood-poisoning of infidelity will run its fatal course. If you will produce a better rule of life than my Bible (perhaps your mother's Bible also); if you will find a holier pattern of living than Jesus Christ and a surer Savior than he is, I will forswear my religion for yours. But what is your "I do not believe" in comparison with my positive "I know whom I have believed"? What is your denial in comparison with my personal experience with Christ? Skepticism never won a victory, never slew a sin, never healed a heartache, never produced a sunshine, never saved an immortal soul. It is foredoomed defeat. Do not risk your eternity on that spider's web.—Rev. T. L. Cuyler, D. D.

For Over Fifty Years
Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup has been used for children teething. It soothes the child, softens the gums, allays all pain, cures wind-colic, and is the best remedy for Diarrhœa. Twenty-five cents a bottle.

An idle, thoughtless word, how often has it been the beginning of the separation of friendly and even of loving hearts! The breach once made, others step in to make it wider and wider. False pride, mistaken feelings, the sudden bitterness the heart can feel even towards those it loves, all aid the work of cruelty, and the distance increases day by day until, finding it impossible to return, like the wrecked mariner, they give up in despair and sit down to mourn over their fate, careless, it seems, whether they live or die.—Presbyterian Journal.

I have often attended the funeral (as I supposed) of some besetting sin; but lo! in a few days the wretched thing was on its feet again, tempting and tormenting me as wickedly as ever. And the best evidence that there was a genuine Christ-life within me was that I did not surrender out and out to the besetting sin, but waged battle with it in the name of my Master.—Rev. Dr. Cuyler.

Of the sweetest things of this mortal life, the rarest, if not the best, is gentleness. It specially becomes a Christian family. It tells its wordless story of heaven. Husband and wife are made more and more one under its gracious influence, and the children grow in desire for its eternal realization. Some of us wonder why it is that we live, not in sunlight, but in shadow, and why our residence is a harbor for our offspring and not a home. Is it not because the angel of gentleness may visit us, but does not abide under our roof?—H. L. Reade.

Show by your life that you live, move, and have your being in the sunny element of God's love.

Hygiene.

Queen Victoria.

The Queen of England began to reign June 20, 1837, and has been a ruling Queen for sixty years. No previous monarch of England has continued on the throne so long.

What is most remarkable is that during all this time she has had very little illness. What has been the reason for this? In the first place, she was born with a very excellent constitution. Though short in stature, every part of her body, lungs, heart, digestive organs, muscles and nervous system were quite well and evenly developed. It is important to bear this in mind, for these facts indicate the secret of her long life and her exceptional freedom from disease.

In the next place, the Queen is very methodical in her habits and very moderate in the indulgence of her appetites. She favors plain, wholesome food; ordinarily, she breakfasts about eight o'clock, and fine fruit makes an important part of this meal. She is fond of fruits. There is also always the most perfectly prepared oatmeal on the breakfast table of which she partakes. It must be said that she is fond of the finest of tea, and considers herself a good judge of it, but she does not use it in excess; of wine she is not fond, and rarely takes any of it, or if so, only the smallest amount. Soon after breakfast she goes out to ride or walk if the weather is pleasant, for she is a great believer in exercise in the open air. Her own mother, the Duchess of Kent, from very early life accustomed her to this in order to secure the best bodily development, and encouraged her daughter to preserve her health in the same way.

She is naturally sociable and very fond of her own family, and loves to be surrounded by them. This, also, no doubt, contributes to her health and enjoyment.

She pays great attention to the sanitary condition of the palace, to the use of the bath, to ventilation and to her sleeping-rooms, for she is enough of a sanitarian to know the importance of these matters. Indeed, there are few women in England who are better informed on sanitary matters than she. All questions of state are attended to before luncheon is served so far as is possible.

Her life has not been free from sorrow or care. The death of her husband saddened her whole life. Nor has she been free from anxiety and care for a large family of children and grand-children, but her good sense as a mother has been remarkable and a lesson to all mothers. Especially has she enforced on her children in early life such lessons as would aid them in fulfilling their duties in the best manner.

In conclusion, it may be said that during her reign the average length of life in England has increased about ten years, and a knowledge of hygiene extended far more than before in all history.—Journal of Hygiene.

How to Find Out.

Fill a bottle or common glass with your water and let it stand twenty-four hours; a sediment or settling indicates an unhealthy condition of the kidneys; if it stains your linen, it is evidence of kidney trouble; too frequent desire to pass it or pain in the back is also convincing proof that the kidneys and bladder are out of order.

WHAT TO DO.

There is comfort in the knowledge so often expressed, that Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney remedy, fulfills every wish in relieving pain in the back, kidneys, liver, bladder and every part of the urinary passages. It corrects inability to hold urine and scalding pain in passing it, or bad effects following use of liquor, wine or beer, and overcomes that unpleasant necessity of being compelled to get up many times during the night to urinate. The mild and the extraordinary effect of Swamp-Root is soon realized. It stands the highest for its wonderful cures of the most distressing cases. If you need a medicine, you should have the best. Sold by druggists; price, fifty cents and one dollar. You may have a sample bottle and pamphlet both sent free by mail. Mention the Christian Advocate and send your address to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. The publisher of this paper guarantees the genuineness of this offer.

BEAUTY IS WEALTH.

Beauty is as essential to a woman as any other quality; with beauty of form and feature comes beauty of mind and character. Physical beauty is a rounded form, the brightly tinted cheek, the vivacious eye, a certain ease and grace of manner, which indicates a superabundance of physical strength. Very few women possess these qualities, but very many more might possess them who do not. If you feel that you are losing vitality, losing your beauty losing your strength, if you feel that your face which once was plump and rosy is becoming thin and sallow, that wrinkles (which are the terror to all pretty women) are beginning to appear, take our advice and try that greatest of discoveries, the "MASSAGE FACE CUP," which is the only means known to science to convert a thin and sallow expression into a plump and rosy face. It will transform a face with plain or homely features into an expression of grace and beauty. Physiology teaches us that if we would be strong, we must exercise the muscles which need the developing. Exercise causes the blood to rush to that part of the body called into action, the muscle is fed and strengthened by the fresh blood and will, therefore, develop.

The Massage Cup will do for the face, when properly applied, by contracting and relaxing the muscles, what exercise will do for the other parts of the body.

If you would have a pinkish complexion, if you would like a face plump and rosy, if you would like to remove that "horrid" wrinkle, send One Dollar to us and we will mail you the great "MASSAGE FACE CUP," with full directions for its use. Remember, you can have your money back, if you say so.

OBITUARIES.

DAVENPORT—NORMAN FRANCIS DAVENPORT, son of J. D. S. and Sue R. Davenport, was born Dec. 3, 1873, and died May 16, 1897.

He was baptized in infancy, and was converted and recognized as a member of the Methodist Church at about twelve years of age. He was a good, truthful and obedient child, and a consistent Christian. Being ambitious, studious, and having unusual concentrative power, he early acquired sufficient education to become a teacher in the public schools of his native county. He alternated between teaching and attending school until he had taught seven terms, and had spent one session at C. and H. Academy at Fort Gibson, and two at Centenary College, La. During these scholastic years he so conducted himself as to gain the confidence and esteem of all his instructors. He had perfected his plan for completing his preparation for teaching by a two years' course in the Peabody Normal College at Nashville.

But, alas! in the midst of these wise and prudent plans a sore affliction fell upon him. His reason was dethroned, and distressing darkness settled upon his soul. But the darkness was not long. The God to whose service he had dedicated his life in mercy cut it short and took him to himself. The mysterious dealings of God with some of his children, even the most faithful, we may not here expect to understand.

This studious, conscientious and pious young man, called suddenly from this earthly sphere, has, we trust, been summoned to fulfill a nobler destiny in the better land, where the invisible disabilities of the flesh shall hamper our spirits no more. The sole purpose of his life here was to do good, and such a purpose can not find perpetual fulfillment in the eternal world.

TOLES—JOHN D. TOLES, son of John W. and M. J. Toles, was born in Kemper county, Miss., May 27, 1876, and departed this life June 21, 1897, aged twenty-one years and twenty-three days.

Johnnie's mother died when he was quite a small infant, and he, being left in his father's care to raise, his father took a great interest in raising and training him right; so he gave his little Johnnie to the good Lord, and had him dedicated to the Lord in holy baptism, and Johnnie, being trained from infancy to love the Lord, he was early impressed to seek the Lord. He was converted and joined the M. E. Church, South, under the ministry of Rev. D. C. Langford, of the Mississippi Conference, when he was about nine years old; so he lived a very humble Christian from his conversion till he departed this life.

Johnnie was highly esteemed by all who knew him for his honesty and morality. He was early impressed with the duty of preaching the gospel. He said in his sickness that if the good Lord would raise him to health, that he would preach the gospel; but the good Lord had a place for him in heaven, so he called him to the ever-shining shore on the third Sunday morning in June.

This writer never witnessed a more triumphant death than Johnnie Toles. He talked to his father and his pastor in regard to death. He said that he felt that the good Lord had cleansed him from all unrighteousness. He talked nicely to his father when he was weeping over him. He would say: "Papa, don't do so. Don't weep for me, for I am all right." He called on his pastor and all to pray with him; then he called on all to sing for him; then he sang about one verse of that good hymn, "God be with you till we meet again;" then he bid us all farewell; then, in a short time, he closed his eyes on earth to open them in the bright home of the soul. So, father, mother and sister, he is at the beautiful gate waiting and watching for you.

TAYLOR—Bro. RICHARD C. TAYLOR was born in East Feliciana parish, La., June 5, 1820. He was married to Miss Missouri Nix, of East Baton Rouge parish, in September, 1843, and with her he lived happily for nearly a half century. Shortly after his marriage he was converted and joined the Methodist Church, and was ever afterward a devoted member of that communion. For many years he lived in Ouachita parish, and for the last fourteen years has been a universally respected citizen of Franklin. During the last Winter he suffered from a protracted illness, his devoted wife being confined to bed at the same time. He several times expressed the expectation that one of his prayers would soon be answered, and he and his dear wife would pass away together. When his pastor visited him during this season of suffering he seemed to be comforted by the reading of the Word and prayer, and expressed himself as ready for the summons of his Lord. Unexpectedly he recovered, but only to be called suddenly home a few months later. He died May 7, 1897, leaving his faithful wife to join him soon in the better land.

May the remembrance of his life be a benediction to those who knew him!

W. WINANS DRAKE.

MCLAURIN—EUGENE A. MCLAURIN was born in Arkansas, Oct. 5, 1859, and died in Indio, California, June 9, 1897. When ten years of age he moved with his parents to Lincoln county, Miss., where he grew to manhood, loved and respected by all who knew him.

A friend who knew him intimately thus writes: "In his quiet, unobtrusive way he lived among men, too honest and just to wrong them, and too loving to the God whom he served to dishonor him. The friends and loved ones who knew his daily home life can tell of his uprightness of character and nobleness of soul. He seemed to live above the mean things of life, and his pure ideals forbade his stooping to them."

As his pastor, we bear loving tribute to his worth as a man, a citizen, and as a Christian. He was a model business man. Genial, unselfish and accommodating, he was loved by all classes. He was a friend to the preacher, and made a capital steward.

For nearly nine months he battled with disease and death, going in March to Southern California, where he hoped to overcome both. He died among strangers, and was brought back to Bogue Chitto, where he was buried. He leaves a wife and two sons, with a host of friends; but our loss is his eternal gain. He leaves his boys the legacy of a good name and the memory of a father whose character was above reproach. W. G. BACKUS, P. C.

CALLIHAM—At my house, Friday, May 28, 1897, at 1 o'clock P. M., my dear mother, Mrs. ELIZABETH CALLIHAM (nee Stevens) quietly passed to rest. She was seventy-three years and seven months old. She was born in Franklin county, Miss., Oct. 28, 1824. Her parents moved to Yazoo county, Miss., when she was quite young. She was married to Young Calliham, of Avoyelles parish, La., Dec. 20, 1846. They moved to Pointe Coupee parish, La., in 1855. Here she spent the remainder of her life. She became a widow in 1863. She joined the Baptist Church about eighteen years ago. She always enjoyed excellent health until three years ago. Since then she has been a constant sufferer. At times her sufferings were intense. She often said she was ready to go at any time. She knew for some time she would never get well. She was confined to her bed for very near four months, and helpless for over a month. All was done that loving hands could do, but there were times when we could do nothing to alleviate her sufferings, and we were constrained to exclaim, "Oh, why must she suffer so!" But, thank God! she is at rest now. The end was so peaceful she just fell asleep. She leaves three daughters—Mrs. J. M. Pickett, of Lake Charles, La.; Mrs. J. M. Leckey and Mrs. S. R. Harmanson, of Legonier, La.—and many grandchildren and great-grandchildren and hosts of friends to mourn their loss.

Her daughter, MRS. J. M. LACKEY.

STALLINGS—Mrs. MATILDA STALLINGS (nee Ettredge) was born May 21, 1826, in Natchitoches parish, La., was married to M. H. Stallings, Dec. 22, 1850, and died May 1, 1897, at the home of her only son, George G. Stallings, near Fairfield, Texas, where she had gone on a visit. Her remains were taken to Minden, La., the home of her daughters, for interment. She was the mother of five children—one son and four daughters. Two of the girls were taken home to God in childhood, and her husband died in 1881.

Sister Stallings joined the M. E. Church in 1841 under the ministry of Rev. John B. Eddings. Hers was one of the pioneer Methodist families of Louisiana. She was baptized in childhood by old Father William Stevenson, one of the first preachers of North Louisiana. She was a devoted wife, a kind and loving mother, a good neighbor, and for fifty-six years a member of the M. E. Church.

I wish I could write of her sterling worth and beautiful Christian character. She has now gone to be with her God, who was always her support in trials.

May our God bless and save her children and grandchildren! is the prayer of her life long FRIEND.

GRADY—Mrs. M. J. GRADY, daughter of J. G. and Mary Armstrong, was born Feb. 7, 1841, at Athens, Miss., and fell on sleep in Amory, Miss., May 25, 1897. In her sixteenth year she professed faith in Christ at Tranquil Church, Monroe county, Miss., and joined the M. E. Church, South. She was married, Oct. 4, 1858, to the Rev. S. R. Walker, of the Memphis Conference, who lived a short time. In 1864 she married J. G. Grady. Together they lived thirty-three years, Bro. Grady passing to the better land nine months before Sister Grady. She was the mother of ten children, five of whom have passed over the "river," and five remain.

She lived by faith in the Son of God. When she came to bid the world farewell she was fully prepared. Happy at home and abroad. She gave a parting blessing to each child, and called upon them to meet her in heaven.

May God, in his goodness, be a father and mother to the children, and give to them power here and a home above!

D. L. COGDELL.

ECKFORD—Bro. JOHN T. ECKFORD was born March 29, 1831, and died at his home in Pachuta, May —, 1897. He was happily married to Miss Hardee, of Clarke county, in 1872, and for twenty-five years lived true and devoted to his dear wife, who, with two promising sons and two lovely daughters, mourn his loss.

Bro. Eckford was suddenly called away one Sabbath in perfect health, and the next he was buried.

He did not make a profession of religion until about ten years ago, when, under the ministry of Rev. D. C. Langford, he was converted and joined the Methodist Church.

May God comfort the dear wife and children, and in the "sweet bye and bye" may they meet, an unbroken family, in heaven!

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of Testimonials.

Camp Meetings.

Hennington Camp Meeting, near Crystal Springs, Miss., will open Thursday evening, Aug. 5, and continne about ten days. Ministers of the gospel and Christian workers are cordially invited to come and help us. Rev. John P. Lowry, of Little Rock, Ark., is expected to be with us. The meeting will be under the control of the presiding elder and the pastors of adjacent charges. The grounds have been greatly improved, and "every prospect pleases;" but we want a manifestation of the old-time power.

The Home Department Quarterly.

The Sunday-school Board at its meeting in May determined that the growth of the home department work was such as to require the issuance of a Home Department Quarterly, and it was so directed. This new issue is now ready. It consists in the main of the same matter as that contained in the Senior Quarterly, but with such adjustment as adapt it peculiarly to the needs of our home department work.

Sunday-school workers everywhere should at once begin this new line of work where it is not already established. There is no more important field committed to us. It works well in the country as well as in the towns. Pastors and superintendents will find in it a right hand of power for various good works.

Beginning with the fourth quarter of this year, the Home Department Quarterly can be had at the same price as the Senior Quarterly by ordering of Barbee & Smith, Agents, Nashville, Tenn.

Sunday-School Editor.

It is your duty, as well as privilege, to look young as long as you can. One way to do so is by dressing your hair with Ayer's Hair Vigor. It causes the hair to retain its color and fullness to a late period of life, and keeps the scalp in good, healthy condition.

MACK—BROWN.—In the Methodist Church at Pine Grove, La., July 8, 1897, by Rev. F. N. Sweeney, Mr. Geo. W. Mack to Miss Mollie Brown, both of St. Helena parish, La.

Epworth College
(Formerly MALONE)

Is located in Holly Springs, at the intersection of the Illinois Central and Kansas City, Memphis and Birmingham Railroads, and has always been noted for the health, culture and refinement of its people. Ten passenger trains come and go every day, except Sunday, when we have eight.

We shall continue to work under the auspices of the North Mississippi Conference, and pledge ourselves to use every effort in behalf of those entrusted to our care that they may be developed into educated, polished Christian women.

BOARDING DEPARTMENT.

Pupils boarding in the College have the personal attention of the President and his wife, who, together with the teachers, strive to make their stay while here as pleasant and profitable as possible.

An abundance of substantial food is furnished; ample time given at each meal for everyone to be satisfied, and President's family, teachers and pupils all fare alike. Special attention is paid to their manners and morals at all times, and every effort is made to impress them with the necessity of constant growth, physically, mentally and morally.

We board at $11.00 per month where they take their meals regularly at the table; extra charge when the meals are carried to their rooms, and extra servant hire. This includes pupils and teachers.

No incidental fee is charged unless something is destroyed, and in this case the cost of the article is charged to the party who destroys it.

Epworth League Echoes.

BY REV. THOMAS B. CLIFFORD.

En route to Toronto we spent a day in Cincinnati visiting the Zoological Gardens and the Methodist Book Concern. Through the kindness of Bro. Brown, assistant editor of the Western Christian Advocate, we were shown through the entire (Publishing House) building. The structure is a new one, quite magnificent in all its furnishings, and is the property of the M. E. Church. Some of the most improved machinery is to be seen in the type-setting and press rooms. We had the pleasure of shaking hands with Dr. Moore, the genial and scholarly editor, and also many other members of the editorial staff.

At Buffalo a striking illustration was presented of a living truth. As our train pulled into the depot I noticed a train on the track of the Michigan Central. I asked the conductor of that train what time it was. Pulling out his watch, he said: "It is ten minutes after six; time for my train to leave. Your train," he said, "is due to leave same time as mine, though the time of departure for yours is ten minutes after seven." Our train, you see, was the New York Central and H. R. railroad, and runs on Eastern time; the other, the Michigan Central, runs on Western time, and as our readers doubtless know, the difference is about one hour.

Niagara was the next point of interest we reached, and here, of course, we spent several hours viewing the Falls and visiting the many points of interest to be seen thereabouts. Then on to Lewiston, N. Y., in observation cars, and thence on board the elegant steamer "Corona" across Lake Ontario to Toronto. The trip was delightful, and nothing happened to mar the pleasure of any member of our party. We met and enjoyed the company of many friends of former days. My special traveling companion was Rev. E. B. Ramsey, pastor of the Hernando Street Methodist Church, Memphis, Tenn. We will not soon forget our delightful journey to that land "beyond the lakes."

Toronto was equal to all our expectations, and, perhaps, went beyond. I think it safe to say that it is the most moral and religious city in all the world. Its avenues, parks, colleges, hospitals, churches, palatial homes and well-kept streets at once attract and charm the visitor. While driving with my host (Dr. Sweetnam) I saw the Children's Hospital. "That," said the doctor, "is the finest hospital for children in the world." One thing struck me, and that was the scarcity of poor people and the absence of any inferior dwelling-houses.

Thursday evening, July 15, at 2:30 P. M., I attended the opening services at Massey Hall, and heard the addresses of welcome by Hon. A. S. Hardy, premier of Ontario, and also by Rev. Dr. Carman, superintendent of the Methodist Church in Canada. These were rich and rare, and were delivered in that impressive and pleasing manner characteristic of the representative Canadian. The responses came from Bishop Ninde, of the M. E. Church; Bishop Fitzgerald, of the M. E. Church, South, and Rev. Simpson Johnson, from Manchester, England, representing the Wesley Guild. A touching incident occurred just before the services commenced. Two men were seen to enter the auditorium through the door in the second gallery, and it was soon discovered that they each carried a flag—one being the Stars and Stripes of America, the other the Union Jack of England. Coming to the edge of the gallery, they unfurled the flags in the presence of the vast assembly of nearly six thousand people, and then all voices joined in singing in honor of the British flag, "God Save the Queen." No sooner had the sound of voices ceased when "My Country, 'Tis of Thee," floated out "as if sung by ten thousand singers." The flags were then crossed, and the whole congregation stood together and sang that beautiful and touching hymn, "Blest be the tie that binds." May the hand of God ever guide these two great Christian nations!

I will write more of the Convention for next issue of the ADVOCATE.

Letter from China.

MR. EDITOR: The Shanghai District Conference convened last week, and continued four days, closing Sunday. We had a very interesting session, and judging the others by myself, a helpful one. We have a number of live native preachers on this district, and they can discuss a question with as much zest and intelligence as preachers at home. Among other things, we discussed plans for getting our members to follow our Discipline. A needless discussion, some may say, but I rather think it would be a good idea to get the same question agitated at home. I am sure that you would be pleased to see how well acquainted with the Discipline our preachers are. We also discussed the best methods of using our poor fund; also plans for helping the American Bible Society; also best ways of using our domestic missionary collections. I think that some good will grow out of these discussions. Among the practical outcomes of the Conference was the adoption of a strong temperance report. This, considering the low state of temperance among the Chinese, and the backwardness even of our preachers not long since, we consider a victory in the Lord, and are thankful. About seven years ago I moved the appointment of a Committee on Temperance, and was voted quite down. Until only recently a number of our preachers thought there was no harm in a little drink. Now all in this district have given it up. This is, indeed, something to be thankful for. We also adopted a strong report looking towards self-support, and we are going to do better, in that respect, in the future than we have in the past. We also organized a District Epworth League, electing Rev. R. A. Parker, president, and Rev. Sz Tsz Kya, secretary. The Epworth League is an organization that we can not do without, and it will not be long before we will have effected a union with the Leagues of the M. E. Church, and have a boom out here.

On Tuesday, after the Conference, I went to Nansiang to hold Bro. Parker's Quarterly Conference. I left Shanghai about six o'clock on a wheel-barrow, and made the fourteen or fifteen miles in good time. Reached Bro. Parker's house about ten o'clock; would have gotten there sooner, but was delayed some little time making the change to pay my wheel-barrow man. You can make very good time on one of the things when you have a good road and a good man to push.

I was to have left that afternoon and meet my family at a little village about twelve miles from Nansiang. It had been arranged that they leave Shanghai that afternoon by boat, and await me at the village, or I await them, as the case might be. We can plan things very well, but can not always carry them out. It started raining about the time I wanted to start, and rain and wheel-barrows do not go well together. I could not get a wheel-barrow, and I did not care to walk twelve miles through an unknown country, with the prospects of reaching my journey's end after dark, for it was already late when it seemed likely there would not be much more rain. I waited till next morning and got an early start. I found that it was a good thing for me that a wheel-barrow would not go the afternoon before, for it was a bad road, and my man got lost, or rather got off the road, and then had to ask his way about every five or six hundred yards after he had been set right again. I do not know what he would have done had it been dark and no people about to ask.

After a long, tiresome journey, I reached Ts'ih-pau, and found that my boat had left. There was nothing to do but call another wheel-barrow and go another eighteen miles home. This I did, and Mark Twain's "Roughing It" is not a circumstance to what I experienced. About six miles was very good; then there was no wheel-barrow road at all, and very rarely does a wheel-barrow go along that way. It was cut up with trenches for irrigating, and I suppose that I walked a half of the remaining twelve miles. After getting to Sung-Kiang, I had to walk over two miles down a long street home. I was glad to get within my walls once more, and I about decided that I did not want any more wheel-barrows, unless for short distances. Besides being stiff, and having my ribs sore from being knocked against the side of the barrow, I was hungry, for I had eaten nothing since six o'clock, except a little dry Chinese cake. The road was so rough that had I not called one man to pull as well as one to push, I would likely have had to walk nearly all the way.

However, such experiences are not unhealthy, and, after a night's rest, I was as well off as though I had not been shaken up so—perhaps better off. Still I think that I will keep more closely to the orthodox way of travel in these parts by boat.

We have just received news from the Board, and I think that they have done wonderfully well for us, considering the stress at home. I am afraid that our people at home do not appreciate, as they ought, all that the church owes to this body of faithful and consecrated men. It is a shame that the church has not allowed them means enough to send out the reinforcements so much needed. With brotherly love, Yours truly.

W. B. BURKE.

Sung-Kiang, China, June 15, 1897.

P. S.—Since writing, I have heard that a new man is to come to us this Fall, and that there is a good chance for the Board to pay off its debt in a year. W. B. B.

Louisiana Chautauqua.

The past week at the Chautauqua has been a particularly profitable one to both visitor and student. The interest in the "Summer School" has not waned, as the students have settled down to work. Everything has been done to make the school here an "ideal Summer Normal." The students are all required to assemble in the auditorium each morning, and, after the calling of the roll, one of the professors calls upon anyone whose name is enrolled to arise and discuss some question assigned on the previous day. For instance: one morning some of the students were called upon to discuss the "Cuban Question." Very often the professors call upon any student present to make an impromptu speech upon any subject they may choose to assign at that moment. All of this is helpful to the teachers who are taking the Normal course. It begets self-confidence. Then, too, they learn the very best methods of teaching from the professors here, so that, on resuming their regular school work in the Fall, many a teacher will be better equipped for drawing out the very best that lies in the mind of the pupils entrusted to their care.

The "Model School," conducted by Miss Schuster, is proving to be of much value to all of the students.

On Sunday, Mr. R. O. Alexander gave another excellent talk to the Chautauqua.

Each night there has been something of interest to attend. One night was devoted to "Louisiana and Her Educational Outlook," and on that occasion addresses were given by prominent speakers.

The reunion of the Normal graduates was held on Friday night, Prof. B. C. Caldwell presiding. Many of the Normal School students were present, and the programme for the evening consisted of an address of welcome by Mrs. Williams, "the Mother of the Chautauqua," after which several speeches were made concerning the work done by the Normal School.

To day we will have the "Organization of Chautauqua Library and Museum Guild."

Vicksburg District Conference.

The Vicksburg District Conference convened in the beautiful new church at Oak Ridge, on the Warren circuit, on July 16, 1897, at 9 o'clock A. M., with the presiding elder, Rev. J. M. Weems, D. D., in the chair.

Notwithstanding the distance of the place of meeting from the railroad, only five pastors were absent, and one of the number was in attendance on the Epworth League Conference in Toronto, another was sick, and the others were unavoidably detained at home on account of sickness in their charges. There was a good attendance on the part of the laymen, nearly every charge being represented. The people of the community attended the sessions of the Conference with unabated interest up to the close of the last session. The reports from the charges were good. It was remarked by nearly every preacher and many of the laymen that it was the best District Conference they had ever attended, and surely was it one of the best.

Dr. Weems, popular with all of his preachers, and in high esteem all over the district, magnified his office in the chair and pulpit. He did not let any question of interest or importance pass by unnoticed, and, as a result, the interest of the people did not lag at any time.

The preaching service was given prominence, and in this the gospel, in its power, was felt as an influence in confirming the faith of the people of God. The sermons preached by J. G. Galloway, J. A. Moore, W. M. Stevens, E. E. Langford, J. M. Weems, D. D., and H. M. Ellis were of a high order and well received.

Several committees were appointed, and when the report on temperance was submitted, there was a little breeze, but after a thorough sifting of the speakers it was adopted, with the request for publication.

Three of our schools were represented: Millsaps by Prof. R. S. Ricketts, Brookhaven by Rev. J. W. Chambers, and Port Gibson by Mrs. McCaa, whose heart is in the work of educating and qualifying our girls for life's duties. Bro. Chambers made a very impressive speech on "Church Schools—What They Should Be;" and I dare say the biggest preacher at Oak Ridge District Conference will be talked about for a long time.

The Conference was royally entertained, and every day after the eleven o'clock service everybody was invited to the tables under the large oaks of the ridge to partake of turkey, chicken and pie, etc., in abundance. That was the place for a hungry preacher.

The Conference added importance and tone to Methodism in that section of Warren county. Resolutions of respect and esteem were adopted on the devotion of the presiding elder to the interests of the church in the district for the past four years. There was much feeling on both sides when the resolutions were read. God abundantly bless Bro. Weems!

By a vote of the Conference it was ordered that a sermon preached by the secretary on "The Missions of Our Church" be published in the ADVOCATE.

The following are the delegates elect to the Annual Conference: T. A. Holloman, B. H. Ritchie, Dr. J. S. Austin, and J. H. Brabston. The alternates are: Thos. Mount and Dr. R. C. Bethea.

The next place of meeting is Rolling Fork.

The work being concluded, the Conference adjourned at 5 P. M., Saturday, July 17, 1897.

Sunday was a day of much profit in the feasting of soul upon the Word of Life. Rev. W. T. Griffin talked to the children at 10 o'clock. Dr. Weems preached at 11 o'clock to a full house, and at the close of the sermon the sacrament of the Lord's Supper was administered by Rev. A. D. Miller, with the assistance of other preachers. Rev. H. M. Ellis preached in the afternoon. A heavy rain prevented us having service in the evening. ROBT. SELBY, Sec.

Enterprise District Conference.

This body met in regular session July 8, in the M. E. Church, South, at Laurel, Miss. The presiding elder, Rev. L. Carley, presided, and dispatched the order of business in such an easy style and good spirit as to render the entire session superlatively pleasant as well as eminently profitable. All of the itinerant preachers of the district were present except four, and a fairly good representation of the laity. The disciplinary order of business was duly considered, and the reports of the pastors showed an encouraging degree of progress throughout the bounds of the district.

The genial Dr. Murrah let the "light of his countenance" shine on us just long enough to "edify the brethren" in an address on Christian education, in which he presented the claims of Millsaps College, emphasizing the more than ordinary success which has attended that institution since its establishment.

Prof. J. W. Beeson, of the E. M. F. College, was in our midst (a part of one day) in the interest of the college. He represented the college as being in a very flattering condition, it having just closed one of the most, if not the most, successful year's work of its existence.

Miss Anna Trotter, district secretary for the Enterprise district of the W. F. M. Society, showed her earnestness and zeal in this department of church work by her presence and enthusiastic appeal to the pastors for their co-operation.

Bro. J. W. McLaurin was with us representing the American Bible Society.

Prominence was given to the preaching of the Word, which was of a high type. Those filling the pulpit at different times are as follows: C. D. Cecil, J. W. McLaurin, R. B. Downer, W. J. Dawson, W. J. Ferguson, R. L. Phillips, J. T. Nicholson, and J. T. Leggett.

Delegates elected to the Annual Conference are as follows: R. M. Cameron, S. J. Johnson, W. S. Davis, and H. S. Gunn. The alternates are: A. Trotter and E. W. Stafford.

The following local preachers had their licenses renewed, viz.: J. D. Price, T. J. O'Neal, A. Trotter, J. T. Griffith, H. B. Gilmore, and W. A. Miller.

Shubuta was selected as the place to hold the next District Conference.

Well, Doctor, as we have several papers to reach you under the inevitable "Resolved" for publication, I will repel the temptation to comment, and close. Sorry you were not with us. We remembered your kind thoughtfulness in supplying us with a number of copies of the ADVOCATE, and expressed our appreciation in a "Resolved." J. T. LEGGETT, Secretary.

TOPIC FOR AUGUST.

ST. PAUL AS A MAN OF PRAYER.

AUG. 1.—THE PRAYER AT CONVERSION. (Acts ix. 6, 11.)

The question, "Lord, what wilt thou have me to do?" probably sounds the key-note to his three days of blindness, penitence, and prayer. It is an exponent of the only spiritual condition that is a guarantee of salvation. In an analysis we find that it involves surrender and consecration.

1. Paul surrenders to Christ, lays down his arms. He gives up his manner of life. This is the only way to be saved. Men wish to be saved in their sins. God can only save them from their sins. Here the battle is fought. You would like to be saved from the consequences of your sins, and hold on to the sins themselves. This can not be. "Lord, I give up," is surrender, yet victory.

2. Paul not only surrendered to the Lord, but he enlisted as a soldier of the cross. Surrender is good, but it is not complete without consecration. These are the negative and positive sides of the same spirit. The life of sin must be superseded by the life of righteousness.

3. Paul thought he was doing right. Jesus showed him his error. Paul thought he was spiritually rich, and needed nothing. The light shined down into his soul, and he realized his terrible spiritual wretchedness and poverty. These three days were probably spent in taking an inventory of his spiritual stock. The result was a revelation to him. "Blessed are the poor in spirit" (that is, they who realize their spiritual poverty) "for theirs is the kingdom of heaven." The man who recognizes his ignorance may get knowledge, but the man who does not will never learn. Blessed are the empty, for they shall be filled. Cursed are the rich in spirit (that is, they who are satisfied with their condition), for theirs is the kingdom of hell. Penitence is the dark passage into the kingdom of light.

4. Jesus can not build upon man's righteousness. Paul had many virtues, but he pleads nothing but his emptiness. The foundation of his Christian character is laid upon the rock bottom of humility. You can no more build a palace upon a fog-bank than a Christian character upon human goodness. Clear away all the debris; then will Christ build.

5. This prayer was the expression of the subjective demand for God. Supply in your heart the proper conditions, and they guarantee God's presence.

SOME PERFECT DAY.

BY MARGARET E. SANGSTER.

Some perfect day I shall not need
To bend my brows o'er baffling tasks;
Some perfect day my eyes will read
The meaning hid 'neath clouding masks;
Some perfect day my word and deed
Will fill the ideal my spirit asks:

Dear perfect day of days to be,
Which safe the steadfast heaven doth keep
Deep filled with love and rest, for me
Close-pressed with sheaves I yet shall reap,
When they who watch beside me see
Only that I have fallen asleep.

Communications.

"The Evidential Value of Experience."

Bro. Lewis has been quite fortunate in his treatment of the subject which heads this communication, in that he has said some things which no observer would for a moment question. He has been equally unfortunate in saying some things which I incline to think his broad catholicity would not permit him to say on due reflection. Experience is the result of trial—experiment—and is of unquestionable value in all matters where experiment is possible. Thus, by a long series of tests, it has been decided that a given rate of speed is more economic in running railroad trains than a faster or slower rate. If the speed is too slow, there is too much waste of time; if too fast, there is too much wear and too much danger of wreck for economic purposes.

And so in Christian living it has been discovered that unwavering purpose is indispensable to the highest type of Christian life. And this goes to demonstrate a general principle expressed in heathen language, "The gods help those who help themselves." But there are many things which do not come within the realm of experimentation, and about which we can have no experience at all. "There is one only true and living God." But what can experience do with that proposition? Nothing. Absolutely nothing! So it may be said of all the great doctrines of the Bible: the Trinity, Sonship of Christ, judgment, resurrection, adoption, and all.

For the comfort of human hearts God has provided other evidence than experience for those who "are born of God"—the witness of the Spirit. Not by experience, but by the testimony of the Holy Ghost we are assured of our Sonship with the Father. Experience grows out of this relationship by which we know of our changed state, our hopes, our afflictions, and the power of grace.

Here, it seems to me, we come into the very core of Bro. Lewis' error: We can not experience a doctrine. The application of the doctrine—the infusion of its power and principles into the soul—become the starting-point of an experience. "Sudden illumination," or "inward impression on the soul," are the basis of experience, and no experience can bring these conditions or interpret their nature. You may, know that you have it, but "canst not tell whence it cometh, or whither it goeth. So is everyone that is born of the Spirit."

Psychologically considered, experience can never rise above the intellectual conception of it in any given case, and will be found presenting as different and varied phases of the doctrines or operations on which it is based, as are to be found in the mental make-up of the professor of the experience. The uncultured, the wrongly instructed, the impetuous (and other differentia) are known to hold to quite different experiences, not only in matters of a religious character, but in things generally.

The error of the Pietists, the Dancers, and others, seem to have grown out of this recognition of experience as the basis of religious truth. Experience is not truth, except as it conforms to "the truth as it is in Christ," or to conditions as they are known to exist.

Bro. Lewis says: "But it may be said: 'A man's experience in matters of religion must quadrate with the Scriptures in order to be of value in the settlement of any doctrinal question.' True; but who is to decide when experience quadrates with the Scripture? 'The natural man receiveth not the things of the Spirit of God: for they are foolishness unto him: neither can he know them, because they are spiritually discerned! The gospel is addressed not so much to the head as to the heart, and it can best be interpreted in the light of experience.'"

The foregoing quotation is in the nature of a repudiation of the opinions of all men who have no "experience" on the subject being discussed. "Who is to decide when experience quadrates with Scripture? 'The natural man receiveth not the things of the Spirit of God," etc. Why does Bro. Lewis lug this Scripture into line time of argument? Does he not see its irrelevancy as between two "Sons of God"? He surely does not propose to insist that this question has any bearing on the question of experience. "If any man have not the Spirit of Christ, he is none of his." If he have this "Spirit," he is not a "natural man," and may properly "discern the things of the Spirit of God."

Surely Bro. Lewis does not propose to narrow his soul down to the point logically presented in the paragraph quoted above. If you do not "discern" these "things of the Spirit of God" as I do, "ye are none of his" i Discernment is not experience, but experience will quadrate with the discernment in every case. It is for this reason that the "evidential value of experience" in matters of doctrine is absolutely "nil." Experience of grace is a power for good. Tell me of your trials and of your triumphs. Tell me how "grace has brought you safe thus far," that I may have hope that "grace will lead me home." I like all this; but I do not want experience brought up to prove "the sun do move," or that "election and reprobation" are Bible doctrines; and if we can not prove these doctrines by experience, why attempt to prove any other doctrine by experience—"evidential value"! God did not leave us to establish a consciousness of our "new birth" by "the evidential value of experience," but by the joint testimony of his Spirit and our spirit. "Therefore, leaving the principle of the doctrine of Christ," and building our experience in the light of this doctrine, "let us go on to perfection."

In some things experience furnishes the best of evidence, while in other things it can not, in the nature of things, furnish any evidence at all. This has been already suggested. In raising corn, running boats, training horses, conducting revivals, harmonizing contending factions, overcoming difficulties in the Christian life, and in hundreds of things, experience is of the utmost importance. But whether it be theism or pantheism, free grace or predestination, justification or regeneration, these are matters which experience can never determine, and with the truth of which experience has nothing to do—matters with which it has no connection except in the sense that when pleased we experience pleasure, or when burned we experience pain.

It is plain, I think, that experience, instead of a cansation, is an effect. It results from some conditions existing in us or about us, and is never a correct experience unless it quadrates with its cause. In hysteria the experience conforms to ideal afflictions, and to no real disorder in the physical organism. It is a sham, and has to be treated as a sham. However, hysteria is no less an experience of unrest, or real suffering, than rheumatism or sciatica. But it does not establish the fact of the disease of the organ, or organs, supposed by the hysteric to be affected. The ideal conception is erroneous, and consequently the whole experience is an error. This is true of all hypnotic conditions as well as hysteria. Suppose one had a false conception of the nature of grace—e. g., that grace corrects and perfects the judgment. The experience resulting from such false understanding of grace would persuade one that there was neither virtue nor benefit in grace.

Let a Presbyterian, a Baptist, an Episcopalian, a Campbellite and a Methodist get together and undertake to settle their doctrinal differences by their experiences. Who would hesitate to prophesy a failure? What would we do when we touched the question of baptism? One would say, "Affusion is sufficient." Another would deny, and clamor for "immersion." Another would say, "It justifies only in infancy." Another would say "it justifies adults as well;" still another would say it did neither the one nor the other; it is merely "an outward sign of an inward grace." Where would the "evidential value of experience" be in such a test? In doctrinal matters experience has no value whatever as evidence. If the testimony of experience is insufficient to settle so unimportant a matter as "the doctrine of baptism" —Heb. vi, 2—how can it be sufficient to settle other great doctrines of grace?

Who can tell us, by experience, that "in due time Christ died for the ungodly"? Since none have experienced Christ's death, no experience can settle the fact of it. We believe it to be a fact, and believing it as a fact, we trust him, and in the exercise of this trust (or faith) we become conscious of it. With this consciousness our experience begins, and this experience keeps us in the consciousness of the relation which faith has established between us and the Father till he "creates us anew in Christ Jesus." Then he sends his Spirit "to bear witness with our spirits, that we are the children of God." But not one thought of this truth is established by the experience, no more than the demonstration of an equation proves the truth of a mathematical formula. Nor so much, because experience is not demonstration even.

One can not experience repentance nor faith; but one can experience the effect of these in one's abhorrence of sin, and in one's "joy and peace in the Holy Ghost." It is perfectly safe to interpret our experiences by the Scripture; but when we try to interpret the Scripture by our experience, we invert God's order.

J. A. PARKER.

The Up-to-Date Sunday-School.

The question, What is an up-to-date Sunday-school? should be answered with reference to the facilities for and possibilities of Sunday-school work here in the Aberdeen district of the North Mississippi Conference. It should be answered with reference to our people and our environment, though the answer, if correct, will apply everywhere, barring only details.

We should first determine what is the chief purpose of the Sunday-school, and then devise the most effectual means for accomplishing that purpose. In its origin Robert Raikes and his contemporaries had mainly a secular design in view. They desired to furnish some elementary learning to the ignorant and indigent, and at the same time interweave with it religious instruction, and thus save many who would otherwise be lost. Sunday was the most convenient day on which to accomplish this object. This was a century and more ago. The free public school has in most places relieved the Sunday-school of that task; but all the evangelical churches, while losing sight of the purely secular aim, have seized upon the religious idea and developed the Sunday-school to an amazing degree in that regard.

And now to-day an alarming condition confronts us, which I, for one, view with "a feeling something akin to pain." The Sunday-school has to a great degree become the children's church, and the pastor no longer enjoys the privilege of preaching to the children from his pulpit, as he once did. They are not there to preach to. They are gone home. I am not now saying what ought to be, but rather what is. I am stating history. We are confronted with a condition, and not a theory, as President Cleveland once said. Certainly all members of the Sunday-school who are old enough to belong to the church should attend the preaching by the pastor. The pastor, from very necessity, can say little that may be called preaching to the children in the Sunday-school. He has not the time; neither has the school. A correct picture of the interior of a church attended by our fathers will disclose the minister in his lofty pulpit and his parishioners in their pews. The father sits at one end, the mother at the other, and the children, in all their gradations, between; some so small as to be barely able to get a glimpse of the pastor above the back of the next pew in front. That day has gone. When the children come into the main auditorium of the church as a body to-day, it is mainly on Children's Day, at an Epworth League rally, or some other special occasion, when they have everything their own way. The parents have come to acquiesce in this state of things. The pastor seems helpless. This is the condition, then, that confronts the church. And when it is remembered that the pole star to which all else must point in the conduct of the Sunday-school is saving the souls of the children, and when it is remembered further that a tremendous responsibility has been by this strange transformation shifted from the shoulders of the ministry to those of the laity—to wit, the Sunday-school teachers of the land—it is then that the Sunday-school teacher should shudder. That the work is often done poorly is seen when it is remembered that too often the boy gets too large for his business before his sixteenth year, and leaves the place set apart for him in the Sunday-school room for the street or the woods. It could be better tolerated if he retired from the Sunday-school room to the auditorium to hear the preaching; but too often he is found in neither place. The fault lies with the boy's parents and his teachers.

We sometimes fear that the management by the laity of the religious instruction of the children—for which it has so turned out they are responsible, and for which the ministry are not directly, but only indirectly responsible—will be a repetition in fact of the old mythological story wherein it is said Phæthon obtained from his father, Helios, permission to drive the chariot of the sun for a single day. The fierce steeds drawing the chariot became unmanageable. It was turned from its course, and the world came near being burned up, and would have been burned up but for the timely intervention of Jove, who struck the rash young man dead from his seat. May such a poor commentary hereafter not be written of us, nor such a sad fate befall us. The "sine qua non" of the up-to-date Sunday-school is the competent, the self-denying, the faithful teacher. There are dispensable and indispensable things in Sunday-school work. The burden of the day rests with the teacher. Without him the work languishes. The whole body of Sunday-school teachers in any school should work in perfect harmony; the energies of one should reinforce the efforts of another; the weak must succor the strong; the hopeful ones hold up the discouraged. This can not be done without regular teachers' meetings held at least weekly for study and consultation. The officers should be there, and the whole together should constitute a consultation of war as do the generals before a battle.

An irreligious Sunday-school teacher, no matter what his literary qualifications, is not to be tolerated. In our libraries should be found the best works of the day on Sunday-school methods. Our teachers should study the science of pedagogy. The church must now either raise the general level of the teacher's qualifications in her Sunday-schools, or she will suffer egregiously, and more in the next generation than in this.

The up-to-date Sunday-school has the cheerful co-operation of the parents and enjoys the presence of those who can attend. The children's estimate of the value to them of the Sunday-school training is measured largely by the estimate of their parents and their superiors in years and influence. If it is looked upon as a proper resort only for little children and old women, and unfit for men and grown-up boys; if it is minimized in the young people's estimation by being ignored altogether by parents who never come to help or encourage, and whose contributions are never more than a nickel at a time; if it is never pressed upon the attention of the children and young people at home as something not to be treated with indifference, but is the butt of jest and badinage, then will it continue to be treated by the grown-up young boys and girls as but a nursery, with toys and rhymes to entertain, from which a timely escape is always desirable to be had.

Were the secular schools and secular education treated so indifferently by parents and guardians, learning would soon perish from the earth. The boy who is intended for a scholar has that matter constantly before him. The public schools of every community are so magnified by constant comment and criticism, and interest on the part of all, that their demands can not be ignored.

Is the religious education of the children any less important? Do not the parents need reinforcing in their efforts here as well as there? The result of it all is, that the Sunday-school can not and will not be elevated to its proper place as an essential educational factor in the church and the world until its work is more uniformly accentuated in the homes, schools, and social circles of the land, as well as from the pulpit. Its proper importance and dignity must be accredited to it and accorded to it without reservation or apology in all places and at all times. If it is not what it ought to be, let it be made so by the co-operation of all parents, teachers, and religious leaders everywhere. It has taken its place heretofore defined as a resultant of many and different forces, and it is likely to hold it for some time to come. Whether or not it fulfills its proper functions depends upon the skill, the competency, the religious ardor of those operating its machinery.

The up-to-date Sunday-school has a library filled with books on Sunday-school methods and pedagogy, which the teachers read. It has an efficient librarian, a tireless and accurate secretary to keep its records, and a competent treasurer to look after its finances. It connects itself with the church by contributing regularly to missions, and additions to the church from its members are of frequent occurrence. It should have comfortable, if not commodious, quarters, and all necessary apparatus in the way of black-boards, wall-maps, musical instruments, and song books. While all these are important, it is not necessary to discuss them at great length, because, if the vital matters heretofore more fully stressed are not overlooked, these things will come in their proper places. The officers and teachers who have the work on their hearts, and yield to it its proper place in their lives, will not ignore that vital thing in dealing with children and young people, viz.: punctuality. They will come and go with clock-like certainty. Such officers will as surely provide suitable and good music. They will learn the young people to sing so, that when they take their places in the auditorium of the church, the choir will not alone be heard. Give us back the congregational singing of our fathers. Give us better singing than they had, also, but let all the people sing.

There is no more important work confronting men and women to-day than that of the religious instruction of the children. Upon it devolves the weal or woe of the next generation. GEO. J. LEFTWICH.

The Presiding Elder.

Bro. "Jeames" Jones makes some good suggestions in this week's ADVOCATE, but it is certain, from my standpoint, that he errs in his suggestions about the presiding eldership and the increase of charges to a district. If we have presiding elders, let's gives them some chance to do something for the Master's kingdom. I have thirteen charges which give me fifty-two quarterly meetings per year, or one for every Sabbath. My experience is, that a quarterly meeting without a Sabbath in it is a failure. I find the members of the Quarterly Conference unwilling — they say "unable"—to attend the Quarterly Conference sessions in the week the major part of the year. I hold many of my Quarterly Conferences at night for their accommodation. My idea of a presiding elder is, that he is to be a preacher, a pastor, and superintend the charges in his district. He should have only enough charges to enable him to visit his people once a year, and pray with them in their homes, in company with the pastor; assist in holding protracted meetings, and thus do away with the necessity of having evangelists to assist in this work, and to supervise in all the work of the church. Twelve charges to a district are about the number. Thus the pastor and the presiding elder can do the work well. A field well tilled, though small, produces much more than a large field poorly cultivated.

Correspondence.

Some More Mixed Notes.

Rev. W. W. Simmons, P. E., reports from the Brandon district as follows: Newton and Hickory, D. P. Bradford, P. C., $23.40 for foreign and $10 for domestic missions; Shiloh, W. W. Cammack, P. C., $6.20 for domestic missions; Brandon station, R. F. Witt, P. C., $25 for foreign missions; and Steen's Creek, R. Bradley, P. C., $12.50; Walnut Grove, P. H. Howse, P. C., $4; Decatur, P. D. Hardin, P. C., $20; Morton, W. L. Linfield, P. C., $20—all for foreign missions. Bro. Linfield reports that besides the $20 for foreign missions, he has collected $16 for domestic missions and $20 for Conference claimants.

But what has Carthage and Clarksburg and Montrose and Hillsboro and Raleigh and Trenton and Lake and Westville and Forest been doing that we have no report of any collection for either foreign or domestic missions? More than seven months of the Conference year are passed.

A brother from his sick-bed (not in the Brandon district) sent me the names of physicians and druggists in his pastoral charge. He is the sixteenth to comply with my reasonable request. I am afraid some others will have to get sick and suffer awhile before they will think about the request often repeated. Brethren, I beg of you let me have those names, or write to me that you have no physicians or druggists who are members of your pastoral charge.

Bro. Simmons writes me that he thinks Brandon district will make a better showing in all the collections than were made last year.

Temperance.

REPORT ON TEMPERANCE ADOPTED AT VICKSBURG DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

We, your Committee on Temperance, beg leave to make the following report:

The gospel of Christ is a gospel of temperance; hence the Methodist Church in her doctrines, principles and practice, is pre-eminently a temperance church. We are justly proud of her record in this respect. With gratitude to God, we would note that there are but few counties now in Mississippi where liquor is sold, and feel sure that the day is rapidly approaching when our fair State will be entirely freed from the curse of the licensed saloon.

We would condemn the conduct of certain officials in high places, in some of our dry counties, in refusing to sentence certain blind-tiger men upon their conviction of the charge of selling liquor without license. Such conduct on the part of those in authority serves to encourage lawlessness, and operates against the cause of temperance. We make no compromise with the liquor traffic, but recognize it as one of the monster evils of the day.

Let our preachers preach on the subject, and be ever on the alert, and with God on our side, and with the strong arm of local option, the victory is ours. W. M. STEVENS,
For Committee.

Selections.

It has been said that the most valuable man is he who, while superior in one thing, is fairly good in several; and the same truth holds good in mental and moral life as well as business or profession. The finest mind is that which, though strongest in a favorite line of thought, is able to run with ease in many others; and the best moral character is that which, while excelling in certain good qualities which are spontaneous, has yet acquired many others in which it was deficient.

The upward way can not be easy—it must be climbing to the end; but as you climb there comes more love of man, more love of God, a blessing of stronger, abler, kinder, happier life, and ever growing over all a quiet, restful sense of something brighter, happier still, beyond; some crown of better life than aught we know of here, which the Lord hath, in the unfolding of the eternal years, for them that love him.—Dr. Brooke Herford.

Some persons would make religion to consist of little else than a self-denying course of the practice of virtue and obedience. They make it a kind of house-of-correction work. But, no! I love the service of my God. Like the bird, I fly at liberty on the wings of obedience to his holy will.—Dr. Chalmers.

A finished town is bad enough, but save us from a finished man! Nothing can be added to him. What he does not know would make a very small volume.—Holston Methodist.

To Whom It May Concern:

About three years ago I received a sample bottle of "Mul-en-ol." I had never heard of it before. I began using it, however, as occasion required, and soon found that it was all that is claimed for it, and more. For cuts, burns, bruises, scalds, and all kinds of sores, it is superior to any remedy I have ever used. It is also exceedingly efficacious in colic and diarrhœa. For sore throat it is incomparably better than anything I know of. I heartily recommend it as a medicine worthy of a place in every household. W. C. BLACK,

FROM THE WORK.

Rev. W. J. Porter, P. C., Ennice, La., July 16, 1897: "We closed a gracious meeting at Long Point of the Prudhomme charge, on the thirteenth instant. The Lord was with us in great power from the first service to the last. Bro. J. S. Saunders did most of the preaching. Bro. Gettie Sloane, of Crowley, preached his first sermon for us and the Lord honored it. We had seven accessions, fifteen conversions and twenty-five sanctifications. Praise the Lord."

Rev. R. A. Breland, P. C., Roxie, Miss., July 20, 1897: "I began a meeting at Roxie, Miss., July 2, and closed July 11. Bro. C. H. Ellis, of New Orleans, led the meeting, doing nearly all the preaching. Bro. E. B. Baker, of Natchez, conducted the music. Bro. R. S. Gale, Rev. E. T. Breland, Mrs. Flowers, Miss Garrette and others were present and did good work. The Lord gave us a great victory. There were 20 or 25 conversions, 8 or 10 reclaimed, and 10 or 12 sanctified. Praise the Lord for victory!"

Rev. W. R. Williams, P. C, Brown's Creek circuit, North Mississippi Conference, July 13, 1897: "Bro. M. H. Honnoll has just closed a series of sermons at one of my churches for the edification of Methodism. It has been given up by friend and foe that they were the most able and theological discourses ever delivered in this country. Many of our Baptist brethren have said they would forever hereafter have profound respect for infant baptism. His sermon upon the baptism of the Holy Ghost was an hour of much rejoicing. If any of our preachers have a place where Methodism is weak, let me say to such an one: I have never met anyone that is calculated to give it more strength than Bro. M. H. Honnoll, and those who oppose his doctrine admire the sweet spirit that he possesses while handling those points of controversy."

Rev. F. N. Sweerey, Pine Grove circuit, Baton Rouge district, July 16, 1897: "We have just closed a glorious meeting at Pine Grove. I began the meeting on Wednesday night, the seventh instant, and Bro. E. T. Densen joined me on Saturday following. The congregations were large and attentive day and night. The farmers laid aside their temporal affairs for a few days, and came up to the house of God, and I am sure they will never regret it. About six or seven years ago Pine Grove was considered one of the most spiritual churches in the district, but for the last few years back has been in a cold state, caused by hard feelings existing among the members; but, thanks be to God! all is in harmony and peace now. All old grudges are buried, and love is reigning in every heart. There were seven accessions on profession of faith, and several bright conversions; among them some promising young men. Seven new family altars erected. Thank God for the saving power of the gospel. One of my big hearted brethren (Bro. Willie Kemp) made this preacher a present of a horse, and at the close of our meeting Bro. Densen raised a collection in cash and subscription of $41 to buy a buggy, for which I feel very grateful. We take courage and go forward. May God bless Bro. Densen and these dear people!"

Rev. Robert Randle, Big Cane, La., July 13, 1897: "Our District Conference has just closed. Things moved off pleasantly and successfully. Bro. Skipper, our presiding elder, showed readiness and dispatch in directing the business of the Conference. The district showed advance on nearly all lines. The secretary will send you a communication, I suppose. The attendance was small, owing to the difficulty of reaching Montgomery, as those who attended can testify—after a night trip of ten miles from the railroad and to it, over rough roads, in buggies, carriages and wagons, and, on return, in rain and mud. Our entertainment was all that we could have desired. My work has made some progress during the year. After a long scare from high water, we have landed without damage unless it be that some postponed work from fear that the water would come. We held 'Children's Day' services at both Melville and Big Cane with gratifying results. The children were delighted and the older people highly pleased. We carried out the programme at both places, I think, well. I do not claim the credit. It must be given to my wife at Big Cane and Bro. Butler at Melville. Both did well."

W. W. L., Coxburg, July 1, 1897: "Ebenezer circuit consists of five churches, three of which had their Children's Day previous to Salem—namely, Ebenezer, Bethany, Liberty Chapel. No report was made of either. It is by request of Bro. O'Bryant that I send you this notice for publication. I was present at none except the latter, which was conducted in the most systematical way I have ever seen. With Bro. Parham Williams as the superintendent nothing else could have been expected. The children all acquitted themselves with honor. I will only mention two young men—Mr. Robert Lyon on Education, and Mr. John Moore on Passing under the Rod, to whom much credit is given. Ebenezer is the home of our pastor and Bro. W. S. Pearce, superintendent. An old and experienced Sunday-school teacher, who had the assistance of Bro. O'Bryant. The Children's Day at Ebenezer was crowned with success—a day long to be remembered by all. Bethany is a new church of but a few years' standing, but the people surrounding it are never behind in anything, and second to none with their efficient superintendent, Bro. Whittington, and the help of divine inspiration. Children's Day at Bethany was crowned with honor to, and all glory to God. Bro. O'Bryant wishes to congratulate the patrons, teachers and scholars of those three schools for keeping them up Winter and Summer; also thanks for their assistance in maintaining the schools."

Rev. J. M Alford, Gretna, La., July 16, 1897: "We have just closed a glorious revival at the above-named place. Gretna is a town of about 1,500 inhabitants, just opposite the river from New Orleans. Protestantism is sadly in the minority at this place. Methodism, however, is gaining ground. Our meeting just closed is said to be the best ever held here. The Holy Spirit was with us in great power from the beginning to close, doing his office work in convicting for sin and a better life, and many, as a result, entered into the service of the Master. Rev. J. J. Smylie, evangelist, was with us ten days, and, notwithstanding the need of rest from a two weeks' meeting just held at Crowley, he preached with power. He seems to be inspired when in the pulpit. Sin in all of its forms was condemned in no uncertain sound, and men and women pointed to better living. Bro. Smylie has a wonderful drawing power. It is almost proverbial that Gretna is a 'hard place,' but for one time our handsome little church was filled with anxious auditors and earnest seekers after the truth. The scenes witnessed will never be forgoten. Not less than 40 or 50 souls found peace in Christ, and great blessing came on the town in general and our church in particular. This scribe had the pleasure of receiving 20 into the church at the close of the meeting, with 8 others to take in later; besides, quite a number joined other churches. I shall organize an Epworth League soon. The work in general is progressing. Have taken in the church up to date 35 or 40, and am sure have baptized more babies than any other preacher in the Conference, unless it is Bro. Benton. Our brethren will do well to have Bro. Smylie hold meetings for them. He is a power for good, and is peculiarly adapted to the evangelistic work."

W. W. L, Coxburg, Miss., July 1, 1897: "Children's Day was observed at Salem Church on the fourth Sunday in June, in the presence of an audience of five hundred people, or more. The programme was conducted by Dr. A. M. Phillips, assisted by Miss Nona Nixon. Prayer by Rev. W. J. O'Bryant, pastor. Welcome address by Master Clifton Shuttlesworth. The following persons recited, and performed their parts well: Master Dan Nixon, Miss Lucy Brown, Joseph Long, Miss Bertha Brown, Miss Riley Nixon, Miss Bettie Robertson, Miss Jessie Robertson, Miss Annie Wade, Miss Ada Nixon, Miss Rosa Lunsford, Miss Nelia Morris, Miss Rosa Shannon, Miss Ethel Shuttlesworth, Miss Carr Cartwright, Miss Fannie May Holloway, Miss Beatrice Nixon. Committee on collections were Misses Rosa Lunsford, Carr Cartwright, Rosa Shannon, Ada Nixon. (Pass around the Hat, by Master Charles Shuttlesworth.) Amount collected, eight dollars. After partaking of refreshments, the exercises were continued. After noon welcome address by Miss Emma Ashley. Entertaining recitations were given by Master Harry Jordan, Miss Fisher Phillips, Miss Beatrice Nixon, Master Jack Cole, Miss Alice Tolar, Miss Lucy Nixon, Miss Ethel Shuttlesworth, Master Charles Whitehead. Dr. Henry Christmas, of Tchula, being present, was called upon to address the school, which he did in an able and instructive manner, giving the origin and progress of Salem Church, which was interesting to many. Rev. W. M. Broadaway, our Baptist brother, then responded to numerous calls. Bro. Mc., in taking the stand, seemed to be inspired with power and speech from on high in the way he handled his subject. He said, to a great extent, fathers and mothers of the children were held responsible for their conduct and their absence from Sunday-school. Bro. O'Bryant closed by congratulating the school on the progress they had made, and the manner in which they had displayed their talents in the presence of such a large audience, also thanking the parents of the children and entire neighborhood for their hearty co-operation in making Salem Sunday-school a success."

If men would only realize that ill-health robs them not only of life, but of their fortune as well, there would be fewer penniless widows and orphans to drag out cheerless lives. When a man holds a dollar close up to his eyes, it shuts out the light of good judgment, and looks bigger than life or death, or wife or child. The facts are that ill-health very soon puts a stop to a man's money-making powers and turns them into money-losing disabilities.

When a man's digestion is out of order and his liver sluggish, his brain gets dull, his muscles sluggish, his blood impure and every organ in the body—brain, lungs, heart, stomach, liver and kidneys—becomes crippled. A man with a crippled lung, liver, heart, brain or kidney, is a worse cripple ten times over, than a man who is minus a leg or an arm. The man who is crippled outside may live a long life but the man who is crippled inside is taking a short cut to the grave. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery cures indigestion, makes the appetite keen, the liver active, the blood pure, and every organ healthy and vigorous. It makes blood and builds flesh up to the healthy standard. Honest dealers don't recommend substitutes.

"I wish to say to those who suffer from kidney and bladder trouble—take Dr. R. V. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery," writes Dr. Anderson, of Carthage, Jasper Co., Mo. "A patient of mine says it is worth $50 per bottle to any one who is afflicted as he was. Three bottles cured him entirely. Perfectly miserable he was, before taking the 'Discovery' and now is one of the happiest men in this County. Prof. Chreine would gladly sign this if he were in town. He requested me to write a testimonial and make it as strong as the English language could make it."

A $1.50 home doctor-book FREE. For a paper-covered copy of Dr. Pierce's Common Sense Medical Adviser send 21 one-cent stamps, to cover cost of mailing only. Cloth binding 10 cents extra. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

The continued increase in the number of young ladies in attendance at this college is evidence of the satisfaction of its patrons with its management. The equipment consists in part of 38 upright and 2 concert grand pianos, a six-inch object glass, Alvan Clark & Sons telescope, and probably the best chemical and physical laboratory of any female college in the South. With its 6 male and 11 female professors, it offers unusual advantages for mental training, and the lovely grounds, ornamented with two fountains, a lily pond and beautiful shrubs and flowers, is conducive to happiness and æsthetic culture. The dormitories are home-like and equipped with all modern conveniences. We believe that Louisiana girls would find the climate here pleasant and healthful. The Baptism of Jesus.

Since the true import of the baptism of Jesus by John is not generally understood, even among the people called Methodists, many of whom, we regret to say, are scarcely able to give any "reason for the hope that is in them," we have thought it well to say somewhat with reference thereto. To attribute to Christ's baptism the same significance that attaches to the rite as practiced universally among Christians from the times of the apostles is to err grievously. Christian baptism, which may be briefly summarized as a sign and seal of the covenant of grace, and the initiatory rite into the visible kingdom, is an emblem of twofold nature. First, it typifies the washing away of guilt and pollution; and, secondly, it points to the outpouring of the Holy Spirit upon the believer.

Since Christ was sinless and spotless, he could not be baptized with the baptism of repentance, as was the case with the other persons whom John baptized. Hence we must find other reasons for his submission to the rite. As the High-Priest of humanity, and as the Messiah of prophecy, it was befitting that the beginning of his public ministry should be signalized and solemnized by a ceremony similar to that which marked the induction of the Levitical priests into their office. When Aaron and his sons were set apart as priests Moses was commanded to bring them to the door of the tabernacle of the congregation, and there, in the presence of the people, wash, or "baptize," them with water, which ceremony was followed by the anointing with oil.

This was a baptism of inauguration, and being followed by the descent of the Spirit upon him in the form of a dove, was the first formal declaration and manifestation of the divine Sonship. Dr. Whedon very properly remarks that "every candidate baptized for fitness for the coming kingdom was baptized for his own place in that kingdom—the subject for subjection, the king for royalty. John's baptism of Jesus, therefore, was, as it were, an unction for kingship or priesthood." John was at that moment our Lord's superior in office, though not in nature, just as the judge who administers the oath to the President is, for the time being, his official superior.

Christ's submission to baptism at the hands of John was, in addition, an acknowledgement of John as his forerunner, and as having been divinely commissioned. Moreover, though he himself needed no cleansing, no washing away of guilt, he, by this act, set the seal of approval upon ceremonial observance, and inculcated a wholesome respect for every legal requirement. It was in this sense an example of obedience and submission for believers in all ages. If it became Christ thus "to fulfill all righteousness," how much more is the observance of every religious rite incumbent upon us!

Christ's baptism was far, however, from being intended as an example in all respects for the baptism of his followers. John's baptism was "unto repentance," and was not performed in the name of Christ, who had not yet accomplished his mediatorial work, and was, therefore, in no sense Christian baptism. That this is true is shown by the fact that when Paul found at Ephesus certain disciples who had been baptized unto John's baptism, he rebaptized them in the name of the Lord Jesus. Since the baptism enjoined upon us is not that of John, which was merely preparatory to that of Christianity, but is to be "in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost," any conclusion as to the binding nature of any particular mode of baptism drawn from the manner of Christ's baptism is invalid and utterly unwarranted.

Should it be granted that Christ was immersed, which we do not for a moment believe, it by no means follows that his disciples ought also to be immersed, any more than that we must celebrate the sacrament of the Lord's Supper in precisely the same way as did the first disciples. They partook of the Eucharist every day, and in a reclining posture. Christian baptism was not instituted until the day of Pentecost, and we have every reason to believe was by affusion.

If a particular mode were essential to the validity of baptism, and if Christ had meant for his disciples to be baptized precisely as he was, the Scriptures would have given us explicit instructions with reference thereto. The fact that the Master left no word whatever as to how he received the rite, or as to how it was to be administered to his followers, is strong proof that he deemed the mode of secondary importance. The Scriptures are never silent with reference to the essentials of salvation.

Since many attach undue importance to immersion on account of an ill-founded conviction that John the Baptist practiced it, let us notice a few of the difficulties that attend such a belief.

In the first place, baptism was not a new thing to the Jews. Under the Mosaic law there were "divers baptisms and ceremonial cleansings." In Numbers viii, 5-7, we find the following instructions given to Moses with reference to the consecration of the Levites: "Sprinkle water of purifying upon them, and let them shave all their flesh, and let them wash their clothes, and so make themselves clean." The writer of the Epistle to the Hebrews thus alluded to the ceremonial purification of the people by a form of baptism: "For when Moses had spoken every precept to all the people according to the law, he took the blood of calves and of goats, with water, and scarlet wool and hyssop, and sprinkled both the book and all the people." There is not a single instance in the Old Testament in which any person was required to dip or immerse himself, or to be dipped or immersed by another, for purposes of purification. The case of Naaman might seem to be an exception. Though he chose immersion as the mode of his cleansing, he was simply commanded to wash, or cleanse himself, in Jordan seven times, the number seven being typical of perfect purification. The Greek word translated "dip" in this passage is acknowledged by the best scholars to mean "to wash or to purify."

Wherever the word "baptizo" occurs in the Septuagint, or in the Apocrypha, it conveys the idea of ceremonial purification by the use of water, which in the majority of instances was applied by sprinkling or by pouring. The nineteenth chapter of Numbers contains instruction for purification for a dead body, which was accomplished by a clean person sprinkling the unclean with a bunch of hyssop dipped into running water into which the ashes of a heifer had been cast. Again and again, in the prophets and in the ceremonial law, pouring and sprinkling are mentioned as methods of purification. Ezekiel thus prophesies concerning the kingdom of Christ: "Then will I sprinkle clean water upon you, and ye shall be clean: from all your filthiness and from all your idols will I cleanse you."

The Jews, as we have seen, were familiar with sprinkling as a mode of cleansing, but not with immersion. For John to have immersed his disciples would have been to depart from plain teaching of the law and the prophets with reference to cleansing, and from the time-honored practice of the Jewish people. Nor is there the slightest intimation that he did so.

Much stress is laid by some on the fact that John baptized "in Jordan," as if "to be in" meant invariably "to go under." The Greek preposition "en," here translated "in," means "at" as often as it does "in," and simply indicates the place of his baptizing. Nor should it be forgotten that the river Jordan has several banks or terraces, so that a man could very easily be in the bed of the river without being in the stream itself. Descent into the water, however, by no means proves immersion, for many a boy wades into a pond or creek without immersing his whole body.

Again, the expression, "straightway up out of the water," is supposed to strongly favor the immersion theory. "Up out of," however, is just as applicable to one who goes into the water for convenience in receiving baptism by sprinkling or pouring as to one who is immersed or dipped. The best authorities now discard the rending, "up out of" (for "apo"), which is admitted to be inexact, and substitute the preposition "from." It is so given in the Revised Version.

The word "baptizo," which our Baptist friends would have us believe signifies pre-eminently to immerse, can not be employed in favor of a specific mode without doing violence to its other plain meaning and ignoring its usage in New Testament Greek. While the word "baptizo" in classic Greek generally means to dip or to immerse (oft in a bad sense), it is a tremendous leap from this position to the conclusion that the word conveys the same idea in New Testament Greek, and that, therefore, immersion is the only Scripture mode of baptism.

Says Dr. W. F. Tillett, of Vanderbilt University: "The meaning of a word in classic Greek is by no means determinative of its meaning in the New Testament. New Testament Greek is so far different from classic Greek as to require an entirely different grammar and lexicon. No one would think of going to a classical Greek lexicon to obtain the meaning in the New Testament of the Greek originals of such words as faith, repentance, law, justification, and many others. Thus, with regard to the word 'baptizo,' we find that a careful examination of all the passages in which it is used in the New Testament proves most conclusively that it does not mean to immerse, as in classic Greek, but to apply water to the candidate for baptism in such a way as will properly signify spiritual cleansing, and this may be done by pouring, sprinkling, or immersion."

Nothing is more improbable, for instance, than that the Philippian jailer and his family were immersed. The supposition that a tank or pool existed in connection with this or any other Roman prison is totally unwarranted by history and by modern exploration.

It would have been a physical impossibility for John to have immersed the multitudes who came to him for baptism, and nothing is said about his employing helpers in this work. The fact, too, that on the day of Pentecost three thousand persons were baptized, is strong presumptive evidence against immersion as the mode practiced by the first Christians. Jerusalem did not then furnish, and has never at any time since, furnished adequate water facilities for the immersion of such a multitude in one day.

The symbolic meaning of the rite furnishes a weighty argument against immersion, whether supposed to have been practiced by John or by the early Christians. Spirit baptism is the original of which water baptism is but the symbol. The immersionists, in their excess of zeal, lose sight of this import, and stress the idea of cleansing almost exclusively, whereas it typifies, in no uncertain way, the outpouring of the Spirit. It is noticeable that the baptism of the Spirit is never by immersion, but by affusion. At the baptism of our Lord the Spirit descended and lighted upon him. He is described as "falling" upon Cornelius and his company. He was "shed," "poured out," and "bestowed" upon other believers; but on no occasion were they said to be immersed in the Spirit. Says Richard Watson in his "Institutes": "If baptism necessarily means immersion, and John baptized by immersion, then Jesus did not baptize his disciples with the Holy Ghost." To quote again from Dr. Whedon: "If Spirit baptism be by affusion, certainly water baptism can not be symbolized by immersion in water. Hence immersion fundamentally fails to be a picture of the original."

At Vicksburg.

We spent last Sabbath at the famous Hill City, and occupied the pulpit morning and night, the pastor, Rev. A. F. Watkins, being absent at Toronto. Bro. Watkins is in the midst of a prosperous pastorate. He is spoken of as strong in the pulpit and diligent in the pastorate. It is expected that work on the new church will commence in a very short time. We did not see the plan, but we are told that it is a beauty, a real architectural gem. The building will be an up-to-date affair, having all the conveniences of a modern city church. Although Bro. and Sister Watkins were absent, we made headquarters at the parsonage, where we were charmingly entertained by Sister W. H. Watkins and Miss Olive. We also enjoyed the hospitalities of Dr. and Sister Weems, and spent several delightful hours in their pleasant home. The arduous labors of the presiding eldership have not lessened the Doctor's shadow, but increased it. He has resolved that he will not serve the Vicksburg district another year, and that, too, in the face of the fact that he is immensely popular, both personally and officially. So there will be one move in the Mississippi Conference next Winter, and very likely that will necessitate another. We also had the pleasure of meeting Rev. J. A. Moore, who is rendering efficient service at South Vicksburg. En route to Vicksburg we spent a night and a good part of the day at Gloster, making headquarters at the parsonage. We found the parson at home, but the "parsoness" was absent in Natchez. The night of our stay happened to be the time selected for a social meeting of the Epworth League. Quite a number of the young people of the town were present. In addition to the social feature of the affair there was some fine music and a very enjoyable address by Dr. Hunnicutt. During our stay in Gloster we visited Bro. G. M. Hull, of the Mississippi Conference, and found him in bed with fever. We hope, however, he will soon recover. We called upon our old-time friend, Bro. W. B. Hines. We found him unwell, though not confined to his bed. We also had the pleasure of meeting Dr. J. R. Whittington, formerly of the Mississippi Conference, who now resides at Gloster. We had most pleasant association with Bro. and Sister Hunnicutt. On our return trip from the Hill City we traveled a few miles in company with Bros. T. K. Faunt LeRoy and W. H. Benton, of the Louisiana Conference. Bro. Benton reports his charge in a prosperous condition. The finances, though not entirely up to date, are in fairly good shape. The spiritual state of the charge is good and improving. Bro. Faunt LeRoy has been away from home about two weeks, spending his vacation in his usual fashion, assisting his brethren in revival meetings. He can take a vacation more easily than most men, as his thoroughly consecrated wife can fill his place to a very large extent. She does not attempt to occupy the pulpit, but she can lead a prayer meeting, or run an Epworth League or a class meeting about as well as anyone. Bro. Faunt LeRoy has had an exceedingly prosperous year. He has received seventy-seven members since Conference. He has the largest class meeting in the Conference, the average attendance being about sixty. It goes without saying that the finances of Morgan City are O. K.

Seashore Camp Meeting.

The meeting this year at the above-named place was conducted for eight days, and was the scene of powerful operations of the Holy Spirit. Seldom in its past history has there been better work done along spiritual lines. The preaching was of the plainest gospel sort, and so simple that even the children present could appreciate and understand. The sermon by Bishop J. C. Keener is worthy of special mention. His subject was Dives and Lazarus, and for over one hour the senior Bishop held the undivided attention of the large congregation present. At the conclusion of his sermon an earnest appeal was made to the sinner, and about eight were swept into the kingdom. The Bishop is one of the best revival preachers I ever saw, and I would very much like to have him help me in a meeting.

The brethren were glad to welcome Rev. R. K. Brown, presiding elder of the Nashville district. By his child-like spirit and extreme earnestness he won a place in the hearts of all with whom he came in contact. Dr. Brown preached twice, and both sermons were productive of much good.

It is estimated that about forty souls experienced their sins forgiven, and their bright faces and glad testimonies made the hearts of all rejoice. One elderly gentleman was at the altar who said he had been a member of the church for forty years, but desired to be prayed for.

The singing was under the direction of Prof. T. O. Adams, of New Orleans, who gathered about him an efficient choir. The success of the meeting is in a large measure due to the consecrated efforts of the singers, who were prompt and faithful throughout the entire meeting.

The tent-holders showed true hospitality in entertaining the preachers, and the work done in the homes of the people was manifested in the different services. Every preacher thought he had the kindest host, and loud were the praises heard in Wesley Hall. A great number of preachers were present, and on only two occasions did the same preacher preach twice.

The three presiding elders left nothing undone to make the meeting a success. They were present at every service, and did some powerful exhorting.

The Board of Trustees—a band of consecrated men who have no other purpose in view but the advancing of Christ's kingdom on earth—were busy morning and night governing the affairs of the grounds, and doing their utmost to make visitors comfortable.

The last night's meeting was a scene of both joy and sorrow. Newborn souls were exulting in a precious Savior, and friends with heavy hearts bade each other farewell. Al promised that if they were to meet no more here below, that, by the help of God, they would meet in that place "where congregations ne'er break up."

Taken as a whole, the meeting was a success from beginning to end, and, under God, those who had charge of its management are deserving of the highest praise. HEARNS.

Work will begin very soon on our new church at Gouldsboro. Under the wise and aggressive leadership of Pastor Alford and Presiding Elder Sawyer this plucky little flock will erect a neat, tasteful house of worship costing about $1,200.

Bros. J. C. Park and A. T. Buck, of the North Mississippi Conference, passed through the Crescent City last week on their return from the Seashore Camp Meeting, and called at the ADVOCATE office. We much regret that we missed them.

Rev. W. J. O'Bryant, of the North Mississippi Conference, has returned from the great Toronto gathering. He was delighted with the trip. The round-trip ticket was presented to him by his flock as a token of their very high appreciation of him as a pastor and as a man.

We were pleased to meet in our office recently Rev. J. J. Lovett, presiding elder of the Canadian district, Indian Mission Conference. He was on his way back to his home at Muscogee. Bro. Lovett is quite a laborious, energetic man. Within the past few months, besides doing the full work of a presiding elder, he has raised $6,000 for the liquidation of a debt on one of our colleges among the red men. That is the sort of men that Mississippi produces sometimes.

The following is one of the many press notices from Crystal Springs: "The most taking featnre of the Chautanqua this Snmmer has been the playing by Prof. Conrad, of Meridian, director of the Conservatory of Music, in connection with the E. M. F. College. He gave a concert Thnrsday night which aroused so mnch enthnsiasm that the management arranged with Pres. Beeson for him to remain and give another concert Monday night. Prof. Conrad again captnred his entire andience. He played several of his own compositions, which were well received and greatly applauded. He has dedicated several of them to the E. M. F. College, where he now teaches. His name and that of the college are on every tonguo. People here say if that is the kind of talent this college employs, that is where I want to send. Qnite a number of yonng ladies from this part of the State will attend college in Meridian. Some who have been to conservatories in Cincinnati, Boston and elsewhere will this Fall attend the Conservatory in Meridian. They say they get no finer talent in these Northern Conservatories. Rev. Dr. Wright, of Boston, is here, and says there is no need of people coming to Boston to study music with snch talent in Meridian. He says Pres. Indian Mission.

To the Friends of the Mission—

DEAR BRETHREN AND SISTERS: We need some money for the mission very badly. I am going up to visit the mission and Indians the second Sunday in September, and am anxious to have the land surveyed and run off in lots of about fifteen acres each, and then settle them on it, and we can't settle them on it without surveying it. Then I would like to have some money for some other purposes. Now, I want it by the eighth of September. Who will help me? and how much?

Brethren and sisters, please give me $40 or $50 by that time. If you will, you may be sure I will use it for the glory of God and the best interest of the church and mission. We can do nothing without means. With means we can make the mission a grand success, as the past has shown. Now, friends of the mission, please don't forget me and this important work at this important time, for much depends on what we do now. Send as before—postoffice order on Hermanville, or registered letter to me at Hermanville, Miss. Please come to the rescue now.

Allow me to report the following amounts received, to-wit: Matthew Howes, $1; Miss Lizzie Howes, $1; Miss Annie Howes, $1; Mrs. Rev. P. A. Johnston, $5; Mrs. R. A. Harris, and others, $5; Mrs. M. J. Harris, 50 cents. Many, many thanks to them all, and an earnest prayer that God may abundantly bless them all, and all the friends of the mission, and of the church generally.

Now, please do not forget me in this time of need, for my visit to the mission will not be a success without means. We also crave your earnest prayers for the success of the mission. Send on your contributions at once, and greatly oblige,

Your brother in Christ,

A. D. MILLER.

Harris' Business College.

A business education is a necessity, and one who enters upon the duties of life without its guiding influence has all the chances of success against him. We know of no better place for young men and ladies to go for such a training than to that wonderfully progressive institution, Harris' Practical Business College, Jackson, Miss. It is doing more for the worthy, struggling boys and girls than any other business college. Nineteen of its students recently secured good positions in three weeks.—Jackson Evening News.

The General Conference of 1898.

ENTERTAINMENT AND TRAVELING EXPENSES OF DELEGATES, ASSESSMENTS, COLLECTIONS, ETC.

The Committee of Arrangements for the General Conference, to be held in the city of Baltimore, Md., May, 1898, beg the attention of the church, and especially of the Joint Boards of Finance in the several Annual Conferences, and of our presiding elders and pastors, to the important facts and figures following:

The sum of $29,784 was assessed May, 1895, for the General Conference Expense Fund, and the apportionments to the Annual Conferences were made, as required by the General Conference plan, on the basis of the assessments for foreign missions. The Joint Boards of Finance were duly notified of the amounts the Conferences were expected severally to raise, and they were requested to reapportion the same to the presiding elders' districts for collection. The progress of this work, thus early begun in the quadrennium, is shown in the subjoined table:

	Assessed.	Collected.
Alabama	$ 1,100 40	$ 560 55
Arkansas	393 40	16 30
Baltimore	1,464 00
Columbia	38 40	7 55
Denver	88 60
E. Columbia	49 20	1 45
E. Texas	549 60

Los Angeles	120 00	40 50
Louisiana	708 00	213 31
Louisville	843 00	222 81
Memphis	924 00	25 00
Mississippi	860 70
Mexican Border Miss	15 80
Missouri	1,144 80
New Mexico	54 00	19 65
N. Alabama	904 20	465 39
N. Carolina	1,144 20	612 51
N. Georgia	1,573 40
N. Mississippi	817 80	459 15
N. Texas	1,026 00	488 75
Pacific	477 60
S. Carolina	1,333 20
S. Georgia	1,174 80
S. W. Missouri	912 00	318 84
St. Louis	746 10
Tennessee	1,106 10
Texas	658 80	209 75
Virginia	2,248 20	1,003 41
W. Texas	458 40	211 85
Western	98 40
Western N. Carolina	921 60	484 30
W. Virginia	391 20	68 12
White River	373 20	119 32
Montana	63 00
Northwest Texas	1,434 00	823 80
	$29,784 42	$7,347 59

Thus it appears that while the quadrennium is more than three-fourths gone, only about one-fourth has been realized on the assessments made to defray the necessary expenses of the approaching session of the General Conference. But that fact, though much to be regretted, should not discourage us. No; the handsome sums contributed by our churches in these hard times to collections, not more worthy, furnish pleasing proof both of their ability and willingness to raise every dollar of this money. Has there been neglect anywhere? Did the Joint Boards of Finance act promptly? Have the presiding elders and pastors given the matter the attention it demands?

Allow us, dear brethren, to remind you of an important provision of the law—viz: "That if there be any deficiency in the amounts raised and transmitted by any Annual Conference, the amount of such deficiency shall be deducted from the sum estimated for the delegates from said Conference." (General Conference Journal, 1890.)

This matter is of vital importance to Southern Methodism. Let us all, therefore, with a glad heart and willing mind, awake to our duty and press forward this work in our several Conferences, districts, and pastoral charges until the assessments shall be raised in full.

ALEX. G. BROWN, Ch'n.
B. M. BURGHER, Sec.

N. B.—If collections made for the fund in any of the Conferences have not been transmitted to the Treasurers, Messrs. Barbee and Smith, Nashville, Tenn., it should be done at once, or at least they should be notified of the amount in hand and subject to their order.

Pill Clothes.

The good pill has a good coat. The pill coat serves two purposes; it protects the pill, enabling it to retain all its remedial value, and it disguises the taste for the palate. Some pill coats are too heavy; they will not dissolve in the stomach, and the pills they cover pass through the system as harmless as a bread pellet. Other coats are too light, and permit the speedy deterioration of the pill. After 30 years exposure, Ayer's Sugar Coated Pills have been found as effective as if just fresh from the laboratory. It's a good pill with a good coat. Ask your druggist for Mixed Notes.

Rev. R. D. Norsworthy, P. E., Jackson district, reports for the second quarter as follows: Sharon and Yazoo circuits, nothing; Jackson, First Church, $25—for foreign missions; Capitol Street, nothing; Madison circuit, nothing; Canton, $8 13, and Terry, $10—for foreign missions; Lake City and Lodi, nothing; Camden circuit, $20; Silver Creek and Bee Lake, $12—for foreign missions; Fannin circuit, nothing; Tranquil circuit, W. A. Terry, P. C., paid foreign mission assessment in full; Yazoo City, L. S. Jones, P. C., paid foreign and domestic missions in full; and Flora circuit $15 for foreign missions.

I am patiently waiting for the missionary bulletins for the second quarter from four other beloved presiding elders.

The fourth call for the names and post office addresses of Methodist physicians brought me five responses; but one of the five simply wrote me that there was a Methodist drug clerk in his town, without giving me the names of the M. D.s, when I knew that there are, or used to be, at least two of them on his church register.

Brethren, please send me the names according to my oft-repeated request; and if you are so unfortunate as to have no druggists or physicians who are Methodists in your pastoral charge, let me know that fact. Don't take it for granted that silence will tell me so much, for Crystal Springs, Jackson, Meridian, Natchez, Pearlington, Shubuta, Hattiesburg, and a number of other points are silent on the subject, as silent as the grave. Can it be that my brethren wish me to understand that while there are Methodist doctors and druggists in their respective charges, that they are not practicing their Methodism very much?

Brethren, use a postal card and comply with my request, and I will return you the postal card at Conference on demand. Brethren, please write to me at once. Your delay hinders an important matter. A cheerful reply to my inquiry will not hurt you, but will help a good cause.

T. L. MELLEN,

THE SOUL IS NEVER OLD.

"Yes! we go gently down the hill of life,
And thank our God at every step we go!
The husband-lover, and the sweetheart-wife,
Of creeping age what do we care or know?
Each says to each: 'Our fourscore years, thrice told,
Would leave us young'—the soul is never old!

"What is the grave to us? Can it divide
The destiny of two by God made one?
We step across, and reach the other side,
To know our blessed life is but begun.
These fading faculties are sent to say,
Heaven is more near to-day than yesterday."

(Formerly MALONE)

Is located in Holly Springs, at the intersection of the Illinois Central and Kansas City, Memphis and Birmingham Railroads, and has always been noted for the health, culture and refinement of its people. Ten passenger trains come and go every day, except Sunday, when we have eight.

We shall continue to work under the auspices of the North Mississippi Conference, and pledge ourselves to use every effort in behalf of those entrusted to our care that they may be developed into educated, polished Christian women.

BOARDING DEPARTMENT.

Pupils boarding in the College have the personal attention of the President and his wife, who, together with the teachers, strive to make their stay while here as pleasant and profitable as possible.

An abundance of substantial food is furnished; ample time given at each meal for everyone to be satisfied, and President's family, teachers and pupils all fare alike. Special attention is paid to their manners and morals at all times, and every effort is made to impress them with the necessity of constant growth, physically, mentally and morally.

We board at $11.00 per month where they take their meals regularly at the table; extra charge when the meals are carried to their rooms, and extra servant hire. This includes pupils and teachers.

No incidental fee is charged unless something is destroyed, and in this case the cost of the article is charged to the party who destroys it.

BEAUTY IS WEALTH.

Beauty is as essential to a woman as any other quality; with beauty of form and feature comes beauty of mind and character. Physical beauty is a rounded form, the brightly tinted cheek, the vivacious eye, a certain ease and grace of manner, which indicates a superabundance of physical strength. Very few women possess these qualities, but very many more might possess them who do not. If you feel that you are losing vitality, losing your beauty (losing your strength, if you feel that your face which once was plump and rosy, is becoming thin and sallow, that wrinkles (which are the terror to all pretty women) are beginning to appear, take our advice and try that greatest of discoveries, the "MASSAGE FACE CUP," which is the only means known to science to convert a thin and sallow expression into a plump and rosy face. It will transform a face with plain or homely features into an expression of grace and beauty. Physiology teaches us that if we would be strong, we must exercise the muscles which need the developing. Exercise causes the blood to rush to that part of the body called into action, the muscle is fed and strengthened by the fresh blood and will, therefore, develop.

The Massage Cup will do for the face, when properly applied, by contracting and relaxing the muscles, what exercise will do for the other parts of the body.

If you would have a pinkish complexion, if you would like a face plump and rosy, if you would like to remove that "horrid" wrinkle, send One Dollar to us and we will mail you the great "MASSAGE FACE CUP," with full directions for its use. Remember, you can have your money back, if you say so.

Resolutions Adopted by the Board of Education of the M. E. Church, South.

Resolved, That we recognize the immediate and urgent need of a new building for Paine Institute, and that we call for twenty-five thousand dollars—the same to be used for said building, and for equipment and endowment.

Resolved, To this end we urge the co-operation of all the pastors of our church—which has solemnly pledged her aid in the General Conference—and request that wherever possible they give opportunity to the Bishops of the Colored M. E. Church in America to present this matter to our people; and we also ask the help of our editors, and of all our connectional officers, to get the worthy cause before our church.

Resolved, That we authorize the Secretary of Education to use his own time, so far as the duties of his office allow, and that we further pledge the official support of this Board to the movement in every legitimate way, and call on all Conference Boards of Education to lend their influence and assistance to this important work.

Resolved, That we suggest the building be called the Haygood Memorial Hall. R. J. BIGHAM,
E. R. HENDRIX.

The paper was adopted.

$100 Reward, $100.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of Testimonials.

The Church Not Dying Out.

"Oh," say people, "the church is a collection of hypocrites, and it is losing its power, and is fading out from the world." Is it? A Bishop of the Methodist Church told me that that denomination averages two new churches every day of the year. There are at least 1,-000 new Christian churches built in America every year. Does that look as though it were a defunct institution? What institution stands nearest the hearts of the people of America to-day? I do not care in what village, or in what city, or in what neighborhood you go. Which institution is it? Is it the postoffice? Is it the hotel? Is it the lecturing hall? Ah, you know it is not. You know that the institution which stands nearest to the hearts of the American people is the Christian church.—Talmage.

OBITUARIES.

SMITH—Mrs. HARRIOT SMITH was born in North Caroline, Feb. 11, 1817; moved to Mississippi in early life; joined the M. E Church, South, in her sixteenth year. She followed three husbands to the grave—Louis Hoover, Moses R. Cunningham, and Briton Smith—all of whom were members of the Methodist Church.

Sister Smith was the mother of twelve children. Seven of them still live, and a number of grandchildren. Her death occurred at the home of Mount Smith, her youngest son, Jan. 11, 1897.

She loved her church, and was faithful to the vows. As a wife and mother, she was loving, tender, and kind. She suffered much in her latter days from bodily afflictions, and for some years was blind; yet she was ready to speak about the goodness of God and the blessings bestowed on her. She loved the old-time songs and old-fashioned religion. She was faithful and true; a friend to her church and preacher.

May the relatives and friends live with reference to a happy meeting in "that land of spirits bright!" W. J. O.

JONES—MATTIE MAY JONES, daughter of R. P. and L. A. Jones, died near Vernon, Jackson parish, La., May 27, 1897, in her seventeenth year. She joined the M. E Church, South, at Oak Ridge, July 29, 1896.

There was something that was very remarkable in her life from the day of her conversion to her death for one so young. She was never heard to doubt her conversion, though it is said she did not have much home encouragement to lead a religious life.

She was attending school in Vernon when she was taken sick, and in her diary which she kept, of how she spent each Sabbath, is this entry made of her last Sabbath evening she spent in Vernon. On the fourth of April she read to her friend, Minnie Best, the third chapter of Colossians. Each one prayed, and then sang the beautiful song, "What shall our answer be?" Her last words were a song of praise, and then a prayer. Her voice was almost indistinct, yet a word was understood now and then, and when she said, "Amen!" she folded her hands upon her breast and fell on sleep.

It is to be hoped that her Christian example may bring father, mother, and all relatives to lead the same Christian life as their loved Mattie lived, and their life end like hers, and all meet where death is no more.

J. M. JOHNSTON.

BALLARD—WILLIAM HINES BALLARD, M. D., son of Rev. W. E. Ballard, of precious memory in the Mississippi Annual Conference, was born April 14, 1867, and died July 6, 1897.

In 1883, under the ministry of his saintly father, he was converted and joined the Methodist Church in Yazoo City, Miss.

In December, 1893, he was happily married to Miss Josie Ray, of Canton, Miss., by the author of this sketch. His married life was full of sunshine.

He was educated at Vanderbilt, and was taking high rank as a physician. He was devoted to his life-work, yet he subordinated his profession and life to his Master's service. He practiced medicine for the good he could do as well as for a livelihood. He was a man of prayer. He kept up a family altar. His wife says that almost the last time he conducted their home worship he remarked that of late the Word of God was getting sweeter than ever to him, and that he loved more and more to read and ponder its sublime truths. His sunny face and genial nature gave him a cordial welcome everywhere, and won for him many friends among all classes, for to know him was to love him.

His manly form sleeps in the Natchez Cemetery by the side of his father's sleeping dust. His liberated spirit is now with the glorified spirit of his beloved father in heaven.

He leaves a widowed mother, two brothers and a widowed wife. May the God of all comfort sustain them all in this sore bereavement, and at last gather them home, where death and parting are no more!

L. S. JONES.

ROBERTSON—Miss MARY ROBERTSON, daughter of Mr. W. D. Robertson, was compelled to take her bed on Jan. 14. For six weeks she insisted on sitting up every hour that her failing strength would permit. She always expressed herself as being anxious to recover; but her anxiety was never on her own account. Said she: "I wish to live, that I may assist my father in caring for my motherless sisters and brothers."

On the eighth of July, without a struggle, she closed her eyes as if in peaceful slumber, and her beautiful, pure spirit was wafted to the celestial city, where, with her sainted mother, a brother and sister, she is before the throne of God, serving him day and night.

She was born Jan. 26, 1874, and after blessing and brightening the home of her father for twenty-three years, she was called to her reward.

Her place in the community will be hard to fill. The earthly home can never be the same again; but, blessed be God! if we are only as faithful and as patient as she was, we may all meet to part no more.

We join a host of friends in extending our deep sympathy to the bereaved family. May the great Comforter console them as earthly friends can not! H. E. BAILEY, for Com.

SMITH—Whereas, it has pleased our heavenly Father to call to her home on high Sister MARTHA SMITH, who, for more than half a century, was a consistent member of the Methodist Church, and whose patient endurance through a long life of peculiar trial and sore affliction made her a striking impersonation of the truth, "They also serve who only stand and wait;" therefore, be it

Resolved, That we, as a church, appreciate her merits and recognize fully the noble heroism of her pathetic and silent life.

Resolved, That while we realize the inspiration which should come to us from such a life, we extend our heartfelt sympathy to the bereaved family, and pray that they may follow in the way which led the wife and mother to the beautiful "land of the hereafter."

COMMITTEE.

LEE—Mrs. H. M. LEE (nee Miss Nancy C. Wise) was born in Barber county, Ala., March 26, 1832. She was married to Bro. Hervey M. Lee, July 31, 1853. In 1865 they moved to Clark county, Miss., and from thence they came to Louisiana in 1870.

Sister Lee had been a faithful member of the M. E. Church, South, since 1853. Her life was distinguished among her acquaintances by fervent Christianity and great friendliness. She left no enemies. After protracted afflictions she came peacefully to death on the morning of July 13, 1897. Her life blessed all with whom she came in immediate contact. May God comfort her bereaved husband and the six children! In the absence of her pastor the funeral service was conducted by the writer. J. U. H. WHARTON.

Arcadia, La.

POWE—Miss CATHRINA CAROLINE POWE, daughter of Albert G. and Sitne Powe (of Buckatunna, Miss.), was born April 30, 1878, and died June 24, 1897.

She was an obedient child, kind to her brothers and sister, and a consistent member of the M. E. Church, South; died in the triumphs of religion; now gone to her reward.

Which, when alive, did vigor give
As much of virtue as could live.

Camp Meetings.

Last week, our annual meeting under the auspices of the Hennington Camp Meeting Association will begin on Thursday, Aug. 5, and continue for ten days. Rev. John F. Lowry, of Little Rock, Ark., will conduct the services during the meeting. Ministers of the gospel are earnestly invited to attend, and will be provided for free of expense.

The recent improvements on the grounds and the well-appointed restaurant warrants us in the statement that all who come will find comfortable accommodation at a very low rate.

The usual reduction of rates of fare on the I. C. R. R. will be given during the meeting.

We extend a cordial welcome to all who wish to join in "The Feast of the Tabernacle."

J. F. SEXTON,
Chairman Ex. Com.

Crystal Springs, Miss., June 12, 1897.

All ministers of the gospel and their families who come to the Hennington (Crystal Springs) Camp Meeting will be entertained free of charge.

Come, brethren; and help us, and come "in the fullness of the gospel of Christ."

Remember, camp meeting opens on Thursday evening, Aug. 5. Many new and elegant cottages have been recently erected on the grounds. Chautauqua Lake, covering twenty-five or thirty acres hard by, adds much to the beauty and pleasure of the place. W. B. LEWIS.

Topisaw Camp Meeting, ten miles east of Summit, Miss., will begin Saturday before the second Sunday in August, to continue eight days.

All ministers of the gospel are cordially invited to attend, especially preachers of the district. They will be furnished conveyance from McComb City, also entertainment, free.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

DOMESTIC.

President McKinley will leave Washington this week for his Summer vacation on Lake Chautauqua.

The President has named Captain A. T. Wimberly as Collector of the Port for the District of Louisiana.

It is said the excitement in the mining district is at fever heat, and blood may yet be shed. Trouble will occur if the strikers use force.

Miss Christine Law has been appointed assistant clerk of courts in Hampton county, Mass. She is the first woman in the State to occupy such a position.

A terrific cloudburst struck Youngstown, O., on July 22, flooding the entire valley and causing great damage to property, both in the city and along the railway lines. Many people are supposed to be drowned.

The annual report of the Mississippi River Commission has been made public at the War Department, with the exception of recommendations and estimates, which are withheld. The appropriations and allotments for the fiscal year ending June 30 amounted to $250,000 under joint resolution of March 31, 1897, and $2,933,333 in sundry civil act of June 4, 1897.

District Assembly No. 49 of the Knights of Labor has passed strong resolutions condemning the nomination of T. V. Powderly, the labor leader, as United States Commissioner of Immigration. The Senate was commended for not confirming the appointment. Powderly was denounced as a renegade and traitor for turning to gold after speaking for years in favor of free silver.

A bid has already been made for the prize offered by the Baltimore and Ohio railroad for the biggest watermelon grown in the South this season. One has been shipped to the President from Atlanta, Ga., which weighed just 78 pounds.

After the Senate had finally disposed of the Tariff bill, the President sent to Congress his long-promised special message on the currency question. He contents himself with a statement of his belief that the present currency system needs revision and improvement, but makes no suggestion as to how this is to be accomplished.

On Saturday, according to programme, the final vote was taken on the Conference Committee's report in the Senate, and the Tariff bill, which has claimed the undivided attention of Congress for the past four months, went to the Executive for his approval or rejection. The prompt signing of the bill by President McKinley put the finishing touch to the work, and it is now the law of the land.

FOREIGN.

All the doctors in the new Hospital for Women in London are women. There are five surgeons among them.

It is stated that General Maximo Gomez, the leader of the Cuban insurgents, has reaffirmed his determination not to accept a compromise with the government, but to adhere in his demand for the absolute independence of Cuba.

The Chinese steamer "Serpanng," bound from Singapo for Malacca, with 190 passengers, was wrecked in a squall off Malacca on June 19. One hundred and twenty persons, including the captain of the steamer, were drowned. The remainder of the ship's company were rescued by a passing steamer.

The approaching visit of the German Emperor and Empress to Russia will be signalized by a great display of pomp and ceremony. The programme is now definitely arranged. They will arrive on Aug. 7 at the Cronstadt roads, where Emperor Nicholas and the Empress will meet them on board the Russian imperial yacht "Alexander."

"Bad language" cards are being used in Switzerland and Germany to check the use of obscene words. People go about with cards in their pockets, and whenever they hear bad language present one to the swearer to sign. The card has printed on it a pledge to abstain from swearing for a specified time, or to pay a certain sum to some charity.

The ambassadors of the powers and Tewfik Pasha have agreed on the frontier clause in the peace treaty. The line drawn by the military attaché, and insisted upon from the first by the powers, has been accepted by the Sultan with slight technical modifications. The reports that the Turkish forces have begun to evacuate Thessaly are confirmed.

WHEN I HAVE TIME.

When I have time, so many things I'll do
To make life happier and more fair
For those whose lives are crowded with care;
I'll help to lift them from their despair.
When I have time.

When I have time, the friend I love so well
Shall know no more these weary, toiling days;
I'll lead her feet in pleasant paths always,
And cheer her heart with sweetest words of praise.
When I have time.

When you have time: The friend you loved so dear
May be beyond the reach of all your sweet intent—
May never know that you so kindly meant
To fill her life with sweet content,
When you had time.

Now is the time! Ah, friend, no longer wait
To scatter loving smiles and words of cheer
To those around whose lives are now so dear;
They may not need you in the coming year—
Now is the time.

Letter from Alaska.

Alaska is the outcome of the word Al-ak-shak, which means a great country. The name was well applied to that vast territory which is the most surprising land over which waves the American flag. Secretary Seward did a gracious thing for the United States when he purchased Alaska from the Russians thirty years ago. He was laughed at then as committing an act of folly, but subsequent developments have proven that he was wiser than his generation. Only $7,200,000 were paid for the territory, but $84,560,000 have already been reaped from its resources.

To convey an adequate conception of the mammoth size of Alaska, it is said that if one were to stand twenty miles to the westward of San Francisco, he would be just half-way in the possessions of the Federal government. Alaska is larger than all the States that would be included in a line drawn east from Chicago to the Atlantic, and south as far as the Gulf of Mexico. It has a population of over 10,000 whites and 50,000 Indians, while people from every country on the known globe, are constantly swelling the census reports.

The rivers of Alaska are among the longest, and it has the highest mountains, the largest glaciers, the most numerous bays, straits, sounds and channels, and the richest gold and silver mines on two continents. The wonderful revelations among all the other wonders of this wonderland are the glaciers. On the trip from Seattle to Sitka the first of these of any importance that is passed is the Patterson. After that comes the Davidson, then the Windome, and at last the Muir, that marvelous inland sea more than 100 fathoms deep, which is renowned as one of the most astonishing developments in the natural world. There are said to be ten other glaciers in Alaska as large as the Muir, and one twice as large. The smaller ones are numberless. Now for the Muir itself. Imagine, facing a body of placid water, great colonnades of ice forming a crescent two miles in length, 250 feet high at the summit, and sloping gently down at either end to 150 feet. Imagine this frozen mass fashioned in the most fairy-like forms and dream-creations, chiseled grottoes, turreted castles, Milan cathedrals, Spanish Alhambras, breaking into each other with bewitching haphazardness. Imagine the color of each a deep, cerulean blue, intensely so in the interior and paling toward the outward edges, and over this azure, silken sheen, a white lace veil, spider-wrought in its delicacy, thrown like a snowy cover. Imagine the light of the sun upon it, and the thousand tints and glints and shadows that transform and glorify the whole into a shimmering hill-chain of fire-hearted opals. Imagine a dying glacier to the left which looks like a mighty river caught in its downward career, and held cold and stiff in the hand of death. Imagine ice fields beyond, stretching back into the interior over thirty miles, further than the eye can reach, grim and awful in their calmness. Imagine mountains on all sides rearing their shining crests 6,000 feet in air. Imagine Glacier Bay at their feet clothed in silvery mist, on whose surface float sky-hued icebergs. Imagine brooding over all a deep silence, restful and unbroken as that in the heavenly spheres. Imagine this, and you have the Muir as it stands to-day.

The Treadwell gold mine, one of the most famous in the world, is situated on Douglass Island, opposite Juneau. The Rothschilds are at the head of the company which operates it. Twenty thousand dollars are realized from it each week. Besides this mine, eight mills are in operation within four miles of Juneau. Silver is found in different portions of the country, and the finest quality of bituminous coal. The trend of the prospector and adventurer now is in the direction of the Yukon country, which stands like a sentinel beckoning them on to fabulous riches. Even Slavin, and other prize fighters, who were on board with us, have caught the infection, abandoned their profession of slugging, and gone to work in the mines. Papers and magazines are sending men into the interior "to write it up," and outfits are constantly pushing into the great Northwest. Nineteen years ago there was only one salmon cannery in Alaska. To-day there are thirty-six. Saw-mills and other forms of industry are rife. From the fur seals alone nearly $9,000,000 have been gained for the national treasury, to say nothing of the enrichment they have brought to private purses.

Prof. Jordan, president of Stanford University, California, was a passenger on the steamship "Queen," which arrived at Sitka on the thirteenth of July. As United States Commissioner of the Fur Investigation, he is going to the islands of St. Paul and St. George, where the seals congregate in Summer, to acquaint himself with their condition; especially to see how much the herd has changed under the killing at sea. He is taking with him a band of students who are to assist in marking the seals. A method of branding has been discovered which can be done by electricity, and causes no pain. Each of the animals will be marked with the letter "S," as it covers more space than any other and injures more of the fur, thus rendering it less valuable, and the life of the seal, in consequence, more secure from the Pelagic sealers who slay thousands of them yearly, regardless of sex. In the branding process the Aleuts will catch the seals, and the students will handle the instrument. As everyone knows, the difficulty between the United States and England has arisen on account of the killing of female seals at sea by the sealers. The company that has leased the island of St. Paul is under a bond of $500,000 not to kill the females, and the desire now is to have the same amount levied for killing in the water. The slaughter of the males is not so objectionable, as a superfluous number injure the herd by trampling the young ones to death. There are twice as many male seals as females, on account of the sea-killing. The latter have a habit of herding in "rookeries." The sealers station themselves near where they are feeding and easily slay them. Five hundred thousand females have been killed in the sea, and many thousands of pups perish at the death of their mothers for lack of sustenance. Soon after the first of August the rookeries break up. By the first of November the drifting ice comes from the far north; then the seals start out for a long swim, going at the rate of from ten to twenty miles an hour. The females go as far south as Santa Barbara, on the California coast; the pups to the shores of Oregon and British Columbia, while the old males retire to Mt. St. Elias. While on ship-board President Jordan delivered two lectures on the sealing subject; the first on the habits of the seal, from which I gleaned the above facts, and the last on the political aspect of the seal question.

Going from Sitka to Seattle is like sailing down a wide, smooth river, with all the joys of a sea voyage without any of its discomforts. On either side of the innumerable waterways through which we pass there is an unbroken stretch of magnificent scenery that transcends all description. Every view is full of exquisite beauty, or replete with grandeur and majesty. The trip to Alaska is the Summer tour par excellence, sought after by tourists from all parts of the world, and pronounced by them as incomparable. After leaving Victoria a stop is made at four little towns in Alaska. First is the village of Metlakhatla, where the Indians, who are unusually fair for their race, and unusually intelligent, have been brought to a high state of civilization through the efforts of a Scotch missionary, Rev. Mr. Duncan, who secured a grant from Mr. Cleveland setting aside the island of Annette for the use of the 800 people whom he brought from British Columbia to secure for them religious liberty untrammeled by the dogmas of the church. The village is laid off systematically, has street after street of substantial frame dwellings, good plank walks, a city hall, a large school-building, and the handsomest church in Alaska. The last has a seating capacity of over 1,000, and is elegantly finished in fine woodwork in the interior, and is graced by an organ of unusual sweetness and volume. It was designed and erected entirely by the Indians. As the steamer moved away from the wharf at 10:30 P. M. a band of Metlakhatla men stood on the shore, and, reading their music by the bright light that shines from the sky nearly all night in this latitude, played the "Star-Spangled Banner," "America," and other patriotic airs, while the passengers on board waved their hats and handkerchiefs and shouted themselves hoarse in return.

The next village was Wrangle, a miserable little place filled with community-houses, or "rancherles," as they are called—a square building consisting of one room with an opening in the roof for the smoke to escape. A number of branches of the same family live in each house in the midst of filth unspeakable, while eight or ten dogs invariably stand about each dwelling. The totem-poles loom up in interesting array in front of the homes of the native nabobs or aristocrats. These are the genealogical and historical records of the family. They take the place of our "tree," and are made in the most grotesque and ludicrous shapes, varying in gorgeousness according to the wealth or prestige of the possessor. In each of the community-houses are numbers of flat trunks ranged around the sides of the walls. They are for the interment of the dead, and are always kept on hand preparatory to that event.

At Taku Inlet the ship stopped to put ice on board. Small boats were lowered, and sailors with long spikes would capture great pieces of ice that were floating around, and by the means of machinery drew it up from the water and deposited it in the hold of the vessel.

Juneau is the metropolis of Alaska. It is a bustling mining town, very American in progressiveness and very European in its situation. It is thrown upon the sides of the lofty mountains that surround it just as many of the picturesque little chalets of Switzerland look as if they were. Juneau, besides being the centre of business life of the Territory, is also the centre of iniquity. Hence every form of unrestrained frontier existence is in full blast.

Douglass City, our next stop, is famous only for its great gold mine and rich fields of ore.

The last place at which we halted on our outward bound journey was Sitka, the capital of the Territory. It is called the Venice of Alaska. It is beautifully located and full of interest. As in all the other towns that we had visited, we found in Sitka a large Presbyterian mission; besides, there is an Episcopal and Greek Church. Here, as elsewhere, the Indian traders, both men and women, were strongly in evidence, lining the sides of the streets or the water's edge, selling their gay assortment of wares to the tourists at an interest of 100 per cent. on each article. On the day of our arrival in Sitka the Hon. John G. Brady, who is one of the noblest self-made men that America has produced, received the "credentials" ratifying his appointment by President McKinley as governor of the vast territory of Alaska. A better choice could not possibly have been made. Under him the possibilities of Alaska will be given a splendid chance for development, and the whole country brought into the brighter light of a higher civilization.

Shreveport District Conference.

This body met in its thirty-first session in Pleasant Hill, La., on Tuesday, July 20, 1897. This was a new departure. We began on Tuesday and closed on Thursday. By this arrangement all the preachers who chose to do so could reach their appointments by Sunday. The work of the Conference was carefully and thoroughly done. Every interest of the church received its proportionate share of attention. A summing up of the reports of the preachers shows that the church is making steady advance in the midst of difficulties. The unprecedented drouth of last year, and a repetition of it in parts of the district this year, makes a great financial pressure; but still God rules and his servants toil.

Emissaries of the M. E. Church, and others, are operating against us, and, while in places they achieve an apparent success, in the main their efforts remind one of the "pup barking at the moon."

Our presiding elder, Rev. J. L. P. Sheppard, though not strong, presided all the time of the session. By a vote of the Conference we recommended that he take a much needed rest after the arduous labor of the past half year. You will notice that we passed no complimentary resolutions. He has substantial evidence of our love, which is worth far more to him than resolutions on paper.

Reports of progress and improvements in Mansfield College you have already had.

Dr. Carter was with us, and represented Centenary.

I enclose you a copy of the resolutions. J. M. BROWN, Sec.

Grand Cane, La., July 26, 1897.

RESOLUTIONS ADOPTED BY THE SHREVEPORT DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

Resolved, In view of the arduous labors of our presiding elder, Rev. J. L. P. Sheppard, during the past six months, and his evident need of rest and recuperation, we recommend that he take a vacation of at least one month during the Summer.

Resolved, We heartily appreciate the ample and cordial hospitality of the citizens of Pleasant Hill in the entertainment of this Conference, and pray that the blessing of our Lord be upon them in their homes and in their hearts.

Resolved, That we recommend Rev. A. S. Lutz to the Louisiana Conference Ministerial Education Association for assistance during the next Conference year.

Resolved, That with due appreciation of the excellency of other church periodicals, we earnestly recommend to our people the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE and the missionary paper entitled "The World for Christ."

Resolved, That we recommend that all our people observe the third Friday in August as a day of prayer and fasting for the outpouring of the Holy Spirit on the churches of this district, and that the preachers urge upon their congregations this privilege and duty.

Resolved, That we note with great pleasure the increase of interest in our church colleges, Centenary and Mansfield, and the improved facilities for first-class work at these institutions, and pledge ourselves to urge the merits of them upon our people.

How the Word Goes.

Let us take the Greek Testament, Westcott and Hart's text, and run along through the first eight verses of the first chapter of James, and see how the Word goes.

1. "James, a servant"—"doulos," not "diakonos"—"of God and of the Lord Jesus Christ, to the twelve tribes scattered abroad"—in the dispersion, or, as Alford makes it, "who are in the dispersion"—"greeting"—joy to you.

2. "My brethren, count it"—consider, esteem it—"all joy whenever ye fall into"—upon—"divers"—many kinds of—"trials;"

3. "Knowing that the trying"—the deciding test, the effective settling—"of your faith worketh out patience."

4. "But let patience have"—hold, possess, or keep—"her perfect"—her complete or finished—"work, that ye may be perfect"—complete—"and entire, wanting"—lacking, behind—"in nothing."

5. "If any of you lack"—is deficient of—"wisdom, let him ask of God, who giveth to all liberally, and upbraideth"—reproacheth—"not; and it shall be given him."

6. "But let him ask in faith, nothing wavering"—in nothing questioning, disputing, or hesitating, discriminating, doubting. "For he that wavereth"—doubts—"is like a wave of the sea driven with the wind and tossed."

7. "For let not that man think that he shall receive anything of the Lord"—nothing in answer to such a prayer.

8. "A double-minded man is unstable in all his ways."

The seventh and eighth verses are one sentence in the text of Westcott and Hart, and should be so translated thus: "For let not that man think that a man double-minded, unstable in all his ways, shall receive anything of the Lord."

May not a proper study of this Scripture and of kindred passages show us why many of our so-called prayers are not answered, can not be? We may rightly use "endurance" for "patience" in the passage.

TOPIC FOR AUGUST.

ST. PAUL AS A MAN OF PRAYER.

AUG. 8.—THE PRAYERS AT MILETUS AND TYRE.

(Acts xx, 36; xxi, 5.)

Paul was on his way to Jerusalem, not knowing what would happen to him there. From Miletus he sent and called the elders of Ephesus together, and after exhorting them to do their duty, he knelt down and prayed with them. Again at Tyre, after tarrying seven days with the disciples he found there, he left the city, accompanied by them with their wives and children, and on the seashore kneeled and prayed with them. As to the matter of these prayers we know nothing, and conjecture is not to our taste. What we may say is only indirectly connected with the subject.

1. Paul was a man of very strong character, and as such made enemies and friends. The hatred of the enemies was equaled by the devotion of his friends. "And they all wept sore, and fell on Paul's neck and kissed him." This remarkable demonstration attested Paul's personal popularity. By these personalities Paul led them to the Master and in his footsteps; did not use them to advance his own interests. Popularity in the pulpit is much decried these days. This is foolish. True, it may be abused and used for personal ends, but when used in Christ's behalf it is a wonderful power. A mother leads her child to Christ more readily than another because of the child's affection for her. A popular preacher is usually a man of large affinities. Many people love him, and he may more readily lead them to Christ by reason of their personal affection.

2. Paul's strength of character is probably more clearly shown in his overcoming the loving lamentations of his friends than in meeting the persecutions that were in store for him. The din and roar of battle may test the soldier's patriotism, but the soldier's farewell to his family is a greater test. To tear himself from the loving embrace of his wife and the clinging arms of his sobbing children is harder than to march into the cannon's mouth. Paul's duty called him to Jerusalem. Persecutions could not deter him, nor could even the tearful entreaties of his friends. Let nothing come between you and duty.

3. Farewells are always sad, but "farewell forever," who can sound the depth of its sorrow? Paul's was sad, but sweetened by the prayers to a common Father, who ruleth the universe. They might not meet again, but God would be with them all—a bond of union still.

DOTS.

The League at Patterson has thirty-two members. It is doing a good work in the "Charity and Help" department. Rev. W. G. Evans, the zealous pastor, and his family are recreating at the camp grounds.

Rev. Freeland Magruder, one of our most earnest League workers, preached his first sermon in Algiers, Sunday night.

There is only one League in the Delhi district, and that is at Lake Providence.

Let all members of the Executive Committee read the "Special Notice" in this issue.

Rev. R. F. Wynn is assisting his father in a protracted meeting this week.

SMALL HELPS.

BY A. D. T. WHITNEY.

Good things had befallen me, all through the day
A blessing of morsels—small helps by the way;
Work running on even, and coming out right;
Bright thoughts with the morning, good words at the night

So evening was sweet and as shadows fell deep,
My spirit was turned to the Lord of the sheep.

Letter from "Gilderoy."

If young preachers would take time to study some few questions thoroughly, they would be saved from confusion and worry of mind in all after life. They can not do this in a hurry, in an afternoon. It will take time, hard work and patient thought to mature these subjects, but it will pay to do it. In getting at the truth on these subjects, many young men will find their preconceived opinions in their way. For this reason they will see through a glass darkly, or look at truth through a smoked glass, as one looks at the sun. It is specially important for young Methodist preachers to study these questions. The sources of information are near at hand, and there is no good reason why they may not understand; no reason except laziness or a lack of intellect. The first is sin, and the last a misfortune.

Take one question at a time, single it out from all others, fix the mind's eye upon it, and gaze at it steadily until it is seen clearly. Collect and write out, connectedly, all the information to be had on it. This will go far towards making a young preacher a close and correct thinker on all subjects. He will get full pay for all his work in the increase in real, mental manhood.

Take this question and study it, "What is the moral state or condition of man since the fall as held and taught by Arminians?" Matured views on this question will affect and color one's thinking on nearly all theological questions. If right on this, it will be easy to be right on the others, and if wrong on this, it will be impossible, mentally impossible, to see the other questions in a clear light. If a young man will buckle down to the study of Mr. Wesley, Mr. Watson, Mr. Fletcher, Wilbur Fisk, Ralston, Pope, Wiley and Summers, not to name others, on this question, he will get light and help. Stick to it, and get at exactly what they hold and teach, and notice how they back it up by the Word of God.

As they saw it, "man is a depraved being in a guiltless or justified state." To the average mind, specially a mind blinded by erroneous teaching, this looks like a contradiction in terms. A guiltless, depraved being, as some men see it, is absurd. But this is the Wesleyan Arminian position and starting-point in reasoning on this and on all other questions related to it or affected by it.

It is worthy of note that those who reject and resent this Wesleyan view as to the state and condition of the race hold that an adult sinner justified by faith is a depraved, but guiltless being. There is no more absurdity in the one case than in the other. It is placing the individual exactly where the Arminian puts the race.

These old authors all hold and teach that God would not have allowed Adam to propagate his species if they were all to be born depraved and condemned, and liable to hell for a thing they could not help. The race was lost in Adam and redeemed in Christ. The one offense by which all were condemned is fully offset by the one righteousness by which all are justified or forgiven. This is the Arminian and Wesleyan position. It agrees with God's Word. It will pay any young man to grasp this thought firmly. Clearness of thought on this subject will clear away the mists on many others.

It may be well to remember that the generation of depraved beings in a guiltless or justified state was provided for in the atonement by Christ. So our natural estate is also a state of grace. God provided for it to be this way. The race is just as God arranged for it to be. It is utter folly then, if not sin, to be heaping maledictions on nature and on our natural state. This thought is more or less fully elaborated by each one of the authors named above, especially so by Mr. Fletcher.

Depravity, natural depravity, is not sin, and never becomes sin until one elects or chooses to be governed by it. Natural depravity is, then, moral depravity. The guiltless, racial deprivation becomes the guilty, personal depravation. Mark the words: "deprivation" and "depravation." Those distinctions are clearly set forth in the books named above. It will take time and hard study to see things clearly along here, specially so for those with a Calvinistic film over their eyes. I suppose it would be readily granted that God could not make a guilty and condemned sinner, to begin with. It seems to me he would not provide for the generation of guilty and condemned sinners by the first guilty pair. There is little difference between making them guilty and condemned, and providing for them to be born guilty and condemned. God did neither. To have done either would have involved the integrity and holiness of the Divine Being. God does not make guilty and condemned sinners neither by creation nor by birth. God can not do wrong.

A nature may be propagated—indeed, it must be—but not so of a state, condition, or relation. This last is not transmissable, is not generated. In the nature of the case it can not be. Adam could not possibly generate other than depraved children or deprived children. He could not possibly generate his guilt and condemnation. In so far as Adam sinned for the race, in just that far Christ redeemed the race as a race. The sin and the salvation were racial. All die in Adam, and all will just as certainly be made alive in Christ, regardless of faith or good works. He is the Savior of the race, especially of them that believe.

This is Arminianism, Wesleyan doctrine, and it can be sustained by the Word of God against all opponents and all opposing theories.

Alexandria District Conference.

The session of the Alexandria District Conference, July 8–11, was most enjoyable. The people of Montgomery entertained us royally. Rev. V. D. Skipper, P. E., presided efficiently, and, all in all, it was most pleasant.

The first day was given largely to reports on Sunday-school work. The number of schools that were reported as really flourishing is not as large as could be desired. It is an encouraging fact, however, to those who are struggling to maintain schools in the country, that the best reports were from such schools. Quite a creditably large number of new schools have been organized this year, and all use the literature of the church, though some supplement it with other publications.

A summary of the reports from the various charges on their spiritual condition can scarcely be expressed in stronger terms than fair. There was remarkable unanimity in the use of that phrase, while a few were below and some others above that standard. What it means preachers best know. Only five of the seventeen preachers in charge in this district are reappointments, and only three of the five were present. Perhaps this fact may, in a measure, account for the reports as given, for it gives little opportunity for judgment as to the present, which may, in point of fact, be a vast improvement over the past; hence, in that far, very encouraging.

The condition of church property, including under this subject of inquiry old buildings, repairs, and new buildings erected or in process of erection, was very favorably reported on almost all the charges. The district is making noticeable progress in this respect.

There were reported three active Leagues, and four dormant or dead ones. Those at Dry Creek, and one recently organized at Boyce, gave most hopeful signs of usefulness.

A resolution was adopted opposing the visits of "roaming evangelists and preachers," "except when invited by the preacher in charge, and being subject to their godly direction." It was signed by Robert Randle and H. S. Johns.

One of the most interesting features of the Conference was the information brought out by inquiries of the president, and considered by the Conference, touching the extent of missionary territory in the bounds of this district. It may be news to many, even in this district, that it includes nearly or quite one-fourth of the State in area, about 117 in population. One consideration revealed the fact that a large section of the most populous part of the district was without Protestant preaching, and the brethren acquainted with it affirmed that opportune time had come to occupy the field. The following resolution presents the decision of the Conference as to the proper way to meet the need:

Resolved, That we, the members of the Alexandria District Conference, do recommend the organization and support of a mission along the river front, west side of Red and Mississippi rivers, beginning above Marksville and extending down the Mississippi to Gros Tete.

(Signed)

GEO. W. MCPHATTER,
ROBERT RANDLE,
JNO. I. MCCAIN.

The following brethren preached during the Conference: J. C. Sligh, R. S. Isbell, H. S. Johns, R. C. Grace, H. L. Hughes, A. C. Flowers, and Robert Randle. Bro. Skipper preached unto edification Sunday morning. Bro. T. S. Randle conducted love-feast. It was a profitable service.

Rev. A. C. Flowers, who is acceptably "supplying" Colfax circuit this year, and formerly a member of the Mississippi Conference, was recommended to the Annual Conference for readmission into the traveling connection.

Bros. R. M. Horn, of Montgomery, and H. H. McCain, of St. Maurice, were licensed to preach. They were both highly commended as consecrated, earnest young men. The session was harmonious, orderly, delightful, and profitable.

LYMAN F. JACKSON, Sec'y.

Alexandria, La., July 22, 1897.

Some More Mixed Notes.

Rev. L. Carley, P. E., reports for the Enterprise district in his second quarterly missionary bulletin as follows: Ellisville and Laurel, F. M. Keen, P. C., $5.45; Winchester circuit, R. L. Phillips, P. C., $10; Pachuta circuit, W. J. Ferguson, P. C., $11.25; Heidelberg circuit, C. D. Cecil, P. C., $7.70; Waynesboro and State Line circuit, H. E. Partridge, P. C., $20; Matherville circuit, W. W. Moore, P. C., $10; and Wayne mission, D. C. Farmer, supply, 85 cents—all for foreign missions; Vossburg circuit, R. B. Downer, P. C., $8.90 for foreign and $2.50 for domestic missions; Williamsburg circuit, W. J. Dawson, P. C., $7 for foreign and $3 for domestic missions—the only two charges in the district reporting any collection for domestic missions. Shubuta and Quitman station, and Energy circuit, Enterprise and Stonewall station, Eastabutchie, Leakesville, Fulier and Mt. Carmel circuits report nothing for missions.

One hundred and ten subscribers to The World for Christ are reported in the district, of which 30 are in the Heidelberg circuit, and 26 in Wayne mission. Seven charges do not report any subscribers. Only nine subscribers to The Methodist Review of Missions are reported—ten charges not reporting any, either for preachers or layman.

Another correspondent of the ADVOCATE, writing his name backwards, as if a little more than half doubtful of the correctness of his opinions, seems to be afraid that we are magnifying foreign missions at the expense of home missions. Does he read The World for Christ or The Methodist Review of Missions? Does he know that 1,000,000,000 human beings are without the gospel, and 100,000 are dying daily without any knowledge of God and without hope? Does he know that our contributions for foreign missions through the Parent Board last year were $8,000 less than the year before? Does he know that our missionary debt is $130,000? Does he know that our 1,500,000 members last year contributed through the Parent Board just about ten cents per member to send the gospel to Mexico, Brazil, China, Japan and Korea? Does he know that for years past we have contributed more than ten times as much for supporting the work at home as we have paid for sending the gospel to people so long in the region of the shadow of death? Does he know that our people contribute less, much less, than one-tenth of one per cent. of their income to prepare the world for the coming of our Lord? Does he know that about 1,000,000 of our church members contribute nothing, either by praying or paying, to support the workers in the home fields or the missionaries to heathen lands? Does he not know, and does not the ADVOCATE editor know, that just such articles as that by "Yesmar" and that by "Poimenos" do not further the interests of domestic missions, but furnish excuses for the stingy and irreligious and ignorant not to pay to missions at all? Our domestic mission collections have not recovered from the ill-advised criticisms of a good, but mistaken brother, published in the ADVOCATE five years ago.

T. L. MELLEN,

The selection of Bay St. Louis as the place for holding the fourth annual meeting of the Woman's Parsonage and Home Mission Society proved a wise one indeed. It was a new experience for the people to entertain an annual meeting, and there was a beam of pleasure on every face. So it was certainly better than to have invited ourselves to one of the cities or large towns where Conventions and Conferences are held so often that everything seems stereotyped. A visit to the beautiful Bay certainly creates a strong desire to repeat it.

At 8 P. M., on Friday, July 9, 1897, the opening exercises were conducted by Rev. J. P. Drake. Miss Purnell, president, was detained by a painful accident; so Mrs. J. B. Chatfield, vice-president, presided with dignity and her usual executive ability. Mrs. L. B. Turner delivered an address of welcome in words sweet and generous, which found a warm response in all our hearts, and was appropriately responded to by Mrs. E. D. Jones, of Carlisle. After singing "Onward, Christian Soldiers," an interesting letter from Miss Lucinda B. Helm was read by Mrs. L. B. Turner.

Rev. J. P. Drake showed his confidence in the women by turning over the keys of his beautiful new church, and assuring them of his willingness to serve them in every way possible. Mrs. Chatfield voiced the thanks of the Conference.

The first regular business meeting was held on Saturday, at 9 A. M. Sessions were opened with a devotional exercise, calling of roll, reading of Minutes, and singing. In the absence of Mrs. B. F. Lewis, recording secretary, Mrs. S. S. Cope was elected secretary pro tem.

Mrs. Joyce was allowed the privilege of the floor.

At the close of each morning session delegates and visitors were invited to the parsonage, where delightful luncheons were served.

Very encouraging reports were read by district secretaries and delegates.

Saturday evening the children rendered an enjoyable programme. Miss Eileu McConnel and Miss Virginia Cleveland were the directors.

The annual sermon was preached Sunday, July 11, at 11 o'clock, by Rev. J. P. Drake, from the text, "And all the women whose heart stirred them up in wisdom spun goats' hair." (Exodus xxxv, 26.) After the sermon the sacrament of the Lord's Supper was administered.

Sunday afternoon all visited Harmon Mission Chapel, after which a "love-feast was held which proved a feast indeed."

Sunday evening the president's address, which was strong and full of force, was read by Mrs. Joyce; also an excellent paper by Mrs. C. B. Drake. Mrs. Randolph gave a glowing report of Harmon Chapel Mission.

Greetings from Mrs. R. R. Parker, editor of the column in the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE, were conveyed by letter.

Monday morning business was resumed. A number of visitors were introduced, and encouraging remarks were made by Mrs. Florence E. Russ, corresponding secretary of the Louisiana Conference, and others. The treasurer's report, which had been read Sunday evening, was adopted; also the report of the Conference corresponding secretary. Treasurer's report shows a decided increase over last year. Total collections during the year, $903.14. There was an increase of twelve auxiliaries. The faithful few deserve a word of praise for their earnest efforts. Wesson Auxiliary reports the largest number of connectional members, 35; Bay St. Louis next, 30. Biloxi has the largest number pledged to systematic giving, 18; Oak Ridge the largest number of subscribers to Our Homes, 12. Magnolia reported the largest amount raised for week of prayer, $30; Port Gibson next largest, $20; also the largest number of shares in Loan Fund, largest number of mite boxes, largest number of garments distributed and clothing for an orphan in asylum at Natchez, and also sent a box and $20 in cash to Arkansas. Bay St. Louis reported the largest number of visits to sick and strangers, 192. Sent to Mrs. Yarborough for Bro. Scruggs, Indian Territory, a barrel valued at $52. Bay St. Louis was pronounced the banner auxiliary. "Baby Rolls" reported from Port Gibson, Bay St. Louis, Carlisle, Jackson, and Paulding. Paulding has largest roll of members, 7; Bay St. Louis, 6. Applications for aid were considered and acted upon. Miss Purnell, from the impulse of a generous heart, made a personal pledge to Hermanville parsonage of $50. The Lord blessed her efforts. By special donations from auxiliaries, Mrs. N. P. McPherson, Jackson Jewels; Miss Purnell and Conference Society, the pledge was cancelled. A donation of $60 was made to Wesley Chapel, Natchez. Other applications were referred to the General Board. By a liberal donation from Mrs. N. P. McPherson and a collection from Bay St. Louis for Conference contingent fund the expenses of the Conference can be met. A sister who not only consecrated herself, but her gold, to the Lord, presented a beautiful gold watch, which is to be sold, and proceeds used for the work.

The election of officers resulted as follows: President, Miss Addie Purnell, Jackson; first vice-president, Mrs. J. B. Chatfield, Meridian; second vice-president, Mrs. A. R. Widney, Bay St. Louis; recording secretary, Miss Mary Clare Brown, Meridian; treasurer, Mrs. T. B. Holloman, Natchez; corresponding secretary, Mrs. S. S. Cope, Paulding; auditor, Miss Sue Reid, Natchez; editor, Mrs. Stella Parker, Wesson; agent for Our Homes, Miss Pauline Stafford, Vossburg. District secretaries: Mrs. K. Kennedy, Meridian district; Miss Anna Montgomery, Natchez district; Miss Mollie Norman, Brookhaven district; Mrs. E. D. Jones, Vicksburg district; Mrs. J. S. Parker, Jackson district; Miss Bettie Watts, Brandon district; Miss E. Alice Trotter, Enterprise district; Mrs. L. B. Turner, Mrs. Lou E. White, Seashore district.

East End, Meridian, was selected as the place for the next annual meeting; time to embrace second Sunday in July, 1898.

"Not by might, nor by power, but by my Spirit, saith the Lord." (Motto for the year.)

Woman's Missionary Conference of Louisiana met July 9-12, at Homer. Our president, being recently bereaved in the death of her husband, was not with us. Our vice-president, Mrs. T. K. Faunt LeRoy, presided throughout our meetings with grace and ease. Our attendance was small. The pastor, Rev. P. A. Johnston, and Rev. P. M. Brown were with us in most of our sessions, and rendered valued assistance. Some very fine papers were read during the Conference. Bro. Brown preached our anniversary sermon, which was very fine indeed, and we hope will bear fruit in years to come.

There were not so many officers or delegates present as usual, and yet we were compelled to decide upon a very momentous question. A young lady from Opelousas, Miss Helen Johnston, presented herself as a candidate for preparation for missionary work. She came recommended by Mrs. M. M. Hayes, district secretary of Opelousas district, and Mrs. Paul Foster. We could not turn a deaf ear to her call, and still pray the Lord to raise up workers in our midst. We judge she has a moderate common-school education, but we did not consider her ready for the training-school. She says she has felt called to this work for several years, but hesitated to offer herself because of incompetency. After prayerful consideration we could see but one course to pursue. We must help her through one year at Mansfield College, that we may better judge of her capability and adaptability to the work. Mrs. Sligh, vice-president of the college, was there, and very generously offered to give the tuition, which is probably four times as much as any other individual will give. She also agreed to furnish the young lady dining-room work, to amount to $5 per month, which will be credited on her board. Miss Helen seems willing to do this, or whatever the Board thinks best. Thus, you see, about $90 is provided without our help. A year's course with all the advantages she needs will cost about $200, besides which we must provide for books, clothing, washing, traveling expenses, etc. You all know something of the necessary expenses of a young lady at college.

The ministers and delegates present responded nobly in pledges. In a few minutes almost half the necessary amount was pledged; but, my dear sisters, what can these ministers and delegates do without your help? You must rally to their support, and help them to redeem these pledges and raise the balance. If every Methodist woman and child in Louisiana would give 25 cents, we would have plenty for our candidate's expenses, and a balance for the contingent fund. But do not confine yourself to this minimum amount, for many may fail to respond, and throw double duty on the faithful few.

Now, dear sisters and co-workers, we did the very best we could with the light we had, and we hope our deliberations and decisions will meet with your approval; but should they fail, you have only yourselves to blame, for you should have been there and helped us through. The same Executive Board was elected, with the exception of a few changes in the district secretaries, as follows: Alexandria district, Mrs. W. H. LaPrade, Shreveport, La.; Delhi district, Mrs. Pitts, Ruston; Arcadia district, Mrs. H. L. Laurence, Homer.

Our corresponding secretary's report shows about the same number of members as last year, and our treasurer's report shows about the same amount of money collected in proportion to the length of time.

We found Homer a very pleasant place, and were most hospitably entertained while there.

It was decided to hold our next annual meeting in Opelousas, to include the fourth Sunday in June, '98. We sincerely hope you will begin now to elect your delegates, and try to see that they attend the Conference.

Your sister in the work,
L. PAXON, Rec. Sec.

Selections.

A ship was wrecked on the northwest coast of Ireland; and a mother tried in vain to persuade her son, who had volunteered to go to the rescue of the last man on board the burning ship, to give up the perilous task. She pleaded that his father and brother had never come back from the sea, and that she would be left alone if he were lost. He resisted her entreaties and put out to the sinking vessel. When the boat came back through the surf the crowds on the shore shouted, "Have you got your man?" The reply came, "Yes; and tell mother it's brother William!" Are we sure that the imperiled souls around us are not our brothers?—Selected.

Joy is a prize unbought, and is freest, purest in its flow when it comes unsought. No getting into heaven as a place will compass it. You must carry it with you, else it is not there. You must have it in you, as the music of a well-ordered soul, the fire of a holy purpose, the welling up out of the central depths of eternal springs that hide their waters there.—Bushnell.

We keep poor, not because blessings are so scarce, but because we are so seldom in a position to receive them.

To Whom It May Concern:

About three years ago I received a sample bottle of "Mul-en-ol." I had never heard of it before. I began using it, however, as occasion required, and soon found that it was all that is claimed for it, and more. For cuts, burns, bruises, scalds, and all kinds of sores, it is superior to any remedy I have ever used. It is also exceedingly efficacious in colic and diarrhœa. For sore throat it is incomparably better than anything I know of. I heartily recommend it as a medicine worthy of a place in every household. W. C. BLACK,
Editor Christian Advocate.

FROM THE WORK.

Rev. H. S. Johns, Bayou Chicot, La., July 26, 1897: "Just closed a meeting of four days at New Haven, with five accessions and a general good time. I am talking for the ADVOCATE in pulpit, in visiting, and in the Church Conference. Hope with the good times of the Fall to send you a good list of new subscribers. It would help us more than you."

Rev. H. C. Parrott, P. C., Tremont, Miss., July 26, 1897: "In our great meeting at Tremont, or Stone's Cross Roads, we had 60 conversions, 50 accessions to our church, with others yet to join in the near future. Will soon have completed an organization of at least 60 members, and perhaps 75, which will pay the pastor $75, or more, and plans are being laid for the building at once of a $500 church edifice. This is one of the best and well-to-do communities in Itawamba county. All praise to God who was with us all the way."

Rev. J. H. Smith, Wall Hill, Miss., July 24, 1897: "Permit me to tell of the Wall Hill charge. We have been moving along nicely since Conference. The people are kind to their preacher, and show their appreciation in a material way that is delightful. The general collections are being looked after, a good amount paid, the balance, we trust, will be paid in full by Conference. We have had two Children's Day services, which were a great benefit and delight to all in attendance. What a feast of real encouragement and pleasure those services are! The reason for revival meetings is here, and we are praying for a gracious time of refreshing from the presence of the Lord. Many of the brethren are pressing me for help in meetings, a work I very much enjoy; but there is a limit to time and human strength, and I will have to decline many of them. The Lord bless you all with great success."

Rev. Sam B. Cox, Walnut, Miss., July 25, 1897: "I write to let you know of our success in a meeting on my country charge. We had no evangelist. We had our own local preacher, preacher in charge, and a Baptist preacher—all young men. We started with the idea of an old-fashioned, home-spun revival, and we had it. The church only numbered twenty members. We add seventeen, two to the Baptist Church; and every Christian, I think, greatly revived. We had at first one member who would pray in public, and a very good Sunday-school. Now we have a dozen or more persons who will lead prayer, a live Epworth League (named 'Tucker' for our presiding elder, Rev H. R. Tucker) of 23 members, making two Leagues on Jonesboro circuit. The presiding elder is the thing for the country. Let me say that two of my best men have adopted the tithe-paying system recently. Yours for success to the ADVOCATE and the cause."

Rev. W. A. Terry, Tranquil charge, July 27, 1897: "We have recently closed a glorious meeting at Tranquil Church. The Holy Ghost was with us in great power. Dr. I. W. Cooper, of Moss Point, did the preaching from Tuesday morning until the meeting closed. The preaching was of very high order, and was much appreciated by all who heard it. There were twenty-five accessions to the church, and several promised to unite with the other churches in the neighborhood. The meeting could have been considered a great success had we not received a member, because the membership was wondrously uplifted. Many of the members expressed a determination to live closer to God. Several who have not been holding family prayers promised to erect family altars. The people of Tranquil neighborhood, of all denominations, will long remember Bro. Cooper for his faithful service and lasting good performed. May God bless him."

Rev. W. W. Morse, Tylertown, Miss., July 24, 1897: "I have just closed a gracious meeting of six days at China Grove. There were nineteen accessions on profession, the church greatly revived, and seven little children dedicated to the Lord by holy baptism. From the first service it seemed to be manifest that 'the time to favor Zion, yea, the set time, had come.' The interest increased from day to day, until there was scarcely a member of that large congregation who did not feel the power of the Spirit of God. Bro. C. McDonald was my helper, who did all the preaching except the first sermon. He is indeed 'a man full of the Holy Ghost and faith.' He does not try to move the people by telling sympathetic or sensational incidents, but by instructing the mind and heart in the way of life and salvation, so that they can 'lay hold upon the hope set before them.' I believe this work will abide. Others will join the church as a result of this meeting. Family altars will be erected, and the ordinances of the church will be observed, and its institutions supported as never before."

Rev. B. S. Rayner, P. C., Fayette, Miss., June 27, 1897: "We have just held here what the old citizens claim to be the best meeting within their memory. It lasted sixteen days, eleven days of which time Rev. W. M. McIntosh was with us, putting in full and efficient service. We know no one who could have done better work in the same length of time. He preached sound doctrine throughout. To pastor and people there was nothing objectionable in his preaching. His thorough consecration, intense earnestness and manifest candor impelled success. The spiritual force that attended him was perceptible in every service, hence no meeting was fruitless. Congregations were large, making it necessary to improvise a tent, under the shade of trees, the capacity of which was practically without limit. This gave the colored people an opportunity to attend, which they eagerly did in large numbers at every service. by which they were much benefited. Prof. W. A. Bell, singer for Bro. McIntosh, was present, and by his singing and leadership of the choir gave us such music as we hitherto had not enjoyed. Bro. Bell, by his prayers and work generally, was an important factor in the meeting. Bro. W. J. McLean, of Gloster, was with us several days and helped much in the music. He is a thoroughly consecrated Christian worker. As the result of the meeting we are much stronger, spiritually, numerically, financially—in every way. We have certainly taken on new life and feel greatly encouraged. The Great Head of the church has in this meeting done what we from the beginning of the year believed he would do, and to him we give the glory now and forever. Amen."

A GOOD TIME IN RALEIGH.

We began a meeting here on the seventeenth. It continued until the twenty-second. Bro. W. M. Sullivan did the preaching. We had as good a meeting as I have ever attended. There were members converted; many praising God in the highest. As there were forty accessions to the church here last year, there were but few to join. We had only eight accessions during the meeting. They were soundly converted. We believe there were about forty claimed to have experienced a change of heart. Bro. Sullivan will always be remembered by the people of Raleigh as being a brilliant light in the church which he represents. There are one hundred and thirty-eight members of the Methodist Church in and near Raleigh that are rejoicing to know that God has raised up in the Methodist Church strong young men as our dear brother, properly dividing the Word of God, giving each one their portion in due season. We are expecting a better, a stronger report to accompany us to the Annual Conference than has been for years. Pray for us.

L. J. JONES.

PENTECOSTAL SOENES AT MT. CARMEL.

The revival at Mt. Carmel, Miss., conducted by Bro. L. C. Hall and Prof. Maken, began July 3, and closed on the eleventh instant. In many respects it was the greatest meeting I ever witnessed. Sinners were converted, backsliders reclaimed. The faces of many shone with the glory of God, and there was great liberty in prayer and testimony—indeed, a heavenly atmosphere pervaded the house of God and vicinity. However, the peculiar feature was the conviction by the Holy Spirit of believers of inbred sin. So powerful was it that a horror of great darkness came upon the seeker, and such cries as this, "I am lost," "Let me die," were heard from the lips of those who were passing through the throes of these spiritual agonies. At the close of the struggle the physical man was partly paralyzed under the weight of glory revealed, and the man went through all the motions of a drunken person, except there was no stammer of the tongue. To illustrate: On account of the great movement we thought best on this day not to appoint grove prayer meeting, but let all be abandoned to the Holy Spirit and follow his leading. A friend who had come over sixty miles to attend the meeting and myself were standing near the church soon after dinner, when we heard on an adjoining hill, across a little ravine to the south, a sound as of one praying; so we decided to go over. When we reached the spot we found a small crowd of men. In their midst were two men who went home from prayer meeting the night before in a buggy, both powerfully under conviction. Presently one received the Spirit, and was helpless, like an infant, in the charge of the other, who held him in the buggy till they reached their destination. Then the Spirit came also on the other, and the rest of the night was spent in shouting the praise of God. And now, standing with one hand of each on the shoulder of the other, and their other hands clasped, they were swaying back and forth at the same time, speaking of the wonderful things God was doing for their souls. Others, full of laughter, were swinging around saplings, and one who had just received the blessing wandered around like one under the influence of a dozen drinks.

Again: at the service on the last day a sinner came to the altar; accepted Christ by faith. In the night the witness came. He was awakened by a sweet song heard in his sleep. Immediately he began to seek sanctification. During the whole altar service he trembled like an aspen leaf. When the intermission for dinner was announced he cried out in agony, "I don't want to leave the altar." The Spirit came. In trying to rise he staggered back and came near falling on the floor. The falling rain kept the congregation in the house. During the whole hour he wandered around crying out what great things the Lord had done for him. I have heard of no opposition in the church. Nearly all of the adult members obtained the experience, and, without a single exception that I know of, the rest are seeking. It seemed that sometimes this soul-travail came upon the seekers after they claimed the blessing by faith, while waiting for the coming of the Spirit; but in other cases, at the close of the struggle, the seeker accepted Christ as his sanctifier and received the witness.

No one looking on the scene could oppose, except such as had the same spirit as those who crucified Jesus Christ. If they would not believe, they would not if the graves in the cemetery were opened and the dead came forth and proclaimed that it was of God.

The continued increase in the number of young ladies in attendance at this college is evidence of the satisfaction of its patrons with its management. The equipment consists in part of 38 upright and 2 concert grand pianos, a six-inch object glass, Alvan Clark & Sons telescope, and probably the best chemical and physical laboratory of any female college in the South. With its 6 male and 11 female professors, it offers unusual advantages for mental training, and the lovely grounds, ornamented with two fountains, a lily pond and beautiful shrubs and flowers, is conducive to happiness and æsthetic culture. The dormitories are home-like and equipped with all modern conveniences. We believe that Louisiana girls would find the climate here pleasant and healthful. From the self-same quarter of the sky
Another saw as many demons frown!
—Robert Pollock.

It is far easier to expose the faults of others than to correct our own.

Nothing causes us to so nearly resemble God as the forgiveness of injuries.—St. Chrysostom.

Nature makes all the noblemen; wealth, education nor pedigree never made one yet.—H. W. Shaw.

The beginning of anxiety is the end of faith, and the beginning of true faith is the end of anxiety.—George Muller.

The good things a sinner proposes to do to-morrow are no excuse for the meanness he is perpetrating to-day.—Selected.

It is a great calamity that any man or woman should attend church for ten or twelve years and then be unable to tell some one the way of life.—Moody.

Truths are the roots of duties. A rootless duty, one that has no truths below it out of which it grows, has no life and will have no growth.—Phillips Brooks.

Censoriousness is foreign to the spirit of Christ. He who has made the highest attainments in grace is readiest to throw the mantle of charity over the faults of others.

Some people seem to suppose that officiousness and efficiency are synonymous terms. This is a great mistake. The most officious people are oftentimes the most inefficient.

Duty does not always wear a pleasant face when it confronts us, but if we meet it in the right spirit, we shall find its countenance gradually shining like that of an angel.—Selected.

The happiness of life depends very much on little things; and one can be brave and great and good while making small sacrifices and doing small duties faithfully and cheerfully.—L. M. Alcott.

One secret act of self-denial, one sacrifice of inclination to duty, is worth all the mere good thoughts, warm feelings, passionate prayers in which idle people indulge themselves.—J. H. Newman.

The visiting brother with a few "sugar-stick" sermons may capture the crowd for a time, but the real test of a preacher is his ability to hold and increase his congregations during a series of months and years.—Baptist Standard.

Be honest with yourself, whatever the temptation; say nothing to others that you do not think, and play no tricks with your own mind. Of all the evil spirits abroad at this hour of the world insincerity is the most dangerous.—J. A. Froude.

Religion and the Body.

That the present generation gives more attention to the development of the body than did our ancestors is a proposition that does not need to be argued. Its truth is verified by personal observation, and stares us in the face from the pages of the daily newspaper. Every college, male and female, has its department of physical culture.

But, notwithstanding all this, the world still needs enlightenment on this subject, especially from the standpoint of religion. Vast multitudes ignore the fact that care for the body is a religious duty. Merely as a matter of worldly prudence, they think, it may be well to take care of our bodies, but this is a matter with which religion has nothing to do. Religiously speaking, it is a matter of no importance whether we are strong or weak, well or sick.

Now, this is an egregious error. Says an inspired apostle, "Know ye not that your body is a temple of the Holy Ghost?" In another place the Word of God pronounces a curse upon him who defiles the body. "If any defile the temple of God, him shall God destroy."

The force of this language is better understood now than in former ages. Science has made it clear that God does destroy him who transgresses physiological law. Unwholesome food, or even wholesome food eaten in improper quantities, brings on gastric and other diseases, whose tendency is to the destruction of the body. Sleeping continuously in ill-ventilated apartments, and thus breathing vitiated air, will produce results equally disastrous. Neglect to take proper exercise, and a great physiological law entails upon you an enfeebled vitality of the whole physical organism. Swallow poison, no matter whether it be strychnine, corrosive sublimate, or the product of the still, and suffering in some form will inevitably ensue. Look at you disgusting specimen of the genus homo as he goes reeling and staggering along the street babbling nonsense and uttering words so foul that you almost wonder whether he be man or devil. He was once a sweet, innocent babe, whose childish prattle was the joy of a mother's heart. He was once a bright, ambitious, noble-hearted boy, looking forward to a glorious career of high endeavor and lofty achievement. He was once a man, fair in form, upright in deportment, and lovely in character—a model in the world of business and in social life. Look at him now. How changed! What has produced this metamorphosis more wonderful and more appalling than any Ovid ever dreamed of? That bloated form, that flushed face, those blood-shot eyes, that beclouded intellect, those dwarfed moral sensibilities, that murdered conscience, those hellish passions that lift his arm to strike with murderous intent her whom once he loved better than his own life—whence came they? Ah! who does not know the origin of all this wreck and ruin? Civilization (?) pressed to his lips a goblet filled with poison. He drank, and that first fatal draught begat a raging thirst which naught but another draught could quench. He drank and drank and drank, and these repeated draughts of hellish poison have done the work. Look upon this scene, contemplate this physical, intellectual and moral wreck, and then deny, if you can, that he who violates a physiological law must pay the penalty.

These are only illustrations. Almost innumerable are the ways in which we can sin against the body. Now, it is a religious duty to guard against these physiological sins. A failure to do so shortens life, and this is morally culpable. We are all ready to condemn in unmeasured terms the man who commits suicide with knife, pistol, or strychnine, or who shortens his days by a life of debauchery; but are these the only forms of self-destruction that merit condemnation? If your neighbor cuts short his earthly pilgrimage by dissipation, and you do the same by gluttony, have you not sinned as well as he? We mention gluttony merely as one form of physiological sin. There are many others whose effects are equally disastrous. Any course of conduct which is deleterious to health is to be avoided as tending to the destruction of the body.

But not only do physiological sins shorten life; they have other effects that are direful from a moral standpoint. They impair usefulness. Transgress some great physiological law, and thus bring on an enfeebled condition of the whole vital organism, and you vastly lessen your capacity to work for the Lord. There is frequently not only a physical, but also a mental incapacity growing out of physiological sin. If you doubt this, ask you morose, emaciated, cadaverous-looking dyspeptic whether he feels himself as competent a laborer in the gospel vineyard now as he was when in perfect health. In health he was cheerful, buoyant in spirit; now even apparent cheerfulness is a task beyond his powers. Once it required no effort to manifest the grace of patience; now this is almost an impossibility. These are only samples of the moral effects of ill-health. Many Christian duties are performed with far less facility when the physical organism is out of repair. Domestic discord often has its origin in a torpid liver, or a diseased condition of the digestive organs.

Much more might be said, but "a word to the wise is sufficient." Enough has been said to establish the fact that Christian ethics has to do with bodily conditions. Physic may be a means of grace, and sleep, diet and exercise not less needful than prayer. Whatever impairs the efficiency of the physical organism, or lowers the tone of the vital forces, must be avoided. We should steadily aim at the greatest possible physical perfection. This should be done, however, with a proper motive. We should do this, not in order that we may win fame, or gold, as do the pugilist and the acrobat, or to feed the flames of a silly vanity, after the manner of a society belle, but in order that we may more efficiently serve God by serving humanity.

Uncle Sam at the Rear End of the Procession.

Within the last few weeks the Times-Democrat has had a number of able editorials advocating governmental control of the telegraph. These articles have been an eye-opener to multitudes of people. The theory that this policy is unconstitutional, or that it is contrary to the genius of a republican government, has been completely exploded. The Times-Democrat shows that all the nations of the earth, republican as well as monarchical, with the exception of the United States and three or four small governments, make the telegraph a part of the postal system. Seventy-five nations, including all the great powers except the United States, control the telegraph just as they do the mails. In these nations telegraph facilities are not confined to the principal towns, as in this country, but are as widely diffused as are mail facilities. In other words, every postoffice in city or country is also a telegraph office. The service in these countries is far more efficient than here, and the cost is from four to eight times less. Just think of it! A message for which a citizen of the United States pays $1 can be sent in other countries at from twelve and a half to twenty-five cents. We predict that this question will soon become a leading question in national politics. Furthermore, we believe that there can be but one result of a contest of this sort. The people of the United States will not continue to pay from four to eight times as much for poor service as other people do for efficient service. A fourfold reduction in telegraph rates would increase the volume of telegraph business almost immensely, and the diffusion of telegraph facilities so as to make them co-extensive with mail facilities would contribute to the same end. The Times Democrat is fighting a good fight, and will receive the plaudits of thinking people.

To win friends we must be friendly. We have often noticed the promptness with which men respond to manifestations of interest. Love begets love, and he who bears himself gently towards others may expect an adequate return. It must be a hard, cold heart which remains unmoved forever. To isolate one's self from society and to assume a repellent air is to cut one's communications with his fellows. Friendship, neighborness, hospitality beget similar conditions. The Scripture teaches a deep truth when it says: "For with what measure you mete withal it shall be measured to you again."—Texas Advocate.

At the recent annual meeting of the M. E. Church, Bishop Foss said: "A few years ago we thought Bishop Thoburn was speaking wildly when he predicted that the number of converts in India would soon number 10,000 a year. Now we find the prediction has been more than fulfilled, and 18,000 were reported in ten months. With such a wonderful increase in this mission and its results, shall we," he asked, "cut down the means of its support, or even fail to increase them?"

Less of the theory of sanctification, and more of the genuine article, is what the times demand. Pulpit, press and platform are full of "the second blessing," "the higher life," "perfectionism," "Holy Ghostmen," "the infilling of the Spirit," and other forms of special goodness, but the church and the world are calling for men and women whose words, spirit and deeds attest a regenerated soul and a Christ-life.—Selected.

Several experts in life insurance have lately declared, as the results of investigation, that habitual beer drinkers are bad risks for insurance. Dr. Berusacki says that the mortality of brewers after forty years of age is very much higher than the average. Self-interest ought to restrain men from fixing on themselves a habit which is demonstrated to be a shortener of life.—Presbyterian.

NOTES.

The address of Rev. J. M. Cowan is Jackson, Miss.

There are 208 women practicing law in the United States.

Rev. B. F. Lewis, of Woodville, has been on a visit to Dr. Otkin, of McComb City.

Rev. H. W. Knickerbocker and family are summering at Seashore Camp Ground.

We are pleased to learn that Sister J. A. B. Jones has been entirely restored to health.

Dr. J. T. Sawyer preached a strong, practical and edifying sermon, Sunday morning, at Dryades Street.

The Topisaw Camp Meeting begins Aug. 8. Revs. J. T. Nicholson and I. W. Cooper have been invited to attend the meeting.

We congratulate our readers upon the privilege of reading a letter from far off Alaska written by a pen so bright and graceful as that of Miss Belle Kearney.

We are much gratified to learn that Rev. J. A. Bowen's health is much improved. He expects to be able to resume his work by the first of September.

Just as we went to press news was received of the death of Mr. John Fletcher Eucche, at his home near Crystal Springs, Miss. A suitable memoir will appear in due time.

We had the pleasure of meeting Rev. C. T. Munholland, of the Louisiana Conference, a few days since. He has been visiting relatives in the city, but has returned to his charge on the coast.

From a private letter from Rev. G. W. Bachman we are glad to learn that he and Bro. McIntosh have had a very successful tent-meeting at Pittsboro, Miss. Bro. McIntosh will move his tent this week to Slate Springs.

We regret to learn that Rev. H. P. Gibbs, of the North Mississippi Conference, has been for some time confined to his bed with fever. Many earnest prayers will go up for the prolongation of his valuable life and ministry.

We are pleased to learn that Rev. T. W. Adams, who has recently been on the sick list, is now convalescent. His flock are to be congratulated, as they miss much when they miss his able ministrations in the pulpit and his genial, helpful visits in the home.

Rev. W. M. Williams writes from Gallman, Miss: "We have just closed a very gracious revival at Bethesda. There were a great many conversions in the church and out. Sixteen joined. Bro. H. A. Gatlin did the preaching. We were much pleased with him."

A glorious meeting has just closed at Tranquil Church, Jackson district. There were many conversions and twenty-five accessions to the Methodist Church, and several expressed a desire to join other churches. The membership was greatly revived. Rev. I. W. Cooper assisted the pastor.

We are pleased to learn that the prospects of Whitworth College for the next session are very fine. About a hundred boarders are already enrolled, and the number is steadily increasing. The faculty for the ensuing session is said to be equal to any the college has ever had, and this is saying a great deal.

We invite special attention to the ad. of President J. W. Chambers, headed "Positions Wanted." Boards of Trustees and others who need the services of competent teachers should correspond with Bro. Chambers. Most of these teachers are Methodist, but a few of them are of other denominations. They are recommended as thoroughly competent for the positions to which they aspire.

We have received several communications unaccompanied by any name. One is "Pastoral Visiting: Its Duty, Difficulties and Benefits." Another has no title, but treats of the Epworth League. Another bears the title, "Why Did the Church Make the Sunday-school a Part of Its Machinery?" None of these will be published until we know the names of the authors. The names may, of course, be withheld from the public.

Speaking of Jean Ingelow, whose death was announced quite recently, the Pittsburg Advocate says:

The songs she sung pleased the fancy and touched the hearts of multitudes of people. They loved the tender lines full of the genius of poetry. To specify would be impossible within these limits. Her prose writings, too, had many readers, but her chief reputation must rest on her poetical productions. Every line she wrote of either was pure and helpful, and of good religious influence.

We had the pleasure of meeting a few days since Rev. J. E. Green, of the Texas Conference, now stationed at LaGrange. He was on his way home from the great Toronto gathering, which he enjoyed immensely. He visited Quebec and a number of other places in the Dominion, and was delighted with his trip. Before going home he will spend a week assisting Bro. M. H. Moore in revival work at Bethel Camp Meeting.

We were pleased to meet Bro. and Sister S. B. Beall in the city last week. They were en route to Crystal Springs, where they will spend the month of August, the good people of Abbeville having given him a vacation for that length of time. Sister Beall's health is somewhat impaired, but we do not doubt that by a month's sojourn in that salubrious region she will be completely restored. Bro. Beall has had a prosperous pastorate this year. He promises a report from his charge in the near future.

The report that Bishop Keener will ask to be superannuated at the next General Conference is not correct. He will place himself in the hands of the proper committee to be disposed of as they deem best; but this is a very different thing from asking to be superannuated. Unless a very great change in his sanitary condition should take place between now and then, we do not believe that he will be superannuated. He is remarkably vigorous for a man of his years, and is able to do the work assigned him thoroughly and efficiently. That his mental vigor is unimpaired will not be questioned by anyone who reads his masterly article in the last number of the Review. His pulpit work (and he preaches often) evinces not only mental vigor, but a freshness of thought very rarely exhibited by a man of his years. Few men even in middle life read so many new books, and keep so thoroughly abreast of the thought of the day.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

DOMESTIC.

The State University of Alabama has decided in favor of co-education.

President McKinley, who is taking a vacation, attended church in Plattsburg, N. Y., on last Sunday. The handsome Methodist - Episcopal Church was crowded.

There never were such bountiful crops in Texas as are being garnered this season. There is more wheat, corn, oats and fruit than ever before, and the cotton promises to beat all records.

The United States Alaskan Gold Company, with a capital of $1,000,000, was incorporated in Trenton, N. J., by filing of articles for the purpose of mining gold in the Klondyke fields.

Mr. Ling Fang, the new Chinese minister at Washington, is a member of the Episcopal Church, was educated in London, and made a member of the London bar in 1877. He has long been the legal adviser of Li Hung Chang.

It is announced that three of the four colored Presbytories in connection with the Southern Presbyterian Church have made a call for a convention to organize a Colored Presbyterian Church. The convention is to meet in Nashville, Tenn.

The West Mississippi Fair Association, at Vicksburg, will make a feature of the press exhibit at its fair this Fall. Space will be devoted to displaying the headings of all the journals published in Mississippi and Louisiana, and each paper will be invited also to send copies for distribution.

The steamer "Queen," which arrived from Alaska, has brought word that the mounted police of the northwest territory are meeting all people bound for the Yukon country at the British line and compelling all who have not a year's supply of provisions to return to the coast.

A destructive fire broke out in the roundhouse of the Western railroad at Montgomery, Ala., July 31, and in less than an hour was a complete wreck. The roundhouse was full of engines, having gone into their stalls for the night. It is said eleven engines were destroyed, some of them the finest on the road. The machine shop attached to the roundhouse is a complete wreck.

The coal mine operators of Alabama are doing the biggest business for several years, partly because of the general resumption of work by many factories and mills, and partly because of the strike in the North. The Mobile and Ohio road and the Illinois Central railroad have been compelled, since the strike, to look to Alabama for a large share of their coal supply; and are now receiving big consignments from the State.

According to recent advices from London, the British government has at length consented to send representatives to a conference on the subject of the preservation of the fur seals. A conference will take place at Washington in October, at which Great Britain, Canada, Japan, Russia and the United States will be represented. It is expected that this meeting will devise some permanent plan of protecting the seals and establish certain rules governing the annual catch which shall be binding in all the waters frequented by the seal herds.

FOREIGN.

It is announced that the British government has denounced the commercial treaties existing with Germany and Belgium.

Andrew Carnegie has offered the town of Stirling, the seat of the palace and parliament built by James V., the sum of £6,000 for a public library building.

The British government has serious trouble on its hands in its Indian Empire, and, unless prompt repressive measures are taken, it is feared that disastrous results may follow. There is a revolt in progress in the northwestern part of the empire, in what is known as the Chitral district. At present there are about 50,000 tribesmen in revolt, led by a religious madman.

There has been in session in Brussels a congress to consider the Sunday question. Among its conclusions is one to the effect that there are few industries in the country to which the principle of Sunday rest can not be practically applied. It has, therefore, decided that the different administrations, especially of the railroads, be approached with a view to securing the largest measure possible of Sunday rest for all engaged in transport service.

The treaty between Greece and Turkey provides for the rectification of the frontier in accordance with the plans of the European military attaches, so modified as to allow Turkey a small strip of Grecian territory. The indemnity is fixed at four million Turkish pounds, and in addition Turkish subjects are to be indemnified for the losses incurred through the war, the amount of the indemnity to be fixed by a mixed commission. The question of the capitulations is left for final determination to Turkey and Greece.

This "Kings of the Platform and Pulpit" gives the wisdom, wit and theology of a whole nation for a century. It is full of our best Southern humor, and every family in my south country will be happier and wiser with it. It is the last book in my library that I would part with.

BENJAMIN HARRISON.
(Ex-President of the United States.)

I want to thank somebody for sending me "Kings of the Platform and Pulpit." I hope many copies will be printed and circulated, for I expect to receive a good deal of comfort and pleasure out of it myself; and I want everyone to be as happy as I am.

WADE HAMPTON.
(Ex-Senator from South Carolina.)

I read "Kings of the Platform and Pulpit" with as great pleasure as Fitzhugh Lee. It is a bright, agreeable and interesting book.

Harris' Business College.

A business education is a necessity, and one who enters upon the duties of life without its guiding influence has all the chances of success against him. We know of no better place for young men and ladies to go for such a training than to that wonderfully progressive institution, Harris' Practical Business College, Jackson, Miss. It is doing more for the worthy, struggling boys and girls than any other business college. Nineteen of its students recently secured good positions in three weeks.—Jackson Evening News.

While commenting on the alleged poverty-stricken condition of Ireland, the secretary of the United Kingdom Alliance points out that one brewery alone there distributed nearly $3,500,000 as a year's profits.—Guide to Holiness.

Randolph-Macon Schools and Colleges.

Year by year a large number of boys and girls, young men and young ladies, go out of our State to various schools and colleges north of us. We will not now stop to discuss the reason, but simply state the fact. Sometimes they make grievous mistakes, misled as they are by captivating advertisement. We feel perfectly safe in endorsing the conservative sentence of Dr. R. J. Bigham, General Secretary of Education, after a trip to Virginia to inspect the unique and notable system of schools and colleges established by the Randolph-Macon Board. Says he: "Any parent proposing to send a son or daughter to Virginia for higher education would, in my judgment, make a serious mistake should he not send to President W. W. Smith, at Lynchburg, Va., for the catalogue of the Randolph-Macon Schools and Colleges."

HOME.

"Home's not merely four square walls,
Though with pictures hung and gilded;
Home is where affection calls,
Filled with shrines the heart hath builded.
Home! Go watch the faithful dove,
Sailing 'neath the heaven above us;
Home is where there is one to love.
Home is where there is one to love us.

"Home's not merely roof and room;
It needs something to endear it;
Home is where the heart can bloom,
Where there's some kind lip to cheer it.
What is home with none to meet,
None to welcome, none to greet us?
Home is sweet—and only sweet—
When there's one we love to meet us."

"No Such Sneak."

A gentleman hailed a bootblack for a shine. The lad came rather slowly for one of that lively gnild, and before he could get his brushes out another larger boy ran up and pushed him aside, saying, "Here, you go sit down, Jimmy!" The gentleman was indignant at what he deemed a piece of outrageous bullying, and sharply told the new comer to clear out.

"O, that's all right, boss," was the reply, "I'm only goin' to do it fur him; you see, he's been sick in the hospital for mor'n a month, and can't do much work yet, so us boys all turn in and give him a lift when we can."

"Is that so, Jimmy?" the gentleman asked.

"Yes, sir," wearily replied the boy; and as he looked up, the pallid, pinched face could be discerned even through the grime that covered it. "He does it fur me, if you'll let him."

"Certainly; go ahead," and as the bootblack plied the brush the gentleman plied him with questions.

"You say all the boys help him in this way?"

"Yes, sir. When they ain't got no job themselves, and Jimmy gets one, they turns in and helps him, 'cause he ain't very strong yet, ye see."

"What percentage do you charge him on a job?"

"Hey?" queried the youngster, "I don't know what you mean."

"I mean, what part of the money do you give Jimmy, and how much do you keep out of it?"

"You bet I don't keep none; I ain't no such sneak as that."

"So you give it all to him, do you?"

"Yes, I do. All the boys give up what they gets on his job. I'd like to catch any feller sneaking it on a sick boy, I would."

The shine being completed, the gentleman handed the urchin 6d., saying: "I think you're a pretty good fellow; so you keep half and give the rest to Jimmy here."

"Can't do it, sir; it's his customer. Here, Jim." He threw him the coin, and was off like a shot after a customer of his own. Without knowing it, he had preached a good sermon from the text, "Let brotherly love continue."—Southern Standard.

Taking Thought in Time.

One of the delusions of the transgressor is the fancy, not always clearly defined, but nevertheless underlying the operations of his mind, that he can sin "a little bit" without harm; that he can take a step across the boundary line between right and wrong and not be taken captive in the enemy's country; that he can easily and quickly recover himself, and escape penalty; that, in brief, he can enjoy "the pleasures of sin for a season," and speedily face about, and find all things as they were before his transgression. He ignores the fact that frequently a single sin brings ineffaceable disgrace, involves a man in a maze of trouble, leads to consequences which are full of grief and remorse. The story of the Prodigal Son, picturing him in his downward bent, falling step by step into deeper degradation and bondage, is fraught with warning just here. "Obsta principiis" was the favorite motto of an old Latin writer; that is, "beware of beginnings;" be careful concerning the first step. On the verge of a deep pit, or at the top of a steep and icy descent one misstep may be fatal. After a sin has been done not even the Almighty, with his pardoning grace, can make things as they were before the law breaking act. A shrewd headliner the other day packed much wisdom in his announcement of the overwhelming sorrow of an embezzler, when he described it as "Ex post facto grief." The time to consider the guilt and folly and danger of a sin is in advance of the act. Due and prayerful consideration then will prevent the transgression.

The Things That Are Lovely.

Some very earnest young Christians make a mistake in putting too light a value upon those graces of manner and little courtesies of speech and conduct which might commend their excellent qualities to others, and give them the vantage ground of personal influence. If a merchant has diamonds to sell he does not shut them up in a drawer nor display them in a rough box. He does not say: "Nothing can add to the value of a diamond, and I will not condescend to any tricks to catch admiration or draw customers. If a man really wishes to buy, he will come to me."

What he does is to put his jewels upon beds of satin, in cases of velvet; to use every art to display their beauty. He knows very well that people who have never thought seriously of buying may be attracted by the beauty that catches the eye and arrests the attention.

Your Christian principles ought to be rendered so attractive by your personality that those who know you will associate goodness with graciousness. —Emily Huntington Miller.

For Over Fifty Years

MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP has been used for children teething. It soothes the child, softens the gums, allays all pain, cures wind colic, and is the best remedy for Diarrhœa. Twenty-five cents a bottle.

Dr. Chauncey M. Depew, president of the New York Central railroad, says: "A considerable proportion of failures in business, and 90 per cent. of the defalcations and thefts and ruin of youth among people who are employed in places of trust, are due directly to gambling. I have seen in my vast employment so much misery from the head of the family neglecting its support and squandering his earnings in the lottery or policy shop, and promising young men led astray in a small way and finally becoming fugitives or landing in the criminal dock, that I have come to believe that the community which licenses and tolerates public gambling can not have prosperity in business, religion in its churches, or morality among its people."

Here comes our old friend, Dr. Theodore L. Cuyler, with a story. In telling it he quotes a Southern slave of the old times, who replied to one who said: "I hope your master has gone to heaven," with the very wise remark: "I's afraid he has not gone dar, fur I neber heard him speak of dat. When he goes to de Norf, or to Virginny Springs, he allus be gittin' ready fur weeks. I neber see him gettin' ready fur goin' to heben." Doubtless that darkey was right. Anyway, there are plenty of people who never seem to have time to get ready for the last long journey.

The other day a man applied to us to officiate at the funeral of his wife. He stated incidentally that he did not know she was a member of our church until informed of it by a third party after his wife's decease. It is remarkable how successful some people are in concealing their religion even from their nearest relatives. We wonder what sort of religion it will look like when the Light from the Throne blazes upon it.—Southern Christian Advocate.

Let us take short views. Let us not climb the high wall till we get to it, or fight the battle till it opens, or shed tears over sorrows that may never come, or lose the joys and blessings that we have by the sinful fear that God will take them away from us. We need all our strength and all the grace God can give us for to-day's burdens and to-day's battle. To-morrow belongs to our heavenly Father.—Theodore L. Cuyler, D D.

How to Find Out

Fill a bottle or common glass with your water and let it stand twenty-four hours; a sediment or settling indicates an unhealthy condition of the kidneys; if it stains your linen, it is evidence of kidney trouble; too frequent desire to pass it or pain in the back is also convincing proof that the kidneys and bladder are out of order.

WHAT TO DO.

There is comfort in the knowledge so often expressed, that Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney remedy, fulfills every wish in relieving pain in the back, kidneys, liver, bladder and every part of the urinary passages. It corrects inability to hold urine and scalding pain in passing it, or bad effects following use of liquor, wine or beer, and overcomes that unpleasant necessity of being compelled to get up many times during the night to urinate. The mild and the extraordinary effect of Swamp-Root is soon realized. It stands the highest for its wonderful cures of the most distressing cases. If you need a medicine, you should have the best. Sold by druggists; price, fifty cents and one dollar. You may have a sample bottle and pamphlet both sent free by mail. Mention the CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE and send your address to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. The publisher of this paper guarantees the genuineness of this offer.

BOARDING DEPARTMENT.

Pupils boarding in the College have the personal attention of the President and his wife, who, together with the teachers, strive to make their stay while here as pleasant and profitable as possible.

An abundance of substantial food is furnished; ample time given at each meal for everyone to be satisfied, and President's family, teachers and pupils all fare alike. Special attention is paid to their manners and morals at all times, and every effort is made to impress them with the necessity of constant growth, physically, mentally and morally.

We board at $11.00 per month where they take their meals regularly at the table; extra charge when the meals are carried to their rooms, and extra servant hire. This includes pupils and teachers.

No incidental fee is charged unless something is destroyed, and in this case the cost of the article is charged to the party who destroys it.

BEAUTY IS WEALTH.

Beauty is as essential to a woman as any other quality, with beauty of form and feature comes beauty of mind and character. Physical beauty is a rounded form, the brightly tinted cheek, the vivacious eye, a certain ease and grace of manner, which indicates a superabundance of physical strength. Very few women possess these qualities, but very many more might possess them who do not. If you feel that you are losing vitality, losing your beauty losing your strength, if you feel that your face which once was plump and rosy, is becoming thin and sallow, that wrinkles (which are the terror to all pretty women) are beginning to appear, take our advice and try that greatest of discoveries the "MASSAGE FACE CUP," which is the only means known to enlarge to convert a thin and sallow expression into a plump and rosy face. It will transform a face with pleis or homely features into an expression of grace and beauty. Physiology teaches us that if we would be strong, we must exercise the muscles which need the developing. Exercise causes the blood to rush to that part of the body called into action, the muscle is fed and strengthened by the fresh blood and will, therefore, develop.

The Massage Cup will do for the face, when properly applied, by contracting and relaxing the muscles, what exercise will do for the other parts of the body.

If you would have a pinkish complexion, if you would like a face plump and rosy, if you would like to remove that "horrid" wrinkle, send One Dollar to us and we will mail you the great "MASSAGE FACE CUP," with full directions for its use. Remember, you can have your money back, if you say so.

OBITUARIES.

MATTHEWS—We come with sad hearts to chronicle the death of JAMES MEREDITH MATTHEWS, son of the late John R. Matthews and Mrs. Polly Newell Matthews, who was born in Copiah county, Miss., Feb. 16, 1846; married Mrs. Louvinia Berlow McLaurin in October, 1865, by Rev. Wm. East, and died in Washington City, June 12, 1897. His brother, Mr. R. I. Matthews, and his only son, John R. Matthews, were with him, and the latter accompanied his father's remains to Hazlehurst, Miss., where he was interred in the family cemetery.

He was a devoted husband and father. He reared successfully two stepchildren: Dr. Hugh McLaurin, of Brandywine, Miss., and Mrs. Mattie Hollingsworth, of Wesson. His adopted son, John Jones, made an orphan by the cyclone at Beauregard, Miss., mourns the death of this loving parent and benefactor. These members of his family are all grown. All are members of the church and useful citizens in the community where they live. His sympathies, though unostrusive, were broad and deep; but his best thoughts, his best efforts, were given to those within his home. He was the preacher's friend, and with his devoted wife dispensed a generous hospitality, and nothing delighted them more than to entertain a company of ministers. He had joined the church, but had not been received into full connection. He loved to hear the voice of prayer at family worship in his home, and strictly observed the kneeling posture when he prayed. In conversation with Rev. J. B. Downer, Rev. Mr. Purser, and Brown, he testified to the religion of Jesus and of his hope of eternal life. He had faith in God and was not afraid to die. He never failed in loyalty or fidelity to the interests of the church, and this writer, with other pastors, remember his unselfish liberality. He had been ailing for some months. All that a loving wife and devoted children could do was done for him, and they hoped for the best results. It is hard to realize that the devoted husband, father and brother should have fallen forever. He had gone in company with his son, John R. Matthews, to Washington on business. Had been there only a few days. Great was the shock to his family and to the community where he lived when the announcement was made of his demise. Funeral services conducted by Rev. Mr. Purser, attended by the sorrowing relatives and friends. The legacy of Christ to his sorrowing disciples will be precious to these stricken friends: "I will never leave you nor forsake you;" "Lo, I am with you alway, even unto death."

This brief sketch is the heartfelt tribute of love by his former pastor and grateful friend,

WM. HOOVER.

Myrtle Place, Pike county, Miss.

ASHLEY—Just as the clock struck three on Wednesday morning, June 23, the spirit of Aunt JANE ASHLEY took its everlasting flight home to the One who gave it. She joined the M. E. Church, South, about thirty-eight or thirty-nine years ago, and was happily converted under the ministry of Rev. E. A. Flowers at old Hopewell Church, on North Williamson charge, in which she lived a consistent Christian life ever since. She was eighty-three years five months and eleven days old. She had been married three times. Her first two husbands only lived a short time, and she married J. D. Ashley, and they two lived together fifty years in a peaceful, happy, quiet life. It has been said of her she was a wife indeed and in truth, always standing by her husband's side in every circumstance of life. She loved the church and its hallowed influence. She was never ashamed to confess her Savior in any congregation by shouting the praises of God. She was only sick but a few days when the summons came to come up higher. She told her husband she was going to sleep in Jesus. As long as she had strength on her bed she rang her hands and praised her God.

When through the deep waters I call thee to go,
The rivers of woe shall not thee overflow,
For I will be with thee, thy troubles to bless,
And sanctify to thee thy deepest distress.
Even down to old age all my people shall prove
My sovereign, eternal, unchangeable love;
And when hoary hairs shall their temples adorn,
Like lambs they shall still in my bosom be borne.

The last Christian act of her life was to raise two orphan children—one boy and one girl. She leaves a husband and four children of her own to grieve her loss, but their loss is her eternal gain. Grieve not, dear loved ones, but look up. Aunt Jane stands at the beautiful gate to welcome thee home.

H. W. DAY, L. P.

ROGERS—JAMES P. ROGERS was born in Limestone county, Ala., May 16, 1819, and died at his home in Richland, Miss., June 28, 1897. In 1840 Bro. Rogers moved to Mississippi. He was fond of sports, and soon caught the spirit of the wild West, and conformed to her ways. Soon after coming to Mississippi he was married to Mrs. Louisa Cotton, who lived but a few years. Two children blessed this union. He was again married to Miss Martha E. Smith in 1849, and to them were born six children. He professed religion and joined the M. E. Church, South, in 1851, and remained a member of the same to his death.

Bro. Rogers was sick but little in life. Last Winter he became a sufferer from rheumatism, and never fully recovered. From the first he spoke oftener of dying than of getting well. A few days before his death he had another attack, after which he gave himself up to prayer, reading, and religious thought. He was never an active Christian. The past gave him much concern during his last sickness. A few days before his death, after talking with him, I read to him the fourteenth chapter of St. John's Gospel, and prayed with him. He expressed himself satisfied as to the future, but regretted the past. He leaves a wife and four children and several grandchildren to mourn his death. May God bless them all till they meet him who is "Asleep in Jesus, blessed sleep,

From which none ever wake to weep."

JORDAN—Mrs. FRANK JORDAN (nee Etta Lundy) died June 28, 1897. She was happily married to Mr. Frank Jordan fifteen years ago. Four children bless this happy union. She was thirty-three years of age. She was converted when quite young; connected herself with the M. E. Church, South, and ever afterward lived a faithful, consistent life. She "kept her tongue from evil and her lips from speaking guile." She was a woman of most excellent character. "She looked well to the ways of her household, and ate not the bread of idleness," and her presence was a benediction to her friends.

Oh, how mama and papa, brothers and sisters, will miss her annual visit from Kentucky, where she moved with her husband when first married.

She died near Lexington, Miss., the home of her birth. The influence of her life will live forever. The merciful visit, the friendly word, the look of sympathy, will never be forgotten. In the sick-room she seemed like an angel sent down from heaven to comfort the afflicted. She was a dutiful daughter, affectionate sister, a devoted wife, a fond mother, a sincere friend. May God bless and sustain the bereaved ones, and save them, an unbroken family, around his throne in heaven!

ALICE PORTER.

FULLILOVE—ASBURY B. FULLILOVE was born in Autaugaville, Ala., Nov. 29, 1812, and at the age of three years his parents moved to Carroll county, Miss., where he spent the remainder of his days. He was happily married to Felicitas Bryan, March 29, 1864; joined the M. E. Church, South, in 1866, and died Jan. 23, 1897.

A good man, citizen and neighbor has passed away, known and loved by all. In the busy world, where most men make enemies, he made friends. The mere mention of his name aroused pleasant emotions, evoked no criticisms or harsh remarks, but was a rebuke to evil. To his pastor his "name was as ointment poured forth." Honest to the letter, who had "rather swear to his own hurt" than damage his neighbor.

For years he suffered intensely, and the last months of his life the greatest sufferer I ever saw. In the midst of it all hopeful of recovery and of heaven, should the disease terminate fatally. One of our best and noblest citizens has "fallen on sleep." We miss him; we give him up reluctantly, but hopefully. Those who knew him best feel sure of his rich reward. His sorrowing wife, sister and two brothers mourn his loss, yet "not as those who have no hope."

J. F. EVANS.

GENTRY—NATHANIAL GENTRY departed this life June 29, 1897, at 8 A. M., aged about eighty-five years.

Bro. Gentry was born in South Carolina, and joined the M. E. Church, South, at a count seventeen years of age, since which time he has been an acceptable and faithful member. His age is not definitely known, as he was an orphan. He moved to Alabama, and in 1843 married a Miss Stephens, who bore him nine children, four of whom still survive him. His wife preceded him to the kingdom many years ago. From Alabama he moved to Mississippi, where he lived four years in Clarke county, near Quitman. From Mississippi he moved to Louisiana, where he remained until death released him from all pain. We laid him to rest in the graveyard at Liberty Chapel, Grant parish, La., June 30, 1897.

He had filled nearly every office in the church save that of preacher. One of his favorite hymns was 601, "Why should we start and fear to die?" He was fully ripe for the kingdom, and left the testimony that all was well. Farewell till we meet above.

A. C. FLOWERS, P. C.

WYSE—J. H. WYSE died at his home near Pickens, Miss., March 2, 1897, after an illness of a few days.

Bro. Wyse had been a consistent member of the M. E. Church, South, many years. He was a good citizen and neighbor, a devoted husband, and indulgent father. A good man has gone to his reward. He leaves a wife and a daughter, one brother and two sisters to mourn his death. The Lord comfort those who sorrow.

The Holman Self-Pronouncing S. S. Teacher's Bible.

Divinity Circuit, Round Corners, etc.

CONTAINS THE FOLLOWING HELPS TO THE STUDY OF THE BIBLE.

Concordance, with Contexts, over 40,000 References; Index to Persons, Places and Subjects, 16,000 References; Scripture Atlas, with Index; Glossary of Bible Words; Bible Calendar; Summary and Analyses of the Old and New Testaments.

A Self-Pronouncing Dictionary of Proper Names and Foreign Words contained in the Bible, comprising about 3,500 words, giving the pronunciation, the meaning, and the location of the text where the word occurs for the first time.

Exhaustive Articles on Biblical History, Geography, Topography, Natural History, Ethnology, Botany, Chronology, Music and Poetry; a Complete Harmony of the Gospels, Tables of Parables, Miracles, Prophecies, Prayers, Money, Weights and Measures, Jewish Sects and Orders, etc.

TWELVE FULL-PAGE MAPS IN COLORS.

Every proper name in the text is syllabified and accented, and has the vowels marked according to the most authoritative modern standards of pronunciation. The text is in exact conformity with that of the world-famous Oxford S. S. Teacher's Bible. All the valuable "Helps to the Study of the Bible" contained in the Oxford Bible are retained.

The only Teacher's Bible with a self-pronouncing text. No similar Bible was ever obtainable heretofore; in fact, no publishers ever attempted its publication.

"The essence of fifty expensive volumes, by men of sacred learning, is condensed in these 'Helps.'"

The large-type (Bourgeois) edition sells to persons who are not subscribers for $5. Our subscribers get it, on conditions specified below, for $2.35. The same Bible in Minion type, which is somewhat smaller than Bourgeois, we offer to our subscribers, on conditions named below, for $1.55. To those who are not subscribers we sell it at $3.15. We also handle an edition in still smaller type (Emerald). Our subscribers get this for $1.00.

In order to get anyone of these at these rates it is necessary to pay your subscription one year in advance, viz., to August, '98. (A little later it will be September, '98.)

For twenty cents we will have your name engraved in gilt letters on the outside of the book.

Camp Meetings.

The second annual camp meeting at the South Mississippi Holiness Camp Ground will commence Oct. 8, 1897, and run ten days. This camp ground is located within one hundred and fifty yards of the Gulf and Ship Island railroad, in the midst of a thick pine forest, with a large campus of high ground; seventy-five miles from Hattiesburg, and twenty-five miles from Gulf Port; near McHenry, Miss.

The meeting will be under control of the Board of Managers, who will control it according to the rules set forth in the charter. The meeting is for the conviction and conversion of the sinner, and sanctification of believer, and is Methodistic in doctrine. Rev. W. W. Hopper, Mrs. Mary McGee Hall, and Rev. L. C. Hall and others will do the preaching. The singing will be led by a competent singer and an organist.

This camp ground is run on the self-sustaining plan. Sufficient hotels and sleeping-tents, both for ladies and gentlemen, at a very small cost, to accommodate all who may come. Ministers of the gospel and other Christian workers will be boarded free. Let all come praying. The trustees and tenters are looking for a great meeting this year.

Cut rates have been secured from the Gulf and Ship Island railroad as follows: From Hattiesburg and points between and return, $1.50; from Gulf Port and all points between and return, $1. When the rates in effect are less, people will buy regular tickets. There will be sufficient trains to accommodate the people coming from each way. There will be hacks to meet all trains. The schedule of trains will be published later on in full.

Correspondence.

The Natchez District Conference.

The Natchez District Conference, which was held at Hamburg, Miss., July 28–30, inclusive, was the most enjoyable and spiritual District Conference it was ever our privilege to attend. The Conference met at four o'clock Wednesday afternoon, with Dr. W. L. C. Hunnicutt, P. E., in the chair. The Doctor makes a capital presiding officer, and lets no interest of the church be slighted. Under his efficient administration the district is moving on well. Rev. B. F. Lewis was elected secretary, with this scribe as assistant. All of the pastors were present except two. A goodly number of laymen were also in attendance. Some doubts had been expressed as to the ability of Hamburg to entertain a District Conference, but long before the session was over all such doubts were dissipated. The good people of this prosperous little village and of the surrounding country could have taken care of two ordinary District Conferences. Dinner was served on the grounds each day under a bush arbor erected for the purpose, and everybody was invited to partake, for the fare did not lack either in quantity or in quality. Large crowds were in attendance most of the time, and not a few listened with eager interest to the discussions and reports that were had. There is no question of the fact that, as a rule, the people in the country villages and in the small towns are much more appreciative of our Conferences than are those in the larger towns.

Rev. J. W. Chambers was on hand, and made an earnest speech in behalf of Whitworth College. We were glad to learn that he already has nearly a hundred boarders engaged for the coming session.

Millsaps College was well represented by the modest, but genial and scholarly Prof. R. S. Rickotts, who made mention, among other things, of a gracious revival that blessed the student-body just at the close of the late session, the news of which rejoiced us all.

The accomplished Miss Swanson, the newly elected principal of the Edward McGehee College at Woodville, was also in attendance, and made a short talk in behalf of her school. She made quite a favorable impression.

We were pleased to note the presence of Rev. W. M. Stevens, of Harriston, and of the saintly Rev. W. B. Hines, superannuate, who now resides at Gloster.

The preaching was done by Revs. M. M. Black, B. F. Lewis, J. W. Chambers, B. S. Rayner and T. B. Holloman. Bro. Rayner's sermon on "Christian Perfection" was clear and strong, and full of the spirit of love. It produced a profound impression, and, we think, pleased nearly everybody. Several altar services were held, and more than one penitent found Christ. There were four applications for church membership during the Conference, and the Hamburg Church received a great spiritual uplift.

Many charges in the district, notably the Fayette and Roxie circuits, have had revival meetings of much power and large results. The reports and discussions elicited the fact that in the bounds of the district there is much missionary territory, and the pastors nearest thereto were urged to do their utmost to supply the needy places with the gospel.

Only five Epworth Leagues were reported. Rev. T. B. Holloman, who has just returned from a trip to Toronto, gave us a glowing account of the great International Conference, and made us realize more than ever what a mighty movement the League is. The Conference requested that the paper on the Epworth League, read by the pastor from Gloster, be printed in the ADVOCATE.

An interesting report was read from Mrs. Robt. F. Reed, of Natchez, district secretary of the W. F. M. Society, stating that there are now in the district six adult auxiliaries and two juvenile societies, having a total of 98 adult members and 67 juveniles. Interest in this society, as well as in the Epworth League, is evidently growing, and the pastors were asked to give it their cordial support.

The cause of church extension was earnestly advocated by Bro. Holloman, who reminded the brethren that it would be useless to call on this Board for help in building churches and parsonages unless they bestirred themselves to bring up the church extension assessment in full as well as the others.

The NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE was heartily commended and the importance of increasing its circulation in the district was strongly stressed.

The most heated discussion of the Conference was that respecting the reliconsing of local preachers, several of whom were neither present in person nor sent up reports to the Conference of their labors. Several negative votes were cast against those who were reported as derelict in this and some other respects.

Following are the names of the local preachers who were re-licensed: Jas. M. Manchester, J. M. Griffing, G. A. Smith, H. W. Day, R. M. Cassels, and C. A. Hastings.

Following are the delegates elected to the Annual Conference: Thos. Sullivan, Rev. J. R. Whittington, D. F. Ashford, and H. B. McGehee; alternates: T. R. White and J. D. Ireland. The Conference adjourned Friday afternoon at 5:30 o'clock.

The next Conference will be held at Centerville.

We were delightfully entertained while at Hamburg in the home of Mr. and Mrs. R. A. Rawls, to whom we are indebted for many courtesies.

Epworth League Echoes.

BY REV. THOMAS B. CLIFFORD.

To undertake to write of the addresses delivered and papers read before the great Toronto "Convention" would consume more time than we have at our disposal, and occupy too much space in the columns of our ADVOCATE. In order that our readers may know, however, that the Southern delegation measured up to the standard, I quote from an article in this week's (New York) Independent, written by Rev. W. I. Haven, who is a member of the Epworth League Board of Control of the M. E. Church: "Bishop Fitzgerald, of the M. E. Church, South, was particularly happy in his response, hoping the Methodisms present would go from fraterulty to federation, from federation to unity, from unity to victory, and from victory to glory. American Methodism has seemed singularly one up here on Canadian soil. There has been a strong and able delegation from the South. One ought to add 'beautiful' as well to do the fair daughters of Virginia and Georgia and the other Southern States justice. Their speakers have been strong. Here the Stars and Stripes have belonged to both tunes, 'Yankee Doodle' and 'Dixie,' and all from the States have cheered alike, which ever tune was playing, when the red, white and blue was flying." A great impetus was given to the movements for missions and temperance.

The motto of the Canadian missionary workers is a good one, "All at it, and always at it, for life-long and world-wide service." Many excellent addresses were delivered on the subject of missions, prominent among which was that of Dr. Sutherland, that warm-hearted Canadian who is known to many of our Southern Methodists.

We heard Drs. D. H. Moore, W. B. Palmore and C. H. Payne on temperance. Their utterances were among the strongest we ever heard. The definition of "temperance" given by one of them was clear and strong, viz.: "Moderation in things necessary, total abstinence from all things hurtful." Many excellent things were said, and we noticed many sharpened pencils and note-books in the hands of many Leaguers being freely used to preserve these timely sayings and bear them hence. We shall hopefully look for a rich harvest as a result of the Toronto seed-sowing of July 15–18, 1897. At one of the services a public discussion of fifteen minutes was allowed following the papers read. The chairman of the meeting laid down a rule for the government of those who would participate. We give it for the benefit of every would-be speaker: "Stand up manfully, speak distinctly, sit down promptly."

The sunrise prayer meetings were seasons of profit and power. Your correspondent had the privilege of conducting one of these services, to which reference has already been made in a former issue of the ADVOCATE.

Sunday was a great day in Toronto. The pulpits of forty-seven churches were filled by preachers from all parts of the United States and Canada as per announcements hitherto made through the souvenir programme. The sermon at the Metropolitan Church, Sunday night, by Rev. Simpson Johnson, of Manchester, England, will not soon be forgotten by those fortunate enough to hear it. It was laden with rich thought, presented in a clear and forceful manner, and was in demonstration of the Spirit and of power. Following this sermon Rev. E. B. Ramsey, of Memphis, Tenn., spoke for fifteen minutes on the "Baptism of Power," and the whole service (and with it the Convention) was closed with a testimony meeting conducted by Revs. J. F. Berry and Manly S. Hard, of the M. E. Church.

It was our privilege and pleasure to fill the pulpit of the Clinton Street Methodist Church at eleven o'clock Sunday morning. At the conclusion of the service the attentive and appreciative congregation laid $20 upon the table as a free-will offering to our Orphans' Home "away down in the Southland." At an early day we will print in the ADVOCATE a cut of the Clinton Street Methodist Church, Toronto, Canada, whose members contributed to the furnishing of the Mississippi Orphans' Home of the M. E. Church, South.

Herewith I furnish some

ORPHANS' HOME NOTES.

Having been appointed agent of the Orphans' Home till Conference by Bishop Wilson, I was obliged to hurry home from Toronto in order to fill an engagement on the fourth Sunday in July at and take a collection for the Home. We found the pastor, Rev. R. O. Brown, in hearty sympathy with the work of the Home, and by his co-operation we were enabled to raise $60. From here we went to Batesville to interview a brother who had intimated that he might possibly give us a cow. He verified his promise, and the Home is now in possession of a full-blood Holstein cow, the gift of Bro. Kyle. Batesville had already given us a nice amount in cash in answer to an appeal we were permitted to make early in the year.

BINNSVILLE,

in Kemper county, the seat of the Meridian District Conference, was the next place visited, and through the kindness of Dr. C. G. Andrews, the presiding elder, and Rev. C. M. Crossley, the pastor, we were enabled to present the claims of the orphanage and secure funds to aid in the furnishing thereof.

EAST END, MERIDIAN, was the scene of our labors at eleven o'clock Sunday morning, Aug. 1. Bro. Galloway and his excellent people propose to raise as much as $50 or $60 to furnish a room. The name of Bro. T. C. Harmon, the efficient Sunday-school superintendent, ought to be mentioned in this connection for his special interest and help in this matter.

WEST END

responded to our appeal at the night service, and through the co-operation of the pastor, Bro. N. B. Harmon, and his good brother (D. S. Harmon), who is the diligent Sunday-school superintendent, the membership and Sunday-school subscribed material aid. The next place upon our list was whither we had been invited some months ago to assist in the services of the meeting now in progress. As most of our readers know, it is in Wilkinson county, about midway between Woodville and Centerville, and only four miles from the Louisiana line. It was our privilege to preach the first sermon of the present series of services. This is historic ground. The old brick church still stands near by the tabernacle. Here Winans, Drake and Tommie Owens preached the gospel of the Son of God, and the sainted Marvin on one occasion preached here a series of sermons with that power which always characterized his utterances. Bro. Green, of the Texas Conference, and who was for eight years stationed in Houston, is here, and preached this morning at eleven o'clock. He reminds me forcibly of my departed friend and brother, George S. Inge.

Being crowded with work last week, I failed to send my "Echoes," but have made up for it this week, as you have doubtless discovered. For fear I tax your patience, I will desist for the present.

Whitworth.

This institution had such a prosperous session and such a successful commencement occasion that we marveled at no write-up being sent to the ADVOCATE at the proper time.

A letter from President Chambers contains the following extracts from the Times-Democrat and Lincoln County Times, which we take pleasure in publishing:

"The A. B. course at Whitworth is one of the highest to be found anywhere. Misses Norgress, Guice and Penny have completed this course, while Misses Eitel, Galloway, Clanton, Dosh, Smith, Moore, Johnson and Webb have taken a thorough M. E. L. course. These are an exceedingly clever lot of girls, and President Chambers is justly proud of the class. Miss Mary Norgress, Patterson, La., carries off first honor, and Miss Linnie Guice, Oak Ridge, Miss., receives the second honor.

"For three years President Chambers has been demonstrating the fact that it is possible to sustain a college for women in the far South. His patronage has grown steadily. Every year has seen improvement in all departments, and the coming year promise a larger patronage and from a wider field.

"Whitworth, with her pure water, her bracing country air, her splendid faculty and curriculum, together with her Conservatory of Music and Art, celebrated throughout the Southwest, presents an almost irresistible attraction to the parent or guardian seeking a place where health conditions are good, and where the intellectual and religious standards are high."—Times-Democrat.

It is only right to add to the above that Miss Carrie Terry received the degree of Bachelor of Elocution.

The Lincoln County Times says: "The thirty-ninth commencement of Whitworth College, and the third under President Chambers' regime, closed yesterday, five days having been spent in the festivities. The entertainments given were truly intellectual feasts, and were enjoyed by larger crowds than usual. President Chambers' administration seems to be popular, as is shown by the patronage of his public entertainments, as well as by the growing attendance roll of the college.

"Dr. John T. Sawyer, of New Orleans, preach the baccalaureate sermon from Mark viii, 36: 'For what shall it profit a man if he shall gain the whole world and lose his own soul?' The discourse was polished, scholarly, a typical graduation sermon, and powerfully moved his hearers. Rev. W. W. Simmons (Mississippi Conference) preached before the Epworth League from Rom. xiv, 7, 'For none of us liveth to himself, and no one dieth to himself.' He gave a sturdy, searching sermon, showing the responsibility of everyone to kindred, friends, and society.

"The Art Levee, which was held from 10 to 4 o'clock on Monday, was particularly enjoyable this year. . . . The exhibit was the most creditable which has been given.

"The eyes of a connoisseur were not needed to see the advancement made during the year by the class in drawing, the display including drawings from objects and designs from leaves and flowers. President Chambers may well be proud of his Art Department.

"At 11 o'clock Monday, Misses Jones, Wroten and Chambers contested for the gold medal in elocution. Miss Wroten was awarded the medal. All did well. The Literary Societies of the college attracted the attention of the public on Monday night. The main feature was the debate on the subject, 'Resolved, That the nineteenth century is an age of literary degeneracy.' Able and instructive papers were read by all the debaters, and the telling points made by both sides were vigorously applauded. The judges decided in favor of the negative. At the close of the debate Dr. I. W. Cooper, Moss Point, Miss., delivered an address on 'True Character,' which proved highly practical and interesting. Dr. Cooper is an eloquent and pleasing speaker, who is ever welcome in Brookhaven. The Alumnæ Association had for its main features Miss Helen Pitkin, of New Orleans, and Prof. Louis Decker, the new director of the Conservatory of Music in Whitworth. Misses Hoskins and Searcy, and Mrs. Willoughby and Thompson, rendered select vocal solos and choice readings. Miss Pitkin's address was witty, pungent, and provoked much favorable comment. The new director of music, Prof. Louis Decker, gave two piano solos, Chopin's C Sharp Minor Polonaise and A Major Polonaise, and, in response to an encore, 'Traumerei,' by Schumann. His performance, which had been looked forward to with interest as giving an idea of the ability with which the Conservatory of Music will be conducted next year, was received with every evidence of appreciation by the enlightened audience. His subtle touch, correct technique and fullness of expression charmed his hearers.

"The grand concert on Tuesday night proved a musical feast. Brookhaven audiences are critical. They hear so much good music that they are satisfied with none but the best. However, satisfaction was complete on Tuesday night, if we may judge by the comments of the hearers. . . . The concert closed with 'Fantasies a la Japanaise,' an exceedingly pretty drill, which gave full play to the natural graces of the young ladies, and to those acquired under the tutelage of Miss Stevens.

"The commencement of '97 was a brilliant success from every point of view, and the outlook for the next session is bright for an increased attendance from a wider field. All friends of the college are proud of its achievements and of its prospects."

We have now pledged as boarders 100 pupils. There are prospects that we will reach 125 by the first of September.

Millsaps College.

MR. EDITOR: I have just come home from Toronto, Canada, after an absence of two weeks. I am greatly indebted to Prof. R. S. Ricketts for looking after my correspondence while I was away, and I herewith make acknowledgments.

The International Conference of Epworth Leagues was a great occasion. The attendance was estimated at 20,000. It was an enthusiastic gathering, and, I think, did great good in the way of creating a healthy sentiment in favor of aggressive methods of church work. I heard some very stirring addresses, but I thought they were singularly free from extravagances. Temperance, civic righteousness, and kindred topics were given a large degree of attention. Great prominence was given to missions and work generally among neglected classes. Toronto furnished a splendid object-lesson to the hosts from the United States of a large city supplying the very finest moral conditions.

It will be gratifying to the friends of

to know that the outlook for the coming session is encouraging for a large attendance of students. Just at this time the preachers of the two Mississippi Conferences can render the college invaluable service. Many boys and young man are hesitating; some are bewildered. They don't know what to do. I have just read a letter from a noble boy whose aspirations are great and laudable, but he is hampered by poverty. There are hundreds like him in our State. Please let them know that Millsaps College sympathizes with them, and holds out both hands to help them. We make provision by which young men go through an entire session on one hundred dollars, or less.

We are now making

about our college grounds and buildings. This will add greatly to the attractiveness and comfort of our surroundings, and give unsurpassed health conditions. The necessary cost of these improvements will enforce the importance of a full attendance of students. As we have no special agent in the field, it is to be hoped that our preachers will call attention to these things, and use all diligence to collect the full amount assessed by the Conferences for education.

I take this occasion to thank you, Mr. Editor, for your recent timely and forceful reference to our

LAW DEPARTMENT.

The interference, by representatives of the State University, with the proposed legislation affecting this department, was not only unreasonable, but I do not hesitate to say unwarrantable, and without precedent in the history of educational institutions. The State University has never been made the custodian of educational privileges; and against any such assumption we ought, on all fitting occasions, to enter our protest. The fact that all the members of our senior law class, and even some members of the junior class, passed examinations which were approved by the Supreme Judges, was not a matter of surprise to us. It only gave notice to the public of the high order of instruction given, and the superior advantages generally afforded. Our School of Law meets a demand on the part of young men who seek an opportunity to study at the State capital, where they can have facilities and come in touch with sources of influence which, in the nature of the case, they can not have elsewhere. Every patriotic citizen ought to encourage efforts to afford opportunities of this kind. The State University was not established to teach law. It would be a perversion of its vested funds to use them in maintaining a school of law. It has never been contemplated in our State that departments of professional instruction should be maintained otherwise than by tuition fees. So we rest on the same basis in this particular, and our friends may be assured that we will continue to offer the very finest advantages for instruction in this and in all other departments of our college work.

OUR CHRIST.

BY LUCY LARCOM.

In Christ I feel the heart of God
Throbbing from heaven through earth;
Life stirs again within the clod,
Renewed in beauteous birth.
The soul springs up, a flower of prayer,
Breathing his breath out on the air.

In Christ I touch the hand of God,
From his pure heights reached down,
By blessed ways before untrod
To lift us to our crown;
Victory that only perfect is Through loving sacrifice, like his.

Holding his hand, my steadied feet
May walk the air, the seas;
On life and death his smile falls sweet,
Lights up all mysteries;
Stranger nor exile can I be
In new worlds where he leadeth me.

Not my Christ only; he is ours;
Humanity's close bond.
Key to its vast, unopened powers,
Dream of our dreams beyond.
What yet we shall be none can tell;
Now we are his, and all is well.

Sunday Trains.

We are always delighted when any advancement is made in any line of Christian life, and most especially in that of the observance of the Sabbath. In its true observance there seems to be a convergence of all virtues and an assurance of all needed spiritual and temporal blessings, for God has said: "If thou turn away thy foot from the Sabbath, from doing thy pleasure on my holy day; and call the Sabbath a delight, the holy of the Lord, honorable; and shalt honor him, not doing thine own ways, nor finding thine own pleasure, nor speaking thine own words: then shalt thou delight thyself in the Lord; and I will cause thee to ride upon the high places of the earth, and feed thee with the heritage of Jacob thy father: for the mouth of the Lord hath spoken it." (Isa. lviii, 13, 14.)

How stimulating should this Scripture be to everyone who is doing the best he knows to keep God's day holy! It does not intimate in the least either that there ever was a time, or that there ever will be a time, when it will be necessary to profane the Sabbath in any respect. The commandment to "Remember the Sabbath day, to keep it holy," does not allow such a conclusion, and, therefore, if Bro. M. H. Moore gave a correct writing of the resolution passed by the Epworth League Conference, at Water Valley, we wonder why that important Conference intimated that it does become necessary at times to do so. That the resolution does imply such necessity is quite evident, for it is as follows: "We pledge ourselves not to travel on Sunday trains unless in cases of dire necessity." "Dire necessity" means that it does become necessary to ride on trains at times, and whenever it does it is dire necessity—that is, it is a hurtful necessity; that is, it is hurtful to the individual who does ride on Sunday trains from necessity. What logic! It is wrong and hurtful to ride on Sunday trains, but it becomes a dire necessity to do so at times, and, therefore, when it does become a dire necessity to do so, it is right to ride on Sunday trains. Bro. Moore himself says, "It is useless to stop here to prove that the running of trains on Sunday is at variance with the teachings of the Bible." That is, it is a conceded fact that the running of trains on Sunday is against the teachings of the Bible. This being true, we should like to know how, or by what authority, have we the right to disregard the teachings of the Bible and do that which we know is against its teachings?

Will anyone accuse God of requiring us to do what he knows we can not do? Will anyone dare to say that when God said, "Remember the Sabbath day, to keep it holy," he knew we could not do it? Surely not, and, therefore, can anyone say that the running of Sunday trains is against this command, but yet it becomes necessary to ride on Sunday trains? The above resolution implies this, but let us remember that it is said, "For whosoever shall keep the whole law, and yet offend in one point, he is guilty of all." (James ii, 10.) And, therefore, why was not the resolution passed framed so as to express perfect loyalty to God?

We are far from saying that that resolution was framed by the young people of that League Conference. We do not believe they framed it, for it sounds like some of those who had passed their youthhood that were in that Conference. However, they allowed its passage, and, therefore, it goes out to the world as their own framing, and as an expression of their sentiment on Sunday train riding.

Now, in conclusion, I wish to say that it never becomes necessary to ride on Sunday trains, and, therefore, those who claim to ride on them from necessity have made it necessary themselves, and hence it is a dire necessity with which God has nothing to do whatever. We can not hope for the complete stoppage of Sunday trains until Christians, young, old, and all, will say we will not ride on them under any circumstance, and mean what they say.

Arcadia District Conference.

The Arcadia District Conference convened at 9 o'clock A. M., Thursday, July 22, in Harmony Chapel, Hico, La. This is a country church, twenty miles north of Ruston, but for attendance on business sessions, as well as the preaching services, the towns were put to shame. The church, probably one of the largest in North Louisiana, was crowded to overflowing every day. All the preachers of the district, except three, were present, and sickness evidently kept them away. The large majority of the delegates were on hand the first day, or early in the session. Our presiding elder, though "a new hand at the business," presided with such grace and dignity that he immediately captured all hearts, and won the sympathy and co-operation of the entire body. In perfecting the organization, your correspondent was elected secretary, this being, with the exception of one, his tenth year of service in this capacity. The preaching was exceptionally good and appropriate, in demonstration of the Spirit and with power. Bros. Jenkins, Barnett, Wright, Vaughn, P. A. Johnston, Lowery and the presiding elder did the preaching.

Rev. J. D. Harper, of Mansfield, came over and faithfully represented the general collection interests; also giving us one of his best and most powerful sermons.

Mrs. T. S. Sligh, vice-president of Mansfield Female College, with her genial smiles and usual activity and energy, won favor for our college; and I think with present crop prospects, which are very flattering, she will secure a number of girls from this district for our school, which she so worthily represents, and which should enlist the interest and patronage of every loyal Methodist in Louisiana.

The presence of the Spirit was manifest from the opening of the first business session till Sunday night, the last service, which culminated in such a shower of divine blessing as some of the brethren said they had never seen before. Twenty or twenty-five professed conversion about the altar that night.

Those people know how to entertain. Few, if any, would be the dissenting votes for a return of the Conference there in the near future.

The next session goes to Bienville, a little town on the North and South railroad.

J. T. Baker, Rev. T. W. Pipes, R. T. McClendon and J. B. Williams were elected delegates to the Annual Conference; J. W. Tooke and W. W. Guthrie, alternates.

W. F. HENDERSON, Sec.

Whereas, There is a general lack of appreciation of our church papers, and some of our people are taking and reading papers not endorsed by our church to the exclusion of the church organs; therefore, be it

Resolved, That this Conference deplores this lack of appreciation, and pledges itself to the support of the church papers, and to the further introduction of same into the homes of our people.

Whereas, We have no such office in our economy as evangelist; And, whereas, The evangelistic movement is detrimental to the peace and harmony of the church; And, whereas, Every minister in our church is under appointment by the law from the Bishops to the humblest in our ranks; therefore, be it

Resolved, That it is the sense of this District Conference that we do not, as pastors, invite these self-appointed ministers to hold meetings in our charges, and that, as laymen, we will co-operate with our pastors in the enforcement of this relation.

Resolved, That this District Conference strive to the utmost of its ability to bring up all the collections on assessments ordered by the Annual Conference.

Missionary Day at the Vicksburg District Conference.

The most enjoyable feature of the Vicksburg District Conference, recently held at the beautiful new Oak Ridge Church, on the Warren circuit, was Missionary Day, with its letters and sermons. It was not my privilege to hear the opening sermon, Wednesday night, by our Missionary Secretary, Rev. T. L. Mellen, of Canton, Miss.; but I learned that the text was taken from Acts xiii, 2, and the subject, "The Work of the Holy Spirit in Missions." I heard it favorably spoken of, and I know it must have been a good sermon to interest the congregation for an hour and ten minutes.

Thursday was entirely devoted to this great cause. The opening religious services were conducted by Bro. Mellen, and after this Rev. J. G. Galloway read an essay on the "Organization of Missionary Societies in the Sunday-schools," and the subject was then further developed and impressed by the general discussion that followed.

Our presiding elder had secured long and interesting letters from four of our five mission fields for the occasion, and the first of these, from Korea, written by Rev. C. F. Reid, D. D., was read to the Conference by Prof. R. S. Ricketts. It was full of information concerning the "Hermit Nation," and expressed abiding faith in God and bright hope for the salvation of those among whom its author labors. After this came a strong sermon by Rev. R. Selby from the text, "I have chosen you, and ordained you, that you should go and bring forth fruit." (John xv, 16.) Of this excellent missionary discourse it is not necessary for me to speak, as it was requested published in the ADVOCATE by the vote of the Conference, and its readers will soon have the pleasure of examining it for themselves.

The afternoon session was begun by an earnest sermon and appeal by Rev. W. T. Griffin from the text, "God loveth a cheerful giver" (II. Cor. ix, 7), and then Rev. J. A. Moore read a most excellent letter from our own beloved brother, Dr. J. B. Fearn, in China. Of course, his letter had a peculiar interest to us, and I am sure that there were none who saw or heard that letter but loved him the more. Dr. Weems then gave the opportunity to those who wished to make a free-will offering toward Dr. Fearn's support, and thirty-one dollars and forty cents was quickly deposited on the secretary's table.

I read to the Conference the letter from Japan, written by Rev. W. A. Davis, and Bro. T. A. Holloman read the one from Mexico, written by Rev. J. R. Mood, both of which were full of interest and inspiration to us all. The hopeful, expectant spirit of all these writers was very marked, and the eloquent appeal for help seems unavoidable to them. The fact is evident, though these writers did not say it, that when the cause of missions lags, the home church is responsible. The work of this memorable day was concluded by an enthusiastic talk and heart-stirring appeal on this great subject by our presiding elder, Dr. Weems, whose heart and life are so thoroughly consecrated to the one world-encircling, all-humanity-embracing cause of the Father in heaven. It was a day we all enjoyed, and will count for the Savior's cause.

H. M. ELLIS.

Notes in a Minor Key.

Instead of a missionary bulletin according to a well-devised plan which is being worked throughout our connection, and such as are made by the other presiding elders (who by virtue of office are district missionary secretaries), Dr. W. L. C. Hunnicutt, P. E., reports for the Natchez district: "The pastors in this district are preaching on the subject of missions and taking collections as time and opportunity allow. I hope their reports will not be behind those of former years. [God forbid that they should be.—T. L. M.] I can give you nothing more minute than this now. The collections are numerous and must all be attended to."

Mrs. Clara H. Cope, the efficient and consecrated corresponding secretary of the Mississippi Conference W. P. and H. M. Society, referring to the circular letter sent out by her and Miss Addie Purnell, the earnest and diligent president, to all the pastors in our Conference, writes: "Many thanks for the substantial way in which you replied to our request to pastors. To the one hundred and twenty-three letters sent out we received eight replies. Three took the collection; two promise to take it yet." And yet these godly women are working and planning and praying for home missions and parsonage building! And they are organized under the law of our church and by express provision of our Discipline! And at our last session of the Annual Conference we unanimously pledged them our cordial support!

These two "Notes in a Minor Key" show where the trouble is in our Methodism and in our home and foreign mission works. Presiding elders and preachers will not co-operate to carry out any well-defined plan of work. It is useless to expect the church members to co-operate or to contribute to either cause, intelligently or liberally, unless our preachers and our presiding elders will enter heartily into any plan which our leaders may devise. The blank quarterly missionary bulletins are furnished me by the Missionary Secretaries at Nashville, and I send them to the presiding elders. When filled out and returned to me, a tabulated statement by districts is made and sent on to Nashville for the information of the secretaries and of the Board of Missions. It is not my plan, but I think it a good one. It has been in use throughout our connection for two years.

Sister Cope also wrote me that Miss Addie Purnell had succeeded in redeeming her pledge of $50 to help the parsonage at Hermanville, and an appropriation of $60 was made to help build a parsonage for Wesley Chapel, Natchez. I guess Bro. A. D. Miller and Bro. F. B. Ormond were among the brethren who replied to Miss Addie Purnell's letter, and were also among those who took the collection on or before first Sunday in July for the benefit of the W. P. and H. M. Society.

May God bless all the brethren, and help us all to work together for home and foreign missions and church extension and everything else that tends to advance the kingdom of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ in this world!

Bro. L. P. Meador, P. C., Fuller circuit, writes me that he has no Methodist doctor or druggist in the bounds of his pastoral charge. Less than twenty brethren have answered my call for names and addresses. The delinquents will defeat a great object, and not help themselves or hurt me. It is not a personal favor which I have been begging, but my request was solely for the good of others and the cause of Christ. Had it been for a personal favor, the request would not have been made, much less repeated. I am ready to give up the missionary secretaryship whenever the Board of Missions wishes me to do so.

Miss. Conf., Mrs. E. D. Jones, Carlisle, Miss.
La. Conf., Mrs. M. H. Morrison, Shreveport.

'Twas in Jackson, twelve years ago, a feebler band of missionary women met; changed the times—changed are we. Our youthful enthusiasm of the past has, we trust, ripened into a broader, deeper interest, born of larger experience, more profound conclusions. Then we were often made to feel that an apology was needed for our seeming intrusion; now, when our 'little one has become a thousand,' imperial edicts going forth smoothing the way, the greatness and helpfulness of the cause forces recognition.

Mrs. Trueheart wisely said: "While the work must be based upon solid business principles, it should never be prosecuted with unsanctified hearts, unconsecrated hands." Let us labor to make the deeper impress of our Christ-likeness as a nation, lest the advantages of our civilization be coveted at the expense of souls famishing for the true bread of life. Let us, as a society, with our inspiring motto—"Attempt great things for God; expect great things from God"—move on beyond the advanced stage that we have attained, and, emphasizing vigorous, systematic and conscientious measures in regard to our finances, step beyond the increased amount, which is $1,507.17, being an excess of $432.28 over the previous year.

Our eighteenth annual meeting, June 25-28, was pleasantly and profitably spent, there being officers, delegates and visitors present, 62. Some of the districts have suffered, not being supplied with district secretaries, evidencing the need of a Conference organizer. We hope the corresponding secretary will do all she can to supplement other labors, and thus meet the demand. We are pleased to report more district meetings held. The use of the ministers counsel table at these meetings was found to be profitable and pleasant. We regretted the illness and absence of Mrs. J. M. Weems, the faithful secretary of the Vicksburg district, and, more, that she deemed it necessary that she should not be re-elected.

GREETINGS.

The royal welcome already felt was voiced in appreciative, earnest words by Miss Annie Buckley, who said that in Jackson, where there is a convention to every three weeks, this was the most unselfish and best of all—its mission being to aid in leading to the feet of the Father a waiting world. Rev. H. M. DuBose, D. D., our Conference host, extended an eloquent welcome; but the sweetest memory of the occasion was the marching in, with their banners, of the Capitol Street Workers and Jackson Jewels, presenting their respective representatives, Ava Forgusson and Bessie Carnes, who welcomed us with loving words. Hard the task to respond to all these impressive greetings; but Sallie Smylie, our present corresponding secretary, was equal to the occasion, and expressed in behalf of the Conference a response beautiful and in keeping with the chosen words of greeting.

ANNIVERSARY, ETC.

At our anniversary meeting, Saturday night, a beautiful poem, "The Great Commission" (a bugle call to further service), by Mrs. A. E. Collier, was read by Mrs. A. F. Watkins, followed by the reports of corresponding secretary and treasurer, closing with a most thoughtful, excellent address of the president, Miss Marshall.

The inspiring presence of Miss Hardyuia Norville, a missionary to Mexico, with her instructive and highly entertaining talks concerning the work there, formed one of the most delightful recreations. The social meeting with refreshments was as usual most enjoyable.

The organist and the choir are remembered very gratefully for the beautifully rendered anthems, solos and other music. Mrs. Chatfield's valuable report of the Board meeting and other choice papers were read during the meeting, which we hope to share with others by placing them in our column in the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE.

SABBATH SERVICES.

Mrs. Robt. Reed's exposition of the Sabbath-school lesson, with the use of maps and blackboard, was very much enjoyed.

The impressive annual sermon, which was a rare treat, by Rev. H. M. DuBose, was from Dan. xii, 4: "And they that be wise shall shine as the brightness of the firmament; and they that turn many to righteousness as the stars for ever and ever."

The kind invitation of Dr. Sproles, the penitentiary chaplain, to be present at the afternoon service in their chapel, was appreciated. Some of us were requested to conduct a service there, others of our number at the woman's ward, and others at the hospital. This service for the Master was indeed a spiritual feast, leaving a lasting impression upon the heart that will be among memory's richest treasures.

Bishop Galloway discoursed most excellently at night on "The Friendship of God," based on St. John xv, 15.

MONDAY.

Among the reports of the committees was this from the Candidate Committee.

"The two following offers have been received—one from E. M. F. College, in which President Beeson authorizes Miss Brown to say that he will take Miss McNemar at the lowest possible cost, asking no remuneration except actual cost; the other from President Chambers, of Whitworth College, in which he says: 'I will give the young lady a place among our working girls in the dining-room or institute, if you will pay in cash some time during session $40, which, in addition to the young lady's work, will pay for her board, washing, tuition, medical fee, fuel and damage fee. For all extras I will charge a price which your committee will declare to be just, or if you wish extra work done, I shall be glad to name you a price at this time.' We recommend the acceptance of President Chambers' liberal offer, and further suggest that the course of study prescribed for her by Miss Gibson, of Scarritt Training-school, be adopted, with the addition of one foreign language, Spanish or French. The department of work to be decided upon later by a committee of two ladies appointed by the Conference." Adopted.

Mrs. Hebron presented the Conference thirty volumes of her book, "Faith, and Other Poems," and the gift was accepted with thanks.

Miss Addie Purnell was announced as fraternal delegate of the Parsonage and Home Mission Society, in place of Mrs. T. B. Holloman, and gave us a fine talk.

Mrs. Galloway, in behalf of the Conference, notified Miss Addie Marshall of her having been made a life member by the Conference.

Besides other preparation for successful work, the editor in her reports endeavored to place great emphasis on the necessity of using the valuable literature prepared by our Woman's Board and the Parent Board, urging the secretaries and others not to neglect the duty of sending items and reports for our column, recalling the words of Napoleon: "Four hostile newspapers are more to be dreaded than a thousand bayonets." We secured fine talks from Bishop Galloway and Dr. DuBose on the subject; the Bishop prefacing his remarks with the words: "What the world needs is good literature."

Miss Addie Marshall was chosen to present the work at the Annual Conference next December.

The meeting was held at First Church, Jackson; but Capitol Street Church most kindly aided in entertaining.

Besides many other ministries of kindness, we were taken to the Lunatic Asylum, but most kindly brought away.

OFFICERS ELECTED WHO HAVE ACCEPTED.

President, Miss Addie Marshall, Brookhaven; vice-president, Mrs. L. West, of Jackson; recording secretary, Mrs. C. R. McQueen, Meridian; corresponding secretary, Miss Sallie Smylie, of Meridian; treasurer, Miss Mary Andrews, Meridian; auditor, Mrs. Gullet; editor of Items and agent for Woman's Missionary Advocate and other literature, Mrs. E. D. Jones, Carlisle. District secretaries: Meridian district, Mrs. L. B. Watts; Jackson district, Mrs. R. R. Parker; Southshore district, Mrs. J. P. Drake; Enterprise district, Miss Anna Trotter; Brookhaven district, Mrs. Julia Chrisman; Vicksburg district, Mrs. Scott Phillips; Natchez district, Mrs. E. E. Reed.

FROM THE WORK.

Rev. G. S. Morehead, Chapel Hill circuit, July 29, 1897: "We have had a gracious revival of religion on our charge this week. Such an outpouring of the Holy Ghost was never witnessed before at Chapel Hill in her history. Mourners were converted, sinners convicted, backsliders reclaimed. Bro. Geddie did the preaching. Thank God we are happy on our way to heaven."

Rev. Robert H. Wynn, Algiers, La., Aug. 4, 1897: "I assisted my father, Rev. J. F. Wynn, in a revival meeting at Oak Grove Church, Blairstown, La., July 23-30. The attendance was remarkably good at the services, which were held twice each day, and results were gratifying. There were a number of professed conversions, and four accessions to the church, while the church membership was revived."

Rev. H. B. Thomason, Pelican, La., Aug. 2, 1897: "Closed a meeting at Bethel Church last Friday (July 30). Bro. H. J. Boltz did the preaching. The Lord was with us from the first hour. Every service was deeply impressive. Result: 12 accessions, about the same number of conversions, and the entire membership of the church greatly strengthened. I began a meeting yesterday at Mt. Pleasant. Have no ministerial help, but realize God's assisting grace. Have never seen a meeting open with more encouraging indications. The altar was thronged with penitents at first service. House would not hold crowd last night. About 50 came forward for prayers. Pray for us."

Rev. John W. Ramsey, Waterford, Miss. July 24, 1897: "Let me say through the ADVOCATE that I have just closed a very fine meeting at Emory, on Tyro circuit. This place had not had a revival in eight years. We began with about a dozen in attendance. Congregation increased every day. People came ten miles, or more. Sinners were converted, old family feuds were healed, the church was revived, and the people shouted in the old-time way, for the old-time power was upon them. Unto the Lord of hosts we ascribe all the praise. Bro. C. B. Rives, a good man from my own charge, led the song service. Rev. W. J. Burt, the pastor, is in high favor with his people. He is truly a noble fellow-worker."

Rev. B. H. Rawls, Auburn, Miss., Aug. 3, 1897: "We commenced a revival meeting at Adams, July 25. The preaching was done by Bro. Culpepper. The meeting continued eight days, and congregations were large and attentive. The members of our church were greatly blessed. There were a great many conversions. I don't know how many, but I think am safe in saying fifty were converted. Bro. Culpepper is a minister of great power. I think the work done will endure. We expect to pay up every claim in this pastoral charge. I closed a meeting at Ebenezer a few days ago that was a grand success. Bro. Abney, the pastor at Whites Town, did the preaching. He is a man of faith and power. God bless you and the ADVOCATE."

Rev. J. G. Cammack, Flora, Miss., July 30: "We have had the most powerful revival here for the last ten days that Flora has ever seen, conducted by W. M. McIntosh. Bro. McIntosh reached here ten days behind his promised time, amid dissatisfaction and disappointment, and from the very first service the meeting began to grow in interest until the whole country round had gathered in, and we had to go from the church to a tent in the grove. The meeting resulted in the whole country being stirred as never before, church strengthened, Christians strengthened, family altars erected, nearly everybody in the whole country promising to live a better life, drunkards reformed, a higher atmosphere morally, socially and politically; a great number of conversions (no definite idea as to how many), and 70 accessions to the different churches. The community was just ripe for a great revival. Only a few left out. There is talk of a tent meeting next year."

OBITUARIES.

STAPLES—JAMES WESLEY STAPLES was born in Coneanch county, Ala., Jan. 20, 1822, and departed this life at Prudhomme City, La., Jan. 2, 1897. His father moved with him into Wilcox county when he was a small boy. Here he grew to manhood, and on the ninth of July, 1846, was married to Miss Margaret E. Boman. To them were born eight children, five of whom are living and share with their mother the great loss of their father. Bro. Staples moved to Louisiana in 1866, and settled near Downsville Union. Here he raised his family, and has many friends. One son, C. F. Staples, is a member of the Louisiana Conference, and a daughter the wife of Rev. W. J. Porter, of the Louisiana Conference.

Bro. Staples was converted and joined the M. E. Church, South, when he was thirteen years old, and was an active member to the last. Was of the old type of Methodist, believing in the experience of sanctification, or perfect love. He sought it, and in 1874 obtained the blessed experience with great power. This experience ever manifested itself in his life, and he was a faithful witness to the power that sanctifies and cleanses the hearts of God's children. He grew in grace, and his last years were his best and brightest.

We first met him at the parsonage in Farmersville, La., in 1890, where we had gone to assist Bro. W. J. Porter in a meeting. Here we formed a friendship that grew with the years. He was one of the most saintly men we ever met. Surely he "walked with God." He was at home in a revival, and a true soldier.

Last October, at our meeting at Plaquemine Brulee, one night during a very spiritual service, he said to me, "Can I talk a little?" and, walking out with his long hair touching his shoulders and his face aglow with the Holy Spirit, he began his remarkable exhortation to the people. They were common with him, and as he talked the Holy Spirit fell upon the people, and hard sinners shook like a leaf and many Christians rejoiced aloud. Those present that night will never forget the occasion and the outpouring of the Holy Spirit. When he got through he said, "Now, children, I have delivered my message, and am ready to meet you at the bar of my blessed Jesus."

Bro. Staples was an affectionate father and a devoted husband. He spoke with great affection of his children, and it was a glad day with him when Charles entered the ministry. He was perfectly devoted to his wife, often speaking of the noble traits in her character. We have heard him say often, "If I can just live to hand Margaret a drink of water when she is dying, I'll be ready to go."

His last illness was brief; death came sudden. When he realized he was going, he said, "I'll soon be dead, bless the good Lord," and his spirit took its flight to his "blessed Jesus." "Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord."

ELLIS—Mrs. LAURA MARTHA ELLIS (nee Wemberly) was born Dec. 30, 1850, and was married to Mr. J. T. Ellis, Jan. 12, 1871. She was happily converted and joined the Methodist Church under the ministry of Bro. Patterson in 1874. She died in triumph July 7, 1897. She leaves a host of friends, three sisters, two brothers, an aged mother, and devoted husband, with whom she had lived happily for more than twenty-six years. She was of mild temper, sweet disposition.

It has been the writer's pleasure to know her about two years, to worship with her in protracted services, and to witness that she loved the Lord and his people. I was with her about the last twenty-six hours of her life. Realizing that her end was near, she said to those around her, "I love you all." To her husband she said, "I am not afraid to die." These were her last words.

Her funeral services were properly conducted by Rev. C. F. Staples. The large attendance showed the esteem in which she was held. To the bereaved I would say: Trust in the Lord and do his will, and you will meet her in heaven.

H. W. LEDBETTER.

HENLEY—WILLIAM SIDNEY, son of William and Elizabeth Watkins Henley, was born at Cedar Hill, Anson county, N. C., April 15, 1834, and died at his home in Richland, Miss., June 24, 1897.

Bro. Henley professed religion and joined the Methodist Church in early life, and was a member of the same at his death. He entered the Confederate service in 1860, and made a good soldier. He was married to Miss M. M. Williams, March 21, 1866. There were born to them four children, one of whom died in childhood.

Bro. Henley had been a great sufferer for years, but his last illness lasted only two days, and he fell asleep in Christ. We buried his remains in the beautiful little cemetery at Richland, Miss., to await the resurrection of the just. The blessings of God be on his surviving widow and three children, and may he lead them to him who has found

"Rest for the toiling hand,
Rest for the anxious brow,
Rest for the weary, way-sore feet,
Rest from all labor now."

W. D. MCCULLOUGH.

Pickens, Miss.

MUSE—To-day at 12 o'clock, July 25, 1897, with appropriate services, we laid to rest the remains of our mutual friend and brother in Christ, B. F. MUSE, of Sharon, Miss. He was buried in the old Prichett burying-ground. Had he lived until Dec. 10, he would have been fifty-six years old. He had been sick since December last, and gradually went down to the grave. As he approached death his faith and confidence in God grew stronger and stronger unto the perfect day, and there was ministered unto him an abundant entrance into the everlasting kingdom of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ.

While we tender our sincere sympathy to the bereaved widow, we rejoice with her in that grace that saves to the uttermost all that call upon Him.

"It lays in heaven the topmost stone,
And well deserves the praise."

F. M. WILLIAMS.

Sharon, Miss.

SIGREST—Mrs. SUSAN SIGREST was born in Alabama about the year 1824, and moved with her parents while young to Mississippi.

She was first married to Mr. Steward. After his death was married to M. T. Sigrest, near Hillsborough, Miss., in 1855.

Few women were better read in the Bible, especially in the Old Testament, and her Bible had many promises, as well as other passages, marked.

The first of this year, 1897, they moved near Hattiesburg, Miss., to live with W. P. Meador, grandson of her husband, where she died July 11, 1897. She expressed herself in her last sickness as having her home picked out. The last few months of her life she seemed to suffer a great deal, but was able to be up most of the time, and bore it all with a great deal of patience.

She had been a member of the Methodist Church for many years, but her work is done.

Nervous!
People wonder why their nerves are so weak; why they get tired so easily; why they do not sleep naturally; why they have frequent headaches, indigestion and
Nervous Dyspepsia. The explanation is simple. It is found in that impure blood feeding the nerves on refuse instead of the elements of strength and vigor. Hood's Sarsaparilla feeds the nerves pure, rich blood; gives natural sleep, good digestion, is the true remedy for all nervous troubles.

The continued increase in the number of young ladies in attendance at this college is evidence of the satisfaction of its patrons with its management. The equipment consists in part of 38 upright and 2 concert grand pianos, a six-inch object glass, Alvan Clark & Sons telescope, and probably the best chemical and physical laboratory of any female college in the South. With its 6 male and 11 female professors, it offers unusual advantages for mental training, and the lovely grounds, ornamented with two fountains, a lily pond and beautiful shrubs and flowers, is conducive to happiness and æsthetic culture. The dormitories are home-like and equipped with all modern conveniences. We believe that Louisiana girls would find the climate here pleasant and healthful. The life above, when this is past,
Is the ripe fruit of life below.
—Exchange.

Envy dies hard.

We never do more than we attempt, nor attempt more than we plan.

The holier a man becomes, the more conscious he is of his own weakness and faults.

The Christian who fails to begin the day with prayer falls an easy victim to temptation.

What a fine thing it would be if some hobbyists could light upon the Golden Rule and ride it for awhile!

One deed of kindness, one act of self-denial, is worth a thousand pious thoughts that never result in religious activity.

Reason and experience both forbid us to expect that national morality can prevail in exclusion of religious principle.—Selected.

Contentment with their spiritual development, a sure sign of lukewarmness, is about the only kind of contentment many believers experience.

In the spiritual world a man is measured, not by his genius, but by his likeness to God. God does not reason nor remember, but he loves.—F. W. Robertson.

Guard against one fault which is practiced by most men; they scrutinize with a keen eye the conduct of others, and never think of examining themselves.—Socrates.

Astoundingly large is the number of church people who have plenty of time to read the magazines and the daily papers, but who can't find time to read the Word of God or a religious book.

There are few Christians who do not need to cultivate the grace of patience. A peevish, complaining disciple does no little to discount the power and sweetness of the gospel. "Let patience have her perfect work, that ye may be perfect and entire, wanting nothing."

Many a believer who is living far below his duty consoles himself with the thought, "I am as good as the average church member." But, alas! where is it said in the Word that there is safety in a life of comparative goodness? No man who is not fully the Lord's has any reasonable hope of salvation.

The true calling of a Christian is not to do extraordinary things, but to do ordinary things in an extraordinary way. The most trivial tasks can be accomplished in a noble, gentle, regal spirit, which overrides and puts aside all petty, paltry feelings, and which elevates all little things.—Dean Stanley.

Regeneration.

To attempt to be a Christian without being regenerated (or converted, as we ordinarily say) is somewhat like trying to teach without an education, or like trying to raise a crop without planting seed. Whatever provision God has made for the salvation of the millions who are without the gospel, those who have heard it are without excuse if they do not seek to be "born from above" in order that they may "enter into the kingdom of heaven" and be saved from their sins. Since all men are born with corrupt natures, and are powerless to break the dominion of sin without the help of the Holy Spirit, there must be a renovation and transformation of the moral nature as a preparation for the living of a pure life. As Dr. Adam Clarke well has said: "Every man must have two births—one from heaven, the other from earth; one of his body, the other of his soul. Without the first he can not see nor enjoy this world; without the last he can not see nor enjoy the kingdom of God." "Ye must be born again," is the teaching of our Lord.

Despite the explicitness of Scripture upon this point, large numbers of church members are content to live without having experienced—yea, without even seeking—this necessary work of grace. How shall they who neglect so plain a condition of salvation escape the just condemnation of God? No man who desires to be saved should rest satisfied until he knows that this change has been wrought in his heart.

As to the nature of regeneration, the Scriptures speak clearly and fully. The language used is such as to indicate that the change wrought is vast and radical. In John iii, 7, it is expressed by being "born anew," or "born from above." The Apostle Paul speaks of it more than once as a renewal or restoration of the divine image. (See Rom. xii, 2, and Col. iii, 9, 10.) It is represented also as a "new creation." The Psalmist says: "Create in me a clean heart, O God; and renew a right spirit within me." In II. Cor. v, 17, it is said that "If any man be in Christ, he is a new creature: old things are passed away; behold all things are become new." In Eph. ii, 6, and Col. ii, 13, the apostle describes it as a "resurrection from the dead." In Titus iii, 5, it is called "the washing of regeneration and the renewing of the Holy Ghost." Many other passages of similar import might be cited.

Although justification and regeneration may be separated in thought, as Mr. Wesley says, they are never in reality separated for a single moment. The one is that act of God by which we are placed in a state of favor with him; the other is that change wrought by the Holy Spirit which renews us in the divine image, cleanses us from impurity, and imparts to us the ability to live righteously. To quote again from that eminent authority, Dr. Clarke: "Sin must be pardoned and the impurity of the heart washed away before any soul can possibly enter into the kingdom of God."

Forgiveness, were it not accompanied by a change of heart, would leave the believer in a state of helplessness and corruption. The mere removal of guilt would not make a man righteous in heart and life any more than the pardon of a criminal transforms him into a virtuous, law-abiding citizen. How little comfort would the loosening of shackles and the opening of prison doors be to a captive who had no strength to leave his wretched dungeon?

It is "passing strange" that any who claim to be followers of John Wesley should divorce justification and conversion, or should so minify the latter as to make it mean nothing more than pardon. Despite the fact that Mr. Wesley and all other orthodox Methodist theologians maintain the inseparability of the two, and that in the Scriptures pardon and renewal are nearly always spoken of together, some insist that cleansing, which is an essential part of conversion, takes place subsequent to our justification and adoption. In I. John i, 8, the apostle says: "If we confess our sins, he is faithful and just to forgive us our sins," which is nothing more nor less than justification, "and to cleanse us from all unrighteousness," which thorough cleansing from the defilement of sin is involved in regeneration.

By referring to the passages already quoted, it will be seen that conversion, whatever else it may include, involves cleansing and renewal. Richard Watson felicitously defines regeneration as "that mighty change in man wrought by the Holy Spirit, by which the dominion which sin has over him in his natural state is broken and abolished, so that with full choice of will and the energy of right affections he serves God freely and runs in the way of his commandments. . . . It is that renewing of our nature which gives us dominion over sin, and enables us to serve God from love, and not merely from fear."

Since "they that are Christ's have crucified the flesh, with its affections and lusts," and since "if any man be in Christ, he is a new creature," all things having become new, it follows that every regenerate man is pure in heart, and that so long as he remains in a regenerate state, sin, by which we mean conscious, willful non-conformity to God's law, neither remains nor dwells in him. This does not import either sinlessness or perfection, but does signify the leading of a righteous life, and one full of good works. Says the Apostle John: "Whosoever is born of God doth not commit sin; for his seed remaineth in him, and he can not sin, because he is born of God." Again he writes: "We know that whosoever is born of God sinneth not." Hence the normal state of a converted man is freedom from voluntary transgression. He has power, if he will use it, to overcome every sin and temptation, for he now has a "gracious bias toward virtue and holiness, and the love of God fills his heart." Though in many respects he may fail to do the will of God perfectly, he is without condemnation because he purposes to serve God in all things, aiming to do nothing he ought not, and to do everything he ought. So by his love he fulfills the law. God does not require more than we are able to perform.

Though the regenerate state is a gracious and exalted one, the Scriptures do not teach that either the new convert or the mature Christian is free from faults, which are often unknown to ourselves, or from the liability to sin, both of which, in fact, characterize every man until the day of his death. Neither regeneration nor any other work of grace puts us beyond temptation or beyond the possibility of sinning. Since Adam, in his original state of purity, was tempted, and since the Son of God was tempted in all points as we are, how can any of us hope to escape entirely from the suggestions and solicitations of Satan? Regeneration, however, does place us where, if "we keep ourselves, the wicked one toucheth us not."

Since many of those who are converted afterwards backslide, some conclude that it is an imperfect work, which must soon be supplemented by another great change. Though most regenerate persons do fall into willful sin, it is not because the change wrought in them is not complete, but because they will not do all that they are able to do; because they will not comply with all the conditions essential to their remaining in a state of grace. Every convert who, through sudden temptation or lack of watchfulness, yields to sin, has need of repentance and restoration to divine favor, though he may not have fully lost his sonship.

No experience or blessing of the Christian life, according to Arminian theology, gives assurance of final salvation, entirely removes the liability to sin, or renders the victory over it an easy thing. "Strive to enter in" is the exhortation of the Master. Methodists do not accept the doctrine of effectual grace which saves the believer, whether he remains faithful or not.

Again, regeneration does not free us from fleshly infirmities, or from ignorance. Our bodies are the same as before, and as long as we are in the world will bear the marks of previous sin, though we are delivered from its bondage and curse. A change of heart does not free us from errors of judgment, or from weakness of memory and of will. We must learn the truth through hearing and reading the Word. Nor are any new faculties added to or taken away from the soul.

Furthermore, regeneration does not destroy the natural appetites and propensities. Because these remain and seek gratification, it does not follow that the believer is carnal, unless he gratifies them to excess.

Some, as we have indicated, so minify regeneration as to make it impossible for us to grow in love and grace until we have advanced a step further in experience. If the merely regenerate man can not grow in grace, then, contrary to the Word of God, there is no analogy whatever between physical and spiritual development. Others so magnify conversion as to leave no room for subsequent development and blessings. Though pure in heart, the new convert is but a "babe in Christ," and must grow to manhood, pressing on constantly toward the measure of the stature of the fullness of Christ. Just as the tiny acorn-shoot, when it first peeps above ground, is perfect in all its parts, so the new convert has in him the germ of all the graces and virtues, which, by and by, through prayer and faith and the use of the means of grace, will develop into the shapely tree of Christian character. Failure to grow means perpetual babehood.

The analogy between the growth of the human body and that of the spiritual man fails when pressed too far. The body in due time reaches maturity, and then follow decay and death. Not so with the spiritual man. Its development need never be arrested, nor can there be decline or death so long as there is union with Christ.

The new birth is conditioned upon thorough repentance and entire submission to God, accompanied by earnest faith. No man who holds back part of the price ever can be born anew. Adherence to any known sin or refusal to perform any plain duty excludes the penitent from the favor and forgiveness of God. The Master says: "Whosoever he be of you that forsaketh not all that he hath, he can not be my disciple." If the Scriptures be true, no man ever was converted who made only a partial consecration, who did not determine to forsake all of his sins, and do his full duty.

Nor does God require less of us after conversion than before. He will not abide where sin is entertained. The conditions of discipleship are the same from the beginning to the end of the Christian course. Every act of sin, every omission of duty after conversion, must be followed by speedy repentance and prayer for forgiveness, else the believer will forfeit his state of grace, and have to "do his first works over again." In many, alas! the spark of divine grace imparted at conversion has never been kindled into a flame, and is about to be extinguished. "The things which remain are ready to die," and, unless speedily strengthened, there will be entire loss of spiritual life.

The Rush to Alaska.

The recent discovery of rich deposits of gold in certain portions of Alaska has created no little excitement on the Pacific coast and at various other points in the United States and Canada. Fortune hunters from all over the country are now endeavoring to make their way to this new Eldorado, the feverish rush to which is very similar to the one to California in '48 and '49. The steamer "Excelsior" left San Francisco on the twenty-eighth of July with 110 passengers for the Alaskan gold fields, the passage price being $150. One man, it is said, was offered $1,500 for his ticket and accepted, but afterward changed his mind, so great was his thirst for gold.

On account of the extreme rigor of the climate, Alaska being in the Frigid Zone, the barrenness of the country and the lawless character of the inhabitants mining in that region is attended with almost incredible dangers and hardships. Work is profitable during only about sixty days of the Summer, the soil being frozen too hard the rest of the year for digging. Nothing can be done during the Winter. Hence it is the height of folly for anyone to attempt to go there until Spring. United States officials are warning gold hunters not to go to Alaska unless they can carry at least a year's stock of provisions with them. One miner, who has returned a cripple for life and broken down in health, states that in the Klondike basin he saw 2,000 graves, most of the occupants of which had died of starvation.

Where one who risks his life in search of gold in this far-off region will succeed in finding a fortune, scores and hundreds of others will wreck their health and return penniless, while as many more will perish of cold and hunger, or by violence. But, alas! what will not men risk for gold?

Well has the sacred writer said: "He that loveth silver shall not be satisfied with silver; nor he that loveth abundance with increase: this is also vanity." "What shall it profit a man if he gain the whole world, and lose his own soul?"

Journalistic Chaff.

It is not at all strange that some church papers we wot of can be published at a low rate in view of the fact that they fill column after column with matter furnished them already stereotyped by a Yankee agency. By furnishing the same stereotyped matter to hundreds of papers in all sections of the land, these shrewd Yankee agencies can sell it for a much smaller sum than it takes to have it set up by even the cheapest printers. Moreover, this method of procedure saves a great deal of editorial work. The editor has nothing whatever to do with making selections for these patent outside or inside pages. The selections are made for him. If we were willing to adopt this method of procedure, we could save ourselves a lot of money and a vast deal of editorial work besides. But this is not our idea of editorial responsibilities. "Anything to fill up with" is not our motto and never will be. As long as we continue on the tripod we expect to make our own selections carefully and conscientiously. The labor we expend in reading and culling from a wide range of literature, periodical and standard, is a great tax upon our time. Yet we consider the time and labor well spent. Take our Home Circle department, for example. The difference between the matter which we put into this department and the stereotyped stuff that is served up by certain papers is like the difference between wheat and chaff. We have been tempted recently to reproduce in our columns some of this chaff in order to direct attention to the effect of these agencies upon religious journalism, and we may do so yet.

Strike on Account of Negro Labor.

On the fourth instant about fourteen hundred white employees in the Fulton Bag and Cotton Mills, of Atlanta, Ga., went on a strike because of the attempt on the part of the company to work twenty-five negro women in a certain department of the mill alongside of white girls. The appearance of the negroes not only created considerable excitement, and resulted in the cessation of all work by the white laborers, but came very near causing a serious riot, which would have occurred had it not been for prompt interference of the police. Such attempts are unwise, to say the least, and bring about friction and bad feeling between the races, which otherwise could be avoided. The negro makes a good laborer, but that is no reason why he should be forced among white workmen as if he were their social equal. No doubt there is undue prejudice in the minds of some against the negro, but our people have feelings and convictions of propriety that deserve consideration.

The latest news is that the strike is still on, the company having refused to accede to the demand of the strikers.

Death of Rev. J. V. Penn.

A note received last week from Dr. J. M. Weems conveys the sad intelligence of the death of Rev. J. V. Penn, which occurred at Rolling Fork, Miss., at 2:20 A. M., Aug. 5. He had been sick with fever since the first of July, and everything was done for him that love and skill could do. Bro. Weems, his presiding elder, who was with him in his last hours, writes that he passed away in great peace. He was buried at Rolling Fork, where his body will rest for a season.

Bro. Penn was a strong and consecrated preacher, a successful pastor, and a man of many noble traits. He had been a member of the Mississippi Conference for about fifteen or sixteen years, and perhaps built more churches and parsonages than any other preacher who was ever in it for the same length of time. A valuable man has fallen, and in his death we sustain the loss of a warm personal friend. He leaves a wife and one child. To his bereaved widow and sorrowing relatives we tender our sincerest sympathy.

The following note from Bro. Sam B. Cox, of Jonesboro, Miss., explains itself: "In your issue of Aug. 5, you make me say, 'The presiding elder is the thing for the country.' I aimed to say, and I think I did say, 'The Epworth League is the thing for the country.' I had just spoken of having named our new League for our presiding elder. Am having a good meeting this week.

Rev. A. S. J. Neill, in a private letter, writes us the following interesting items from Lake Charles, La., where he is stationed: "Rev. G. W. Reeves, a local preacher on this work, held a meeting last Sunday ten miles north of here in the pine woods and received eleven into the church, making sixteen received at that point during July and August. We have a good field north of us here, and have good prospects of success. Have organized an Epworth League at this place in the country where we have no church, which is doing good work and will probably be the nucleus of a church organization." This is probably the first instance on record of the forming of a League before the establishment of a church.

Prejudices, which are from within cause more poverty than calamities which are from without. Many a man whose life has been undisturbed by physical disaster has been brought to destitution by prejudices, which are the thieves of mental and spiritual treasure, as procrastination is the thief of time. We pity the feeble creature who has been prejudiced against apples by an unwholesome crab-apple: but those who are by no means feeble-minded have been prejudiced against sentiment by sentimentality, against emotion by emotionality. And yet without sentiment one would not be susceptible of noble or tender feeling; without emotion thought would never be "at a glow." He who conquers a prejudice enlarges his borders, and recovers many stolen goods.—Sunday-school Times.

Edward McGehee College Commencement.

The thirty-fifth session of this honored institution closed on the eighth of June amidst high applause. Many pronounced it the most successful in the history of the institution. The enrollment was up to the best, the work done received the praise of the patrons which it justly merited, and all were ready with a "Well done" to the faithful faculty. The commencement exercises were of highest order from first to last. On Sunday Dr. C. W. Carter, of Centenary College, preached one of his best sermons, giving delight to the large congregation which assembled to hear him. The words of exhortation, backed by sound logic, which were given, will not soon be forgotten.

The baccalaureate address by Hon. I. D. Wall, of Clinton, La., was of high order and well received. We were pleased indeed to number our long-time friend with such a company and to find him measuring up to such proportions in the educational work of our beloved Zion. Five young ladies were granted diplomas who go out to work for their alma mater.

At the reorganization of the faculty Miss Georgie Swanson, of Virginia, was elected principal, which all who know of her ability in the work of education pronounced a most excellent choice. She is not a novice in the work of the school room, but brings with her experience, skill and wisdom in her chosen work. She is a woman of excellent attainments, high Christian bearing and a Methodist of the purest and truest type. With a faculty of six consecrated women to assist in the work of the college, the friends of the institution need have no fear of its success. During the past session three States were represented in the boarding department. The outlook for the next session is regarded as very good by the friends of the school.

The location of Edward McGehee College is most favorable. The grounds, which consist of some twenty acres, are beautiful for situation; a large campus, shaded with beech and magnolia, in the quiet suburbs of the old and cultured town of Woodville, present to the Methodists of South Mississippi claims worthy of their consideration. The dormitories have been newly and neatly furnished throughout, giving to the young ladies who may be entrusted to its care guarantee of as comfortable apartments and surroundings as in the parental home. The college is closely connected with railroad, telephone and telegraph connections.

Having spent a term as pastor in the town of Woodville, I do not hesitate to pronounce it as healthy a place as any in the State of Mississippi. Indeed, upon considerations of health, I would not hesitate to recommend it to all who are seeking a place for their daughters.

T. B. HOLLOMAN,
Chairman of Committee.

Centenary College Repair Fund.

I call the attention of the preachers of the Louisiana Conference to a circular which has been sent out by a committee from the Board of Trustees of the college. At the last meeting of the Board there were some who thought that if the young people of our church could become interested in the college, it would be good for them and good for the college. A committee was appointed to see what could be done in this direction, and the circular sent out is the first step in the matter of bringing the needs of the college before our young Methodists.

The circular is addressed to the presidents of the Epworth Leagues; but as these were unknown to the committee, they have been sent to the pastors. The preachers will confer a favor by calling the attention of their Leagues to this matter, and urging them to do all they can in this important matter. Where there are no Leagues, the preachers will please take charge of the whole matter and do their best to raise the full amount specified as a "Repair Fund."

We have made a good start already. A lady not connected with our church has given us one hundred dollars; a member of the Board of Trustees has given one hundred dollars, and one of our professors took a collection at a District Conference which resulted in fifty dollars. Now, if the pastors and Epworth Leagues will do what we know they can do, the amount desired will soon be raised.

For the encouragement of our people, I will say that the prospects of the college are brightening, and we expect a large increase in the number of students next session.

Epworth League

BY REV. HERMANN W. KNICKERBOCKER.

TOPIC FOR AUGUST.

AUG. 15.—PAUL'S PRAYER AT THE SHIPWRECK.

(Acts xxvii, 23, 24.)

That Paul prayed during the storm is to be inferred from the passage—"Fear not, Paul; thou must be brought before Cæsar; and, lo, God hath given thee all them that sail with thee."

1. What a glorious privilege it is to have a God who is a "very present help in time of trouble." Man is independent in the day of prosperity, but in the night of affliction and trouble he feels the need of some strong arm to lean upon. On the land or on the sea God is always present to help. A feeling of security amid the world's storms and desolation is the Christian's privilege. Paul was peaceful while the crew was terror-stricken.

2. God answers prayer for temporal and physical good as well as for spiritual. This is not irrational. Man subordinates nature's laws to his own ends. He harnesses the wind and water and makes the lightning his slave. He produces, or rather by supplying the requisite conditions, induces rain. Why may not God, in proportion to his greater power, subordinate nature to his own ends? Man, limited by his power, accomplishes his will in nature. God, limited in power only by his will, can do whatever he wills.

3. God can not answer a bad prayer. White can not be black. Good can not be bad. God can not do wrong. We may pray for that which would hurt us. No answer will come. Trust in God is an essential element of prayer. It makes God ours—his knowledge, power, and will are ours when we trust him implicitly.

4. God answers prayer through ordinary means where these are available. He did not send angels to carry the shipwrecked crew to land, but they escaped on boards and pieces of the ship. Prayer for a harvest will not be answered by a carload of grain from the skies, but through nature's appointed ways. An ear of corn taken from the stalk is as much from God as if his hand protruding from the skies had dropped it into ours. Nature is God's ordinary medium of communication with man. If, however, there be no ordinary way of answering your prayer, he will send the ravens to feed you.

DOTS.

Work on the Gouldsboro Church will begin in the near future. The different solicitors will be called upon to report amounts collected at the next meeting of the Union.

A private letter from Bro. E. H. Prescott brings the gratifying news that his health is improving. He is now at Manitou, Colo., a beautiful little town in the mountains.

Next week we hope to have an account of the meeting of the Executive Committee.

President Beeson, of the East Mississippi Female College, has just completed a bored well 300 feet deep; has erected a good cypress tank, put in a deep well, steam pump, and now has an abundant supply of fine mineral water from 300 feet in the ground. He will pump frequently, and have an abundant supply of fresh, pure water. This is a fine thing for the college. Pure water is an important feature in securing good health, and that is one of the first questions parents consider. We congratulate President Beeson on securing an abundant supply of fine water from a deep well. It is the safest of all kinds of water.

To Whom it May Concern:

About three years ago I received a sample bottle of "Mul-en-ol." I had never heard of it before. I began using it, however, as occasion required, and soon found that it was all that is claimed for it, and more. For cuts, burns, bruises, scalds, and all kinds of sores, it is superior to any remedy I have ever used. It is also exceedingly efficacious in colic and diarrhœa. For sore throat it is incomparably better than anything I know of. I heartily recommend it as a medicine worthy of a place in every household. W. C. BLACK,

Harris' Business College.

A business education is a necessity, and one who enters upon the duties of life without its guiding influence has all the chances of success against him. We know of no better place for young men and ladies to go for such a training than to that wonderfully progressive institution, Harris' Practical Business College, Jackson, Miss. It is doing more for the worthy, struggling boys and girls than any other business college. Nineteen of its students recently secured good positions in three weeks.—Jackson Evening News.

DOES ANY ONE CARE FOR FATHER?

Does any one care for the father?
Does any one think of the one
Upon whose tired, bent shoulders
The cares of the family come,
The father who strives for your comfort,
And toils from day unto day,
Although his steps ever grow slower,
And his dark locks are turning gray?

Does any one think of the due-bills
He's called upon daily to pay?
Milliner-bills, college-bills, book-bills—
There are some kind of bills every day.
Like a patient horse in a treadmill,
He works on from morning till night;
Does any one think he is tired?
Does any one make his home bright?

Is it right, just because he looks troubled,
To say he's as cross as a bear?
Kind words, little actions, and kindness
Might banish his burden of care.
'Tis for you he's ever so anxious,
He will toil for you while he may live;
In return he only asks kindness,
And such pay is easy to give.

Be Cheery.

Why should a person make himself a nuisance? What gain is there in grimness, and sourness, and unsociability? Few people care to listen to whining and complaint. On the whole, the world uses us as well as we deserve. It is very hard for the defeated to admit this, but it is a fact nevertheless, and if only admitted, one of the chief reasons for defeat is removed. A cheerful philosophy is an important element of success. He who is perpetually suspecting others of ill-treating him and keeping him down is not a welcome companion. Suspicion is usually folly, as well as injustice and unhappiness. Moreover, gladness is one of the great rules of health. To be well, be glad. To be courted, be jolly. It is easy for the average man to hate, or at least to avoid, the unhappy. Nobody wants a death's-head at his table. Nobody considers himself regaled when forced to listen to other people's wrongs and slights, most of them either imaginary or exaggerated by over-sensitive conceit. Every man is of less importance to the world around him than he likes to think. But he can easily test it by asking how much he himself dwells upon the condition of others. By as much as their grievances do not particularly concern him, by so much his own are matters of indifference to them. So let him be pleasant, bury his sorrows, pocket his affronts, make himself agreeable, trust to Providence, and thankfully take what comes.

Helpful Reading.

The reading habits of many of our youth are deplorable. They pore over novels that are as barren of heart food as a stone is of meat. They waste time and life to gratify a habit that is as hurtful as it is idle. The late Bishop Pierce, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, once wrote a letter to his daughter, Claude, which contains wholesome counsel for other children. He said:

"I wish, my daughter, that you would devote yourself to serious reading. It is necessary not only to develop your mind and make your knowledge respectable in society, but it is a high moral duty. It is a grave question whether a Christian ought to read anything that does not increase knowledge and prepare for life. The very most that can be allowed on the other side is a little reading for recreation. You, I fear, are wasting time with magazines and tales, and empty stories in general. This is a great evil; in fact, a sin. Quit it. Read history, biography, poetry, and English classics; study the Bible in its doctrines, principles, and history. You will thus improve your heart, mind, and character. I want you to be wise, good and happy. The time has come for you to prepare earnestly for life and its responsibilities. A word to the wise is sufficient."

Our I's and Other Eyes.

Our I's are just as strong as they were fifty years ago, when we have cause to use them. But we have less and less cause to praise ourselves, since others do the praising, and we are more than willing for you to see us through other eyes. This is how we look to S. F. Boyce, wholesale and retail druggist, Duluth, Minn., who after a quarter of a century of observation writes:

"I have sold Ayer's Sarsaparilla for more than 25 years, both at wholesale and retail, and have never heard anything but words of praise from my customers; not a single complaint has ever reached me. I believe Ayer's Sarsaparilla to be the best blood purifier that has been introduced to the general public." This, from a man who has sold thousands of dozens of Ayer's Sarsaparilla, is strong testimony. But it only echoes popular sentiment the world over, which has "Nothing but words of praise for Ayer's Sarsaparilla."

Adorn the Gospel.

Adorn the gospel next by your unselfishness. If you are always looking to your own interests, if you have no thought but for your own personal comfort, if your religion can live and die within your own hearts, you have not any that is worth having. If you would adorn the gospel you must love others, love them intensely, and make it one object of your lives to make other people happy, for so you will then be acting according to the spirit and genius of the gospel, and you will be adorning the doctrine of God our Savior in all things.—Selected.

Small Courtesies.

In this hurrying age it behooves us all to cultivate a habit of being generous in the bestowal of small courtesies, especially upon the aged and lonely. One who is in the whirl of a busy career may never miss the slight attentions, but another who sits apart and sees life's "great occasions drifting by," is apt to feel hurt if notice is withheld. It is the sign of a gracious spirit to cherish such persons in thoughtful remembrance, and to recognize them in all possible ways. "What a beautiful letter writer your friend is!" said a dear old lady, in a pleased tone, to her daughter. In point of fact, it was a quite ordinary epistle, but it contained a cordial message to the old lady, whom the writer had never seen, and the unexpected attention brought sunshine into the dull monotony of her days. In our correspondence, and in all the interchange of social life, let us take more pains to notice the unnoticed.—Exchange.

No Prejudice.

A friend had been telling Coleridge that it was unfair to prejudice a child by giving him moral and religious instruction. For answer, the author of "Aids to Reflection" invited him to see his garden, and brought him to where a luxuriant growth of ugly and unfragrant weeds spread themselves over beds and walks alike. "You don't call that a garden?" said his friend. "What!" replied Coleridge, "would you have me prejudice the ground in favor of roses and lilies?"

Keep the heroes of the present and of the past before the youthful mind and heart. They are valuable as inspiring models and moulding forces. They deserve to live for their work's sake, but their influence upon formative character can not be safely ignored. Those who love, appreciate and utilize the religious liberty and privilege which our age possesses, must know, study and be affected by those who struggled for the rights of conscience and of humanity in the dark days when men were not allowed to think for themselves, or to worship God according to the dictates of their consciences. All who would come into the spirit of their present grand inheritance in such a land as ours must be full of the animating impulse, and must strengthen it by a fresh infusion gathered from the lives of the heroic and noble who made our country what it is. More and more will there be needed, in the rising generation, a love for, and a tendency toward, worthy objects, and the indomitable energy and devotion which will push them to the front and which will struggle and sacrifice for their maintenance. We come of a brave race, and must not degenerate into cowards. It ill becomes the descendants of the Puritans and of the Revolutionary worthies to disgrace their origin, or prove unworthy of the heroic mould in which they have been cast, but to cultivate the spirit that will do and dare for right, for truth, for humanity and for religion. Ever let our children have the inspiration of real, not of imaginary, heroes.—Presbyterian.

There are some people whose life year by year is only a going around and around in the old beaten paths, with no onward movement. They are like men who walk in a circular course for a prize, covering a thousand miles, perhaps, but ending just where they began. Rather, our daily walk should be like one whose path goes about a mountain, but climbs a little higher with each circuit, until at last he gains the clear summit, and looks into the face of God. While we must do in a measure the same things every day, we should do them a little better with each repetition. —J. R. Miller, D. D.

Reading.

If young people only knew the value of their youth! A half hour each day steadily given to the vanquishing of some real book in history, science, literature, is three hours a week; is more than twelve hours a month; is more than twelve solid days of twenty-four hours each a year. What can not the busiest man accomplish by such seizure of the fragments of his time? Oh, if the young people only knew the culture possible for them by such simple means! And forevermore it is the man who knows who gets to be the man who does, and to whom the chance for doing comes. Merely frittering newspapers and novel reading—a youthhood devoted only to that, how pitiably sad! No ship drifts into harbor. No young person drifts into an achieving manhood or womanhood.—Wayland Hoyt, D. D.

Joining the church is one thing, but joining the Lord Jesus is quite another thing, and only those who have done the second have any clear right to do the first. The main cause of inconsistency and failure in the life of too many professors of religion, is that they make a formal union with the church without any heart union to Christ. Almost their solitary act of loyalty was their standing up to respond to a church covenant before the pulpit. From that time onward their divine Master has no more of them than their idle name on the roll of his followers. They enlisted, they entered their names on the record, and straightway are heard of no more. They made no tie to anything but an organized body of professed Christians—they did not knit their souls to the Savior.

But genuine conversion unites the heart in clinging faith to the Friend of sinners. When you confess this faith before men, you literally and truly join the Lord. You join your weakness to his strength; your ignorance to his wisdom; your unworthiness to his merits; your frailty to his enduring might, and your poverty to his boundless wealth. —Theodore L. Cuyler.

BEAUTY IS WEALTH.

Beauty is as essential to a women as any other quality; with beauty of form and feature comes beauty of mind and character. Physical beauty is a rounded form, the brightly tinted cheek, the vivacious eye, a certain ease and grace of manner, which indicates a superabundance of physical strength. Very few women possess these qualities, but very many more might possess them who do not. If you feel that you are losing vitality, losing your beauty losing your strength, if you feel that your face which once was plump and rosy, is becoming thin and sallow, that wrinkles (which are the terror to all pretty women) are beginning to appear, take our advice and try that greatest of discoveries, the "MASSAGE FACE CUP," which is the only means known to science to convert a thin and sallow expression into a plump and rosy face. It will transform a face with plain or homely features into an expression of grace and beauty. Physiology teaches us that if we would be strong, we must exercise the muscles which need the developing. Exercise causes the blood to rush to that part of the body called into action, the muscle is fed and strengthened by the fresh blood and will, therefore, develop.

The Massage Cup will do for the face, when properly applied, by contracting and relaxing the muscles, what exercise will do for the other parts of the body.

If you would have a pinkish complexion, if you would like a face plump and rosy, if you would like to remove that "horrid" wrinkle, send One Dollar to us and we will mail you the great "MASSAGE FACE CUP," with full directions for its use. Remember, you can have your money back, if you say so.

The Authority for the Change of the Sabbath from the Seventh to the First Day of the Week.

BY REV. C. M'DONALD.

(Read before the Lincoln County Sunday-school Convention at Caseyville, Miss., April 11 1897.)

We regard the Fourth Commendment, Ex. xx, 8-11, "Remember the Sabbath day, to keep it holy," et seq., of perpetual obligation in both dispensations so far as the sanctity of the Sabbath is enjoined. The same divine authority that instituted the holy day has the right to change it from the seventh to the first day of the week.

First: Christ, by his special honors given and blessings bestowed upon the first day of the week, clearly establishes it as the Christian Sabbath. He arose from the dead on the first day of the week, which is an honor greater than can be bestowed upon a day by any other event in the history of the world. The resurrection proves him to be the Son of God, the savior of the world. (See Rom. 1, 4.) His resurrection establishes the resurrection of the whole human family. His is the first-fruits. (See I. Cor. xv, 43; xvii, 23.)

In the evening of the resurrection day Christ appeared to his disciples when they were assembled together, evidently for worship. He breathed on them and said, "Receive ye the Holy Ghost." (John xx, 19-23.) Then on the next first day of the week he came to them again. "And after eight days again his disciples were within, and Thomas with them: then came Jesus, the doors being shut, and stood in the midst, and said, Peace be unto you." (John xx, 26.) On these occasions they were together, and the Lord met with them and blessed them.

His third appearance, according to the record in John's gospel, was to a part (seven) of his disciples at the sea of Tiberias. Here they were toiling as fishermen; it was not on the holy day.

The day of Pentecost was the first day of the week, the Christian's Sabbath, and the disciples were all with one accord in one place waiting for the promised baptism of the Holy Ghost. (Acts 1, 5; ii, 1-4.) The gift of the Holy Ghost on the day of Pentecost was the fulfillment of a promise and a proof of the ascension of Christ to the Father. (See John xiv, 16; xv, 26; xvi, 7.) This is the dispensation of the Holy Spirit. Christ has ascended to heaven, and we have another Comforter, manifesting his personality on the day of Pentecost, and opening a holy campaign which is to result in the conquest of the world for Christ. As the Holy Spirit began his work on the first day of the week, this shows his preference for the day. The Christian's Sabbath has always been owned of God in all periods of the new dispensation.

Second: We notice apostolic authority for observing the first day as the holy Sabbath.

"And upon the first day of the week, when the disciples came together to break bread, Paul preached unto them." (Acts xx, 7.)

"Now, concerning the collection for the saints, as I have given order to the churches of Galatia, even so do ye.

"Upon the first day of the week let every one lay by him in store as God has prospered him, that there be no gatherings when I come." (I. Cor. xvi, 1, 2.)

These texts, we think, show that the first day of the week was the usual time for religious service and for administering the Lord's Supper.

St. John in Revelation i, 10, writes: "I was in the Spirit on the Lord's day." The Christian's Sabbath is sometimes called the Lord's day.

The summing up of the evidence is that the apostles, who were inspired, and had the care of all the churches and were to set in order and settle questions arising in the church, kept and sanctioned this as the holy day.

Third: We quote from some of the early Christian writers in proof of this sacred day. Ignatius, Bishop of Antioch, A. D. 101, says: "Let everyone that loves Christ keep holy the Lord's day, the queen of days, the resurrection day, the highest of all days." Theophilus, Bishop of Antioch, who wrote in the second century, says: "Both custom and reason challenge from us that we honor the Lord's day, seeing on that day it was that our Lord Jesus completed his resurrection from the dead." Irenius, Bishop of Lyons, who also lived in the second century and was a disciple of Polycarp, a companion of St. John, speaks of the Lord's day as the Christian Sabbath: "On the Lord's day everyone of us Christians keeps the Sabbath." Clement of Alexandria, of the same century, testifies: "A Christian, according to the command of the gospel, observes the Lord's day, thereby glorifying the resurrection of the Lord." Tertullian, of the same period, says: "The Lord's day is the holy day of the Christian church."

These historical facts prove beyond doubt that the Christians observed the first day as the Sabbath from the apostolic age.

Fourth: The almost universal opinion of Christians is as given in the above evidence. The only dissenting voice I hear is from the Seventh-Day Adventists or Baptists, a sect that arose in England, Germany and America in the sixteenth century, or about that time, as well as can be determined from history. Because of their small numbers and lack of influence they disturb Christians but little with their seventh-day doctrine. If numbers, with the manifest blessing of God, with a clear conscience, prove anything, we are right in our observance of the first day as the Sabbath.

From "Rex."

This is emphatically an age of improvement, and this fact seems to have caused the impression to prevail to some extent in our churches that the means and methods of primitive Christianity for the salvation of sinners have changed, or should change, to accommodate themselves to the progress of the age. This state of things makes it possible for a Protestant Episcopal Bishop to do away with hell, and relegate the claims of orthodox Christianity that our Lord and Savior was both God and man to the realm of doubt and debate. It also enables modern evangelists to stand in the pulpit and say to sinners that the way of salvation is much easier than in the days of our fathers. Then the sinner was confronted with a literal hell, eternal in its duration. He was also told, that in order to escape that place of torment, it was indispensably necessary for him to do several things. Among them, and first of all, to repent of his sins; that this repentance must be attended with sorrow for his sins. The genuineness of this repentence must be further demonstrated by an entire forsaking of sin, to which add that faith in the Son of God that recognizes him as the only hope of salvation for sinners, and the work is complete; and it only remains for him to grow up into Christ until he arrives at the full stature of manhood in our Lord.

How is it now? Our evangelistic friend tells the people that, owing to recent discoveries in the realm of theological science, the road to heaven has been made much smoother, and there need be no excitement about the matter at all. Repentence is defined as simply a turning away from our former meanness, an expression of a perfunctory belief in the divine Sonship of our Lord, and the work is done. There is no need of any emotion about it at all, not even the emotion of sorrow that we have sinned against that God who so loved us that he gave his only begotten Son to suffer and die for our redemption; nor is the absence of the emotion of joy because of our being pardoned and saved from eternal death to be taken as indicative of the incompleteness of the work. All this I have seen and heard with my own eyes and ears. I have heard preachers deliberately assure the sinner that it is not necessary for him to have any feeling at all; that all he has to do is to make a break for glory and rush right into the kingdom. It is this sort of theology that is filling the church with unconverted members, who might appropriately sing, as a present experience, Charles Wesley's words:

"Oft did I with the assembly join,
And near thine altar drew;
A form of godliness was mine,
The power I never knew.

"I rested in the outward law,
Nor knew its deep design;
The length and breadth I never saw,
And height of love divine."

When a Methodist preacher tells a sinner that he can get religion by any other plan than that of primitive Methodism, or that by professing to have what he has not, and knows that he has not, he will get it, he ought to be unfrocked.

Happily for Sam Jones Camp Ground, this newer theology and these modern methods have not obtained a hold there in the manner of conducting the services. The sinners are told that in the economy of God's providence a hell has been provided for the unrepentant sinner, and that if they wish to escape that hell and an eternity of woe, it is necessary for them to repent and accept the offers of mercy, to turn to God and live, and that they must evidence their desire for salvation in the manner laid down in the "General Rules," etc. If they are in earnest, they come to the altar and stay there until God, for Christ's sake, forgives their sins, and this is the sort of revival work that counts in the last great day. The order of exercises will be about as follows, such changes being made by the Committee on Public Worship as may be necessary: Morning prayer at 6 o'clock, service of some kind at 9 A. M., preaching at 11 A. M., service at 3 and 7:30 P. M. each day except Sundays, when at 9 o'clock will be love-feast, and at 3 P. M. the sacrament of the Lord's Supper. We have an abiding faith that the divine Shekinah will abide with us and fill all the camp. Let all God's people pray for an abundant outpouring of the Holy Spirit on that occasion, and that great grace may rest upon the church and its membership.

Posthumous praise may be a very fine thing, but we incline to the opinion that ninety-nine men out of a hundred would prefer to have some of the good things that are said about them after they are dead spoken while they are yet above ground. The spectre of housecleaning needn't trouble you a moment. The person that dreads housecleaning knows nothing of Pearline—of its easy work, its quickness and comfort, its saving of paint and of rubbing. Go over everything with Pearline—floors, doors, windows, woodwork, paint, marble, stone, glass, carpets, bric-a-brac—and you'll get through any cleaning job in the shortest time, and with the least labor and fuss. You don't need any other help. Pearline is meant to wash everything that water won't hurt. 538

Beware peddlers and some unscrupulous grocers will tell you, "this is as good as" or "the same as Pearline." IT'S FALSE—Pearline is never peddled; if your grocer sends you an imitation, be honest—send it back.

Epworth College

(Formerly MALONE)

Is located in Holly Springs, at the intersection of the Illinois Central and Kansas City, Memphis and Birmingham Railroads, and has always been noted for the health, culture and refinement of its people. Ten passenger trains come and go every day, except Sunday, when we have eight.

We shall continue to work under the auspices of the North Mississippi Conference, and pledge ourselves to use every effort in behalf of those entrusted to our care that they may be developed into educated, polished Christian women.

BOARDING DEPARTMENT.

Pupils boarding in the College have the personal attention of the President and his wife, who, together with the teachers, strive to make their stay while here as pleasant and profitable as possible.

An abundance of substantial food is furnished; ample time given at each meal for everyone to be satisfied, and President's family, teachers and pupils all fare alike. Special attention is paid to their manners and morals at all times, and every effort is made to impress them with the necessity of constant growth, physically, mentally and morally.

We board at $11.00 per month where they take their meals regularly at the table; extra charge when the meals are carried to their rooms, and extra servant hire. This includes pupils and teachers.

No incidental fee is charged unless something is destroyed, and in this case the cost of the article is charged to the party who destroys it.

A letter written by Cardinal Jacobini, and addressed to all Catholic Bishops throughout the world, proposes one of the most widespread series of religious events probably ever held. These extraordinary religious services it is intended shall commemorate the close of the nineteenth and the beginning of the twentieth century. The project put forth by Cardinal Jacobini is the result of the desire to respond to the wish of Pope Leo XIII. to consecrate the transition from one century to the other by "an extraordinary invocation of the divine assistance of Jesus Christ as a happy prestige of peace and concord."

It speaks well for an article when the longer it is used the better it is liked. Such is the case with Ayer's Hair Vigor. People who have been using it for years could not be induced to try any other dressing for their hair, because it gives such perfect satisfaction.

The friends of a minister or evangelist may do him great harm by sending to the paper overwrought descriptions of his learning, eloquence, piety and general effectiveness. We have seen some accounts of the work and character of good men which would not have fitted any human being who ever lived. Paul or Chrysostom or Augustine could not have been compared with the preacher, if what was said about him was true. More than one good man has been saved from ridicule by an editor's discretion, but then the editor gets the credit for being hostile to the brother simply because he has saved him from the unintended wounds of a friend.—The Watchman.

What Tommy Said.

Uncle John—Well, what do you mean to be when you get to be a man?

Little Tommy (promptly)—A doctor, like pa.

Uncle John (quizzically)—Indeed; and which do you intend to be, an allopath or a homœopath?

Little Tommy—I don't know what them awful big words means, Uncle John; but that don't make no difference, 'cause I ain't goin' to be either of 'em. I'm just goin' to be a family doctor an' give all my patients Hood's Sarsaparilla, 'cause my pa says that if he is a doctor, he's 'bliged to own up that Hood's Sarsaparilla is the best family medicine he ever saw in his life.

Mansfield Female College.

This institution was chartered in 1855, and has a record of which it may justly be proud. It is located in the thriving and healthful town of Mansfield, said to be the highest point in Louisiana, forty miles south of Shreveport, and has good buildings, a large and lovely campus, a strong faculty, attractive and wholesome surroundings, and an excellent curriculum. The facilities for the study of music, art, and elocution are of the best; nor is physical culture slighted. The president, Prof. T. S. Sligh, is a man of culture and ability. Parents who have daughters to educate should write for a catalogue.

Iuka (Miss.) Normal Institute.

State and extensively endowed schools give free tuition. Iuka Normal Institute being a private institution, dependent on tuition fees and the kind of teaching done, is able only to offer low rate scholarships and high grade instruction to its patrons. Think of it! $125 to $135 will pay board, tuition, laundry, and book-rent bills for ten months.

Think of it. The methods of teaching, the intense earnestness of the pupils who come to Iuka, and the enthusiastic work of faculty and pupils, enables the student to do twice as much in a given time as is done in other schools. The Normal gives you twice as much for your money and time.

Think again. Time is money. One year here is equivalent to two elsewhere. It is not true, but grant price to be the same. Ten months here for $125 to $135. Twenty months elsewhere, $250 to $270. Difference, the price of ten months schooling and ten months time in which any young man or woman ought to make easily $200 to $400. See!

Think. Where will you attend school next year? See advertisement in this paper. Write for catalogue.

Letter from "Gilderoy."

"What is the condition or relation of a jnstified sinner?" Conviction for sin precedes repentance, and repentance goes before justification or forgiveness. The object of conviction is to bring repentance, and repentance leads to faith, and faith is the condition of pardon or jnstification. Sonnd conviction, genuine repentance and saving faith are all wrought in the human heart by the Holy Ghost. Not as an act of sovereign power independently exercised, but as a divine agent co-operating with an intelligent hnman spirit impotent or deficient in will-power. One feels his need, but can not lay hold on God without divine help. In the convicted and repentant state the sinner is awfully conscions of his guilt before God and his separation from him. He sees God as an angry Judge, and not as a loving Father. His own heart condemns him, and he feels that the holy God condemns him, too. In this state the sinner is sick, and his sonl is sorrowful even unto death. Hope departs, and despair settles down npon him. He knows he is not in hell, bnt he feels like he onght to be, and would be if justice were executed upon him. He pleads for mercy, and for Christ's sake alone. In this awful extremity he gives np and cries, "Lord, save me, or I perish forever." He believes with a heart unto righteousness; all by the help, the power of the Holy Ghost. He gives np faith in self, renounces sin forever and trusts Christ alone for salvation, and on this condition God forgives his sin and accepts him as a son. Thia kind of forgiveness of sin we call justification, and jnstification by faith only. The whole of it hinges on that last condition and supreme exercise.

As Wesleyans, given to clear distinctions, we do not apply the term "justification" to the work of regeneration, though that is understood as if included. The term "jnstification" is used by Methodists to express a judicial act in the mind of God that results in the forgiveness or pardon of past sins. Some systems say "future sins also," bnt this is done to insure "the final perseverance of the saints." At the instant of faith all past and all prospective sins are remitted. Methodists hold that sins committed after jnstification are to be repented of and forgiven on the same condition and in the same way as before justification.

Justification is more properly a relation than a state, though the word "state" is often used in connection with it. It matters little which is used—only one thing is meant. When God forgives sin he does it freely and fully. He accepts the person of the sinner, and is pleased with him. God sets him free from guilt, and takes him back on probation without a bnrden. In his relation to law he is as if he had not sinned at all.

Some systems of theology, for the reason stated above, make jnstification, practically, the end of probation; and one system, Arminian in most things, is Calvinistic in this. It is a curious study, and interesting, too, how men could part company on Arminian premises, and then come together in Calvinistic conclusions. All this young men need to know in order to understand some questions uppermost in the public mind.

A justified sinner is on probation still, and he is, by the fact of forgiveness, nnder increased obligation to obey the law of God in everything. Instead of continning in sin, that grace may abonnd, he ought to be dead to sin because grace did abound to him. This is the Wesleyan view and theory, and it is abundantly supported by both reason and Scriptnre.

Justification is something done for us, and not something wrought in us. It takes place in the mind of God, and not in the heart of man. It is jnstification as opposed to condemnation. These are the opposites of each other. Jnstification is unique, singular and alone, and is not first in its relation to any other work in the whole process of salvation. It concerns one thing, and one only.

In the books named in my first letter, and in many others, this subject is fully treated; and to those books, specially to the old ones, our young men ought to go. Many of the new books can not be nnderstood without a fair knowledge of the old ones. Histories of doctrines are very important to a clear understanding of them. There is a large history connected with the doctrine of justification. One may have a clear experience of jnstification and the abiding witness of it with little or no knowledge of the history or theology of this doctrine; but this will not do for preachers and teachers.

Correspondence.

Meridian District Conference.

The Meridian District Conference was held at Binnsville, Miss., ten miles from the railroad, July 28-31, 1897. The station and circnit preachers were all present except one. Thirty-six lay members answered to roll call. Dr. C. G. Andrews, P. E., was in the chair at every session. Much time was given to preaching and religions services. The bnsiness of the Conference was carefully dispatched.

Dr. W. B. Murrah, of Millsaps College, and President J. W. Beeson, of E. M. F. College, made gratifying reports from these two institntions, which gave an educational impetns, we trnst, to all who heard them.

Rev. T. L. Mellen, Conference missionary secretary, preached a strong missionary sermon at 11 A. M.

Rev. T. B. Clifford, agent for the Orphans' Home, was present, and filled the pnlpit at night.

Mrs. S. B. Watts, district secretary of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Board, was introduced to the Conference, and arranged with the women present for local organization.

The following applications for license to preach were granted, viz.: C. E. Bonlton, C. E. Wellborn, G. S. Harmon. For admission into traveling connection: G. S. Harmon, J. J. Golden, and H. J. Moore. For deacon's orders: J. J. Golden and H. J. Moore.

The licenses of the following local preachers were renewed, viz.: L. B. Moore, J. J. Golden, F. L. Crowson, G. W. Hnddleston, H. J. Moore, R. L. Blanks.

The following were elected lay delegates to the Annnal Conference, viz.: T. P. Bell, L. P. Brown, R. M. Bordeaux, S. B. Watts; alternates: D. S. Harmon, J. E. Watts, S. S. Cope, and B. F. Ormond.

The Committee on Pnblishing Interests commended onr Snnday-school Board and literatnre; also Drs. Tigert, Hoss and Black as editors; and further stated that onr own Conference organ, the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE, is meeting the requirements of a chnrch paper under the efficient management of its editor and pnblisher, Dr. W. C. Black. Pastors and people were nrged to nse our own papers and literature.

The Educational Board reported as follows: "We again commend our church schools to the prayers and patronage of the pnblic, and enjoin onr people to give these institutions their first consideration; and wonld remind our pastors that they can add greatly to the success of onr schools by constantly keeping their claims before the public.

"We were delighted to have with ns President W. B. Murrah, of Millsaps College, who made a very encouraging report of this institntion. With the addition of a new Science Hall and a Law School dnring the last session, the institution has greatly increased power for nsefnlness, and has advantages unsurpassed by any school in the State.

"We were pleased to have with us also President J. W. Beeson, of East Mississippi Female College, and hear of the sncess of this institntion. We commend President Beeson's energy and tact, and his highly commendable purpose to pnt into the college only the most capable teachers, thereby maintaining the high grade of the institution."

The following laymen were elected members of the Educational Board, viz.: S. S. Cope, Prof. J. W. Beeson, L. P. Brown, and T. P. Bell.

The Committee on Finances gave extended statistical facts, and reported further as follows: "That the finances of our church depend largely npon the spiritual state of its members. If the heart of a man is right, his purse-strings will be loose. Have a genuine revival, and the financial problem is solved. When chnrch members are right with God, there will be no need of ice-cream snppers, strawberry festivals, and other clap-trap methods of raising money. We believe snch methods as are frequently nsed will kill any church, spiritually and financially, if it is not already dead. We believe God will not honor money raised by bazaars, lectnres, or any other way than by tithing and by free-will offerings. We find no record in the Bible where money was raised in the olden times by these questionable methods. Paul says, 'Upon the first day of the week let everyone of you lay by him in store as God has prospered him.' We commend Paul's way of raising money. We snggest that onr preachers teach by precept and example the Bible plan of tithing as practiced in the old dispensation and approved by Christ. We find no place in the Bible where this law was repealed. We have the same state of affairs to-day that Malachi fonnd 400 years before Christ, when he nttered these remarkable words: 'Will a man rob God? Yet ye have robbed me. But ye say, Wherein have we robbed thee? In tithes and in offerings. Ye are cursed with a curse, for ye have robbed me, even this whole nation. Bring ye all the tithes into the storehouse, and prove me now herewith, saith the Lord of hosts, if I will not ponr yon ont a blessing that there shall not be room enongh to receive it.' These same words might well be applied to onr chnrch at the present day. Onr people in many places are not paying their dnes to God, but are depending npon worldly ways of raising money, and thns not only getting onr people in the habit of not paying, bnt sapping the life blood ont of what spiritnality is in the chnrch. We suggest that onr preachers take the first opportunity to preach on systematic giving; that our stewards have some good system of collecting either weekly, monthly, or qnarterly—begin early in the year and carry it ont vigoronsly, thus assisting in edncating the people in regnlar and systematic giving."

Lauderdale was selected as the place for the holding of the next District Conference.

From all over the district came evidences of the faithful pastoral work of the presiding elder, Dr. C. G. Andrews.

Bro. C. M. Crosaley, preacher in charge of Binnsville and circnit, gave to each delegate seemingly the best home, and indications all proved that God had honored him by a widespread and deep revival on his work.

North Mississippi Conference Notes.

I have just closed a four weeks' tour in visiting Pittsboro, Banner, Slate Springs, and Chapel Hill circuits. I aided Bro. Huggin five days in a meeting at Pine Ridge Chnrch, following which I was one week and a half in the tent meeting at Pittsboro, and one week in a similar one near Slate Springs, both conducted by our own evangelist, Rev. W. M. McIntosh. The results of these meetings in conversions and accessions were not as great as we had reason to expect, yet they were occasions of much and lasting good to the chnrches and commnnities where held. Bro. McIntosh labored in great feebleness of body; but, being strong in spirit, he did faithful service, the fruits of which will abide for years to come. Long will the people, old and young, cherish the memory of his magnetic and earnest ministry. He is now at home taking needed rest and recuperating broken health, where he should be let alone for several weeks.

I had the pleasure of attending qnarterly meeting one day at Pleasant Hill, Banner circuit, which was in my pastorate, 1873, '74 and '75, and of preaching to the children and grandchildren of those I then served. A few of the old parishioners yet survive and are "happy on the way" to the "Better Land." It was delightful to meet at Pittsboro, Slate Springs, etc., associates of my boyhood, pupils of my young manhood, and parishioners of former years to talk over the past and covenant to pray for and help each other in the fntnre, with the prospect of meeting again in the "sweet by-and-by."

I closed the itinerary with a few days this week with Bro. G. S. Morehead, at Mars Hill, in a protracted meeting service. We nsed in the meetings "The Young People's Hymnal." Bro. McIntosh and the preachers and people were delighted with it. A goodly nnmber were sold, and many more would have been but for a failure to receive a shipment in time. Let it be nsed in all onr meetings in preference to any other similar publication.

The transfer of Bro. J. T. Howell to the church triumphant leavea a vacancy in our militant ranks that will be difficnlt to fill. The Lord bless the bereft family and pastoral charge and keep us all faithfnl to the end, as he was.

Summering.

MR. EDITOR: This note I write from the Seashore Camp Gronnd. Mrs. Shipman has been in bad health for twenty months, bnt we had planned no Snmmer trip; had made np onr minds to remain in Sardis all Summer, but, before we knew anything about it, onr Board of Stewards had been called together by the president, and a vacation of a month granted to the pastor, that he might have an opportunity of taking his sick wife to the coast. We feel thankful, and if the good Lord will give ns an opportunity, we will try to prove it. Mrs. Shipman has been quite sick since we arrived, bnt is improving now, and we are hoping for mnch relief. Salt breeze and bathing is refreshing. This is getting to be qnite a health and Snmmer resort. The keeper of the gronnds tells me there are seventy-two bnildings on the ground, and now five hnndred people are here. Many new and handsome cottages have been pnt np in the last fonr years. Electric lights have taken the place of the old oil lamp. Artesian water runs through all the grounds. I heard a stranger say he had been looking for a Snmmer home, and had fonnd no place to compare with the camp gronnd. He spoke specially of the shade and water. He did not know that he could go to preaching twice on Snnday, to Snnday-school, and prayer meeting Wednesday night, and class meeting Thursday evening at 4:30 o'clock. So all this vast company can attend divine services by the seashore, if they so desire; and many do. Many preachers are here fishing. Never before have I been indnced to cast a hook in the briny deep; a new experience have I. When one of those fine speckled trout hangs himself on my hook, and I feel the tremble of the pole, see it bend, and my line whizzing through the water, a strange sensation traverses my spinal column. Yesterday myself, three other preachers and three gentlemen landed the finest catch of the season. But, Doctor, Hermann W. Knickerbocker is the champion angler of the camp ground. Somehow he seems to divine their haunts, and then fishes with the hook of a wizard. W. S. SHIPMAN.

Seashore Camp Ground, Aug. 13, 1897.

Columbus District Conference.

The Columbus District Conference met at Artesia, Jnly 6, 1897; Rev. R. A. Bnrronghs, P. E., in the chair. All of the preachers in the district present but one, who was absent on account of serious illness in his family. One or more laymen were present from every charge. The preaching was of a high order and deeply spiritual. Bro. Burronghs is a capital presiding officer, and looked carefully after the various interests of the church. In every department the work throughout showed advance over last year. In fact, the condition of the whole district is very gratifying. The presiding elder announced that he believed the entire amount assessed for all purposes would be paid by every charge. Almost every charge is building or repairing chnrches or parsonages.

Rev. J. H. Kinnebrew was received as a local preacher from the Christian Church. W. H. Browning was recommended for admission into the traveling connection. J. N. Hall, a promising young man, was licensed to preach. He goes to Millsaps College for a year or two.

Rev. T. B. Clifford, agent of Mississippi Orphans' Home, was with us preaching and raising money for the Home.

Rev. G. W. Bachman was on hand selling books and taking subscriptions for our church papers. It is the opinion of this scribe that Bro. Bachman is doing as much good as any man in the Conference.

C. B. Ames, W. W. Magruder, W. V. Connell, F. A. Critz were elected delegates to the Annnal Conference, with Joe Cook, N. D. Guerry and G. D. Harris as alternates.

We missed you, Doctor, and many expressed regret that you did not come.

Next Conference goes to Piney Grove, on the Columbus circuit.

Missionary Matters.

The Local Board of the W. B. F. M. met in Nashville, Jnly 26. Resolntions of sympathy were approved in regard to the recent death of Mrs. Longstreet, a dear sister of the president of onr Board. These were ordered spread npon the Minntes, published in the Woman's Missionary Advocate, and a copy sent Mrs. Wightman.

Dr. Mildred Phillips Leitch, who recently lost her hnsband, asked to be sent to China as a medical missionary—a place she once occupied. The Board did not consider it adviable to send ont a woman with three small children.

The nineteenth Annual Report of the Board has gone ont. By some oversight the name of Miss Annie Chnrchill was omitted from the list of missionaries. Miss Churchill is located at Saltillo, Mexico, and is from the Northwest Texas Conference Society. Miss Norville will soon go to her new work in the City of Mexico. Mrs. Campbell, appointed to Korea, will sail from San Francisco, Aug. 14. Miss Waters and Miss Williams will go later. Miss Ross has gone to Brazil. Miss Lochie Rankin will be at home only one month with her mother, and will do no visiting. Miss Mary Richardson will return to China with her sister, Miss Helen, when Miss Helen's visit is over. Miss Wright will go to Laredo, Aug. 23. Miss Haygood, who has been sick, is again at her desk; so a letter of Jnly 2 states.

The Scarritt Bible and Training-School is preparing for another year of good work.

There never was a time when our prayerful, earnest efforts were more needed than now. God is blessing our work in every field, and will bless us if we meet our obligations.

I most earnestly request that each district secretary of the Mississippi Conference look after their Young People and Juvenile Societies, and help them as never before to do good work. Let each district secretary be prompt in sending quarterly reports to corresponding secretary.

SALLIE SMYLIE,
Cor. Sec. Miss. Conf.

A Word to the Wise.

In Bro. Mellen's report of the Brandon district it seems that he would reflect just a little on the presiding elder and pastors. The report was for the second qnarter, which ronnds of Quarterly Conferences was made in jnst two and a half months, and not for the more than seven months, as stated in his report. I have been in the Brandon district nearly three years, and can say that the Brandon district was never in better condition, financially and spiritually. We moved np last year along all lines. One thonsand two hnndred and nineteen dollars paid presiding elder and pastors more than the year before, and all the other claims brought np in same proportion, and this year every interest of the chnrch is moving npward nicely. Bro. Simmons, in his own qniet, bnt sure way, is looking after every interest of the chnrch.

Now, Bro. Mellen, instead of growling and scolding, read np on your line the missionary work, and in your next report give us something good and cheering that will stimnlate us to greater efforts for the Master. I know all the preachers in the Brandon district, and never have been associated with a truer and more consecrated set of preachers in my life. Bro. J. A. Godfrey used to say to parents, when talking to them about raising and training children, "I had rather have a square box of candy than all the switches in the swamp." A word to the wise is sufficient.

W. M. SULLIVAN.

From Rev. J. M. Cowan.

At the suggestion of my family physician and by the advice of my presiding elder, I am now in Jackson, my condition being such as to require special surgical treatment: Will have to remain here some time. My expenses will be heavy; in order to help out have decided to take a few boarders.

My home is in North Jackson, near Millsaps College. I can board young men attending the college very cheap. Dr. Murrah has assured me that he will do all that he can to assist me. While he does not approve of the boys boarding in town, he says that he will not object to good "steady fellows" boarding with me.

I trust that I will have the prayers of my brethren in the ministry and the church for speedy restoration to health.

A few of the brethren of First Church here have been very kind to me, prominently among them Bro. Geo. W. Carlie. J. M. COWAN.

Notice.

There will be a meeting of the Board of Directors of the Mississippi Orphans' Home, in the city of Water Valley, Miss., on Thursday, Sept. 23, 1897, at nine o'clock A. M. Important business to be transacted.

By order of the president.

Forgive Your Enemies.

When taught by the child of Mary, it was evidently a new doctrine to that generation. Those who first heard him were "astonished at his doctrine;" and even now, when this positive duty is presented in its gospel force, in all the fullness of its bearings on practical life, men are amazed, and have turned from it with a manifest feeling that they would risk the damnation of hell rather than attempt the exercise of the grace to freely pardon one whom they hated for supposed or real wrong.

We are taught that when we pray we say, "Forgive us our debts as we forgive our debtors," with this caution, "For if ye forgive men their trespasses, your heavenly Father will also forgive you; but if ye forgive not men their trespasses, neither will your Father forgive your trespasses." (Matt. v.) The law against profane swearing and murder is not more plain nor positive than this duty as laid down. When the Lord Jesus began to teach this doctrine the highest conception of the duty of forgiveness was in a tradition of the fathers, namely, "Thou shalt love thy neighbor and hate thine enemy." The Master substituted that in these words: "But I say unto you, Love your enemies, bless them that curse you, do good to them that hate you, and pray for them which despitefully use you and persecute you." (Matt. v, 43, 44.) Taking these Scriptures as the basis of our life-practice, we must forgive and love and bless and pray for our enemies. The safe plan is to take this teaching in its highest and most unqualified sense for our guide and practice, not so much as to how little we can manage to do, and still respect the teaching, but how much we can do, and how far we can go, and be in accordance with the letter and spirit of this gospel truth. Writers of high authority and unquestioned piety, while they urge from this Scripture teaching the duty of forgiving our enemies, claim this restriction and qualification, that we are not required to forgive until some acknowledgment is made and pardon asked. I do not think this position is sustained by one single passage of Scripture. The doctrine is apologized for with the argument that God never forgives a sinner until he repents and asks for pardon. It may be admitted that God's prerogative is the highest on any practice belonging to his own work, but we claim there are some things God can not do. For instance: He can not profane his own holy name. Again, God can not lie. And, further, it is a self-evident statement that God can not forgive the sinner until he repents and asks for pardon. To do so would be false to truth and a forfeiture of the divine nature. Men can and have profaned and taken the name of God in vain. They can and do lie; they can and have pardoned wrongs to themselves without an expression of penitence or a plea for pardon by those who have wronged them. Again, when an apology has been made to some men and pardon asked, they have rejected the apology and refused the pardon. A true penitent God can not reject. He is compelled by his own name and nature to grant pardon when asked in sincerity and truth. This statement is axiomatic; nothing is needed to prove a self-evident fact.

Here lay down the proposition that we must forgive in every instance if we are to be forgiven. We are by nature malicious, vengeful, and unforgiving. I think in my own nature I inherited more than my due proportion of these unsaintly elements. For a long while the great struggle in my religious life was to love my enemies. I never could. I never knew how to love them until I learned to forgive. I could not pray for those who despitefully used me until I was trained to love them. I have prayed for such who have eventually professed religion, and then begged my pardon. I felt I had done that years before; had learned to love and pray for this offender, and now my prayers for their conversion were answered. I retained nothing to forgive in one case a decade before. Some of the hardest trials of my life have come from men who bore a decided character for piety. They were persuaded that what they did was right. It is self-evident. A good man could not say he was sorry for doing what he thought was right. I did not, I would not, I could not demand an apology; yet I did forgive that I might love and pray for them, while the very fact that they were praying men made the cross harder to bear, especially when they knew the things they did afflicted me.

A parent may become angry with a child for something. The child may never feel at liberty to express sorrow for such—for instance, as marriage; yet the parent maintains his anger, and makes such disposition of his property as to make the child feel the weight of his wrath after he is dead and on to the last day the child shall live. I once knew a father—Methodist preacher he was—who became enraged at his own son, pronounced upon him the bitterest curses to be borne in this life, and refused to speak to him or to recognize him in any way anywhere. The son was distressed at the state of his father's mind towards himself. The cause of the parent's anger was, the son held property his mother left him of her own right. To say he was sorry for holding it would do no good; to give it up he thought would be an injustice to his own children. The son died in kindly feelings toward his father; the father died cherishing anger towards the orphan children left by his dead son. How much better to have lived in the exercise of this forgiveness, whether mistaken in the character of the offense or not; whether the offender can or can not beg a pardon. It is certainly easier to forgive when a pardon is asked, and that is the legitimate act of the offender; but when in truth he can not beg pardon, the offended Christian has the high prerogative to forgive, whether he understands the case as the offending party does or not. In forgiving upon this principle the offended party is certainly upon safe ground; no hair-splitting distinction to ascertain whether his feelings are religiously right in the controversy or not. He can say while living, say in death, say at the judgment, "I have forgiven every enemy."

On a second occasion distinct from that of the Sermon on the Mount, where the Lord taught the disciples to pray, he gave them the same formula as before, but giving the clause on forgiving our enemies in stronger language, thus: "And forgive us our sins, for we also forgive everyone that is indebted to us." (Luke xi, 3.) This plea is put into our mouths as an argument before God to be forgiven, taking this with the caution in the Sermon on the Mount: "For if ye forgive men their trespasses, your heavenly Father will also forgive you: but if ye forgive not men their trespasses, neither will your Father forgive your trespasses." With an unforgiving spirit in our hearts, with this prayer, we ask for condemnation.

Growth Again.

We were quite surprised at an article recently published in the Advocate on the subject of "Growth in Grace." The brother who wrote it must have thought it was all right, or he never would have allowed it published. Fearing, therefore, that some one else may think the same thing about it, we shall proceed to show its lackings.

He said: "Growth in nature involves accretions to the substance of the growing thing or animal."

Now, we should like to know in what respect growth in nature involves accretions to the substance of the growing thing or animal, or what business it has with accretions whatever. Can the brother tell us? The etymon of the word "accretion," is "ac," for "ad," which means "to," and "crescere," which means "to grow"—literally, "to grow to"—and hence the literal meaning of the brother, whether he intended it or not, is, that growth in nature involves a growth to the substance of a growing thing or animal. That is, the substance of a growing thing or animal involves a growth to it; and, therefore, can not anyone see that such a growing thing or animal would be a growing monstrosity? Why, surely they can. Accretion carries with it the idea of growth from without, and hence a normal growing animal or plant is increased from within, and not from without, by accretion, as the brother has erroneously supposed.

Having seen the faultiness of his physical growth, now let us see how his spiritual growth stands. This, we must confess in the very beginning, is hard to do, for he wrote like he was floundering in the mud or groping in the dark. He said: "We are in a state of grace when born into the kingdom of God, but imperfect and immature, and hence under necessity of growing to maturity—not holiness—by a gradual process;" and then again he said: "Every moral, accountable creature is either holy or unholy. If the latter, it is because of unholy principles in the nature not yet destroyed or subdued. This state of things may exist in the justified believer which renders him unholy, but innocent as long as he maintains a justified state."

Can not anyone see from these statements how he flounders, staggers and plunges into darkness? Certainly they can. According to his own statements—that is, if we are to understand that his justified person is in the kingdom of God at all—a person born into the kingdom of God is in a state of grace, and hence he must grow to maturity, and that such a person is either holy or unholy, and if he is unholy, he is justified with unholy principles in his nature, and hence is innocent as long as he maintains a justified state. What theology! He seems to forget altogether that Christ said, "Except a man be born of water and of the Spirit, he can not enter into the kingdom of God" (John iii, 5); and, too, that this change makes him who has it holy. How can a person be born again without being holy? And if being born again, or born into the kingdom of God, does not make a person holy, then we should like to know what good it will do him since the Bible teaches, "Holiness without which no man shall see the Lord." (Heb. xii, 14.) Again he says, that a person born into the kingdom of God must grow to maturity, but not to holiness. Who ever heard of a Methodist preacher teaching that a person must grow to holiness, or that he can grow at all spiritually until he is first made holy? He must be made holy first before he can grow at all; and when he is made holy by the new birth, then, and not till then, can he begin to grow in holiness, not to holiness, and to maturity. But the brother says: "Holiness is a moral quality that can not be added to as can other things that grow. We are commanded to be holy, not to grow into holiness, for that we can not do. Strictly speaking, there are no degrees in holiness." We are not an advocate of the "added-to" theory in growth, but we should like to know what the brother does with Paul's exhortation when he said, "Perfecting holiness in the fear of God." (II. Cor. vii, 1.) Again, if holiness is a quality so unalterably fixed that there can be no degrees, is not the same true of goodness, too? And if so, then the Lord has made a mistake in requiring us to be holy and good, and hence it is just as Christ said in speaking of holiness or goodness without degrees, "None is good save one, that is God." (Luke xviii, 19.)

If the brother wishes to get right on this all-important subject, let him study it in the light of the Bible, and then he will understand what Peter meant when he said, "Grow in grace, and in the knowledge of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ" (II. Peter iii, 18), keeping in mind that Peter said, "en chariti," in grace, and not "eis chariti," into grace.

Correspondence.

A Discordant Note or Two.

The missionary secretary visited the Vicksburg District Conference by special invitation of the presiding elder (who also furnished the means to defray traveling expenses), and in his "feeble way tried to preach" on the subject assigned him: "The Holy Ghost in Missions." A very attentive congregation listened to what was said; but the sermon made no impression on the secretary of the District Conference, for the presence of the former was not noted in the report of proceedings.

The missionary secretary also visited the Meridian District Conference at Binnsville at his own expense; and had the pleasure of preaching to a very attentive and appreciative congregation on "God's Purpose and Our Duty in Missions." It was more than pleasant to be with so many of the brethren—in the ministry and so many of the laymen whose hospitality had been enjoyed in the years of his presiding eldership. It was a joy to know that he had a warm place in so many loyal hearts. The attendance at the Meridian District Conference was next to that at the Brookhaven, and far ahead of that at the Jackson or the Vicksburg. As at Oak Ridge, the Binnsville people were deeply interested in the proceedings. Dr. Andrews has his work well in hand, and is watchful of every interest of the church. Of course, homes and hearts are open to him. All finances are far behind. Two young preachers whose reports indicate arrearages on all lines, and especially missionary lines—domestic as well as foreign—left just before the missionary sermon. They felt no need of information or suggestion.

One preacher gave the names of the physicians and druggists, and another told the secretary there were none in the bounds of his work; and two preachers from other districts have written the desired information. When a few more respond, almost thirty out of one hundred and twenty-three pastors will have written or spoken to the secretary. Unless the remainder write this month, they need not write at all. Later than this month will defeat the plan, for the time before Conference will be too short to carry out the plan, and the new secretary appointed at Conference may decide to work along other lines.

Bro. C. F. Emory writes the secretary that the statement that "Poimenos" had reported nothing for foreign or domestic missions . . . makes him ["Poimenos"] appear to disadvantage; that he [Emory] "happens to know that the first money that went into the missionary treasury was ten dollars from him for each of these causes;" and suggests that the missionary secretary "had better be sure of the facts before rushing into print." And the missionary secretary bows low and begs pardon of Bro. Emory and "Poimenos."

As the editor recently elected by the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society of the North Mississippi Conference, I will make my first contribution to your columns. In assuming the arduous duties devolving on this office, I do so with the full knowledge that I have no easy task before me; but with the help of Him who denies no one, I hope to fill the position to the satisfaction of the members of our society.

In co-operation, I ask all the members to collect and collate all information appertaining to the advancement of our work, and to give me their earnest assistance. Whatever ability I may possess can not be fully utilized unless the materials and data for correct reports and other items of interest are furnished. Unless this is systematically and faithfully done, there will be but little to edit—only that little that may come under the scope of my personal observation. So you see, my sisters, how necessary it is for you to join and assist me. Simple statistics do not fill newspaper columns, nor can a member of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society afford to draw on her imagination for events, for we are only seeking the truth.

Unfortunately, I could not attend our Conference until the third day, and was called home by telegraph before its close; so, if reports embraced herein are not as full as they ought to be, you can know the reason. Most of the information relating to it was kindly furnished by Sisters R. O. Brown, Wall and Dean. The session opened Saturday evening, at 4 P. M., by a meeting of the Executive Committee. The usual praise service was held at 8:30 P. M., conducted by our president, Sister Hargrove. She read the verse, "I am the vine, ye are the branches." This conveyed the beautiful thought to our minds that we were co-partners in this work with our Lord Jesus Christ. What a glorious and sublime one! Without the tendrils constantly receiving their life from him, how long could they exist? After this instructive talk by our sister, many testified of the goodness of God and the blessings received by doing his work.

At 11 A. M. an excellent sermon was preached by Bro. I. W. Lewis from the text, "For I was an hungered, and ye gave me meat." An able exposition of our duty towards the unclaimed masses of the day was presented.

At 4:30 P. M. children's meeting was conducted by our president; a large congregation in attendance. The subject talked on was "Giving." Afterwards had several recitations by boys and girls. Little Jamie McIntosh entertained the audience very much by an illustration with three dolls, which was both apt and original. A reply by a little six-year-old miss completed the illustration, showing our duty was always to offer God our best efforts in love and service.

At night Professor Lowry, of Blue Mountain, Miss., conducted religious exercises, after which we were welcomed by little Miss Ruth Leach, which was answered by Miss Cosey Collier, of Oxford. Miss Nina Pryor delivered a welcome address in behalf of the Nannie Fant Memorials, of Holly Springs. In the absence of Miss Bessie Ramsey—to whom this honor had been delegated—our president responded in a few well-chosen words.

A hearty welcome was extended the Conference, in behalf of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society of Holly Springs, by Miss Christine Burns, which made us feel as if "the city was ours." Miss Ella Grider was expected to have made reply, but was unable to come on account of illness of her sister, and, as usual, when called on, Mrs. Hoskins made a splendid extemporaneous response.

Corresponding secretary's report was read by Mrs. McGahay, of Columbus, on account of the absence of Sister Dean, who was kept at home by the death of a dear little one. The report was very encouraging, and a synopsis of which is hereto appended: 91 adult societies—membership, 1,612; 77 Juvenile and Young People's Societies—membership, 1,653, making a grand total of 168 societies and 3,265 members. Thirty life members, 10 honorary life members, 8 scholarships supplied; 5 day-schools, 6 Bible women; 7 hospital beds furnished, 436 subscribers to Woman's Missionary Advocate, 472 subscribers to Little Worker. Forty-two new societies have been organized during the year, and 1,034 new members added. This report summarized speaks for itself, and we should push on to renewed efforts in this grand and glorious cause.

Business meeting opened Monday morning; religious exercises conducted by Mrs. S. M. Thames. Fraternal greetings from the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society of the Presbyterian Church of Holly Springs was extended by Mrs. Hall. In the absence of the Conference recording secretary, Mrs. Hoskins was elected secretary pro tem. Roll was called; all the district secretaries were present, and a large attendance of delegates. Committees on Platform and Courtesies appointed by president, composed of Miss Burns and Miss Emmie Fant, and their duties were performed to the satisfaction of all.

Sister Irvine thought the members of the Conference should "keep cool" heads, and in a humorous manner said the absence of hats and bonnets would tend much to do so—a happy thought.

Sister Clara Fant was then introduced, and read her financial report, showing $4,474.52 had been raised in this Conference for all purposes during the year. Winona and Aberdeen districts divided the honors, the former raising the largest amount of money, and the latter having done the most work. Winona Auxiliary also received the banner, having raised over $500. Good many of our other societies thought they could Lay "on McDuff" if they had a Lay* like Winona. Carrollton Juveniles also, in Winona district, "bore aloft" the Juvenile banner, having raised $120. District secretaries then read their reports, and were commended by all as exceptionally good.

Monday afternoon was devoted to reading auxiliary reports. At 5:30 P. M. Mrs. Mosby entertained the children at her home. Monday night Miss Lizzie Hennell gave a very fine recitation, subject "Unaware," showing how we failed to recognize Christ in our every-day lives. A fraternal greeting by Miss Matthews, of the Parsonage and Home Mission Society, was given, and the thoughts and ideas conveyed were approved by all. The annual address of our president followed, showing that out of the 35 Conferences in our Board, the North Mississippi was one out of four that redeemed its pledge by adding over a thousand new members, and was sixth in amount of money raised, and that to Winona, Aberdeen and Columbus was due the credit of the large accessions to our membership. We were also informed this had been our best year's work, much of which was due to the efficiency of the district secretaries, and reminded us not to be satisfied with well-doing, but to "go on, go on, go on."

Tuesday morning Juvenile reports read. It made us feel the cause of missions was advancing to see such little "tots" at work, and the religious enthusiasm displayed by them. Tuesday afternoon, on completion of reports of Adult Auxiliaries, on motion of Sister Wall, our president and Sister Cameron were made life honorary members. Sister Hargrove seemed much affected by this mark of love, shown in such a spontaneous manner, and replied in an appreciative way, saying while she was on the eve of departure for other fields of labor, yet she should always feel as if she was a member while her name was emblazoned for life on the rolls of our society. Report of Nominating Committee was then called for, and the following officers elected: President, Mrs. G. H. Lipscomb, Booneville; vice-president, Mrs. S. M. Thames, Winona; corresponding secretary, Mrs. W. M. McIntosh, Grenada; treasurer, Mrs. Clara Fant, Holly Springs; auditor, Mrs. J. F. Evans, ———; editor, Mrs. E. P. Coleman, Como. The same district secretaries were elected as last year, except Grenada, and Mrs. T. B. Clifford was elected for that district.

Tuesday evening, report of Mrs. McIntosh from Woman's Board. In her usual felicitous manner she gave us a better conception of the scope of our work than mere figures would have done. Miss Burns, a representative of the Nannie Fant Memorials, of Holly Springs, presented the Conference with a handsome silver-mounted gavel, made from a favorite chair of our departed sister.

Greenville was selected as our next place of meeting.

In conclusion, I desire to express thanks for our society for the large hospitality displayed by the citizens of Holly Springs, and for the time might have substituted and repeated one version of Suwaroff's famous dispatch, saying: "Glory be to God, Holly Springs is ours."

Selections.

Beloved, learn that Jesus keeps his appointments. Wherever he has promised to meet you, there you will find him when you reach the place. He meets with his own when they assemble together in his name. "Where two or three of you gather in my name, there am I in the midst." How the cold, lifeless, and formal services in many churches would throb with quickened life did all believe this gracious truth! Even the smallest assemblies would then possess immeasurable interest and importance.

Beware how you regard as trifling, faults which appear of but little consequence. An accumulation of small faults makes a very large one; grains of sand gathered together one upon another form the bank on which the vessel strikes.—St. Augustine.

The best thing to take people out of their own worries is to go to work and find out how other folks' worries are getting on.—Mrs. A. D. T. Whitney.

To Whom It May Concern:

Abont three years ago I received a sample bottle of "Mul-en-ol." I had never heard of it before. I began using it, however, as occasion required, and soon found that it was all that is claimed for it, and more. For cuts, burns, bruises, scalds, and all kinds of sores, it is superior to any remedy I have ever used. It is also exceedingly efficacions in colic and diarrhœa. For sore throat it is incomparably better than anything I know of. I heartily recommend it as a medicine worthy of a place in every household. W. C. BLACK,

REV. W. C. BLACK,

FROM THE WORK.

Rev. R H. B. Gladney, Gunnison, Miss., Aug. 7, 1897: "The prospects for a cotton crop in this, the overflowed district, are much better than they were two weeks ago. Corn is very poor. Church work progresses slowly. I am confident, however, that you will hear of a deep work of grace in our midst in the near future. On our return from Nashville this week we were greeted with a large box full of good things. Let the Conference pray for us."

Rev. Sam Q. Bass, Tremont, Miss., Aug. 2, 1897: "Closed out a fine meeting near Nettleton, Miss., for W. A. Bowlin, one of our noble pastors, yesterday. The meeting continued only one week; but the Lord was with us in great power. Forty-two conversions and the same number of additions to our church. I raised about seventy-five dollars on good subscriptions for the pastor, and he raised $150 toward the building of a new house of worship. Bro. Bowlin is a noble pastor, and serves a big-souled people. I begin here tonight."

Rev. M. L. White, Montrose, Miss., Aug. 3, 1897: "Bro. Burton and myself have just closed the third protracted meeting on this circuit. The one at Mutual Union resulted in great good; one accession. The one at Holder's was on the occasion of our third Quarterly Conference. The presiding elder was with us two days. Lasted seven days. Fifteen bright conversions, 10 accessions. Fully 50 persons came forward and testified that they had been lifted to a higher life than they ever enjoyed before. Last night our meeting at Sylvarena closed with quite an interest. Large nnmbers came forward at the close of every sermon for prayers. We have no church-house there, but preach in an old school-honse. If we had a church there, Methodism would accomplish much more. To God be all the praise."

Rev. J. M. Huggin, Big Creek, Miss., Aug. 4, 1897: "We closed a very interesting meeting at Pittsboro on last Sunday night. Special services were begun on the twenty-second ultimo, with Rev. G. W. Bachman, our colporter and Snnday-school agent, in the pulpit, which he occupied several times dnring the meeting; also conducted the singing, manifesting snch zeal and ability that the impression was left on our people that he is a man of might in more respects than one. Rev. H. C. Morehead, our presiding elder, was with us also several days during the meeting, laboring in the pulpit and out of it with his characteristic ability. Rev. W. M. McIntosh and his accomplished wife arrived on the sixth day of the meeting, the former doing all the preaching from that time on to the close of the meeting, except one sermon. Bro. McIntosh is an able expounder of the gospel, full of zeal and the Holy Ghost, and manages a congregation with consummate skill. The tent, whose seating capacity is about 1,000, w s about full three times daily of interested hearers of the Word as he proclaimed it. Christians were revived and strengthened, backsliders reclaimed, old feuds buried, and our people led to a higher plane of Christian life. I do not know how many were converted; some joined our church on profession of faith, four by certificate; four promised to join the Baptist Church. Others will probably join the church soon. Sister McIntosh, among other good works, succeeded in organizing a W. F. M. Society; also a Juvenile Society. The grateful prayers of our people will follow those whose names are mentioned in this report."

Rev. J. N. Tucker, Bewelcome, Miss., Aug. 4, 1897: "Wife and I are just back from a ten days' trip to Adam's Church, Brookhaven district, Mississippi Conference, where we attended the tabernacle services conducted by Rev. John Culpepper, evangelist. Bro. Culpepper was present at the first service, and conducted every service save one, which was held by Bro. Havers, L. P. The services were well attended from the first to the last. Bro. Culpepper preached with his accustomed zeal and unction of the Spirit, especially stressing Christian activity. There were four received into the church, and quite a number regenerated; many reclaimed, and the faithful greatly edified. We had the best of order and attention paid to the preached Word. Bro. Culpepper repeatedly remarked that a better-behaved people he never saw, and for the number present, from 500 to 1,500, the best attention he ever saw during his twenty-five years' ministry. The choir deserves special mention, nearly all of whom were experimental Christians, each one embracing nearly every opportunity to testify for their Lord that infrequently the organist would lead the prayer during altar exercises. Oh, that every choir in our Zion were equally religious! Then would the problem of the choir be settled. The membership decided to build tents and a public hotel where everyone can be accommodated. When done, this will be the prettiest camp ground within my knowledge, Seashore excepted. Bro. Rawls, as pastor, is in love with his people, and they with him. Another year we expect to hear greater things from him and his people."

Rev. W. A. Bowlin, P. C., Nettleton charge, Aug. 9, 1897: "I have held five of my meetings with fine results at each place; but will make special mention of the last two—old New Chapel and Allensburg—where the Lord was with us in great power. We registered seventy-eight additional soldiers of the cross on profession of faith. The character, depth and permanency of the work done is known when I tell you that it reached the pocket-books, and their old rusty hinges were opened liberally to God's cause. One old brother whom I received into the church, after giving ten dollars to the ministry and a liberal subscription toward the erection of a new church, also donated a block of land on which to build. The pastor's salary was more than provided for at each place. I was assisted at New Chapel by Rev. W. D. Bass, who is a strong preacher and a fine worker. His preaching is plain, practical and powerful. His methods are after the old-time type of calling penitents to the altar and praying and talking with them till they settle the question. He works in perfect harmony with the pastor and presiding elder. Fortunate is the pastor who secures his services. Our beloved presiding elder, Rev. S. M. Thames, was with us on Saturday, and, led of the Holy Spirit, preached us a sermon of great worth and power. He also held our third Quarterly Conference with encouraging reports. Allensburg is a new name for a new church that I contemplate building between Palestine and Mt. Zion, where I have just closed a seven-days' meeting held under a brush arbor. My helper at this place was Rev. S. Q. Bass. The Lord honored his preaching and gave us the greatest revival that community has ever witnessed. Forty-two were added to our church on profession of faith; one to the Presbyterian, and one to the Baptist Church. Bro. Bass is a plain and pointed preacher and a good worker. Any pastor who needs a spiritual and financial lift among his people would do well to get Bro. S. Q. Bass. I raised $150 at the close of the meeting with which to begin the new church. I expect to have all the lumber on the ground before Conference. I am building a church now at Pisgah. The frame is all up and will soon be ready to put on the top. We have made some needed repairs about the parsonage since we came, also succeeded in getting it furnished. The Nettleton charge is on a higher plane, spiritually, socially and financially, than ever before in its history. Crops of every kind were never better."

ANTICIPATING THE 1898 LEAGUE CONFERENCE OF MISSISSIPPI.

The announcement that the next Mississippi League Conference will be held in Meridian has given inspiration to the Leagues here. One or two have been reorganized, and now there are five in all: two at Central Church, and one each at West End, East End, and South Side. Besides, the City Union has been revived and is at work.

About one mile south of the depot are the foot hills of a considerable mountain ridge. The southern end of the ridge is called Barton, and the South Side League, representing the portion of the city nearest the mountain, have found on it a peak that is very suitable for a sunrise or sunset prayer meeting. Upon its lone gray rocks many a Bible lesson becomes real to the student's mind —Sinai, Nebo, Moriah, Zion, Carmel, Lebanon, Mizpah, Olivet. What wonderful events are thus suggested! And how often does the material vision open faith's interior eye! The vision from a mountain is always broad and broadening, uplifting towards God, until the soul remembers again that it is immortal, and not to be forever clogged by frail mortality. Humbled, yet encouraged, one returns to take part in the conflict of the valley.

The Meridian Evening Post, of July 5, had the following: "Yesterday morning, according to a preconcerted plan, the members of the South Side Epworth League and some others, making in all more than forty, met at the Methodist Church at 4 o'clock, and repaired thence to the highest peak of the mountain, where a most enjoyable meeting of an hour was held under the leadership of W. D Hawkins, chairman of the devotional department. The peak selected was the lofty one about a mile from the church and reached by going the road that passes Mr. D. Williams'. Some of the city lights were still burning when the top was mounted, and after some songs and reading the sun made its appearance. There were several prayers and short talks by C. C. Dunn, J. W. McMahon and others. The peak was named League Peak, and it is proposed to have a similar meeting up there every July 4. A very little clearing would bring the whole city below and the regions far beyond within the view, making a grand panorama. The scalp of the peak will seat about 1,000 people; and when the Leagues of the State assemble in Meridian next year, it will not be unfitting as a place for a sunrise rally. The gathering yesterday morning was an inspiration to all. The party returned by two springs of water, one being the sulphur spring near Sowashee."

The continued increase in the number of young ladies in attendance at this college is evidence of the satisfaction of its patrons with its management. The equipment consists in part of 35 upright and 2 concert grand pianos, a six-inch object glass, Alvan Clark & Sons telescope, and probably the best chemical and physical laboratory of any female college in the South. With its 6 male and 11 female professors, it offers unusual advantages for mental training, and the lovely grounds, ornamented with two fountains, a lily pond and beautiful shrubs and flowers, is conducive to happiness and æsthetic culture. The dormitories are home-like and equipped with all modern conveniences. We believe that Louisiana girls would find this climate here pleasant and healthful. "Through trouble, with surprise we find
The soul is lifted high.
As birds against a gentle wind
More easily can fly."

Pretense is always easier than practice.

What a man thinks depends largely upon what he reads.

True charity includes a great deal more than giving away what we do not need.

The Christian who fails to do his best in serving God need not wonder at his lack of religious joy.

In union there is strength; and yet, when a thing is to be done, one man must do it.—James Parton.

Many people are unselfish only in matters that do not involve a sacrifice of personal pleasure or comfort.

Not every Christian who claims to love God is in love and charity with his neighbors. "And this commandment have we from him, That he who loveth God loves his brother also."

I do not think the road to contentment lies in despising what we have not. Let us acknowledge all good, all delight that the world holds, and be content without it.—George Macdonald.

The happiness of life depends very much on little things; and one can be brave and great and good while making small sacrifices and doing small duties faithfully and cheerfully. —L. M. Alcott.

Goethe once answered the question, "How can we learn to know ourselves?" thus: "By reflection never, but by our actions. Attempt to do your duty, and you will immediately find what is in you."

The Christian who lives on the remembrance of past blessings and experiences is as foolish as the sailor who expects to be wafted into port by last month's breezes.

"Day by day the promise reads,
Daily strength for daily needs."

An astonishingly large number of people who are prompt in paying large debts, because self-interest demands it, are shamefully derelict in meeting small bills. "He that is unjust in the least will be unjust also in much."

We will never outlive evil nor evil men. There will be slanderers and traducers when we are dying. Our only righteous course is to follow the injunction of the Master and overcome evil with good.—Baptist Standard.

In the conduct of life habits count for more than maxims, because habit is a living maxim, become flesh and instinct. To reform one's maxims is nothing; it is but to change the title of the book. To learn new habits is everything, for it is to reach the substance of life. Life is but a tissue of habits.—Amiel.

Keep the Sabbath Holy.

Sabbath breaking is unquestionably one of the greatest evils of this age, and prevails to an alarming extent even among professed Christians. The manner of observing the day has been so largely influenced by the notions and habits of non-professors that in not a few places the day has well-nigh lost its religious character. It is of the highest importance that the faithful everywhere awake to the magnitude of the evil, and do their utmost to preserve the sanctity of the Christian Sabbath.

Disregard of the Fourth Commandment is inevitably followed by forgetfulness of God, by the neglect of all religious duties, by the blunting of the moral sense, and, lastly, by abandonment to a life of sin. Truly has it been said: "The law of the Sabbath is the key-stone of the arch of public morals; take it away, and the whole fabric falls."

Some who contend for a continental Sabbath claim that the Savior's words, "The Sabbath was made for man," authorize making it a day of amusement and recreation. Since "the Sabbath was made for man," it was made for his good. If it be granted that sensual enjoyment is the chief end of life, the highest good; if man is but an animal to sport awhile upon the earth and then be no more, the Sabbath might with some reason be given over to feasting and revelry. But if we believe that the spirit of man is immortal, and that the interests of the soul are infinitely higher than the needs and desires of the flesh, the Sabbath, we must conclude, was designed especially for spiritual culture, for the worship of the Creator, whose image we bear.

Christ's example furnishes not the slightest warrant for making Sunday a holiday. His Sabbaths were spent in worship, in teaching, and in works of mercy. If we keep it as did he, we shall do well.

The ceremonial law, of which Christ was the antitype, was fulfilled in him; but the moral law, embodied in the Ten Commandments, he repeatedly reaffirmed and sanctioned. The Fourth Commandment, then, is just as obligatory upon us as any of the others. If we explain it away, we may as well explain away the command against theft or against murder.

The Sabbath was instituted partly for man's physical good, and is intended to be observed as a day of rest. One day's rest in seven is a need of man's physical nature. Repeated experiment and observation have proved beyond question that men can do more and better work by resting one day in seven than by working a less number of hours every day in the week. It is reliably stated that in Paris, where the Sabbath is scarcely observed at all, it is difficult to find an old stonemason or shoemaker or carpenter or painter or printer. An artisan forty-five years old is generally so completely worn out as to be worthless. Napoleon said that no man could work long who did not rest one day in seven. Many a man has shortened his days by neglecting to observe the Sabbath as a day of rest.

The second and chief design of the Sabbath is for worship and spiritual culture. Six days are given to providing for the wants of the body. Is one day in seven too much to devote to the interests of the soul, to that part of man which is immortal and God-like? On this day we should refrain from our usual occupations and from all unnecessary labor. The man who takes Sunday to write business letters, or post his books, or do any other work of a secular character, profanes the day. Action in an emergency, as for instance, in a fire or a flood, or the rescue of an ox from the ditch, is, of course, legitimate and commendable. But where the ox gets into the ditch repeatedly, there is criminal negligence somewhere.

It is not enough, however, to refrain from ordinary toil on Sunday. Thousands do that much who pass the whole day with hardly a thought of God or of the hereafter. But the fact that others neglect its sacred privileges is no reason why we should do so.

If we observe the Sabbath properly, we are bound to respect the rights of others. If we keep it ourselves, but cause others to break it and deprive them of its blessings, we are not without sin.

One of the greatest desecrators of the Sabbath is the Sunday train. There are in the employ of the railroads nearly two million workmen, most of whom are compelled to labor every day in the week. Have these hundreds of thousand of workmen no desire for the privileges and rest of the Sabbath? Are they so different from the rest of humanity as not to need this heaven-appointed day? Are not their souls as precious in the sight of God as are our own? The majority of them are undoubtedly as appreciative of the blessings of the Christian Sabbath as any other set of workmen, and they work on Sunday, not from choice, but from necessity. If Christians would stop patronizing Sunday trains, most of them would quickly be discontinued. But some one says: "The Sunday trains are not going to stop because I cease to ride on them. Therefore, I might as well use them." The saloon-keeper argues in the same strain, excusing himself by saying: "If I do not sell whisky, some one else will. Therefore, I might as well have the profit." The fact that other Christians will not do as they ought is no reason why any one of us should fail to keep the Sabbath holy. A thousand wrongs do not make a right.

Another ruthless desecrator of the Sabbath is the newspaper with its medley of good and evil. If it were merely delivered on Sunday, and not bought and read, the evil would not be so great; but as it is, it is hawked about the streets, and constitutes the only reading of a large class. We hold that if it is wrong to buy a coat, a hook, or a cigar on Sunday, it is equally wrong to buy a newspaper. The one is no more a necessity than the other. Thousands spend hour after hour of the Lord's day reading the gossip, scandal, demoralizing fiction, filthy details of crime, and political news given by the Sunday papers, and hardly spare five minutes, if that, for prayer and Bible study.

It is a positive shame that so many drug stores break the Sabbath by selling, in addition to medicine, soda water, cigars, and anything else kept in stock. If it is right for the drug shops to do this, why may not the other stores have the same privilege?

In many places Sunday is the biggest market-day of the week, and instead of being one of holy quiet and peace, is one of bargaining and turmoil. Such practices are wholly at variance with the teaching of the Word of God. Many large cities now have no Sunday market, all such matters being attended to Saturday afternoon and night. So, then, the thing is neither untried nor impracticable.

Devotion, meditation upon things divine, "searching the Scriptures," and reading religious books, ought to form a large portion of our employment on the Sabbath. Sunday also brings opportunity for deeds of kindness and benevolence. We could not better employ a portion of it than in visiting the sick and the strangers, in comforting the afflicted, relieving the needy, and in seeking out the straying.

From Home.

We took a brief trip recently to Mississippi. First, we made a visit to relatives near Hazlehurst, and much enjoyed the rest as well as the social intercourse. Thence we journeyed in the direction of the North Pole as far as Holly Springs. This was our first visit to this beautiful little city. It has a population of about three thousand. It is sometimes called "the Athens of Mississippi," owing to the fact that it has a larger number of educational institutions than any other city in the State. Besides a large and flourishing public school, it has five colleges. Epworth College, formerly Malone College, is well known to our readers. Under the wise administration of President Honnoll, this institution is enjoying great prosperity. The boarding department for the next session promises to be full to overflowing. The Presbyterians also have a prosperous college whose name we can not recall. There is also an Episcopal school, called St. Thomas Hall. There are two high-grade institutions for colored people, Rust University, and the State Normal College. To a denizen of a metropolitan city, the residence portion of Holly Springs is peculiarly attractive, on account of the spacious grounds and beautiful groves. We were peculiarly fortunate in being domiciled with our friends, Dr. and Sister J. D. Cameron, whose cordial, warm-hearted hospitalities we have enjoyed more than once before. Dr. Cameron occupies the best district parsonage we have seen. The house is quite roomy, and with a small expenditure for repairs will be in excellent condition. The lot is large, having a good garden, a grove and an orchard. This parsonage has been secured by Dr. Cameron during the present year. We had the pleasure of meeting the pastor, Rev. J. S. Oakley, who is now winding up his fourth year. In keeping with his record, he is exceedingly popular, and has his church in fine working order. The only thing that is worrying Oakley about his next appointment is that he fears that he will be sent to a station. Having been in stations for about twenty years, he is anxious to try a circuit. We missed President Honnoll, he being absent from the city.

In journeying to and fro we met several ministerial brethren. We were pleased to exchange greetings with B. W. Lewis, of the Mississippi Conference. He seems to be in good health and spirits, and reports his charge in a prosperous condition. We had a very pleasant interview with Bro. W. W. Simmons, presiding elder of the Brandon district, who reports the outlook in his field as decidedly encouraging. From other sources we learn that Bro. Simmons is in great favor with the people in his district. He is diligent and painstaking, looking after every interest of the church. We traveled some miles with our genial friend, Rev. H. C. Morehead, of the Grenada district. Conservative, yet aggressive and abundant in labors, he is making a most enviable record. We had a few words with Rev. T. W. Lewis, the wide-awake pastor of Grenada station, who is adding new laurels to an already brilliant reputation. We also had the pleasure of an interview with our talented and scholarly friend, Dr. W. T. J. Sullivan, of Corinth station, who is making full proof of his ministry in that important field.

Death of Senator George.

The death of Senator J. Z. George, which occurred at Mississippi City on the fourteenth instant, has produced profound sorrow not only throughout Mississippi, but all over the South. As the Senator had been in bad health for some time, his death was not entirely unexpected. It is supposed to have been hastened somewhat by the severe shock given him by the recent death of his wife. Senator George was born in Monroe county, Georgia, in 1826, but moved to Mississippi in 1834, with whose interests he has been identified ever since.

Mississippi, the State of his adoption, honored his ability and integrity by bestowing upon him her highest offices. He was on the Supreme Bench many years. He has served in the United States Senate continuously since 1881. As a member of the Constitutional Convention he did more than any other man in shaping Mississippi's new Constitution. In his decease the nation has lost an able statesman, while Mississippi mourns the loss of a wise and patriotic leader, a noble citizen, a princely character. A great and good man has fallen.

Premiums Awarded.

The first premium for the largest number of subscribers has been awarded to Rev. C. McDonald, of the Mississippi Conference. The second premium goes to Rev. W. S. Lagrone, West Point, Miss. The winner of the third premium will be announced in our next issue.

Moffatt-McLaurin Institute.

The Moffatt-McLaurin Institute, located at Meridian, Miss., is a chartered school for the higher education of young women and girls. The ladies in charge are teachers of ability, experience and culture. We commend their school to the consideration of the public. The institute will open Sept. 8 with a full corps of instructors. It offers excellent advantages in music, art, elocution, stenography, and type-writing, as well as in the usual branches. Write to Miss Moffatt for a catalogue.

Prof. N. A. Pattillo, who three years ago resigned a professorship in Millsaps College on account of failing health, has just been elected to the chair of mathematics in the Alabama State Normal School at Florence.

Rev. H. H. Ahrens, the popular pastor of Parker's Chapel, in this city, left on last Monday for a steamboat trip to St. Louis, and will be absent two weeks. All the expenses of the trip were paid by the members of his congregation. We congratulate our brother upon having such an appreciative and thoughtful flock.

We are pained to learn of the recent death of Dr. W. S. Black, who has for a long time been one of the most prominent figures in the North Carolina Conference. He was an earnest, gifted preacher, and a most lovable man in every respect. We sympathize with our brethren of that State in the loss of this good and useful man. His death is to us the loss of a personal friend.

Dr. S. A. Steele, who recently made a trip to the Pacific coast, has subjected himself to much criticism on account of some recent utterances concerning the status of Southern Methodism in that region. He affirmed that we have lost ground during the last ten years, whereas the brethren in that field, who are in position to know, declare that there has been an increase of fifty per cent., both in membership and church property, and back up their statements by statistics from the Conference Minutes. In the East Columbia Conference the salaries paid amounted, in 1890, to $2,200; in 1896, to $3,252.18. The membership in 1890 numbered 1,034; in 1896 it had increased to 1,789. Statistics as to other items show a corresponding increase.

Bishop Joseph S. Key, of the M. E. Church, South, in an interview, expressed himself as unequivocally opposed to the proposed union of Northern and Southern Methodists. He said: "There are many objections to union. In the first place, the General Conference, our only legislative body, would become an unwieldy mob. Legislation would be impossible and the laity would not consent to reduce the number. Besides there are many sentimental objections. There are many in both sections who will not approve of union. I believe that when people fall out or, to change the figure, obtain a divorce, they should not reunite. They have no reason or encouragement to believe they can get along any better now, and as they live apart in kindness and good work there is no necessity for union."—Picayune.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

DOMESTIC.

The body of Pom Kwang Soh, the former Corean minister to this country, was cremated on Aug. 15, according to the expressed wish of the deceased.

The Swedes of Philadelphia are to present a magnificent silver vase to the King of Sweden and Norway on the occasion of the twenty-fifth anniversary of his reign next month.

The American jubilee fund, which was started for the purpose of raising money to establish beds in perpetuity in London hospitals, has been closed. The subscriptions exceeded $21,500.

The Postoffice Department has received a report from Des Moines, Iowa, where an experiment is being tried of having street letter boxes attached to all the street cars of the city and a large share of mail collection taken up by them.

The first peanut oil factory in the United States will be established in Norfolk, Va., at an early date. The oil is highly valued in Europe, as it is stated that fully $5,000,000 worth of peanuts are brought into Marseilles annually for the manufacture of oil, which is used in toilet soaps and for other purposes.

A crossing collision occurred, Sunday, in the city limits, between an excursion train filled with people on the New Orleans and Western railroad, and a passenger train on the Pontchartrain branch of the Louisville and Nashville. A car was knocked from the rails and overturned, hurting several of the passengers.

The mayor to be elected in Greater New York next November will be a potentate of great power and influence. London's lord mayor is not a circumstance to him. He will have a patronage almost as large as that of the President of the United States, with a pay roll bigger than that of any other city in the world.

Mrs. Susan B. Anthony in a recent speech at a dinner given her by the women of Adams, Mass., said: "If you want to do anything in token of the service I have been permitted to do, the way to give that token is to put on your armor and do what you can to secure equality for women, their equal share in the government."

The Western railroads are said to be making extraordinary preparations for handling the grain crop this year. In view of the extreme activity and stimulation in the grain markets, and the certainty of a heavy demand for breadstuffs for export to foreign countries, an urgent need for prompt and early shipment of grain is being provided for.

The striking miners in Pennsylvania and West Virginia continue to maintain peaceable relations with the men who are working and with the authorities. It is true there have been a few individual cases of conflict, but they have not affected the general situation. The miners, by refraining from violence, have done much to gain and retain public sympathy.

A local paper and some of the councilmen of Fort Scott, Kan., are insisting that an occupation tax be assessed against the ministers of the town as a means of raising revenue to make up the deficiency occasioned by the closing of the saloons. The council is wrestling with an occupation tax ordinance, and some of the members refuse to support the measure unless it shall include ministers. The town is two months in arrears with the police salaries. The city attorney has advised that ministers may be taxed, though they are not in any other town in the land.

FOREIGN.

As a result of Emperor William's visit to Russia, Great Britain will find Russia and Germany united against her upon all important occasions.

Berlin has no "slums," as we understand them. Even in the poorest quarters of the city the streets are paved with asphalt and are kept faultlessly clean.

The Manchester Canal traffic still shows signs of improvement. The returns for the past six months show an increase of 76,000 tons, as compared with the same period of last year.

The foreign item of interest on Aug. 15 was a duel between the French Prince, Henri of Orleans, and the Italian Count of Turin. The Frenchman was worsted in the combat, which was fought with swords.

It is said that Captain-General Weyler has sent his resignation to Madrid. This report is generally believed to be true. There is no doubt that the resignation is due to the assassination of Senor Castillo, the Premier of Spain, through whose personal wishes Weyler was retained in Cuba.

The funeral of Senor Canovas del Castillo, ex-Premier, in Madrid, Spain, on Aug. 13, was a most touching and solemn ceremony. All the troops of the garrison lined the route along which the cortege passed; the flags were lowered and the embassies, consulates and clubs were heavily draped with crepe, as well as the public buildings.

TOPIC FOR AUGUST.

ST. PAUL AS A MAN OF PRAYER.

AUG. 22.—HIS PRAYERS FOR THE CHURCHES.

(Rom. i, 9; I. Thess. iii, 10 to 13; Heb. xiii, 20, 21.)

Romans.—(a) "Without ceasing, I make mention of you always in my prayers," is an exponent of Paul's tremendous interest in the church at Rome. And as he made similar statements with regard to other churches, we infer that he had the same wonderful personal interest in them all. He felt the responsibility of the churches. He gloried in their faith, and was grieved at their sin. He was always anxious about them. The burden of souls was upon him. At intervals we pray for this feeling of responsibility, and when we get it, something is done for God. Our interest in and work for the church is proportioned to our realization of responsibility. God give us a full realization! Paul's life was lived at the high-water mark. (b) Aside from the effect of these "unceasing" prayers upon the churches, there was the subjective effect in the feeding and stimulation of Paul's own interest. They cultivated his love, and constantly gave direction to his affections. We do not pray for others because we do not love them, and one reason we do not love them is because we do not pray for them. Set your affections upon the church, and your life will be spent in its service, as was Paul's, for where your heart is there will you put your treasure.

Thessalonians.—Paul prayed that he might see them, and "perfect that which is lacking in your faith." We take it that faith here means their knowledge of the gospel; their intellectual light. Man's religious life is limited by his light. The heathen can not reach the Christian's standard. The man of imperfect faith is a man of imperfect life. Paul wished to remove this limitation from the Thessalonians. We know not what was lacking in their faith, but from Paul's prayer that they "might increase in love," we judge that this lack of love was its effect. At any rate, religious life is always limited by knowledge, even though the heart be right. Instruction, a turning on of light, intellectual preaching, is a distinct need of the church to-day. Let it be encouraged!

Hebrews.—Perfection is God's ideal. He works through the multitudinous happenings of life to this end. Submission to his will is necessary to its accomplishment; yea, more, submission implies possibility. Co-operation—an appropriation of God's will—is the condition upon which God "works in us what is well pleasing in his sight."

DOTS.

Rev. J. F. Foster reports a big time on his "side trips" from Toronto.

The picnic has gone "where the woodbine twineth." Indefinitely postponed.

Reports from the solicitors for Gouldsboro Church will be heard at the next meeting.

The next meeting of the Union League will be at Tchoupitoulas. Let everybody go.

There is nutriment in the ground for wheat, but not enough for thorns, too. Which are you growing?

There was no meeting of the Executive Committee of the State League last Tuesday night. President White could not attend on account of sickness in his family, and this writer did not receive his letter asking him to take charge until too late to do so. Try again, for a meeting is needed.

The last meeting of the Union League at Rayne Memorial was the best ever held. This seems to be the unanimous verdict. There were about seventy-five present. Miss May Knickerbocker and Mr. Thad. Salter recited. Ice cream and cake were served. The social feature was emphasized, and everybody had a good time. Let us emulate the example of Rayne Memorial League! Miss Susie Lyons deserves special mention for her zeal in getting up the programme.

HOME CIRCLE.

AULD LANG SYNE.

BY JOHN W. CHADWICK.

It singeth low in every heart,
We hear it each and all:
A song of those who answer not,
However we may call.
They throng the silence of the breast;
We see them as of yore—
The kind, the true, the brave, the sweet,
Who walk with us no more.

'Tis hard to take the burden up,
When these have laid it down;
They brightened all the joys of life,
They softened every frown.
But O, 'tis good to think of them
When we are troubled sore;
Thanks be to God that such have been,
Although they are no more!

More homelike seems the vast unknown,
Since they have entered there;
To follow them were not so hard,
Wherever they may fare.
They can not be where God is not,
On any sea or shore;
Whate'er betides, Thy love abides,
Our God, for evermore!

The Empty Sleeve.

Just previous to the closing of the meeting there arose in the central aisle a tall, dignified gentleman, elegant in appearance, with a pleasing, cultured face, who walked slowly to the speaker's desk, and asked permission of the chairman to occupy a few minutes before closing. His request was cheerfully granted. He said:

"I did not come here to-night to speak, only to listen; but as I always take a deep interest in the temperance work, I could not be quiet until I added a few words to encourage some of those who signed the pledge to-night. My personal experience may help some to be firm, and sustain them in their efforts to reform.

"I was born in the town of W——, and received a careful college education. My father started me in business, which proved a success from the start. I gathered around me many warm friends. I married a cultured and refined young lady of a neighboring town, whose parents were highly respected. We had two children, a son and a daughter. I was popular, and was called to preside at nearly all of the social and political meetings of the place, and on my way home I was frequently induced to partake of a glass of wine or beer. The habit became fixed, and I found that much of my time was taken up at the club and social meetings, and that my hours for going home were late.

"My wife spoke kindly to me about my drinking. I replied: 'Never fear; I will never become a drunkard.'

"But as time went on I became more and more a slave to drink, until my friends kindly admonished me. I noticed that my business was being neglected. It was not long before a receiver was appointed to wind up my business affairs. My store, goods, beautiful home, and all went to liquidate my debts, and I was obliged to move into a very poor house on a side street. Now nearly all my former friends deserted me, and I could secure no work, for I could not be trusted.

"At this point I lost my pride, and went about the town and through the streets half-drunk, slovenly, and shabby, being a complete slave to the drink habit. Then I sold all of the few things which we had been able to keep to procure whisky and food.

"When my cash was gone I joined a gang of sewer and street workers, and shoveled gravel. Each day my dinner pail went to the saloon, and at night we went there in company, and often stayed late, going home hungry, tired and cross, until I made my home almost a hell.

"One night I had been drinking more than usual, and when I arrived at home I was angry. I saw a light through the window, but the door was locked. I tried to get in, but could not. I pounded at the door in rage. The only response I could get was from my boy, who appealingly said: 'Go away, papa; you won't hurt mamma, will you?' I said, 'You will see if this door is not opened soon.'

"Groping around the door my hand fell upon a hatchet which had been used for cutting kindling-wood that day. With this I broke in the lowel panel of the door. From within I saw a small arm extended through the opening, and heard a small voice crying, 'Papa, go away.'

"In my anger and desperation I caught that arm, and with one blow of the hatchet I cut it off, and threw it on the ground.

"The frantic screams of my wife and children soon brought a number of neighbors and also a policeman. After a severe struggle, with blood dripping from my face, I was taken to prison. My boy was conveyed to the hospital, and my wife and daughter were cared for by loving friends. When morning came I was sober, and then I fully realized what I had done. Oh, what would I have given to have replaced that arm and recalled the horrid deeds of that night!

"Court was in session, and I was taken before the judge for trial. I asked no lawyer to defend me. I told the judge that I was guilty. My wife was not to blame, and no sentence was too severe to impose upon me. I was responsible for the crime which whisky, beer and the saloon-keeper assisted me to accomplish. But with the help of a higher Power I would never drink another drop again. I was placed in prison, and had ample time to reflect. I exclaimed, 'Oh, what a wretch I have made of myself!' and I determined to make a man of myself among my own friends at home.

"I was released in time through the influence of my friends. I came to my own town, sought my wife and children, and asked their forgiveness. I once more commenced business in a small way, and have succeeded from that day until this. I now have the happiest, pleasantest home in America. I desire to introduce my son. Fred, will you please come forward?"

Immediately a fine-looking man arose from his seat, and stepped forward to the platform; and as the interested eyes of the audience rested upon the youth, they knew the story to be true, for at his side hung an empty sleeve. His father placed his hand upon the boy's shoulder, and said, "This is the best boy living"; and Fred added, "My mother, sister and myself all say that father is the best man on earth."

Looking around I could not see a dry eye in the audience. Then there were hundreds anxious to reach the desk to sign the papers, and later on every saloon in the place was wiped out.—New York Witness.

The Modern Woman.

The day when fragility of frame and lack of bodily health were considered the correct conditions of refined womanhood has happily passed. The fin-de-siecle young woman is a girl of fine physique. Like her brother, she has been trained in gymnasiums. She no longer laces herself with a bodice of steel, like the girl of a century ago. Nor is the wholesome, every-day girl of the present time addicted to the use of cordials and various other stimulants so commonly mentioned in the works of a century ago as the household remedies for fainting women. Much as we may prate of the good old days, and of the homely customs of our grandmothers, and talk of the herculean tasks they accomplished, it is wise to investigate critically exactly what their daily tasks were, and how they met them, before passing judgment as to their superiority over the women of to-day. . . .

But great as the intellectual advance has been, it is in no way commensurate with the advance in physical health. The athletic young woman is as much a product of modern society as the college-bred girl. With the broadening of the intellect there has naturally come a demand for strong physical health, to meet the demands of study. Fainting is virtually an old-fashioned disease. It is almost as rare for a woman to faint to-day as it is for a man. Yet in olden times it was considered the proper thing for a woman to faint at any shocking occurrence, and even on most trivial occasions. The presence of a mouse, a run-away accident, the news of a tragedy, the death of a friend, one and all were occasions when, according to novelists, the average woman dropped into a swoon, and the crisis was left to the care of their masculine protectors or of the maid-servants of the time, who were fortunately superior to this weakness. The young lady of feeble appetite and of a languid courage and pallid cheeks was the ideal of fashion.

The ridicule of literature and the advance of common sense has long ago dispelled the illusion that ill-health was synonymous with refinement. We are beginning to have the true idea of the matter, and to look upon the presence of pallor, languid manners, and feeble appetite as indications of disease, and therefore repulsive. The young women of to-day affect nearly all the athletic exercise of their brothers. They enjoy boating, long country tramps, driving, skating, and all outdoor exercises.

It has been proved by statistics that the children of college-bred women stand a better chance of surviving the ills of infancy than those of others. This is undoubtedly largely the result of the more intelligent care that the child of the educated woman receives, but it is also due to the strong physical health of the athletic woman.

The wisest people of the present day believe that the highest intellectual development of the individual must be consonant with his highest physical condition—not that we must crucify the flesh in order to give scope to the life of the intellect and the spirit. Modern Christianity is a vital and a practical force, not a sentiment. The deaconess of the nineteenth century, which is the highest type we have of the pale æsthetic sisterhoods of mediæval ages, is a woman of classic education, trained in the gymnasium as well as in household cares and hospital duties, who brings the breadth of her culture and the gentleness of her womankind to her Christian work. Charity with her is not merely a graceful ornament, but a practical work, which calls forth all the powers of her nature. She is so trained physically that she does not faint or fail when duty calls her. The same courage and strength are needed in the family, and the mother who faints in emergencies has no place in the present age of usefulness.—New York Tribune.

40 YEARS THE STANDARD

Clean Minds.

Clean minds are necessary for clean hearts. Indecent and sensational literature are sure poisons for the mind. The popular novel of the day contains many germs that will breed contagion and death. The impure thoughts are the symptoms of contagion, and soon bring forth the unholy acts which are the evidences of approaching death. The mind fed on the light sensation of the novel can not flourish on the plain and substantial truth of the Bible. The brain stored with the irreverent or obscene story of the office, workroom, or club can not retain the simple, but saving tale of the cross. The mind filled with the stock reports or scandals of the Sunday paper can not aid in the purification or protection of the heart by thought concerning God during the morning hour of worship. The mind buried in the thoughts of Satan can not contemplate the purity of Christ.—Christian Intelligencer.

Blessed is the man who has the gift of making friends, for it is one of God's best gifts. It involves many things, but, above all, the power of going out of one's self, and seeing and appreciating whatever is noble and loving in another man.—Thomas Hughes.

How to Find Out

Fill a bottle or common glass with your water and let it stand twenty-four hours; a sediment or settling indicates an unhealthy condition of the kidneys; if it stains your linen, it is evidence of kidney trouble; too frequent desire to pass it or pain in the back is also convincing proof that the kidneys and bladder are out of order.

WHAT TO DO.

There is comfort in the knowledge so often expressed, that Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney remedy, fulfills every wish in relieving pain in the back, kidneys, liver, bladder and every part of the urinary passages. It corrects inability to hold urine and scalding pain in passing it, or bad effects following use of liquor, wine or beer, and overcomes that unpleasant necessity of being compelled to get up many times during the night to urinate. The mild and the extraordinary effect of Swamp-Root is soon realized. It stands the highest for its wonderful cures of the most distressing cases. If you need a medicine, you should have the best. Sold by druggists; price, fifty cents and one dollar. You may have a sample bottle and pamphlet both sent free by mail. Mention the CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE and send your address to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. The publisher of this paper guarantees the genuineness of this offer.

The Holman Self-Pronouncing S. S. Teacher's Bible.

Divinity Circuit, Round Corners, etc.

CONTAINS THE FOLLOWING HELPS TO THE STUDY OF THE BIBLE.

Concordance, with Contexts, over 40,000 References; Index to Persons, Places and Subjects, 16,000 References; Scripture Atlas, with Index; Glossary of Bible Words; Bible Calendar; Summary and Analyses of the Old and New Testaments.

A Self-Pronouncing Dictionary of Proper Names and Foreign Words contained in the Bible comprising about 3,500 words, giving the pronunciation, the meaning, and the location of the text where the word occurs for the first time.

Exhaustive Articles on Biblical History, Geography, Topography, Natural History, Ethnology, Botany, Chronology, Music and Poetry; a Complete Harmony of the Gospels, Tables of Parables, Miracles, Prophecies, Prayers, Money, Weights and Measures, Jewish Sects and Orders, etc.

TWELVE FULL-PAGE MAPS IN COLORS.

Every proper name in the text is syllabified and accented, and has the vowels marked according to the most authoritative modern standards of pronunciation. The text is in exact conformity with that of the world-famous Oxford S. S. Teacher's Bible. All the valuable "Helps to the Study of the Bible" contained in the Oxford Bible are retained.

The only Teacher's Bible with a self-pronouncing text. No similar Bible was ever obtainable heretofore; in fact, no publishers ever attempted its publication.

"The essence of fifty expensive volumes, by men of sacred learning, is condensed in these 'Helps.'"

The large-type (Bourgeois) edition sells to persons who are not subscribers for $5. Our subscribers get it, on conditions specified below, for $2.35. The same Bible in Minion type, which is somewhat smaller than Bourgeois, we offer to our subscribers, on conditions named below, for $1.55. To those who are not subscribers we sell it at $3.15. We also handle an edition in still smaller type (Emerald). Our subscribers get this for $1.00.

In order to get anyone of these at these rates it is necessary to pay your subscription one year in advance, viz., to August, '98. (A little later it will be September, '98.)

For twenty cents we will have your name engraved in gilt letters on the outside of the book.

BEAUTY IS WEALTH.

Beauty is as essential to a woman as any other quality; with beauty of form and feature comes beauty of mind and character. Physical beauty is a rounded form, the brightly tinted cheek, the vivacious eye, a certain ease and grace of manner, which indicates a superabundance of physical strength. Very few women possess these qualities, but very many more might possess them who do not. If you feel that you are losing vitality, losing your beauty losing your strength, if you feel that your face which once was plump and rosy, is becoming thin and sallow, that wrinkles (which are the terror to all pretty women) are beginning to appear, take our advice and try that greatest of discoveries, the "MASSAGE FACE CUP," which is the only means known to science to convert a thin and sallow expression into a plump and rosy face. It will transform a face with plain or homely features into an expression of grace and beauty. Physiology teaches us that if we would be strong, we must exercise the muscles which need the developing. Exercise causes the blood to rush to that part of the body called into action, the muscle is fed and strengthened by the fresh blood and will, therefore, develop.

The Massage Cup will do for the face, when properly applied, by contracting and relaxing the muscles, what exercise will do for the other parts of the body.

If you would have a pinkish complexion, if you would like a face plump and rosy, if you would like to remove that "horrid" wrinkle, send One Dollar to us and we will mail you the great "MASSAGE FACE CUP," with full directions for its use. Remember, you can have your money back, if you say so.

OBITUARIES.

FRANKLIN—

"Jesus, lover of my soul,
Let me to thy bosom fly;
While the nearer waters roll,
While the tempest still is high."

These were some of the dying words of our friend and loved one, JAMES WARREN FRANKLIN, son of Rev. John and Susan Franklin; born Nov. 9, 1877, and died July 3, 1897, aged nineteen years eight months and one day.

He was at his aunt's, Mrs. M. J. Conerly, attending school when taken sick, and lingered but a few days. His sufferings were intense, but he bore them with fortitude.

Warren was reared on the old family homestead near Holly Grove, Vernon parish, La., where he had grown into fresh and vigorous manhood.

He joined the M. E. Church, South, when twelve years of age, and ever realized the responsibilities of a church member. The prospects were that Warren would soon have become a leading member of his church. He was a faithful Sunday-school student from his early childhood; was elected steward of his church last year, and secretary of Sunday-school this year.

Warren was a model, noble and obedient boy, never indulging in anything that was degrading to humanity or against the will of his parents. He always advocated that which was good and abstained from that which was evil. He was very much devoted to his parents, and was a source of much happiness to them; always obeyed them and refrained from doing anything that would cause their displeasure. He was also very faithful and attentive to the sick, always ready to lend a helping hand. He aspired to greatness, his aspirations were upward, and should they have been accomplished, would have placed him upon that plane of life that would have been an honor to him and to his country.

Indeed, he was a promising boy, but now his lifeless form lies silent in the grave, but his influence still lives and grows in the hearts of his associates. Well do we remember the last time we sang the "Sweet Bye and Bye" with him; but little did we then think of the "bitter bye and bye" that has left us to walk this gloomy earth without him. But we feel consoled when we realize that he has passed on in fulfillment of the beautiful prophecy of the song.

We with sad, sad hearts that we record the death of our beloved friend and brother. His life was short, but we have the assurance of a reward at the end of a life well spent, either long or short, and we have the assurance that Warren has received this reward. Oh, how anxious were his dear parents, relatives and friends that his life should be spared! But, no, no; he was summoned to go, and we had to submit.

There are many things that cut through the flower of life to its fountain, but it is the will of the Lord, and his mercy endureth forever. It is well with them that fear the Lord. Yes, all was well with Warren, for the grand testimony left by him proves it. He did not fear death, and his soul leaped with joy when he realized that he was going home. He sang praise to God that caused the spirit to burn in the hearts of all present. Oh, how animating were those sweet songs, "How sweet the name of Jesus sounds!" "I am going home," and "Jesus, lover of my soul," which he sang while in the agonies of death. They come to us like thunder-claps whenever we hear them sung. All were made to feel more than ever their duty to God. Let us remember, friends, his parting words to us, for we know not the day when we, too, will be summoned to join that caravan that moves on to that mysterious realm where each will take their chamber in the silent halls of death. Let us prepare to meet him.

Parents, weep not for thy dear son,
But think of him in heaven,
And the glorious crown he has won,
And the beautiful home to him given.

Youthful toiler, thy work is done;
Youthful soul, into glory won;
Youthful life, with crown now won,
God giveth thee rest.

Rest beyond life's toils and cares,
Its hopes and joys, its weariness and sorrow,
Its days of smiles and tears;
Along, sweet rest, unmarked by years—
One bright, unending morrow.

Rest sweetly, darling one,
Naught shall disturb thy sleep;
The Father's will be done,
Though we are left to weep.

But with our blessed, holy Lord,
We'll shout and sing with one accord;
And there we'll all with Jesus dwell;
So, loving Warren, fare you well.

HIS FRIENDS.

COOPER—Rev. SILAS H. COOPER, a local elder in the M. E. Church, South, died at his residence near Cheneyville, parish of Rapides, La., Nov. 29, 1896, at 5 A. M., aged seventy-two years.

Bro. Cooper was a member of the Louisiana Conference for many years, and one of its ablest and most efficient preachers. We take the following from the Conference Minutes: Served the Grand Cheniere work in 1875; was presiding elder of the Alexandria district in 1876 and 1877; served Spring Creek work in 1879, Bayou Boeuff in 1885, and in 1884 was located at his own request. I think he served the Spring Creek work in 1887 and 1891 as a local preacher.

During all these years he was an able expounder of the Word of God, a revivalist after the Whitefield order, and was instrumental in the conversion of many souls. Since his location he has preached as his health would permit, and has accomplished much good in the service of his Lord.

During the last two years of his life he was exceedingly feeble, and part of the time a great sufferer. As his pastor, I visited him often during his last illness, and every visit was a precious season of grace to him and his wife and daughter. At my last visit before his death he expressed a desire to live longer, if it was God's will; if otherwise, to depart and be with Christ.

He leaves a wife and daughter to mourn his death. He was buried in the cemetery at Cheneyville in the presence of his sorrowing friends and loved ones. May they all meet him in heaven! PASTOR.

JOHNSON—Whereas, It has pleased God, in his all-wise providence, to pluck from earth our beloved WILLIAM CLAUDE JOHNSON, who was born Feb. 13, 1882, and after a few days of very painful illness died July 23, 1897; therefore, be it

Resolved, By the members of Shiloh Sunday-school, that in the death of Claude the Sunday-school has lost one of its most earnest and punctual pupils; the M. E. Church one of its most child-like, yet pureat members; fond parents a most dutiful son; brothers and sisters a kind and affectionate brother; associates a careful and considerate friend.

Resolved, That we deeply mourn our loss, yet feel that our loss is his eternal gain.

Resolved, That we tender to the bereaved family our heartfelt sympathy, and ask them to weep not as those who have no hope, but look to the blessed Savior "who doeth all things well," and he ready when the summons call you to come up higher, where you will meet "dear Claude" watching and waiting at the beautiful gate to waft you home, where there is no sickness or death, but all is peace and love. ASHA NOBLES, for Com.

WELCH—Miss ELIZABETH, daughter of James and Martha Welch, was born in Covington county, Miss., Feb. 13, 1843, and died at the same place, July 23, 1897. Her sister, Mary, had preceded her two days to the grave and to glory.

Sister Betty joined the Methodist Church at Bethel in 1868. She was faithful and ready to respond to the demands of her Lord and church. At his call she repented, believed, and was saved. She heard the call to perfect love; she sought and obtained. When the writer quoted Paul, "For I know whom I have believed, and am persuaded that he is able to keep that which I have committed unto him against that day," she responded, "Yes." "Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord from henceforth;" "because I live, ye shall live also."

Her body rests with loved ones in the family graveyard to wait their descending Lord.

L. P. MEADOR.

WELCH—Miss MARY, daughter of James and Martha Welch, was born in Covington county, Miss., Jan. 8, 1836, and died near the same place, July 21, 1897.

She was the eldest of four sisters who remained on the old homestead after their father and mother's death some twelve years before. The place was known as "Aunt Polly's." She joined the Methodist Church at Bethel when young, and remained steadfast to the end. She lost her eyesight some eight years before she died, but she worked with her own hands and paid her quarterage. Their home was the preacher's home, as many can testify. She walked in the light, in the beautiful light of God. She lived and died in the faith of seeing him who was invisible here. Her body rests in the family graveyard near by. L. P. MEADOR.

Baptist Record please copy.

SUDDUTH—On the night of July 20 the angel of death visited the home of John T. and Kate Herns Sudduth, and carried the immortal spirit of their babe, LAURA FELICIA, to Him who said, "Suffer the little children to come unto me, and forbid them not, for of such is the kingdom of God."

Felicia was born Nov. 13, 1895. Her entire life was one of affliction, and when her mission on earth was ended, God called her to that land where sickness, sorrow and death are never known.

We commend our bereaved brother and sister unto our Savior, who is the resurrection and the life, and in whom whosoever believeth shall live.

Epworth College

(Formerly MALONE)

Is located in Holly Springs, at the intersection of the Illinois Central and Kansas City, Memphis and Birmingham Railroads, and has always been noted for the health, culture and refinement of its people. Ten passenger trains come and go every day, except Sunday, when we have eight.

We shall continue to work under the auspices of the North Mississippi Conference, and pledge ourselves to use every effort in behalf of those entrusted to our care that they may be developed into educated, polished Christian women.

BOARDING DEPARTMENT.

Pupils boarding in the College have the personal attention of the President and his wife, who, together with the teachers, strive to make their stay while here as pleasant and profitable as possible.

An abundance of substantial food is furnished; ample time given at each meal for everyone to be satisfied, and President's family, teachers and pupils all fare alike. Special attention is paid to their manners and morals at all times, and every effort is made to impress them with the necessity of constant growth, physically, mentally and morally.

We board at $11.00 per month where they take their meals regularly at the table; extra charge when the meals are carried to their rooms, and extra servant hire. This includes pupils and teachers.

No incidental fee is charged unless something is destroyed, and in this case the cost of the article is charged to the party who destroys it.

Large Attendance for E. M. F. College.

We learn from President Beeson that he has already had more applicants for boarding pupils than he had last year, and several weeks yet before the college opens. This is very gratifying to all lovers of learning. The question that troubles the management is to find room for all the students. In view of the very bright prospects the trustees, at a recent meeting, authorized the erection of a three-story brick extension to the south wing, 40x80 feet, with rooms for Primary and Kindergarten Departments, and a large kitchen on first floor, with large airy dining-room on second floor, and with a number of bed-rooms on third floor. This will give ample room for the present increase, and it is hoped will be ready by the opening of school, Sept. 22. Meridian would do well to erect this new building for President Beeson, since the college means so much for the city. It not only keeps several thousand dollars here every year, but brings many thousands of dollars into the city that are spent here in all the different avenues of trade. Let every man help liberally in this work, and thereby help the town.—Meridian Herald.

REST.

Too little rest! too little sleep!
Too many hours to sow and reap;
At last disease and pain!
Weak grows the never loosened hand;
The strongest rope parts strand by strand
Beneath a ceaseless strain.

Let him who burns his midnight oil,
In lonesome and unwholesome toil,
Think, when he trims his lamp,
That thus he trims his life as well,
And hastens towards his last, low cell,
Its darkness and its damp.

To weary feet all streams are deep,
All roads are rough, all hills are steep;
As wayworn travelers know,
One hour of rest 's a precious boon
For him who toils through heat of noon,
With painful steps and slow.

Then, ye who hope to make your mark
Ere your last night fall cold and dark,
And stand above the throng
On far sun-kissed height of thought,
Or do some deed no hand hath wrought,
Work! rest! and so be strong.

A So-Called "Holiness Paper."

There comes to my address, not by my order, a paper published at Louisville, Ky., entitled "The Methodist and Way of Life," soon to be renamed "The Pentecostal Herald." This paper claims to be "a holiness paper," and is known as such. It contains some good things; but it contains much that is positively bad. Preachers—it matters not how loved and honored for their piety and devotion—are held up as opposers of sanctification, fighters of holiness, or opposers of Christian perfection, if, perchance, they can not accept the second-blessing theory. This paper is being introduced into Methodist homes, sometimes, to my own knowledge, surreptitiously, where it tells the children, even, that the good man of God, who is their pastor, is really false to his professions and his creed, and an ally of the devil; that the presiding elder who comes on quarterly meeting occasions is a tyrant and a fraud, and that even the Bishop is a bad man. This is not always done boldly and explicitly, but largely by way of innuendo. The preacher, presiding elder or Bishop may have said in effect, "I do not believe in the second-blessing theory;" and yet he preaches holiness of life, and speaks, in the old way, of sanctification; but this paper teaches that if a preacher expresses dissent from the second-blessing theory, he fights holiness and opposes sanctification. If this be so, then the preacher is false. When he says he believes in holiness he lies; when he pleads for a sanctified life he is a fraud. This is the plain logic of it—so plain that even the children see it.

I am not mistaken in this; nor is there any overstatement here. The good men who took part in the famous "Dublin case" have been denounced as false. They say the prosecution was not undertaken because Rev. H. C. Morrison preached the second blessing; the "Methodist and Way of Life," assuming the prerogatives that belong only to God, undertakes to tell us what was in the minds and hearts of the Dublin pastor and presiding elder; and that these men have really base motives when they arraign the evangelist, and that they lie when they deny that their motives were such as this paper charges them with. This is not told in rugged, brave words of plain English, but is taught strongly and reiteratively. That pure, high-souled man of God, Rev. Dr. J. C. Simmons, of California, whose white hair is a crown of honor, whose piety none have hitherto dared to question, is thus held up to the scorn of second-blessing people by this "holiness paper:"

"We regret to see that Bro. Simmons, a presiding elder in the Pacific Conference of our church, has preferred charges against Rev. E. A. Ross, one of our most successful and best-beloved evangelists. The crime for which Bro. Simmons wants Bro. Ross punished is, that Bro. Ross recently visited a California town, and was asked to preach in the Cumberland Presbyterian Church of the place. He did so, and now Bro. Simmons, in whose district this Presbyterian Church is located, proposes to bring Bro. Ross to trial for a violation of discipline. Bro. Simmons is an aged and honored minister in our church on the coast, and we deeply regret that he should have permitted his prejudices against the doctrine of sanctification as a subsequent work of grace betray him into so grave a mistake as this into which he has fallen."

This is signed "H. C. M.," who tells us positively that it was Dr. Simmons' "prejudice against the doctrine of sanctification as a subsequent work of grace," and not his judgment about the relations and duties of a local preacher, nor his conscientious desire to do his duty to prevent the sowing dissensions in the churches, that impelled him to arraign Rev. E. A. Ross. How does "H. C. M." know this? Is it true? If I believed it were, I could never again respect that grand old man of God whom I have known and honored and loved so long. Jesus said, "Judge not"—i. e., do not impugn motives; yet here is a man professing holiness who recklessly does it. Does not "H. C. M." know that the same God who gave the Ten Commandments gave us this one also? But suppose "H. C. M.'s" charge is not true, what is "H. C. M.'s" relation to the Ninth Commandment? Paul says, "Love thinketh no evil;" yet "H. C. M." claims perfect love. If this impugning the motives of such saintly men as J. C. Simmons is perfect love or holiness, then the New Testament is all wrong.

Again, "H. C. M.," in the issue of July 14, says: "Did Bro. Edwards not know that many of his brethren, sincere and devout men, have, because of their views on the subject of sanctification, been located against their wishes, deprived of their credentials, and even turned out of the church?"

This is a very grave charge; can I believe it? I demand proof. If it be true, the perpetrators of such lawless tyranny should be expelled from the church at once; if it be false, the writer and publisher of the slander should retract it or renounce their high professions.

In this same issue, of July 14, we read, "Wicked men in the church and out of it are opposing" the second blessing. The plain inference is, that all who do oppose it are wicked. Again: "The opposers of the doctrine of entire sanctification are playing a losing game." "The opposers" here mentioned are Dr. Simmons and those who agree with him; and "H. C. M." says that Dr. Simmons and his brethren are "opposers of the doctrine of entire sanctification." Can this be true? He adds, "Persecution can not stop anything." The plain meaning is, that Dr. Simmons and his brethren have gone into the awful business of persecution. Is this true? He adds further: "Good men can not afford to engage in persecution. They will not do it." This is true beyond all question; but in this connection it means that J. C. Simmons is not a good man. Then, I ask, who is?

In another issue is this from an editorial:

"The opposers of the doctrine of entire sanctification, as taught by the Methodist Church, have, of late years, proclaimed themselves the champions of law and order. At the same time many of them have no more scrupled to violate the spirit of the law of the church than they have to preach against the doctrines of the church, when by so doing they could in some way hinder the progress of the great revival of holiness. Bros. Smith and Mathews, of Dublin, Texas, not only proved themselves incompetent to understand and administer the laws of the church, laying themselves liable to arrest of character before their Annual Conference for maladministration of law, and to prosecution in the civil courts of the country, but they have brought reproach upon our Methodism."

"Bros. Smith and Mathews" are held up as "opposers of the doctrine of entire sanctification," as unscrupulous violators "of the spirit of the law of the church," as "preaching against the doctrines of the church," as trying to hinder "the progress of the great revival of holiness," as "incompetent to understand or administer the laws," and as "laying themselves liable to prosecution in the civil courts;" and yet Bros. Smith and Mathews are still in good standing in their Conference. What a fearful array of charges! What reckless bearing witness against one's neighbors! Is the witness thus borne true or false? "Love thinketh no evil!"

Alluding editorially to the going of Rev. T. A. Atkinson to the M. E. Church, it says:

"Bain, Marshall, Compton and Atkinson have all left our church on the coast, and gone into the M. E. Church. . . . They are all in the experience of entire sanctification. Thousands of laymen in our church, who believe the great Bible doctrines as preached by our founders and fathers, were looking to these faithful men to preach to them and their children the unsearchable riches of Christ. They look on this exodus with alarm and sadness."

Why not tell of Gober and Spurlock and a dozen or so of others who went from our church to the M. E. Church long before the second-blessing agitation was dreamed of over there? "Thousands of laymen," etc. This sentence sounds very reckless indeed to one who spent seven years preaching on the Pacific coast. But read what follows:

"There are hundreds of pastors in our Southern Methodism who will not surrender their liberties to that tyrannical element, that seems determined to trample out the doctrine of entire sanctification, even if in doing so it has to crush the life out of our church."

Who compose "that tyrannical element that seems determined to trample out the doctrine of entire sanctification, even if in doing so it has to crush the life out of the church"? The inference from the general tenor of this "holiness paper" is, that the tyrannical element is composed of Bishops, such as Galloway and Keener, and presiding elders, such as Dr. Simmons and the Dublin presiding elder, Weems and Powell, Andrews and Norsworthy, and a great host of our wisest, best and most successful pastors, and "thousands of our laymen."

In the issue of July 21, after quoting a statement from the Pacific Methodist Advocate about Mr. Moody preaching the higher life, Editor Cockrill says:

"The Advocate is at least consistent. If it is going to oppose holiness in the Southern Methodist Church, it should also oppose it in Mr. Moody. . . . That Mr. Moody 'makes a hobby of holiness' fills the editor with sorrow. Poor fellow! What must be the spiritual condition of this brother that he should say, 'We are sorry to see this.'"

Does the Pacific Methodist Advocate oppose holiness? That paper is a creature of the General Conference; does it oppose holiness? What does Bro. Cockrill know about its editor's "spiritual condition"? Who gave him the power to read his brother's heart, and that, too, across two thousand miles of plains and mountains? Is this in harmony with the thirteenth chapter of First Corinthians? Read this, which follows the above:

"This makes the Pacific editor sorry. We believe it makes the devil sorry also."

Not satisfied with classing his brethren with tyrants, persecutors and other vile men, he reaches the climax of uncharity here by classifying a brother editor, a brother preacher, with the devil. And this paper calls itself a "holiness paper," and is read in thousands of Methodist homes by Methodist men, women, and children.

These are samples of what the young, the unthoughtful and less informed in many Methodist homes are reading every week. What must be the result? Disloyalty and dissension? Most assuredly! But even worse will come. If these people are thus taught, by precept and example, that Christian people, even those claiming the highest states of grace, may, with perfect impunity, judge their brethren most harshly, deal out cold uncharity like this above cited, and hurl charges at their brethren with a recklessness that suggests a violation of the Ninth Commandment, their ideal of the Christian life will be far, far away from New Testament Christianity. This new phase of Antinomianism—I allude to what is recited in the preceding sentence—may throw about itself the air of sanctity, may wear the profession and name of holiness, may claim even an obsequious, kissing-the-feet sort of a love for those whom they coldly carve up in their uncharitable judgings, but in real truth it is positively unholy, or else the New Testament standard of religion is false.

I impugn no man's motives. These writers and publishers and circulators of "The Methodist and Way of Life" may be perfectly sincere in believing that they are doing God's service; but I must call attention to the unholiness of their words and deeds, and must warn Methodist people of the insidious poison that will come from taking this unholy "holiness paper" into their homes. This is no doctrinal question. I detest heresy-hunting, and have long since learned that generally "orthodoxy means my doxy, and heterodoxy means your doxy;" and I insist, as I have ever done, upon the widest liberty of belief and teaching within the very broad limits of the Twenty-five Articles. Methodist preachers, if they are really Christians, can agree to disagree on questions of creed, and yet love each other as brothers and treat each other as men who love. This question is one of polity: Shall we encourage, or refuse to discourage, the circulation of a paper among our people which will tend to make them disloyal to the church, and which will give them such low ideals of the Christian life? Shall we be, even passively, parties to the holding up of our very best men as bad at heart, and to parading as immaculate saints men who deal out this heartless uncharity, who violate the most sacred law of the New Testament by impugning the motives of their brethren, and who so recklessly "bear false witness against their neighbors?" Not if we be true to our Christ and his church.

It is an offense "to sow dissensions" among our people. That this is the natural tendency and almost invariable result of the circulation of "The Methodist and Way of Life" is the observation of a large number of our wisest and best preachers. Shall we be parties to this offense? Not if we be true Methodists.

The twenty-sixth annual camp meeting at the Hennington Camp Grounds closed on Friday night, Aug. 8. The most of the preaching was done by the Rev. John P. Lowry, of Little Rock, Ark., and he did it well. He was assisted by Revs. E. H. Mounger, D. D.; R. D. Norsworthy, T. W. Adams, A. B. Nicholson, S. P. Beall, T. J. Norsworthy, B. W. Lewis, H. C. Gatlin, and this scribe. The attendance was good to the close of the meeting, and the spiritual results as great as those of any camp meeting that we ever attended at that place. There were at least seventy-five who professed to be converted or reclaimed. Many of the converts were already members of the church. A large number of Christian people were revived, and covenanted together to seek a closer walk with God. Some were greatly blessed.

Quite an agreeable surprise was given the inmates of the parsonage here on Wednesday night, the eighteenth of August. The pastor's family had returned that afternoon from St. Louis, after an absence of two months. The prayer meeting that night had been broken up by an alarm of fire, and a few of the prayer-meeting crowd had assembled at the parsonage after the fire in the neighborhood had been extinguished. Presently a lumbering noise in front attracted attention, and in came quite a crowd of visitors, accompanied by a well-filled cart. As a result, the parsonage is supplied with provisions for several months. This, with a well-filled purse handed the pastor by the stewards, lubricated the machinery of life, and started this pastor afresh in the delightful work which he has in hand.

Important Notice.

To the Preachers of the North Mississippi and Mississippi Annual Conferences—

DEAR BRETHREN: I would respectfully call your attention to the special work to which I have been appointed till the ensuing Annual Conferences in this State, viz.: to raise funds sufficient to furnish and open our Orphans' Home at Water Valley. My success in a large measure depends upon your encouragement and co-operation. I must not lose any time, and if you assist me, I will not. I have already visited many charges and received the hearty co-operation of the pastors. Thus far the congregations have responded liberally. You may have already received a card from me suggesting a time to visit your charge; will you kindly reply at once? If you have received no communication, then kindly write and name a date, and I will meet it if possible. Please let me know when and where you will hold protracted meetings, and give me an opportunity in mid week to present the claims of the orphanage and take a collection. I feel sure that I have your sympathy, and shall meet with your hearty co-operation.

Thanking you in anticipation, I am, Yours for the orphans,

Grenada Collegiate Institute.

MR. EDITOR: I wish you would kindly say in the next issue of the ADVOCATE that we have a fine prospect for a full opening, Sept. 1. Everything is ready. The college is now supplied with a complete system of water works, sewerage and electric lights. Other improvements and appliances have been added this Summer, making the Grenada Collegiate Institute as convenient and complete in its appliances for female college work as any institution in our church. The faculty is the very best I can get together. When we ask our people to patronize their own institution we do not ask them to do so at a sacrifice, but are prepared to give them the best advantages at the lowest possible price. We ought to and must have every room full, and I think we will.

I made a call some time ago for the Indian Mission through the ADVOCATE, but have received only one response. The time is growing short. I am to start up there Thursday after the first Sunday in September. I need funds very much. What is done must be done very quickly. Who will help me? Send money order on Hermanville, or registered letter to me at Hermanville, Miss.

The English Fraternal Delegate to the Next General Conference.

At the recent Wesleyan Methodist Conference held in Leeds, England, the Rev. W. T. Davison, A. M., D. D., professor in the Theological Institution at Birmingham, was appointed fraternal delegate to the next General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South.

Dr. Davison was a delegate to the Ecumenical Conference in Washington City, in 1891, and read an able paper on "The Bible and Modern Criticism." He is about 55 years of age and entered the ministry in 1868. The editor of the Methodist Recorder (London) says:

Dr. Davison will visit, of course, some at least of the great educational institutions of the South. He will everywhere be warmly welcomed, for his own sake as well as for the sake of the Mother Church, which he will represent. He is no stranger in the United States. He was a delegate to the last Ecumenical Conference. Besides, his books are well known among the biblical scholars of America, and he has been a frequent contributor to the best periodical literature of American Methodism.

TOPIC FOR AUGUST.

ST. PAUL AS A MAN OF PRAYER.

AUG. 29.—PRAYERS FOR PERSONAL FRIENDS.

(II. Tim. i, 3; Philemon i. 4.)

1. It is helpful to know that some one is praying for you. The great Melancthon, cast down and disheartened, while taking a walk one evening, heard the voices of children at prayer. He at once brightened up and exclaimed to some friends: "Brethren, take courage; the children are praying for us." So it must have been an inspiration to both Timothy and Philemon to know that Paul was praying for them. We should not only pray for our friends, but we should let them know that we are praying for them.

2. (a) Paul realized that he was his brother's keeper. He refrained from doing anything that "would cause his brother to offend." Self-sacrifice for the good of others is a lesson we may learn from him. Though a thing may not be wrong for us, we should not do it if it causes some one else to stumble. (b) He not only refrained from doing that which would offend, but he did all that he could to help his brother. He not only did not put a burden on him, but he helped him to carry his burden. He prayed for them. "Bear ye one another's burdens."

FORGIVE.

By all the turmoil thou hast felt
Within thy tempted breast
When fiery passions strive to melt
God's image there impressed.
By all the struggles of thy will
To quell their rebel might,
Forgive the wretch who, battling ill
Was worsted in the fight!

Thou knowest not what cunning snares
Were spread beneath his feet;
What foeman lurked in ambushed lairs
To intercept retreat.
The weakness thou wouldst harshly chide
Should tender pity woo;
If thou hadst been as sorely tried,
Thou mightst have fallen, too!

Forgive, and breathe a gentle word
Of sympathy and love,
Like that by weeping Mary heard
From One now throned above;
And thou mayst win from depths of woe
The soul that went astray,
And light anew hope's faded glow,
To change its night to day.

But harshness raises higher yet
The waters of despair,
And weaves around it stronger net
To mesh the erring there;
Till, settling heavily, they sink
Beneath the tumid wave;
And thou, though standing on the brink,
Didst stretch no hand to save!

The Enforcement of Discipline, its Importance and Results.

BY REV. W. J. DAWSON.

(Read before the Enterprise District Conference.)

I.—THE ENFORCEMENT OF DISCIPLINE IS NECESSARY.

Without discipline it is impossible to maintain an organization or institution of any kind. The pastor that would enforce discipline must make up his mind to do his duty against great odds. A good many insist on the enforcement of discipline, but when called upon to assist in the enforcement, will not only ask to be excused, but will excuse themselves. This, then, is one obstacle in the way of administering discipline. Let the preacher in charge begin talking about enforcing the rules of the church, and begin to enforce, and he will soon find who are true and loyal to the church. He will find many who clamor loudest for the discipline to be enforced, to be hardest to enlist in the work. They are willing and anxious that the work should be done, but their prayer is, "Lord, from all such work deliver us." But there will always be found enough members on any charge loyal enough to give the pastor substantial aid in administering discipline. All personal feelings must be laid aside. A preacher's relation to the church is a public one, similar to the relation of the judge to the people. He is responsible for the enforcement of discipline. His best neighbor may fall under the pruning-knife, but he can not afford to connive at violations of discipline because of personal feelings. He must do his duty to God and the church. He will find that intimidations will be thrown in the way. His support will be threatened. Offenders will think that because they contribute to his support, the preacher can not afford to expel them from the church. Whenever a church refuses to expel a member on the ground that he pays well, it then forfeits its right to respect, and loses its power for good. A preacher can not afford to yield to these intimidations; neither should he bear long with offenders, with hope of their reformation. They will construe his forbearance into connivance at their sin.

II.—THE IMPORTANCE OF ENFORCING THE DISCIPLINE.

The church of God is set in the world for the maintenance of sound doctrine, purity of heart, and holiness of life, and should be the implacable foe of all manner of sin. There should be none of the world in the church, and all friendship of the world must be ignored if she fulfills her mission to men. There must be a distinction between the world and the church. In order to maintain this distinction, reprobates must be cut off. A church with drunkards, Sabbath breakers and sinners of all kinds in her will fail to accomplish her purpose in life; like Samson, will be shorn of her power. Preachers and church workers generally are anxious for a revival. I grant that it is needed, but we need, as a prelude to a revival of religion, a revival of discipline. The Holy Spirit is kept away from churches because of the rottenness and corruptions within. Sinners will not be saved over the heads of dead church members. In order to maintain her power for good, discipline must be enforced. In 1895 there were 24,657,434 communicants of all denominations in the United States, including Roman Catholics. From observation, I think I would be safe in saying that not more than one-half of these know anything of experimental religion. I am by no means a pessimist. I believe that there was never more vital Christianity in the world than now. The point which I would make from this is, that if discipline was enforced, worldliness and formality banished from the church, great revivals of pure and undefiled religion would follow as sure as effect follows cause. I believe the Holy Spirit will bless the enforcement of discipline, where it is done in the Spirit of Christ, as much so as the preaching of the Word. Power to enforce discipline is evidence of a church's vitality. A diseased body that has not vitality enough to throw off the disease will surely die. So the church that has not vital godliness enough to cleanse it will dwindle away and die.

III.—THE RESULTS OF ENFORCING DISCIPLINE.

The object of all discipline is not to cut offenders off, but to reclaim them, if possible; and cutting off should be resorted to only when other means have failed. It often happens that a process of discipline will save a man after all other means have failed. A preacher may and should preach against sins of all kind, both within and without the church; but there are people in the church that no amount of preaching along this line will reach, but are often driven further away. This class of people can only be reached through due process of law. You preach against worldliness, and Bro. A. will set back and wink one eye and chuckle to himself about how Bro. B. is catching it; not any of the sermon was intended for himself. But start a committee after Bro. A., and you will soon have him thoroughly awake. He will know that it is he you are after. The work of a committee is both specific and personal; hence there is no mistaking its object. Church membership lends respectability to a man, and is often a cloak for his meanness. Enforce discipline, take from him the props to respectability, tear away the mask from his sins, show him the corruption of his heart and life, and you have done a great deal towards reforming him. I know of no greater disgrace than to be expelled from the church; and there is no man who has fallen too low to realize it. There are not many, when given the alternative of reforming, or to be expelled from the church, but that will choose the former. Even if they do not intend to reform, they will make a show at reformation, in order to turn aside the discipline, thinking that, when the storm is over, they can return with impunity to their former sins. I think great good would result to the church if discipline was mildly, but firmly enforced. It removes odium from the church, and places her in her true light before the world, and greatly increases her power for good.

Who Called You to Preach?

Well may this question demand a pointed answer. The soul's eternal happiness in jeopardy, the measureless responsibility attached, with a final balance sheet to be rendered to God, the above exclamation may startle anyone.

Is the ordinary ordinations of the churches bestowed upon the ministry sufficient authority to preach Christ Jesus and his gospel? Does this ordination meet all of God's requirements, and equip the preacher for his great work? Is there not a moral miracle necessary? If this ordination from the authorities of the church is all that is needed, then there is a sad defect, a moral inefficiency in the preacher, according to the reading of the Scriptures.

There certainly must be something of still greater authority, something of far more reaching results, than the mere ordinations of ecclesiastical authority; something of deeper significance must be added, in order to measure up to Heaven's holy standard of what a preacher should be; something of a deeper, hidden, personal import and experience must precede these ordinations; something that will invest the preacher with an infit and an outfit of spiritual power. They must be called of God to this work. They must be spiritually ordained by the hand of God himself. They must have the gracious baptism of the Holy Ghost—all this must precede any ordination from the church. On the part of the preacher there must be the willing consecration, the opportunity and the ability. God never calls a proud, lazy drone; he never calls preachers on dress parade in the pulpit. There must be gifts, graces, and usefulness. These must be the outstanding qualifications, towering above all ecclesiastical ordinations. The sanctification of humanity is needed at this point.

If, however, a commission from church ecclesiastics to preach the gospel takes the place of the call of God, and this ordination be held as the principal qualification for preaching, or is considered as perpetuating the ministry in an unbroken line, the logical results stand out before the world from which there can be no escape. God is shorn of all authority, by this human ordination, to call his own ministry to preach his own gospel and carry on his own work. Thousands of preachers without stated work seem to indicate that some other voice but that of God was heard by them.

That popular work, the Homletic Review, lately had a scholarly article from a preacher calling on the talented young men to take up the ministry as a mere profession, intimating that intellect and brain power, the grace of oratory and elocution, buttressed by much learning, was all that was needed to go before the church and the world as the accredited ambassadors and apostles of the mysteries of God. In view of this, and the complaint of hundreds of preachers without pulpits, well may the question ring out like fire bells at night: Who called you to preach the unsearchable riches of the gospel of Christ—man or God? or did you take it up as an easy profession to win bread?

O for a thousand and more thrilling examples of God's own workmanship and call to the pulpit—ordination or no ordination! O for thousands of preachers instinct with the call and Spirit of God, whose faces and eyes and words glow and burn with a heavenly light and inspiration! O for preachers on whom the verdict will almost universally fall, He is full of the Holy Ghost!

We have preachers, but they seem to be more desirous of sustaining pulpit reputations, and building up great names, than saving the souls of those who wait on their ministry. We have preachers, but many of them seem to pride themselves more in their ecclesiastical authority than in building up a pure and sanctified church.

Holy Father, bend the heavens low once more, and let the power of the Pentecost return to thy church and people. Let showers of grace fall upon all the people.

Dr. Steel's Impressions.

MR. EDITOR: In my last I spoke of the visit of our eloquent Epworth League secretary, and of the ovation tendered him by the Southern Methodists of California. We were proud to exhibit him as a production of the Sunny South. I am sorry that he has raised a storm among us since his return to the South by the free use made of his pen as a correspondent of the St. Louis Christian Advocate. His communications contain many good things, including some good advice, for which most of us are grateful; but "there is a fly in the ointment," and we wish he was out. The good Doctor only claimed to write his impressions, and it is all right to speak of good impressions, though they be formed at first sight, and are liable to be obliterated on further acquaintance; but one is seldom justified in hastily publishing bad impressions. One time, the opportunity also being favorable, should be taken to learn the facts and draw conclusions, especially where great interests are at stake. Here was our friend's mistake. He had not sufficient time, nor a favorable opportunity. I believe he spent less than thirty days in traversing our great State, and, therefore, could visit but a few points, and tarry but a few hours at each place visited. Furthermore, that he might not be compelled to spend his time and strength socially, he was, at his request, entertained at hotels, and it is reasonable to suppose that his privacy was not usually intruded upon by pastors, so that his information must have been gained from a very few persons. The Doctor has a long head, but I hardly think he is capable of diagnosing our case with absolute accuracy, and prescribing infallibly, with the data at his command, though I do not deny that he has correctly named some of the symptoms. We have had many doctors. The shorter one's stay among us, the more confident is he that he knows all about us, and the more free with his prescriptions. Dr. Steel is not the first connectional officer who has made a flying trip to the coast, and formed conclusions, and adhered to them greatly to our detriment. Some transfers have also spoken not too wisely. Some years ago one Dr. Howard Henderson was stationed in San Francisco. His letters to some of the Advocates greatly amused me. He talked glibly of the blunders of his predecessors, and, by implication, at least, said: "I will show them that all that was needed was a man who understands his business." He was not there six months before others knew, and himself also, I am persuaded, that he was the greatest blunderer of all.

A new transfer was put in charge of a district. Measuring the work by the Southern standard, after six months he wrote up the work for several papers, and—well, he knew almost as much as Dr. Henderson, and later learned that he knew less than he thought he knew; and if he had remained long enough, would doubtless have acknowledged that his predecessors had been almost as wise as he.

This writer has already acknowledged to a blunder that he made in writing to this ADVOCATE after having spent only five years on the ground. I am prepared to sympathize with Dr. Steel. He made a very natural mistake. After reading his reply to his critics in the St. Louis Advocate, of July 28, I see also how he got his conclusions that "our church on the Pacific coast is weaker than it was ten years ago," though such conclusions were erroneous. The principal premise for his conclusions seems to have been what he interpreted to be "the almost universal tone of despondency in both preachers and people." This tone I infer he heard in the comparisons made by some of the brethren between congregations, etc., here and in the South. For instance, he refers to a comparison made by Dr. Riddick of his congregation in Centenary, San Francisco, and Memphis. I also heard the Doctor make such comparison in a District Conference recently, but he did not stop at that, but proceeded to compare his own church with others in San Francisco, and in that his did not appear to a disadvantage. It is admitted that California congregations are generally small, and progress necessarily slow, but we deny that our work, except in the cities (ours are a rural people), will not compare favorably with that of other churches in this section.

I would a little rather our name did not carry the suffix, "South;" but it does not weigh as heavily as Dr. Steel thinks. It is true that where both churches are established in the same community, ours is generally known as "the South Church," but it is equally true that the M. E. Church is denominated "the North Church." Would they not still be so denominated by outsiders if the name of the one was "Methodist Episcopal," and the other "Episcopal Methodist"? Would not an explanation of the difference between them be quite as frequently asked for?

It is not true that our ministry is confined exclusively to Southern people. I have just returned from a visit to a family where the husband and father is from Maine, and the wife and mother from Vermont, both being staunch Republicans, and equally staunch Southern Methodists. In Chico two of the leading officials are strongly Northern in sentiment, one being a G. A. R. man, and both would die by the M. E. Church, South. When a presiding elder, I endeavored to induce one of my preachers to pair with me and support the Prohibition ticket; but, no, sir, Harrison only could get his vote. At least two others of our preachers are G. A. R.'s, and hail from the North. These are only samples.

The fact that two or three preachers have left us does not signify that the church in California is in its "death throes." In the seventies some of our "biggest guns" departed, and I thought the membership would go with them, but they didn't, and it is generally believed that they have ever regretted that they went.

Rev. John Thompson, district superintendent of the American Bible Society, a member of the California Conference, M. E. Church, who has just left our town, says that our church has made more substantial progress during the past six years than the M. E. Church. He knows.

It is admitted that the present divisions, resulting from difference of opinion concerning the administration of affairs, is a source of weakness and danger. Two years ago, when a certain measure was proposed for adoption by the Pacific Conference, your correspondent said: "If the policy indicated in this resolution is to be pursued, the M. E. Church, South, on the Pacific coast is doomed." The measure carried by a small majority, and the policy has been followed to a considerable extent, greatly to our hurt. My opinion as to the ultimate consequence has not changed, but I have faith in my brethren, and believe they will see their error before it is too late. We will suffer damage, but our bark will be repaired, and will weather the gale to land a goodly cargo in the celestial city.

Letter from Oregon.

MR. EDITOR: I take it for granted that you and your readers are interested in the work that is being done in this great field. Before going into details, however, I wish to congratulate you for the excellent paper that you are giving to the church. The NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE stands second to none in the galaxy of Advocates, our great connectional paper not excepted. The NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE is improving in quality and excellence of editorials all the time. It is always a welcome visitor in my home. While the ADVOCATE is generally very full of interest, yet the issue of July 29, which is now before me, is of more than ordinary interest. Your editorial on "The Baptism of Jesus" can not be surpassed. Besides, there were several other good articles. The published proceedings of the Vicksburg and Enterprise District Conferences were deeply interesting to me, and I thank you for sending out such a good paper as the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE. I am sure it will do good wherever it goes.

All the preachers of the Columbia Conference are at their posts of duty, doing all they can to build up Southern Methodism. Judging by reports, many souls have been saved this year, and the walls of our beloved Zion are being strengthened. There are only two districts in the Columbia Conference, though there is some talk of another district being formed at Annual Conference.

Being in the Roseburg district, it was our good fortune to attend District Conference, which convened at Myrtle Creek, Oregon, June 17. The distance from Klamath Falls to Myrtle Creek is about 200 miles, yet we made the trip in a hack, and camped out along the way at night. This was the most delightful District Conference we ever attended. Great spirituality prevailed throughout the entire session, and many were the testimonies to the love of Jesus and his saving power. Reports from the various charges in the district showed progress along all lines of church work. Many conversions and accessions to our church were reported. All this showed a healthy condition, and that our church is on the upgrade.

The Columbia Annual Conference will convene at Roseburg, Oregon, Sept. 9. Bishop Hargrove is to preside. This will be welcome intelligence to the Bishop's numerous friends on the coast.

Rev. R. C. Oglesby, one of the veterans of the Columbia Conference, and who has done more for the Southern Methodist Church than any other man, departed this life on June 16, after a lingering illness of several months. His end was peace.

There is still very much unoccupied territory within the bounds of the Columbia Conference, and, as a church, we ought to go "up at once and possess the land." But we are lacking for men and means. Several young men from the overcrowded Conferences have recently come to us, but we need more. Now is the golden opportunity to take possession of this Western country for our Lord; but how can we do it without men? We need more men, and need them badly. There are many promising young men in the older Conferences who profess to having been called to preach the gospel. There is no room for them in the older Conferences, but there is room, plenty of it, in the West; and why will young men persist in burying their talents by knocking at the doors of older Conferences, instead of coming out here where they are so badly needed?

May the Lord bless you, Mr. Editor, and your readers. More anon.

C. W. HUFF.

Klamath Falls, Oregon, Aug. 4, 1897.

Church Extension.

The Church Extension Board is the pioneer corps of the Methodist Church militant. Its field of operations is on the border. Each church which it builds or assists is a fortress of the Lord, to bridle the frontier against the incursions of the enemy. Every society assisted or organized by it is a colony, which in time may strengthen and send forth other colonies. The mother church is helped by the force reflected from its church extension fields.

Louisiana is extension territory. More than the amount collected will be expended in the bounds of this Conference. There is no collection, therefore, which will result in more direct and positive good to our immediate people. If we will help our struggling societies to build homes of worship, they will soon be able to keep house. If we now lend them a sowing, the seed will be shortly returned in an ample harvest.

The direct application of these apothegms will be made by Bro. John T. Sawyer and by each pastor when he "lifts" his church extension collection.

Where Shall I Send My Child to School?

All things being equal, a boy or a girl will develop a better character at a church school than anywhere else.

In Mississippi no one is so silly as to suppose that all the good, thorough school work is done by our own institutions. All intelligent school people know there are good, true, Christian men and women in every school asking for patronage—men and women qualified to teach, and who do teach.

That school is to be preferred which is under the patronage or control of the church to which the parent or parents belong. It would be a sad comment on a man's faith and loyalty to find him a member of one church, and yet by his patronage contributing to the success and enlargement of another church. No sane mind could escape the conclusion that Baptist schools are built and sustained for the perpetuation of the Baptist faith and practices. The same is true of any other church school. If this be not the object of its existence, it has no right to exist at all.

Suppose my own church school charges more than a school of another denomination? Begging your pardon in advance, is it not true that a man's faith ought to be above price? Can you afford to sell out? Can you afford to lay aside your church vows, your views of the atonement, for $10 or $20, or any other price? Remember that in all your trading you get what you pay for. The best schooling must cost more than the indifferent.

But suppose I have no church school? Then patronize the school whose religious views harmonize most fully with your own.

Will not I gain something by sending to a higher latitude? I answer most emphatically, No. Our school months occupy the Fall, Winter and Spring. These, as a rule, are all pleasant months. The further North you go the more unpleasant they are. So far as climatic advantages are concerned, the very best are found in Mississippi.

Are not educational advantages better in other States? As far as collegiate education is concerned there are no colleges in the United States superior to those in Mississippi. There are differences in colleges, both at home and abroad. By making proper inquiry you can find what you want here at home, whether it be a regular college course, a business course, or a special training in art, piano, voice, violin, or elocution. A postal card addressed to any school will bring a catalogue and all needful information.

I am sincerely yours for the education of the young, and especially for the education of young women,

JOHN W. CHAMBERS,
Pres. Whitworth College, Brookhaven.

To Whom It May Concern:

About three years ago I received a sample bottle of "Mul-en-ol." I had never heard of it before. I began using it, however, as occasion required, and soon found that it was all that is claimed for it, and more. For cuts, burns, bruises, scalds, and all kinds of sores, it is superior to any remedy I have ever used. It is also exceedingly efficacious in colic and diarrhœa. For sore throat it is incomparably better than anything I know of. I heartily recommend it as a medicine worthy of a place in every household. W. C. BLACK, Editor Christian Advocate.

FROM THE WORK.

Rev. J. W. Tinnin, Tryus, Miss., Aug. 16, 1897: "We have held two meetings on the Providence circuit at Tryus and the camp ground, which resulted in about 175 conversions, reclamations and sanctifications. Glory! We were assisted by Rev. J. L. Morrill, Carterville, Ga. All glory to God!"

Rev. H. S. Johns, Bayou Chicot, La., Aug. 13, 1897: "Just closed a good meeting here, with Rev. John B. Keut assisting. Results: fifteen accessions to our church, and seven to the Baptist. The congregations were the largest ever known in Chicot. Thus far we had about thirty accessions, with several meetings yet to hold. To God be all the praise!"

Rev. H. G. Hawkins, South Side, Meridian, Aug. 16: "There have been since last Annual Conference 26 accessions to the South Side and Poplar Spring charge. One hundred dollars on our $300 church debt at South Side has been paid, and work enough has been done on the Poplar Spring new church to make it suitable for the worship, rather than the school-house, which was formerly used. Revs. R. F. Witt and R. H. Barr will be with us in a meeting at South Side, beginning Sept. 16."

Rev. Ira B. Robertson, P. C., Lake, Miss., Ang. 14, 1897: "We have just closed a very interesting meeting at High Hill Church, on Lake charge. Bro. Sullivan, from Forest, assisted me. He is a success as a gospel preacher and revivalist. There were eight conversions, four accessions, six new family altars erected during the meeting. The church was much revived. Bro. Burton, L. D., also did us fine service. Bro. J. S. Weems, L. D., did effectual service. Our presiding elder looked in on us to our cheer one day."

Rev. F. D. Van Valkenburgh, P. C., Pineville, La., Aug. 13, 1897: "While many people within the bounds of the Pineville circuit are in quite destitute circumstances, and we have but little to tell of financial prosperity, yet we have been called upon to magnify the name of the Lord for some precious seasons of refreshing from his presence. I have just closed a meeting at Oak Grove Church, where assisted by my son, W. B. Van Valkenburgh, for ten days we had large congregations, with quite a number of conversions and some sanctifications. Twenty joined the church, and the whole community seemed greatly stirred and benefited. Forty-two adults have joined the church on the work so far this year, and forty-two infants have been baptized. Rather a remarkable coincidence, from which it would appear that neither the Methodist Church nor infant baptism are defunct institutions in this section of the country. I have great reason to praise the Lord for another thing, and that is, that hard work and poor fare seems to have agreed with me wonderfully, so that while in seven months I have traveled about 1,250 miles and preached one hundred and forty times, my health has not been as good for many years past."

Rev. John W. Ramsey, Jonesboro, Miss., Aug. 12, 1897: "Let me say through the ADVOCATE that I am holding a revival for Bro. Cox at Camp Ground Church, Jonesboro circuit. We are having a fine meeting. Have had thirty-nine accessions to our church, and two will join other churches, making a total of forty-one. There have been thirty-one conversions up to date. Doubtless, Bro. Cox will write of final results after we close. Bro. Cox is in high favor with his people, has his young people well organized into Epworth Leagues, and is doing a fine work all over his charge. In the revival here God is with us in power."

Rev. W. J. Porter, P. C., Prudhomme charge, La., Aug. 14, 1897: "We closed a good meeting in Prudhomme on the eleventh instant. Bro. Nelson Hoffpauir, who was converted at Indian Bayou three years ago, and sanctified at Plaquemine Brulee a year after, and licensed at Jeanerette last May, did most of the preaching, which was in demonstration of the Spirit and with power. Results: twelve sanctifications, eighteen conversions, and sixteen accessions by vows. We begin at Eunice tomorrow. I only wish the Louisiana Parsonage and Home Mission Society, which contributed so liberally towards our parsonage in Prudhomme, could have been present at our meeting this year. I have never witnessed greater demonstrations of God's power. Praise the Lord for the Great Physician for both soul and body."

Rev. J. H. Smith, Wall Hill charge, North Mississippi Conference: "Last night I closed a week's meeting at Bethel, and oh! what a scene! I dismissed them, but they quietly sat down, and for some time there was a holy hush on all that mighty throng. They gazed with upturned faces, seemingly, into the spirit world—all aglow, with tears trickling down their cheeks, with smiles of joy playing over their faces. The Holy Spirit was there in power. The holy presence could be seen and felt. Thus we remained for some time, with an occasional talk or a song, and an outburst of rejoicing. Oh! it was good to be there. I told them several times that they were dismissed. After awhile reluctantly they left for home, rejoicing in his power to save. May they all be kept by his grace to the coming of that great day!"

Rev. R. E. Duke, P. C., Ashland, Miss., Aug. 13, 1897: "God is with us, and has done a great work for us. On our return from Conference to the circuit for the second year's work, I started at once to take subscriptions to build a parsonage (a work that should have been done twenty years ago). We worked hard, and many of the people acted well their part, and now we are ready for the benediction. The parsonage is finished, the last dollar is paid, and the deed is ours. The good people of Ashland have not been forgetful of us. We (wife and I) have received about $45 in gifts this year. I have just closed a good meeting at Ashland not long ago and just closed a glorious one at old Wesley's Chapel. Twenty-three souls were made to rejoice in their heavenly Father, backsliders awakened and the whole church to shout the praises of God. We have four others to hold, and are looking for God's blessing on us. Brethren, don't be afraid of Ashland; but may God's blessing ever rest upon her! Pray for us, brethren."

ANOTHER REVIVAL AT TREMONT.

We closed another glorious meeting here yesterday, resulting in the salvation of 40 or 50 more souls and 25 more accessions to our church. The completion of plans for the building of one of the best church edifices in all this country we now have in good subscription and cash; money to put the house up, and the bill for the lumber is made and will be sawed at once. Contract made, so that by Conference the house will be complete without asking aid from the Church Extension Board.

We have a membership of 75, and every dollar of assessment and claims will be paid; besides, a liberal contribution was given dear Bro. Sam Bass, who was with us from the first to the finish, doing a work that will tell in this country for years to come. Bro. Bass greatly endeared himself to the good people here, and I must say that he comes nearer doing the work of an evangelist sent of God, and to help the pastor every way, than any I have ever had to help me, and I have had some of our best. If our pastors want a good, true and loyal revivalist, that will revive a backslidden church and save the lost, and securely tie the pastor on to his people, let them get this consecrated servant of God and courageously stand by him, and victory will be certain. The prayer and love of this pastor and his dear flock will ever follow Bro. Bass as he goes on conquering and to conquer. We are now in another battle.

Pray for us. We are doing all we can for the ADVOCATE, and will continue.

A Family Reunion.

Having attended the reunion of the J. A. Lewis family on the fourth instant, I will give a short sketch of this extraordinary family. The father of this family, Judge J. A. Lewis, commenced life by marrying Bettie, the daughter of Moses and Nancy Foster, in the year 1859. In 1860 Thomas W. was added to this family—now one of the best preachers in the North Mississippi Conference. Next addition to the family was Nannie, now the wife of Rev. F. A. Whitson, who is now filling out his fourth year at the city of Pontotoc. Next was Willard, the only lawyer in the family, who is a well-educated, well-mannered Christian gentleman, now practicing his profession in the State of Arkansas. Next Eddie, another preacher-boy, and truly a good one, often called the "big gun" of the family, now stationed at a nice town in the Mississippi Bottom. These three sons are married to good Christian women. Next addition was Silas, now about twenty-two years old, well educated and a strictly religious young man. Next Dixie, the baby, about twenty years old, yet not completed his literary course, but a very fair specimen of the balance of the family. The father of this family was and is a close reader, and, living on a farm, reared these sons and daughter to either be busy at work or books. It was long since ascertained that this Lewis family would all be an educated family. These boys, of course, had their seasons for play, but when the time for work or for books came they soon learned how to apply themselves, and the consequence is they are now a family of preachers and lawyers, who are wielding a large influence for good. Every time they come home (once a year) they are preached at the various churches around, and always have full houses, showing their appreciation of "our" Tommie and Eddie by listening closely to their every word.

All these six children met at their parents' request on Aug. 4, in a family reunion at Friendship Church, and from 10 A. M. till 1 P. M. a literary feast was spread, at which the father and the children acted as waiters (speakers), except Nannie, whose husband took her place, and well did he fill it. The writer acted as "master of ceremonies" for them. This feast was enjoyed to the fullest extent by all present. May many other parents and children imitate their example!

The fondest anticipation in a woman's life is when she is looking forward to the coming of the sweet and tender little bundle of humanity that will some day call her mother. It is a pity that this joyful expectancy should ever be clouded with solicitude and dread of the physical ordeal which maternity involves. There is no need of this excessive anxiety if the prospective mother will avail herself of the health-sustaining power of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription taken early during the expectant period.

The special organs and nerve-centers pertaining to maternity are directly fortified and reinforced by this wonderful "Prescription." It gives the mother genuine, permanent strength, capacity and cheerfulness. It renders the ordeal of motherhood absolutely safe and comparatively easy; insures against subsequent relapse and prostration; promotes ample and healthful nourishment for the child and endows it with natural constitutional vigor.

For nearly thirty years Dr. Pierce has been chief consulting physician to the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute of Buffalo, N. Y. Any woman may consult him either personally or by letter free of charge, and with absolute assurance of receiving sound, practical advice from the highest professional authority. By enclosing twenty-one one-cent stamps to pay the cost of mailing only, he will receive a paper-bound copy of Dr. Pierce's thousand-page illustrated book, "The People's Common Sense Medical Adviser," or a handsome cloth-bound copy, for thirty-one stamps.

Mrs. Fred Hunt, of Burnt Hills, Saratoga Co., N. Y., says: "I read about Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription being so good for a woman with child, so I got two bottles last September, and December 13th, I had a twelve-pound baby girl. When I was confined I was not sick in any way. I did not suffer any pain, and when the child was born I walked into another room and went to bed. I never had an after-pain or any other pain. This is the eighth child and the largest of them all."

The continued increase in the number of young ladies in attendance at this college is evidence of the satisfaction of its patrons with its management. The equipment consists in part of 33 upright and 2 concert grand pianos, a six-inch object glass, Alvan Clark & Sons telescope, and probably the best chemical and physical laboratory of any female college in the South. With its 8 male and 11 female professors, it offers unusual advantages for mental training, and the lovely grounds, ornamented with two fountains, a lily pond and beautiful shrubs and flowers, is conducive to happiness and æsthetic culture. The dormitories are home-like and equipped with all modern conveniences. We believe that Louisiana girls would find the climate here pleasant and healthful. Have you lifted the lamp for others
That has guided your own glad feet?
Have you echoed the loving message
That seemed to you so sweet?

—F. R. Havergal.

Character and good deeds have the truest, most far-reaching voices.

A lie that is half a truth is ever the blackest of lies.—Alfred Tennyson.

As a rule, the more ignorant a man is, the more confident he is of being right.

Most people are easy to get along with so long as you let them have their own way.

The way in which a man spends his Sabbaths is an excellent index to his spiritual state.

The man who will not serve God in the midst of opposition does not love him.—Churchman.

It is sometimes better to overcome difficulties by going round them than it is to face and fight them.

The reason why we do not value eternal things is because we do not think of them.—Southern Churchman.

If some people would pray more and talk less about the faults of others, they would be much better Christians.

It does not usually require a high order of talent to say what wiser men than we are ought to do.—Richmond Advocate.

Christian fellowship means infinitely more than exclusive association with believers of one's own way of thinking and station in life.

The man who spends his time in counting hypocrites generally makes a miscount by not putting himself at the head of the list.—Ram's Horn.

The faithful Christian is not the one who presses forward by spurts, but the one who serves God constantly, persistently and energetically.

Instead of provoking your fellow-Christian to hot words and hard feelings by berating him because he does not agree with you, "provoke him to love and good works."

True religion, while it cares for the souls of men, does not neglect their bodies. Pious wishes for the spiritual welfare of the suffering poor, while their physical wants are unrelieved, will be regarded as insincere.—Baltimore Advocate.

A young Sunday-school teacher, a poor seamstress, one Sunday gave to a rough street Arab a shilling to induce him to go to a Sunday-school. That boy, Amos Sutton, was converted, went to work as a missionary among the Telugus, and after twenty-five years ten thousand converts were won in a single year.—Presbyterian.

The Non-Enforcement of Law.

One of the most alarming signs of the times is the impunity with which many of our criminal laws are violated. Most of the Southern States have codes of unsurpassed excellence, and if the statutes were properly enforced, crime would be reduced to a minimum. But, alas! some of our laws "are more honored in the breach than in the observance." While convictions for theft or arson are easy to secure, it is extremely difficult to secure the conviction and punishment of gamblers, assassins, embezzlers, violators of the Sunday law, and of laws against the sale of liquor.

Mississippi has, perhaps, the most rigid laws against gaming of any State in the Union; but in some sections of the State, especially in the larger towns, they are shamefully and openly disregarded. Though a few crap-shooters are arrested and fined now and then, the big gamblers and poker players go on month after month unmolested. Though the police authorities can hardly help knowing of the existence and whereabouts of these gambling dens, as well as the names of their habitues, little or nothing is done to break them up. In Louisiana, while the laws against gambling are better enforced than ever before, there is still a vast amount of it carried on in defiance of authority. Louisiana has for years been the gambler's paradise; but Heaven forbid that it should continue to be so!

In most of the dry counties in Mississippi the prohibition law is fairly well observed. In several places, however, blind tigers and hop-tea joints have been doing a flourishing business, and the offenders seem not to fear arrest and conviction. The Sunday law also is sadly disregarded in many places in Mississippi and Louisiana, shops and stores being in full blast, and no effort made to close them.

The infrequence with which murderers are punished, however, is a matter which should evoke the gravest concern. It has come to such a pass that punishment of the grosser forms of lawlessness through the agency of the courts is getting to be the exception rather than the rule. Though there were nearly ten thousand homicides in the United States last year, there were not over one hundred and fifty legal executions. Thirty or forty murderers were lynched, two or three hundred others were sent to prison; but the majority of them went scot free. Statistics show that during the past ten years the number of murders annually committed in this country has about doubled.

The fact that but a small per cent. guilty of this awful crime are ever brought to justice accounts in large measure for its astonishing increase. It is a lamentable fact that in some sections it is almost impossible to get a jury to convict a white man of murder in the first degree, no matter how cold-blooded the killing. So much sympathy is worked up for the defendant and his family that he either is acquitted, or gets a verdict which calls only for a term of years in prison. The abuse of the pardoning power in many States has contributed no little to the increase in the number of murders as well as of lynchings. And, as a rule, it is the people who are primarily to blame for this abuse of the pardoning power, since they will attach their signatures by the thousand to a petition for executive clemency in behalf of the vilest murderer. Again, the frequency with which murderers manage to escape justice through the ingenuity of lawyers in resorting to technicalities, appeals, and the postponement of trial, affords another explanation of the rapid growth of this crime. There is imperative need that something be done to lessen this awful evil.

Strange to say, many who as jurymen would not vote to inflict capital punishment except upon a rapist, have no scruples about participating in the lynching of a murderer. The strongest refutation of the silly sentiment against capital punishment is to be found in the fact that wherever it has been abolished, deeds of violence have become more and more frequent. The Scripture teaches that "whosoever sheddeth man's blood, by man shall his blood be shed."

A morbid and ungodly sympathy is that which lavishes itself all upon the murderer, and leaves out of view the unfortunate victim whom he ruthlessly deprived of life. It is high time that we pay less attention to the pretended repentance of criminals and address ourselves to the prompt and impartial execution of law, lest our courts become, as sometimes charged, mere "travesties upon justice."

Lynching, we regret to say, seems to be on the increase among us. The practice can not be too strongly condemned by Christian people. Though for the most part visited upon those guilty of a nameless crime, even in such cases it is inexcusable and unnecessary, since there would be no trouble whatever in securing the speedy legal execution of the guilty wretch. Mob-law appeals to the worst passions of the human heart, begets a reckless impatience with the slower legal processes necessary to the securing of justice, and often terminates in barbarities worthy only of the most bloodthirsty savages. Lynching also undeniably fosters a lawless spirit which leads men to visit summary punishment upon those charged with other crimes than rape.

We will fall upon yet more grievous times if our people, as a whole, do not wake up to the need of putting down lawlessness in all its forms. It is folly to expect Christianity, through the medium of the various churches, to do what properly is the duty of the State. The pulpit may thunder against murder, lynch law, gambling and other crimes, but unless the strong arm of the law takes hold of those who "fear not God, neither regard man," vice and crime will still stalk abroad and grow to yet greater proportions. The perpetuity of government and the peace and safety of civilized society depend upon the proper enforcement of law. It is a menace to the whole Commonwealth for any law to be openly disregarded, for its repeated violation lessens respect for all other laws. If we do not wish to drift back into barbarism or plunge into anarchy, we must uphold and assist the courts in every way possible. Let the godless be convinced that they can do as they list without fear of molestation, and they will perpetrate every manner of evil. All that the gamblers, thieves, murderers, etc., want is simply to be let alone. The law must be made a terror to evil-doers, otherwise it avails nothing.

What we need all over the country is, not so much better laws, but a better execution of those we already have. Our duty as citizens by no means ceases with the enactment of wise and just statutes. We must do all in our power to secure their due observance. Failure on the part of good men to testify against evil-doers is one reason why so many of them escape punishment. Many a man who could give information respecting the illegal sale of whisky, gambling, or some other offense, remains silent as the grave, or pretends to be utterly ignorant as regards such matters—all through fear of hurting his business and of incurring the ill-will of the law-breakers.

Then, too, business men of integrity are far too ready to shirk jury duty, and are unwilling to put themselves to any inconvenience or expense in order to bring about the better enforcement of law. They leave public affairs to take care of themselves, when they should exercise a large influence in shaping public sentiment and in the execution of law. Law-abiding citizens can not afford any longer to pursue the let-alone policy.

It is useless to expect our public officials to do their full duty as regards any law unless they have back of them a strong public sentiment in favor of its enforcement. The time has come for earnest, decisive action. Let Christians everywhere foster a law-abiding spirit. Wherever police officers are negligent, let pressure be brought to bear upon them to do what they ought. In many communities law and order leagues ought to be formed, and united effort made to banish lawlessness. Away with the dangerous notion that law-breakers are to be pitied and turned loose rather than punished. There are in every community "certain lewd fellows of the baser sort" who will unscrupulously violate any law not in accord with their notions, unless they are closely watched and made to feel that those in authority mean business. Let the rallying cry everywhere be for the upholding of the law in its majesty.

Brown University and President Andrews.

The recent action of the trustees of Brown University in calling for the resignation of President Andrews, on account of his "free silver" views, has justly elicited a storm of criticism from the press and public. The main reasons assigned was that the attitude of the president on this financial question had seriously affected the income of the institution, and that the support of many of its friends and patrons was being alienated.

Had Mr. Andrews been very active in promulgating his views, and had there been, as alleged, a large falling off in the college revenues, their action might have been, to some extent, justifiable. The trustees of an educational institution certainly have the right to demand that its head shall not actively disseminate sentiments supposed to be detrimental to its success and best interests. Discreet silence in such a case might have been suggested, but to insist upon an officer's resignation because he happens not to hold the same views as the trustees upon a question of finance is hardly in accord with American notions of freedom of thought and action.

Now it comes to light that President Andrews merely favors "international bimetalism," and that he has never published a book, magazine article, or letter, and has never made a speech, advocating the free coinage of silver by the United States alone. Nor has he had a chance to teach "free silver" doctrines in the university, not having charge of the chair of economics, where such views would necessarily receive attention.

Since twenty-four of the thirty-seven members of the faculty, in an open letter lately issued, protest against the attitude of the trustees, and declare that the income of the university has more than doubled since Mr. Andrews took charge in 1889, it looks as if they had made "much ado over nothing." The faculty say in conclusion:

The acceptance of the resignation of President Andrews under the existing circumstances would, we are confident, be publicly regarded as a denial of the principles we have sought to maintain. It would stamp this institution in the eyes of the country as one in which freedom of thought and expression is not permitted when it runs counter to the views generally accepted in the community or held by those from whom the university hopes to obtain financial support. The undersigned, therefore, members of the faculty of Brown University, respectfully urge upon your honorable body that the president's resignation be not accepted.

"The Struggle Is Never Over."

We do not remember to have seen anywhere a sounder or more forceful statement of the need of ceaseless effort and vigilance on the part of the believer than the following by Mr. Moody. After even the most wonderful experience the devil leaves us but for a season.

"I do not believe that there are many people who feel that they are living as God intended them to. Of course, there are many self-satisfied people, but the testimony of their neighbors would give good reason for questioning their confidence in their own perfection.

"The Master disclosed to his early disciples the only means for self-examination when he said, 'Wherefore by their fruits ye shall know them.' Paul, in writing to the Galatians, enumerates the virtues of the true Christian in the passage, 'The fruit of the Spirit is love, joy, peace, long-suffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, meekness, temperance.' If a man has none of these virtues, or if they are not increasing in his character, he may well doubt the reality of his regeneration. If there is no love for those who are overcome by sin, and no joy in the return of a wanderer, be assured there is in the heart no life from above. If there are no pangs of grief for yielding to sin, and no victory over temptation, his religion is vain.

"It is a great mistake to believe that the gift of the new birth does away with the old nature. I well remember how I thought that when I was converted the struggle was over, and how, resting on my oars, I should be carried through life with no more effort on my part. But I soon learned my error. I saw that life was one long voyage against the under-current of my old nature. I believe that it is all wrong to teach that man's old nature is ever dead, or that a state of sinless perfection is attainable on earth. Paul's words, 'Reckon ye also yourselves to be dead indeed unto sin,' are often quoted to teach this doctrine. To me, however, it is a sufficient proof that Paul know that the old nature was not dead by using the word 'reckon.' That which is truly dead falls out of reckoning."

Departed.

Rev. Jesse Fulton, a superannuate of the Louisiana Conference, died here last evening at 7:30, and will be buried here to-day. His death was in great triumph. He was ready when the summons came. He leaves many friends in our town. Let earnest prayer be made for Sister Fulton and their children.

NOTES.

See our notice, "Money Saved."

Under the wise leadership of Rev. R. A. Boroughs the Columbus district is flourishing. The reports at Conference will be very fine.

If you want any kind of printing done, send orders to the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE. We do any kind of work from visiting cards to pamphlets. See our ad. in this issue.

Rev. C. M. Crossley, Binnsville, Miss., is in a position which makes it possible for him to assist some worthy young man preparing for the ministry. Let those interested write him at once.

Rev. R. F. Wynn, pastor of the Church in Algiers (La.), has been sick in bed with fever for a week or more, and was unable to fill his pulpit on last Sabbath. We are glad to learn, however, that he is now on the road to recovery.

The Uganda Mission of Central Africa, which in its earlier years had to undergo fiery persecution, continues to be a miracle of grace. Though less than twenty years old, the number of converts received last year was 2,921.

The Salvation Army has on foot a scheme for colonizing the idle poor of the great cities of our country. Marked success has thus far attended its experimental efforts in this direction. This is a noble and much needed form of philanthropy.

Dr. Riddick, pastor of Centenary Methodist Church (South), San Francisco, has received more than sixty members into the church this year. The Pacific Methodist reports the congregation as being more hopeful and prosperous than for years.

In a private letter Bro. J. L. P. Sheppard writes:

The preachers of my district, without a single exception, are laboring earnestly and faithfully in the Master's vineyard, and the Lord is crowning their labors with glorious results. More than 150 conversions and over 100 accessions have been reported to me since our District Conference, three weeks ago, and the good work still goes on.

We are in receipt of the announcement of the marriage of Rev. M. B. Sharbrough, formerly of the Mississippi Conference, to Miss Ruth E. Libby, of San Bernardino, Cal., which interesting event took place on the fifth instant. We extend sincere congratulations, and wish them much joy. After Sept. 7 the couple will be at home in Los Angeles. Bro. Sharbrough is presiding elder of the Los Angeles district.

From a reliable source we learn that the Topisaw Camp Meeting was a great success. There were between sixty and seventy conversions, and the Christians greatly blessed. The trustees contemplate great improvements next year. They will fence in the grounds and try the gate fee. Topisaw Camp Ground is one of the most important in Mississippi. Bro. Boone, the beloved pastor, and his excellent people are enjoying the favor of the Lord.

"America Photographed" is the most magnificent premium we have ever offered, and our terms are easy. See description on our fifth page.

The third premium goes to Rev. D. P. Bradford. Rev. O. L. Savage has secured a sewing machine as a premium. Rev. J. V. Penn sent in a large number of subscribers, but did not enter into competition for a premium, preferring a different arrangement.

Miss Belle Kearney, since her return from Alaska, has lectured in Washington, Idaho and Montana. She is now in Colorado. After lecturing in ten of the principal cities of that State, she will lecture at a number of places in Utah, Nevada, California and New Mexico. Thence she will take a tour through Mexico. She hopes also to visit Cuba before her return to her home in Mississippi. One of her delightful letters will appear in our next issue.

On Sunday afternoon, Aug. 15, our confrere, Dr. Hoss, editor of the Nashville Advocate, performed the pleasant duty of laying the corner-stone of the new Methodist Church in the village of Monteagle, Tenn. Dr. DuBose, of Jackson, Miss., was also present, and made an eloquent speech. The other speakers were Rev. Dr. Eager, of Montgomery, Ala., and Col. A. S. Colyar, of Nashville. The church, which is to be built of beautiful pink sandstone, would cost about $7,500 but for the fact that all the stone needed has been generously donated by the quarrymen in that vicinity, thus reducing the cost 50 or 60 per cent.

DOMESTIC.

A public-spirited man at Poque Bluffs, Me., is having a good newspaper sent at his expense to every family in town.

The Tennessee Centennial at this date promises to beat all records in exposition finances. If the attendance keeps up, the exposition company will be enabled to pay dollar for dollar of the subscribed stock, and return a small dividend.

The Canadian government and the United States have agreed upon co-operation in augmenting the postal facilities for the Klondyke region, and the result will shortly be evidenced in a substantial doubling of the mail service from the coast into that district.

Secretary Sherman has acknowledged the recent overture of the French government, through Ambassador Paternotre, for negotiating a reciprocity treaty between the United States and France under the reciprocity clause of the new tariff law, and the Secretary adds that he hopes to take up the matter at an early day.

Next November elections are to be held in the cities, towns and counties that are to compose the city of "Greater" New York. Possibly 3,000,000 inhabitants will be embraced in the city's limits, and the public administration of such a corporation will have in its control an enormous political patronage and vast amounts of money. It is estimated that the city budget of expenditures will amount to $90,000,000 a year.

Wheat was sold at one dollar a bushel at the Produce Exchanges of the country on Aug. 20—something that has not happened for seven years. The decisive rise in price is declared to be based on the large demand from abroad, due to short crops in most foreign countries and with no reserves from the old crop at home here. Should dollar wheat rule through the season families will have to pay $7 to $8 for a barrel of flour, which, less than a year ago, they bought for half that price.

The Japanese government has undertaken the construction of 1,200 miles of railway, the first that has ever been built there, in the island of Formosa, recently acquired from China as one of the indemnities of the late war.

A meeting of over 3,000 people, held in Athens, adopted an address to King George, urging him and the government to reject the proposed peace treaty between Greece and Turkey and to resume the hostilities which were interrupted by the truce.

It is said that Italy, Austria, Russia and Germany have accepted the proposal of the Spanish government to adopt international measures against anarchy, the chief of which will be the establishment of a penal colony for the life detention of dangerous anarchists.

Michael Angiolli, who shot and killed Senor Canovas del Castillo, the prime minister of Spain, at the baths of Santa Agueda on Sunday, Aug. 8, was executed at 11 o'clock on Aug. 20, according to the sentence of the court martial imposed upon him, after his trial on the previous Sunday, which sentence was confirmed by the supreme council of war on Aug. 19.

Centenary Opening.

The Board of Trustees of Centenary College at the last meeting changed the time of the opening of the session. Hereafter the session will open the third Wednesday in September. This year that day is the fifteenth of the month; so the school will open Sept. 15. It is desirable that students begin at the beginning. We hope that all who expect to attend this session will be on hand Sept. 15.

THE GREAT WORK DONE BY THE EAST MISSISSIPPI FEMALE COLLEGE.

The South is fast becoming one of the educational centers of America, and Mississippi is right in line with progressive advancement. Mississippi has almost become famous for its fine institutions and their thorough work of training and instruction. There are a number of schools and colleges in the State that rank high in comparison to schools of other States. For instance, take the East Mississippi Female College, of Meridian. It is one of the most prominent educational institutions in the whole country, and the thoroughness of the work in various departments is something that should and does attract the most desirable patronage. Prof. Beeson, the president of the institution, is a gentleman of the highest moral principles, vigorously intelligent, and possesses deliberate and decisive judgment in all matters pertaining to educational advancement of those whom it is his duty to elevate. During Prof. Beeson's presidency and management the school has progressed wonderfully and has acquired a reputation of being second to none in any section. The next session and all sessions thereafter will have a conservatory of music under the skilled and talented direction of Prof. Conrad, of Germany. This is an excellent move on the part of the school, and one that the Southern people can not fail to appreciate and recognize as equal to the famous conservatories of large Eastern cities. It will prove the crowning features of the success of the college. Prof. Conrad's musical talent and artistic merit are marvelous qualifications, and have already gained for him the highest of encominms wherever he has had the opportunity to demonstrate them.—Meridian Daily Herald.

HOME CIRCLE.

IN THE HOME CIRCLE.

BY EUGENE FIELD.

The fire upon the hearth is low
And there is stillness everywhere;
And, like winged spirits, here and there
The firelight shadows flutter go.
And as the shadows round me creep,
A childish treble breaks the gloom,
And softly from a further room
Comes "Now I lay me down to sleep."

And somehow with that little prayer
And that sweet treble in my ears,
My thoughts go back to distant years,
And linger with a dear one there;
And as I hear my child's "Amen,"
My mother's faith comes back to me—
Crouched at her side I seem to be,
And mother holds my hands again.

O for an hour in that dear place!
O for the peace of that dear time!
O for that childish trust sublime!
O for a glimpse of mother's face!
Yet as the shadows round me creep,
I do not seem to be alone—
Sweet memories of that treble tone
And "Now I lay me down to sleep."

Honor Old Age.

The Germans have a story about a little girl named Jeannette, who once went to see a grand review. She found a splendid place from which to see the soldiers pass, when she noticed a poor old woman in the crowd trying very hard to get where she could see. Jeannette said to herself, "I should like to see the soldiers march; but it isn't kind in me to stay in this nice seat and let that old woman stay where she can't see anything. I ought to honor old age, and I will." So she called the old woman, and, placing her in her nice seat, fell back among the crowd. There she had to tiptoe, and peep, and dodge about, to catch a glimpse of the splendid scene, which she might have seen fully and easily if she had kept her place. Some of the people said she was a silly girl and laughed at her. Jeannette was rewarded in her heart for her kindness to old age. A few minutes later a man, covered with lace, elbowed his way through the crowd and said to her, "Little girl, will you come to her ladyship?" She could not imagine who her ladyship was, but she followed the man to a high platform. A lady met her at the top of the stairs, and said, "My dear child, I saw you yield your seat to the old woman. You acted nobly. Now sit down by me, where you can see everything." So Jeannette was rewarded a second time for honoring old age.—Selected.

What Educational Bureaus Say.

The managers of the educational bureaus, whose business it is to supply places for teachers, say that the demand for women to teach the sciences is greater in proportion to the supply than in any other direction.

The girl with a natural taste for chemistry, zoology, mineralogy, or astronomy, may cultivate her special science with a reasonable expectation that she can "put money in her purse," or, in other words, that the place waits for her coming. It seems as if this were the one field of labor that is not overcrowded, and girls with ability in any of these directions, and also with a taste for teaching, with the power of imparting what they have learned, might take this little hint that the bureaus have so kindly dropped.—Exchange.

Conscience and Health.

He that loses his conscience has nothing left that is worth keeping. Therefore be sure you look to that. And in the next place look to your health, and if you have it, praise God, and value it next to a good conscience, for health is the second blessing that we mortals are capable of—a blessing that money can not buy; therefore value it, and be thankful for it.—Isaac Walton.

Pistols and Pestles.

The duelling pistol now occupies its proper place, in the museum of the collector of relics of barbarism. The pistol ought to have beside it the pestle that turned out pills like bullets, to be shot like bullets at the target of the liver. But the pestle is still in evidence, and will be, probably, until everybody has tested the virtue of Ayer's sugar coated pills. They treat the liver as a friend, not as an enemy. Instead of driving it, they coax it. They are compounded on the theory that the liver does its work thoroughly and faithfully under obstructing conditions, and if the obstructions are removed, the liver will do its daily duty. When your liver wants help, get "the pill that will,"

Ayer's Cathartic Pills.

The Eye of the Master.

A man once asked an Eastern sage: "What will most quickly fatten a horse?" The reply was, "The eye of the master." Many questions connected with Christian living might, with equal wisdom, be answered in the same way. What will most quickly lead to swift progress in divine things? The eye of the Master. What will most surely keep us in mind of duty? The eye of the Master. What will best guard us against impatience, unkindness, and all other steppings aside from the straight path? The eye of the Master. In one sense it is always on us. Yet the practical effect is not secured unless we bear it in mind.

Our eye must also be on the Master. Our thought must take notice of his presence. Nothing is more vital to our advancement in holiness than constant recollectedness of spirit. To watch and pray without ceasing is the key of the situation. The habit is not taken on except by effort, but the effort will not be irksome if there be full and fervent love behind it. And only much practice can make perfect in this as in all things else. Love and labor, prayer and pains, toil and time and trust, are the words that contain the secret of success in this as in other attainments.

Do It Now.

A successful business man says that he owes much of his prosperity to a lesson taught him by his employer. This man's principal was, "Do it now." Instead of putting things off with the idea of attending to them "some time" he made it a rule to "do it now." Thus he was often in advance of his competitors, both in taking hold of a good thing or letting go of an unprofitable one. This principle may be applied to the smaller affairs of life as well as to the more important. The little things we ought to do and don't do worry us most. "Some time" they must be attended to, and the oftener they are brought to mind and dismissed again to that indefinite time the more trouble they give us. Then, after all, we are often surprised to find how little trouble it is to attend to these things, and want somebody to kick us for not realizing it sooner. Happy is the man whose rule is promptness in all things.—Stockman and Farmer.

A little tuft of moss once saved the life of a great English traveller. Mungo Park, one of the first great travellers in Africa, had been wandering wearily along over the barren land when he sat down greatly tired, and said to himself, "There is no use of my going a step further, I am completely worn out; I must lay myself down and die." But as he lay down upon the parched soil, he saw a little tuft of bright green emerald moss with its little amber colored seeds, and he thought to himself, if God could have guarded that little tuft of moss here in the desert, and sent enough dew, rain and sunshine to keep it alive, surely he must care for me, and so I will make one more effort. He thereupon got up, tottered on a little further, till some African savages met him. They were kind to him, took him to their house, and he lived for many years, his life having been saved by that little tuft of moss. So, too, we may all learn the lesson taught by Christ, to love and trust in God.—Canon Farrar.

Living at Our Best.

Do not try to do a great thing; you may waste all your life waiting for the opportunity which may never come. But since little things are always claiming your attention, do them as they come, from a great motive, for the glory of God, to win his smile of approval, and to do good to men. It is harder to plod on in obscurity, acting thus, than to stand on the high places of the field, within the view of all, and to do deeds of valor at which rival armies stand still to gaze. But no such act goes without the swift recognition and the ultimate recompense of Christ.

To fulfill faithfully the duties of your station; to use to the uttermost the gifts of your ministry; to bear chafing annoyances and trivial irritations as martyrs bore the pillory and stake; to find the one noble trait in people who try to molest you; to put the kindest construction on unkind acts and words; to love with the love of God even the unthankful and evil; to be content to be a fountain in the midst of a wild valley of stones, nourishing a few lichens and wild flowers, or now and again a thirsty sheep; and to do this always, and not for the praise of man, but for the sake of God—this makes a great life.—F. B. Meyer.

A Word as to Boys.

Mothers, says an exchange, train your boys to be neat in the house. They should be taught to look after themselves, and to keep their hats and coats in their proper places. Teach them this habit, and you will save many annoyances, and you will also do a kindness to the boys by teaching them neatness and self-respect.

Boys, as well as girls, should be taught to help in the house. How often we have been disgusted to see that the girls are made to help with the housework while the boys are allowed to play checkers, or sit at the fire toasting their toes.

A boy can help clear away after a meal, sweep the floor, polish the stove, or wash the dishes, just as effectively as a girl. He, as a rule, is stronger.

He will love his home more, and when he becomes a man, and has a home of his own, he will respect his wife all the more for having been taught to respect his mother and sisters.

Method.

Whoever you are, however young you are, reduce your life to a system. This is the open secret of all smooth and rapid work. It is always the systematic people who get over the most ground with the least friction. Watch this successful business man; observe that thrifty housewife; mark yonder pastor as he manipulates a hundred interests. Full of affairs, how do they contrive to clutch from the grinding whirl so many serene intervals of leisure? The answer is, system. 'Tis a sad thing, and a common, when one would sit down and draw a long breath, or when one might enjoy a little legitimate pleasure, to be clamored upon by duties undone. Why make a lumber room of your life, full of odds and ends of unassorted things? Some folks are animated confusion.—Great Thoughts.

An investment in knowledge always pays the best interest.—Benjamin Franklin.

Happy Homes

..AND THE..

Hearts that Make Them;

Or, Thrifty People and Why They Thrive

BY

SAMUEL SMILES,

AUTHOR OF SELF-HELP, CHARACTER, DUTY, THRIFT, ETC.

CAREFULLY REVISED WITH ADDITIONAL MATTER BY CHAS. A. CASKELL, A. M.

A beautifully illustrated book of 644 pages, cover stamped in gold, marble edges, size 8vo, red cloth. Probably no books of the same general type were ever written that have so much interested and inspired to worthy action the various classes to whom they were addressed, as have the productions of SAMUEL SMILES. The marked interest which attaches to MR. SMILES' productions is chiefly due to his happy use of biography. Readers who tire of extended biographical histories find here groups of the wise and distinguished of earth, each giving testimony to the various principles the author wishes to inculcate. The interest excited by the novel arises solely from our interest in the lives and struggles of men and women. They are interesting biographies, but much more interest should attach to lives actually lived and conquests actually made, provided they are produced with equal care. The home is the epitome of society and government. The application of these principles to every member of the home—the importance of their inculcation in the home where character is chiefly molded—and the value of such lessons in making every home what it may be and should be, has dictated the title,

"Happy Homes and the Hearts that Make Them."

OBITUARIES.

NORWOOD—Capt. Sam J. Norwood was born in East Feliciana parish, La., Oct. 25, 1816, and died at his home, White Hall, Point Coupee parish, La., May 2, 1897.

One of the noblest characters I have been privileged to meet I found in the person of Capt. S. J. Norwood. His life was truly a blessing to humanity. He was a son of Mr. Elias and Katie Norwood, of whom I know nothing; but, judging from the noble traits of character I have found in two of their children, they must have based the rearing of their children upon that excellent proverb, "Train up a child in the way he should go, and when he is old he will not depart from it."

He was married to Miss Eleanor Norwood, Nov. 23, 1842, by whom he became the father of nine children. Eight of them survive his death—four boys and four girls—all members of the church except two of the boys.

Capt. Norwood was at one time a member of the Board of Trustees of Centenary College, and was a subscriber to the New Orleans Christian Advocate from its birth to his death. A citizen of noble type, he was a man that had no patience with wrong-doing, condemning sin of all kinds and in anybody. He was a safe man to go to for advice, being capable of giving helpful suggestions and light upon most any question (or subject).

Being placed in charge of a plantation at the age of sixteen, he showed himself possessed of remarkable financial ability. He was a very successful farmer, in which business all his money and property was made. Many hundreds of dollars has he advanced to black and white. I can truthfully say he was the poor man's friend. He was liberal toward churches. He gave the Simesport parsonage and lot, worth about six hundred dollars; also the lot upon which the church stands, one acre of land on which to build Marine M. E. Church, South, and has also contributed toward negro churches. These are some of the things he did while I was his pastor. He was by no means a demonstrative man. What he had to say or do, it was said or done with sweet words and actions possible. His motto was, "Be sure that I am right, then do what I have to do in quickest time."

Capt. Norwood was a true friend to the preachers, one to whom they could go for help in time of need. I was his pastor for two and a third years. Several times did he make this poor itinerant's heart glad. He was truly my friend. Many pleasant days have I spent at his hospitable home. He was always at his place in the church unless providentially hindered. He was a true, good Mason. His lodge will miss him greatly. A more devoted father would be hard to find. Every now and then you could see him making his way to the home of one of his children to spend the day. They will miss his visits very much. A devoted father is gone. No, not gone, but moved to his heavenly home; gone where mother preceded him by five years. Everything that could be done by faithful hands was rendered. Especially must I mention Miss Nellie and Miss Jannie, who stayed by his bedside and did everything they could to make his last days as light and as comfortable as possible. Miss Nellie was a faithful daughter indeed; and he was very fond of "Nell," as he always spoke of her.

Yes, it is hard, dear children, to give him up. The vacant chair, the place at the table, his fireside talks are no more—the voice forever hushed. Bless the Lord! what is our loss is his eternal gain. I thank God that I ever knew Capt Sam J. Norwood.

W. T. Woodward, P. C.

DURRETT—Rev. John D. Durrett was born in Monroe county, Miss., March 8, 1820, and died in the same county May 27, 1897, after a lingering illness of some weeks.

He was converted and joined the Methodist Protestant Church in young manhood. A few years afterwards, yielding to the call of the Holy Spirit, he entered the ministry of that church, where he did efficient service until the work of the Methodist Protestants in North Mississippi was merged into that of the M. E. Church, South. He never entered the itinerancy of our church, but was a faithful and zealous minister of Christ in the local ranks until God called him home.

Bro. Durrett's old home was near Smithville, Miss. He afterwards moved near Quincy, where he lived several years, and in 1876 came to the prairie belt of West Monroe county, and here spent the remainder of his life.

In 1886 he purchased a valuable plantation some four miles west from Muldon, and by industry and economy made for his family a happy and comfortable home.

Bro. Durrett was thrice married: Dec. 18, 1849, to Miss Sarah C. Hollingsworth; Aug. 3, 1864, to Miss Amanda Moore, and Nov. 19, 1867, to Miss Sallie W. Hollingsworth, who still survives him. He was the father of eighteen children, ten of whom survive—five from the first marriage and five from the last. Those who have died departed this life in the Christian faith, and every surviving one is a member of the Methodist Church. One of these, Rev. T. J. Durrett, is an efficient local preacher, and is now serving the Quincy circuit as a supply.

Though deprived of the advantages of a collegiate education, Bro. Durrett possessed fine natural endowments, and, with an accurate knowledge of the doctrines of the Bible according to Methodism, was a preacher of ability.

His life in the home was that of a consistent disciple and servant of our Lord. Tender and affectionate as husband and father, he left his impress upon the lives of those who were nearest and dearest to his heart.

During his last illness he suffered much. Not only did his body succumb to the irrevocable decree of death, but towards the last his mental faculties were likewise impaired. But his end was peaceful and triumphant. To live was Christ, and to die was eternal gain.

H. T. Cunningham.

ERVIN—Samuel Whittington Ervin, son of Samuel J. and Eugenia Ervin, and grandson of Rev. B. B. Whittington, deceased, of the Mississippi Conference, died April 30, 1897, near Crystal Springs, Miss., aged twenty-five years four months and nineteen days. He was married May 26, 1895, to Miss Elma Fauches.

In a few short months consumption did its work, and quietly and peacefully he passed away trusting in Jesus. We were summoned to his bedside, but ere we reached him the spirit had fled, and the suffering one was at rest.

His mother died when he was an infant, and commended him to the keeping of the God whom she had served, praying that he might be led to the Savior. That prayer was answered, and during the camp meeting at Crystal Springs last Summer he was converted and joined the M. E. Church, South.

During his last moments, while life was ebbing away, he was calm and resigned, and left to those who stood about him the blessed assurance that all was well. His pastor sang that beautiful hymn, so dear to dying Christians, "Jesus, lover of my soul," and when it was ended he asked him to sing it again.

His father, step-mother and family mourn his loss, and a devoted young wife weeps over a desolate home. May God bless and comfort them, and may we all be faithful and be ready when we are called; then we'll meet him again. Till then, good by.

His aunt, Laura Price.

SMITH—Inasmuch as on Aug. 1, 1897, God saw fit to call our friend and brother, Capt. R. M. Smith, to his reward; And, whereas, We, as members of the Crawford Sunday-school, do deeply deplore the loss of one so valued for his exemplary life and Christian character; And, whereas, Bro. Smith's influence for good was such that sweet memories of him will ever be cherished by the members of this Sunday-school, and as superintendent he was ever faithful in the discharge of every duty, and by his words and courteous manners he won the love and respect of all with whom he came in contact; therefore, be it

Resolved, That in the death of Bro. Smith this Sunday-school has lost one of the best superintendents it has ever had, the church one of her most devoted members, and the town one of its best citizens.

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be placed on the records of the Sunday-school and published in the Christian Advocate.

Mrs. H. S. Walker, for Com.
Crawford, Miss.

WADDILL—Whereas, It has pleased our heavenly Father, in his wisdom, to remove from our midst our beloved brother, B. F. Waddill; therefore, be it

Resolved, By our Official Board of the Second Methodist Church, that we feel it to be an irreparable loss to give up one of our members, whose sincerity and intense devotion to all matters that pertained to the temporal interests and spiritual progress of the church was never questioned. His wide sympathies knew no distinctions of class or caste, because he was diligent in striving to relieve poverty and distress wherever he found it. Our brother was generous, loyal, affectionate, and all who knew him find something in his character to admire and respect. He had the courage of his convictions; lived up to the light he enjoyed. His end was the beautiful termination of an earnest life.

Resolved, That we extend to the bereaved relatives our sympathies, hoping they may find consolation in Him who doeth all things well.

E. Gibbens, for Com.

GREEN—Resolutions adopted by the Sunday-school of the M. E. Church, South, First Church, Jackson, Miss., Aug. 1, 1897:

On the twenty-seventh day of May, 1897, our beloved friend and co-worker, Mrs. Mary J. Green, was called to go "up higher" to be forever with her Lord, and our Sunday-school recognizing the great loss sustained; therefore, be it

Resolved, That while we bow in humble acceptance of our heavenly Father's will, knowing that he only does that which is best, yet we feel deeply bereaved by her death. When her health permitted, for more than forty years she was a teacher in this school; and while we mourn her absence, we rejoice that for so long we received her valuable work as a teacher and her inspiring example as a Christian.

Resolved, That while the voice we love is hushed, she still speaks through her pupils, her children and grandchildren, and the circle of her influence is widening, and will continue to extend until we meet in heaven, for God's Word says: "Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord; they may rest from their labors; and their works do follow them."

Resolved, That we hereby express our deep sympathy with the bereaved family, and may the God of all comfort grant that their faith fail not, but with renewed zeal may they take up and push forward the work which she laid down.

Resolved, That these resolutions be spread upon the Minutes, and copies furnished the New Orleans Christian Advocate and the city papers for publication, and sent to each of her children.

Every butcher-shop needs Pearline. Almost as much as it needs an ice-box. Look at the general greasiness and nastiness around some butcher shops. It isn't that they're less particular there, probably. They're doing the best they can. But they don't use Pearline—and there are some things that must have Pearline to keep properly clean, and among these things are meat markets, butcher shops. 539

Epworth College
(Formerly MALONE)

Is located in Holly Springs, at the intersection of the Illinois Central and Kansas City, Memphis and Birmingham Railroads, and has always been noted for the health, culture and refinement of its people. Ten passenger trains come and go every day, except Sunday, when we have eight.

We shall continue to work under the auspices of the North Mississippi Conference, and pledge ourselves to use every effort in behalf of those entrusted to our care that they may be developed into educated, polished Christian women.

BOARDING DEPARTMENT.

Pupils boarding in the College have the personal attention of the President and his wife, who, together with the teachers, strive to make their stay while here as pleasant and profitable as possible.

An abundance of substantial food is furnished; ample time given at each meal for everyone to be satisfied, and President's family, teachers and pupils all fare alike. Special attention is paid to their manners and morals at all times, and every effort is made to impress them with the necessity of constant growth, physically, mentally and morally.

We board at $11.00 per month where they take their meals regularly at the table; extra charge when the meals are carried to their rooms, and extra servant hire. This includes pupils and teachers.

No incidental fee is charged unless something is destroyed, and in this case the cost of the article is charged to the party who destroys it.

SEED-TIME.

BY CHARLOTTE MURRAY.

We are sowing, ever sowing,
Something good or something ill
In the lives of those around us—
We are planting what we will.

Not a word we say falls fruitless,
Not a deed we do decays;
Every thought and word and action
Will be found in future days.

When, perhaps, the hand that sowed them
Shall itself have ceased to be;
Still the record of their being
Will live on eternally.

Grant, then, Lord of all the harvest,
That the seeds we daily sow
May refresh the hearts of others,
Spreading blessing as they grow.

May each thought and word and action
Be the growth of Christian love,
To be found in coming ages
In the garner-house above!

Treasured there, in thine own keeping,
Just to prove our love was true;
For the motive gives the value
To the meanest thing we do.

—Christian Witness.

Correspondence.

Letter from Miss Belle Kearney.

Men and women who have traveled over every land upon the face of the earth unite in saying that there is no niche in the universe compsrable to Yellowstone Park. The United States does everything on an immense scale. This stupendous reservation "dedicated and set apart as a pleasnre gronnd for the benefit and enjoyment of the people," as declared by a certain act of Congress, is a fine illnstration of this country's gigantic movements. Yellowstone Park is only sixty-five miles broad and seventy-five miles long. This vast body lies mainly in Wyoming, but it takes in portions of Montana and Idaho on the north and west. It is a region of natnral marvels. Everything within its borders is astonishing. The Rocky Mountains extend through its entire length, their peaks rising 14,000 feet above the level of the sea, while their valleys are never lower than 6,000 feet. Here the mighty Missouri, Colnmbia and Yellowstone rivers spring into life. Here is fonnd Yellowstone Lake lifting its shining face 7,785 feet into the air, and stretching out its arms 150 square miles, forming the most immense sheet of water in America at such an altitnde. Here are the most unparalleled geysers in existence, of every variety of construction and terrifying snggestiveness. Here is one of the most magnificent canyons in the world, ten miles in length and 1,200 feet in depth. Here are water falls more beantiful than any other—not excepting Niagara. Here are found acres of hot springs, with terraces of wonderful formations, perfectly exquisite; obsidian cliffs, marvelous petrifications, monntains of brimstone, boiling streams and ice-cold brooks, green meadows and snow-clad peaks, miles of trout and lakes of salmon, every variety of wild animal from the chipmnnk to the buffalo, every sort of pine, spruce, cedar and maple, while wild flowers of varied hues clothe the wayside and mountain-tops with beauty and lade the air with fragrance. In short, Yellowstone Park is the most delightful and frightful combination of heaven and hell that could ever be imagined or described. It would take volnmes to write it up. All that one can hope to accomplish in a newspaper article is simply to give a general outline of the situations and condltions.

The park is nsually reached by a short railroad running down from Livingston, Mont., to Cinnabar. At the latter place parties desiring to travel in elegance take the six-horse tallyho coaches fnrnished by the transportation company, and are conveyed from hotel to hotel at about $30 for the round trip. Those who want to rough it go with camping outfits at an outlay of something in the neighborhood of $30. Others, wishing to move leisurely and exclusively, hire private conveyances and a driver, furnishing the reqnisites.

Dnring two weeks in Augnst there were over 3,000 people who came on the first plan and many thonsands of others who came on the last two. One day, while seeing the wonders of the park, we met Mr. W. J. Bryan and his family calmly resting under the shade of a tree. Mrs. Bryan was reading aloud the history of Mexico in view of their intended visit to that country. The would-be silver President looks hale and pictnresque in his outing snit. He made some running remarks on his favorite theme, and gained friends from our party by his "Hail-fellow-well-met air." It is said that he did not want to go through the Golden Gate, that narrow pass between Bunsen Peak and the southern end of Terrace Mountain, on account of its name, and even thinks heaven will be objectionable if the streets are made of gold. Of course, he is a happy man, for all his clouds must, necessarily, have "a silver lining." The first night our party camped out was near Mammoth Hot Springs, where there were more than fifty in activity, covering over 170 acres. The water of these, as well as all the other boiling, seething depths we saw, is clear as crystal and ultra marine in color, reflecting every tint in the overhanging sky and revealing the marvelous structnre of the interior of the earth in which they lay. There are vast formations, fashioned like terraces in this section. The two largest are called Minerva and Jnpiter. They are masses of deposits of carbonate of lime, which increases, ordinarily, at the rate of one-sixteenth of an inch in four days, and are of the most beantifnl shades; pale cream at the top, deepening into tones of yellow, orange and brown, while one of the adjoining terraces presents a solid front of shining white. The water overflowing from the springs sinks at the base of the terraces and forces its way through snbterranean passages to a point called Boiling river, which intersects the Gardner. There fish may be caught in the cold stream and cooked in the hot water without changing from the hook. The temperature of the water at the edge of Minerva Terrace is 154 degrees Fahrenheit; so the heat of the interior can very well be imagined. An odor strongly tinctured with sulphur rises from nearly all the boiling springs. The breath from them kills every vestige of vegetation. For several yards each bush and tree and sprig of grass stands dead and colorless—bleached purely white—and the desolation of the endless pit broods over the scene. The third day we passed other hot springs and several geysers, camping at Gibbon Meadow. Our road took us by the Obsidian Cliff, a great projection of volcanic glass, black as tar and glittering like an African's face when oiled for "de Sunday go-to-meetin' service." The road at its base was constructed by expanding the large boulders of glass by heat and suddenly pouring cold water upon them, breaking the masses into a thousand fragments, and then smoothing them into a passage-way—the only glass road in the world. Soon we arrived at Norris Geyser Basin, which would delight the soul of a geologist. In it is found the Monarch, the king of all the geysers, as well as many lesser ones. Of all the hissing, rumbling, thundering creations that we beheld in this region, the Black Growler was the most hideous. It is an opening in the side of the earth shaped like a monster cat-fish mouth. From this pours a perfect volume of steam and dirty water, and clouds of smoke ejected at intervals like a huge animal snorting and blowing, "Pouf, pouf; pouf," accompanied by the most unearthly noises. One feels that the gates of Hades are open before him, and yearns for a Dante to describe its horrors. In the Gibbon Canyon, and later in other places, we saw the wonderful paint pots. They are excavations in the earth like immense caldrons, where the steam, in pushing its way to the surface, forces the clay to sputter and dash and fall in fantastic shapes, working, working, working like a mass of boiling mortar. The coloring of the silicious clay is exceedingly brilliant—usually a bright pink or crimson. When it touches the flesh or any other substance it dyes it like real paint put on by a brush. One could stand for hours and watch the curious spectacle with constant fascination. After passing Lower Geyser Basin, with its 693 boiling springs and 17 geysers, we drove on to Upper Geyser Basin, where the Sabbath was spent. In this area of four square miles are found 26 geysers and over 400 hot springs—the greatest known in creation. The ground quakes and trembles, and the air is heavy with deadly fumes. The usual geyser in the park is erratic in its play, but Old Faithful holds regularly to an eruption every sixty-three minutes from one year's end to another, regardless of the weather. A few jerky ebullitions give evidence of an approaching display. In about eight minutes from the first indication there pours forth a rush of hot water that comes with an overpowering force streaming upward to a height of 150 feet, where it remains still for three minutes, then descends in a shower of rain and vapor upon the mound of geyserite which surrounds the crater. It is a magnificent sight never to be forgotten.

Monday brought us the joy of witnessing a perfect sunset on Yellowstone Lake, which lies like a sapphire in the heart of the snow-topped mountains. Close to its shores are forests of pine, and graceful willows droop over its rocky edge. There is a radiance, an electricity in this high altitude that glorifies the face of the waters and gives touches of wondrous beauty to the hills and every earthly object. With the coming of eventide over the lake, it deepens into a million iridescent tints that transform the scene into a paradise. One feels inclined to cry aloud in rapture, or fall before God in thankfulness and adoration. Como is nothing to it, nor the Hudson, nor the Rhine, nor the Swiss lakes in their Alpine splendor. Yellowstone is unique and unapproachable. Nature's treasure-store was emptied upon it.

The following day we rode through the valley of the Yellowstone river, with its smiling meadows "rich with hay," which is cultivated by the managers of the hotels. The herds of cattle seen roaming around are kept for the purpose of supplying food for the numerous guests, as the distances are too great to secure fresh meat from the markets. Yellowstone river abounds in fish. Below the rapids, in different parts of the stream, hundreds of trout and salmon can be caught in a few moments. The most absorbing object that we beheld in this day's tour was a mud volcano. It is situated at the bottom of a bluff, with a tremendous crater thirty feet deep in the shape of a funnel. From the dark cavern at the base of the great rock is belched forth a mass of nauseating blue mud, soft as batter cake and as offensive as a gas factory. The spoutings are accompanied by mutterings deep and muffled, like distant thunder. For moments at a time only little angry sputters are heard, when suddenly there is a tremendous vomiting that scatters the sticky, sickening mass over every surrounding object that stands or lies within a radius of a hundred feet, to the dismay and disgust of the bystander. A heavy rainfall in the afternoon freshened the landscape beyond the mud-horror, and painted the sky with a double rainbow of unusual brilliancy. Sleeping on mattresses laid on the wet ground was not conducive to amiability, but the sorrows of the night fled before the gladness of the morning, ushering in a day full of compensation in the grandeur that was revealed. First came the Upper Falls of the Yellowstone, a vast volume of water falling 140 feet over a perpendicular rock upon the stones below, then rising like towers of light in the sunshine, showering its shining spray hundreds of feet high, then joining the mad current and sweeping at a furious rate for a quarter of a mile beyond, where it suddenly takes a tremendous plunge of 320 feet over a frowning precipice; then down it surges through the deep gorge of the canyon, and winds its tumultuous way as far as the eye can reach, like a bright green ribbon at the feet of the overshadowing mountains. A narrow path from the main road leads down to the great Falls of the Yellowstone. There on a level ledge one can lean over a parapet and watch the mighty mass of water plunge down and revel in myriad rainbows that wreathe themselves at the point where the descending torrent joins the calmer stream; then feast his soul on the majesty of the scene presented by the Grand Canyon—a mighty cleft between superb mountains whose sides are radiant with variety and incomparable splendor. Farther up, at Grand View, Inspiration Point, and others, the same matchless panorama is presented, which is impossible to describe. It requires an opulence of language, which, if given full expression, would be regarded as the wildest exaggeration. In order to fully comprehend and appreciate this exhibition of God's power in creation, it is necessary to make a journey to Yellowstone and behold it with undimmed vision. Everywhere in the Grand Canyon eagles are seen—their nests invariably perched upon some lone cliff. It is a place where only the great and strong could abide. A place where the "Lord is in his holy temple" and where "all the earth keeps silence before him."

BELLE KEARNEY.

Senator J. Z. George.

Our little city is draped in mourning, and the hearts of her people are filled with sorrow, on account of the death of Mississippi's friend and benefactor, Senator J. Z. George. His funeral was held on the seventeenth in the elegant new Baptist Church which he loved and helped to build, and his friends came from far and near to pay to him their last tribute of respect and honor. The church was filled to overflowing, and hundreds could not even get as far as the door. There were a great many visitors from a distance—senators, congressmen, representatives, judges, lawyers and editors; also the military company from Jackson. The church was draped in black, while the floral decorations placed there by loving, sympathizing friends were many and beautiful. The body reposed in a handsome casket literally covered with flowers, and tenderly guarded by two soldiers—one at the head and the other at the foot. The girls of the choir, dressed in pure white with black sashes, marched in, one of them bearing a lovely floral design with a white dove in the center. Dr. Johnson preached from Job v, 26, "Thou shalt come to thy grave in a full age, like as a shock of corn cometh in his season," and paid a very high tribute to Senator George in every relation of life. Services were concluded at the cemetery, where he was laid beside his wife, who preceded him two weeks ago. The funeral procession was the longest ever seen in Carroll county. The court-house and all business houses were draped in mourning, and all the bells tolled.

Senator George was a great man, and no greater title could have been bestowed upon him than that he was a friend to the poor. He has fought a good fight.

His toils are done,
And sweet will be his rest;
A crown of glory he has won
In that happy land of the blest.

Epworth League Echoes and Orphans' Home Notes.

BY REV. THOMAS B. CLIFFORD.

Be cautious, but at the same time be cheerful and hopeful.

There are many dangers to be avoided, but let us be careful not to unduly magnify the dangers, and thus discourage the weak and timid.

We have read many things of late referring to the dangers (and perils) of the Epworth League. Much has been said (pro and con) of the recent "Convention" in Canada. Let us be careful as to the manner of our criticisms, for fear we defeat the very end proposed in the organization of the League.

We have just read a note from Mr. G. N. Hart, of Pine Bluff, Ark., to the Arkansas Methodist. In it he states that he went to Toronto, not for side-trips and sight seeing, but for the spiritual good the occasion promised. We rejoice to see this note, and are assured that it but voices the sentiments of many a Leaguer who attended the great "Convention."

Let us "keep our hand upon the throttle" and "our eye upon the rail," but be sure not to stop the train till some "real danger" is seen ahead.

"All at it, and always at it, for life long and world-wide service."

Since sending our last

ORPHANS' HOME NOTES

we spent a delightful Sabbath at old

BETHEL CAMP GROUND,

from which place our last communication was sent. Large congregations were present at each of the services, and the power of God was manifest. Our appeal in behalf of the Orphans' Home met with a liberal response, and when all promises made shall have been fulfilled, we expect to count nearly $150 as the result of our visit to Bethel.

Sickness in our own family and pressing business called us to Water Valley for one day. A card received from Bro. Hal. S. Spragins, inviting us to visit his charge in interest of the orphanage, prompted your correspondent to leave at once for on the M. and O. R. R., where a protracted meeting was in progress. Bro. Lagrone, of West Point, was assisting the pastor, and being a director of the Home, he was, of course, specially interested in the work. Bro. Spragins stood ready to do everything possible for the success of the institution. I made an appeal, the congregation responded, and $50 will soon be added to the orphanage treasury because of my visit to Mayhew. Several of the ladies promise to furnish sheets, quilts, etc., besides the money subscribed. We were glad to meet Rev. W. C. Harris, of Friar's Point, who, together with his family, was visiting relatives in the community. During our stay we heard him preach a strong and impressive sermon.

Rain prevented our reaching X Prairie, on the Brooksville circuit, the third Sunday, so that the next place in our plan was a country church seven miles northwest of West Point, on the Cedar Bluff circuit; Rev. B. S. Rayner, pastor. Here we assisted several days in a protracted meeting, and secured in cash and subscription nearly $25.

Everywhere the people seem deeply interested in this very laudable enterprise. All we ask is an opportunity to present the claims of the institution to our people throughout the State. To this end we ask for the co-operation of every Methodist preacher in Mississippi.

Some Thoughts.

MR. EDITOR: I hand you a running comment on Bishop Keener's late article on Job that slipped from my pencil as I read the beautiful production. My thoughts are very loose and disjointed, but I will not dress them up.

The opening sentence has a burst about it, a sort of avalanche of style, etc.; succinctness notable; theme, a perfect man; highly figurative and full of the stir of imagination so common to and so extraordinary in this man. It has an oracular, didactic touch, and full of weighty enunciation; amplitude of view and power of statement. Its survey of the temptation and test of Job is microscopic, and has a fullness and vividness of delineation that are very striking. Its images swarm upon his page and give it movement, imparting a liveliness of style very invigorating, and a sort of panoramic vigor and vitality. It is full of verve. His tribute to Job has a glow of panegyric exceedingly inspiriting. It thrills one as a national air thrills and invigorates the patriot-soldier in the throes of battle. Its typification is enforced with a freshness and emphasis that commend it by a gratitude for the portraiture. It has a power of compaction of scriptural teaching, and, so to speak, distils its history to a rare brevity. It has strokes of style full of delicious quaintness, vigor and elevation. In interpretative breadth and depth, in its vigor and movement, it is dramatic; and it is instinct with an individuality original and commending. Its spiritual insight and its superhuman plane of description are fine. It seems somewhat like a depiction an angel might have written who fully knew its import. His paraphrase of God's communion with Job as to how the world was made is one of the most enkindled and glowing pieces in literature. It is more teeming and picturesque than Macaulay's depiction in Warren Hastings, while it is lifted away above it in its piercing elevation and glow. I hardly believe it has its equal in prose literature in our language, while its extreme chastity of style make it pure as well as splendid. Its grand turn in making it a refutation of sundry isms and unbeliefs is a superb stroke of spiritual dialectics. Its penetration and amplitude of argumentation from internal evidence seem conclusive, and it has a luxuriance of spirituality, and a holy revel of fancy as well, and slights neither philology nor history to fortify the claim for its divine origin. Its exegetical point is exquisitely discriminating, both in mental weight and philological precision. It is recondite with wide and scrupulous lore. Its characterization is very searching and delineative, as, for instance, in analyzing Elihu. Its multifariousness of views, the prodigious variety of aspect, is a marvel of analysis. It has great sallies of description, sometimes very brief, but which electrify his sentences and dazzle you as a wide-blazing flash of lightning.

Here and there you see his short, unique phrases, quaint and beautiful; cameos of diction. It is a fine illustration of mastery of theme. He possesses it and handles it with an assuredness of touch and security of grasp unmistakable.

His estimate of the Epic merits of the book are given in a very rich vocabulary of characterization, and attest that his great gift of criticism is—I had like to have said, enhanced by years. The weighty standpoints from which the theme is viewed, their number and richness of reflection, are impressive. It is almost a prose Epic and an intellectual prodigy for an octogenarian. M.

Nations, like individuals, are powerful in the degree that they command the sympathies of their neighbors.—C. N. Bovee.

Missions of the M. E. Church, South.

BY REV. R. SELBY.

(Preached before the Vicksburg District Conference, and published by request of the Conference.)

"I have chosen you, and ordained you, that ye should go and bring forth fruit, and that your fruit should remain."—John xv, 16.

The conception and birth of Methodism was given in the revelation of a full-orbed gospel, and with this was a manifest missionary spirit. This divine measure in the evangelization of the world has resulted in many sublime achievements for the gospel. Eliminate this feature from the forces of Methodism, and it proves a contradiction of holiness of heart and life. It is this spirit that has moved in the dark places of the home-land as well as in foreign fields. In fact, everyone truly born of God is, by the influence of his life, a missionary. By virtue of our existence and perpetuity as a church, the obligation rests upon us to see to it that the world has the gospel, and there is nothing short of meeting this requirement that will suffice. We are criminal before God if we do less; yet there are scores among us who seem not to have apprehended this fundamental fact of the gospel of Christ. If we are saved by the power of God, we should emphasize this transformation by securing the salvation of our neighbor in every clime—our object will be to save men. Methodism is not confined in its influence or obligation, and truly can we say, with our founder, "The world is my parish." It seems to me that with the resources that attach to us, and which should be at our command, there is more inspiration in this utterance than at any time in the past.

This being the mission of the church, let us note what we have accomplished in this direction—what have been our efforts and what the results. Have the expectations of God and the appeals from every heathen nation for the gospel of love and sympathy been recognized and met, and do we know that in the present achievements of the church we have done what we could? Are our hands clear of the blood of souls, and is there really sufficient effort to commend us to God? These are questions involving the destiny of immortal souls who in great multitudes shall rise up in the last day to bless or condemn us according to our response or failure to respond to the demands of God upon us. We are God's representatives to a lost world.

BRAZIL.

In 1835 Rev. Fountain E. Pitts, of the Tennessee Conference, was appointed to Brazil, where, in Rio Janeiro, he established a congregation among the English-speaking people. On his return to the United States he urged the establishment of a mission, and the Board appointed Rev. Justin Spaulding, who sailed from New York in March, 1836. This ministry was blessed of God in the increase of the congregation, the organization of a Sabbath-school and a weekly prayer meeting. In only a short time Bibles were on the ground for distribution. About this time the opposition of Rome put a quietus on the efforts of these men of God who had given themselves for labor in this field, among a priest-ridden people.

Our mission, authorized in 1874, was organized for work under the ministry of Rev. J. E. Newman, of the Alabama Conference, in 1875. In 1876 he reported a membership of 38, all Americans. The gospel, in the keeping of these faithful men appointed by the Board of Missions, was the power of God unto the salvation of the people. While it appears a long time of labor for so little result, the circumscribed movements of the missionary through the opposition of the priests who held the minds of the populace in subjection was the hindering cause. The perseverance and courage of the missionaries have secured recognition from the authorities, and to-day the gospel is preached with liberty, notwithstanding the hatred of Rome.

The report on membership for 1896 is as follows: Four districts, with a membership of 1,571; 9 local preachers, 24 charges. There were 168 infants and 330 adults baptized. We have 2 schools, 2 papers and an agent for the Publishing House; also an agent for the American Bible Society, who has traveled over much of the territory in distributing the Word of Life. The Annual Conference in Brazil was organized in September, 1886, by Bishop Granbery, with Revs. Kennedy, Tarboux and H. C. Tucker, of the Tennessee Conference, who went out with the Bishop that year. The missionaries, wives of missionaries, native preachers, traveling and local, and other helpers in the field number 43. After twenty years of organized effort with many years previous to this of toil and sacrifice, we note a membership altogether of 1,614.

Bishop Galloway, whose mind is stored with information concerning our mission territory, and whose heart burns with an intense zeal for the universal spread of the Master's kingdom, sailed from New York for this field on the third instant, and his presence and counsel will give much life and impetus to the work.

CHINA.

This has been considered the most difficult mission in the spread of the gospel that we have yet entered, due to the extremely conservative spirit of her population, having a cold and lifeless religion, extending over a period of hundreds of years. The country was closed against the Word of God prior to 1844. Subsequent to this and up to 1858 missionary operations were allowed only in the five ports of Canton, Amoy, Foochow, Ningpo and Shanghai. It was in 1858 that all restrictions were removed and China's millions were given the opportunity of hearing the glad tidings of salvation. While the decrees of the Empire were favorable to the entrance and labor of the missionary, there was a wall of superstition surrounding the mind and heart of her population. This must be removed, if at all, by a long and steady warfare of righteousness against the deep-seated effects of idolatry that had existed for centuries from one generation to another. Remember, the population of China is four hundred million. In 1860 there were about 1,600 converts, and in 1890, 30,000, representing the results of the combined missionary forces of the world.

Rev. Chas. Taylor, of the South Carolina Conference, was our first missionary to China, who in 1843 signified his readiness to go to a foreign field, and who, with Rev. Benjamin Jenkins, of the same Conference, was ordained elder by Bishop Andrew in Norfolk, Va., Feb. 28, 1848, and on Aug. 12, of the same year, they entered the port of Hong Kong. Dr. Jenkins was detained in Hong Kong on account of sickness in his family. Dr. Taylor reached his destination at Shanghai in September. Other missionaries followed from time to time, among them our own now sainted Dr. J. W. Lambuth, in 1854. These men of God often faced perplexities and sometimes adversity on every hand. They were there, though, by divine appointment, depending upon the promise of God—"I will give thee the heathen for an inheritance." The struggle must at times have been severe, and but for sanctified courage and boldness in presenting their claims before God, they would have given up under the pressure of a dead and idolatrous worship. As we look upon the face of cold facts to-day, the millions against a few hundred, it seems that failure will be the result, but not so. "One can chase a thousand, and two put ten thousand to flight." These men were the servants and ministers of the God of nations, and the Lord, through them, can break down every barrier. In 1876 Bishop Marvin, a man of strong spirituality, visited China and gave great strength by his godly counsel and sympathy to the missionaries.

The China Mission Conference was organized in 1886 with 11 missionaries from the Parent Board, 10 from the Woman's Board, 3 ordained native preachers and 6 unordained. The mission then numbered 141 communicants. The membership of the church in 1895 was 604, and in 1896 it was 740—an increase of 136 over 1895. Thirty-three infants and 142 adults were baptized during the year. The Conference is well equipped for work with two colleges, hospital, dispensary, Sunday-school Board, and general school work. To glance at the figures presented here, one might judge we are moving at a snail's pace; but the difficulty is with the home church. There is need of consecration with the missionary, but is there less need of it with the home men? Truly do the missionaries yearn for spiritual sympathy from the church at home, and with such an impetus as this they weary not in the Lord's work. In addition to the two districts—Shanghai and Soochow—the Corea district was added last year—1896—and Corea is destined to become one of the most aggressive fields we have in our church to-day. The gospel will soon have a universal hearing in that land of moral darkness.

MEXICO.

It was in 1873 that Bishop Keener visited the City of Mexico, and, recognizing the importance of immediate effort being put forth, purchased property for the erection of a house of worship, and in June, of the same year, appointed a converted Mexican to take charge of the station—Alejo Hernandez—by whose short ministry impressions for the gospel were made. The Conference was organized in 1886 under the name of Central Mexico Mission Conference. Here, as in Brazil, the church was confronted with the intense zeal and hatred of Rome against evangelical Christianity. It has been by continuous effort, with much sacrifice, that the heroes of the cross have won their way to the hearts of the people, impressing them with their need of salvation alone through the merits of Jesus Christ. Our own beloved brother and fellow-laborer in the gospel, Dr. J. M. Weems, was for three years engaged in mission work in this field, and there he zealously labored for the glory of the Lord in the advancement of his kingdom. Many toilsome and weary hours and days were spent by him in the service of the church, yet he was blessed in seeing some of the happy results of his efforts.

For twenty-four years the warfare has been on in Mexico, and many struggles have the missionaries had, but triumph has followed.

For 1896 the statistics are as follows: Members, 3,223; local preachers, 18—an increase in membership over 1895 of 363. There were 240 infants and 210 adults baptized during the year. We have four districts supervised by men who love the church. We have not yet succeeded in spreading the rays of divine light throughout that republic, but we shall yet see the knowledge of God and his Christ cover the earth as the waters cover the sea.

The Mexican Border Mission was opened up in 1874, and organized as a Conference in 1885. There was reported in 1896 a membership of 1,769, with an increase over 1895 of 22. One hundred and twenty-two infants and 159 adults were baptized during the year. We have 3 districts with 24 appointments.

The Northwest Mexican Mission Conference was organized by order of the General Conference in 1891. This was a part of the Mexican Border Mission. The report for 1896 was as follows: 916 members, an increase of 20. There were 132 infants and 136 adults baptized during the year. The membership of the three Conferences in Mexico is 5,908—a good showing when all the circumstances are considered.

Georgia Letter.

If the editor of the ADVOCATE could visit his old charge in Macon, he would find himself a little bewildered at the changes which have taken place. The unsightly church has been so renovated inside and out that it is now one of the most comely in the State. The annex is a complete Sunday-school room, and all the essentials of an up-to-date church—kitchen, stove, crockery, etc.—are found in it. The full orchestra—violins (small and great), pianos, trombones, French horns—provide a musical entertainment of high order for the Sunday-school. A flourishing Epworth League keeps things lively, and a popular and greatly beloved pastor holds all together. Dr. Monk is now closing his fourth year, and much to the regret of the Mulberry people, he goes elsewhere. We would be glad for him to remain in Georgia, but our past success in holding on to the brethren who have been in Macon is not encouraging. The First Street charge has taken also a new departure. Dr. Carradine is a special favorite with its pastor, Bro. Mathews, who is president of the South Georgia Holiness Association, and he had him with him for ten days and more this Spring. He was followed by a Presbyterian, Dr. Walker, as he had been preceded by Miss Tucker; so the church has had a succession of meetings. The results are a holiness meeting weekly, street meetings, and a stirring time. Bro. Mathews is greatly beloved. He is untiring in his work, and as courageous as untiring. Whatever men may think of his views, they all respect his sincerity.

Vineville has about finished one of the neatest and most tasteful churches I know of. It is in perfect accord with its surroundings; is not too costly nor too plain. The young pastor, Bro. Anthony, is exceedingly popular, and his congregation continually grows.

I have not been very well, but ventured out during hot weather to attend the District Conference, and to try and sell some of my wares. I attended four or five Conferences. The District Conference in Georgia comes nearer to being a successful institution than in any other State I have visited; but it is not the success it ought to be. There is a failure on the part of the laymen to realize its importance. For instance: The North Macon Conference had in it not a single representative until the third day from Mulberry Street, and none at all from Vineville. Although delegates were to be elected to the General Conference this Fall, and the laymen were to elect an equal number with the clerics, less than two score from a large district were concerned enough to vote; and of those elected to the Annual Conference, only half will likely be present, and, perhaps, twenty men will elect as many delegates to go to Baltimore as 150 preachers. I am beginning to doubt seriously whether the men who inaugurated lay delegation, as it is, were as wise as I once thought them. The wearisome routine of the reports seems to me might be avoided, and the referring of everything to committees a needless waste of time. Bishop Pierce's plan was the best I ever saw. He had no committees. The Conference was a committee of the whole. Reports ought to be written, a terse answer to certain questions ought to be made, and questions ought to be answered as they are asked. Take the question of finance. Have you a financial plan? What is it? Are your finances up? If not, why? The question is now before the Conference, and the people can confer informally about it for a session. So with Sunday-schools, missions, and so forth, and especially so with the spiritual interests of the church. The six sessions of the Conference provide a good time properly divided for this kind of conferring.

So, my good friend, Dr. Steel, is in it once more. Can't you Mississippians do something with the genial Doctor? The forgery, as it was called, was so transparent that for one to have been deceived by it was simply amusing, and, above all, that Dick Price should have been caught. The fact is, the witty Doctor has us, who are in favor of conservative methods, on the hip. John Wesley's perfect contempt for precedents was justified by him on the ground that he had an extraordinary call. He would never have permitted one of his helpers to have done as he did. We are obliged to be consistently inconsistent. We can not allow now what we once did ourselves, or there will be chaos. We had as well admit it. To have a local preacher or a traveling preacher to come next door to my church to antagonize me will never do, even if John Wesley did do that very thing. The English prelates would have stopped him if they could, but they couldn't. We can and we will stop any who do like he did. The rights of pastors to control their own pulpits is a vital one, and neither presiding elders, nor Bishops, nor local preachers, nor anybody else, not even an editor or a bookseller, has any right to traverse that right. It was too funny, however, that anybody should have read the Eldredge letter and made parallel columns out of it. Save me from my friends. I am sorry, however, that the Doctor has received so severe a censure for an offense so trivial; but when wise men are hoaxed, they are absolutely relentless. The bright Mississippian has many friends, however, who know how kind his heart is, and how he aims always to be on the right side; but does he really believe that he is sacrificed because of his opposition to tobacco and worldliness? I am sure he does think so; but his warmest friends do not agree with him. I see he wishes to banish Bishop Galloway to our Western shore. I hope the Bishop won't go. No part of our church has had so much service from the Bishops as California. Bishops Andrew, Pierce, Marvin, Kavanaugh, Fitzgerald, Haygood, all worked there a great deal. If Bishops could have made us the leading church in California, we had been so long since. We don't want more Bishops in California, but more harmony and self-reliance among the preachers there. There, now; my chance for a bishopric is gone! I have said my say.

We are to have Bishop Galloway this Fall, and am glad of it. He has been long a-coming, but he will be gladly welcomed, and we will give him work enough to satisfy him.

Shall we have more Bishops? If so, who shall they be? They should not be mere scholars, however accomplished; mere orators, however brilliant; mere diplomats, however skillful. They should not be tinctured with the broad churchism which substitutes culture for piety and ignores the Holy Ghost, while it stresses the natural agencies. They should not be ambitious men who use the church and make a gain of godliness. They should not be men who look upon Conferences as conveniences, and the rank and file of the body as serfs, whose duty is merely to obey. But they should be men of sound sense, deep piety, broad culture, tender hearts, who shrink with dread from the office, and accept it with a feeling of dependence on God, and in it feel that they are not lords over God's heritage, but servants of all. There are such men. We have had them in the past; we can find them now.

GEO. G. SMITH.

Scarritt Bible and Training-School.

MR. EDITOR: It has been some weeks since I have seen the familiar face of the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE, and I quite long for the time when I shall be so settled as to receive its weekly visits again. The Summer has been spent in continuous Bible study—first in the School of the English Bible at Chautauqua, N. Y., and for the past ten days here at the University of Chicago. I can not speak in too high terms of the instructors, or the quality of instruction, I have been privileged to enjoy at each of these places. As I probe more and more deeply into the beauties, doctrines and mysteries of the Word of God, the larger and profounder is my sense of gratitude to him who has thus chosen to reveal himself to mankind, and the more earnestly does my heart cry out that all the world might share in its blessings and study its precepts.

Since coming to Chicago I have visited the Chicago Bible and Training-school, a large school and doing a wonderful work, and have been deeply interested in the deaconesses' work as carried on in this city. I am told that nearly every Methodist Church in Chicago employs one or two of these godly, trained women to assist the pastor in his daily duty of caring for the physically or spiritually needy of his congregation. While we have no such order in our Southern Church, still I am sure we all realize that our churches have greatest need of devoted, enlightened, trained women to labor for God and humanity as Sunday-school teachers, Epworth Leagues, Missionary and P. and H. M. workers, and their lack is greatly to be deplored. So I would write a few earnest words to the brothers and sisters of my own Conference, and also of the Mississippi and Louisiana Conference, begging that this question of the training of our young women for Christian service be given more earnest consideration. This is a day of specialties, and parents all over our land are giving their daughters "finishing courses" in this and that department of education, looking to their future good in life; but among these various lines, music, art, elocution, stenography, etc., how many are including a course in special Bible study, or practical Christian work? And yet, could any parent give his daughter a finishing course that would more certainly bring increased usefulness and happiness throughout life? The Southern Methodist Church, anticipating these needs of its daughters, has provided just such a finishing school in the Scarritt Bible and Training school at Kansas City, and is a source of real regret to all who know and appreciate this school that its patronage has, up to this time, been so small. I am sure that a misapprehension exists regarding the aim and work of this school; hence this letter, which I have hesitated to write because of my present connection with it. I am sure that the Scarritt Bible and Training-school has been regarded by many simply as a place for the training of foreign and home missionaries. This is certainly a part of its purpose and work, but it also provides for the training of Sunday-school teachers and Christian workers in all our church organizations. Indeed, the two years' course at this school is intended to qualify a Christian woman for any sphere of usefulness to which God may call her. Should not the Southern Methodist Church recognize the great aim and work of this school, and ought not its halls to be thronged with earnest students, who, having completed their education in literary institutions, now turn to this school of biblical and practical Christian training, and thus truly "finish" their education, and gird themselves for life and its conflicts? It will grieve me sorely to find no Mississippi girl in the halls of the Scarritt Bible and Training-school the coming session, for from past experience I know only too well how sorely is biblical knowledge and Christian training needed in the every-day walks of life, and I would see our Mississippi girls realizing their need and reaching forth to the opportunities before them.

Praying that God may use these words to the enlisting of interest in this great department of education among the parents, pastors, societies and young women of your Conferences, and asking also that his blessings in richest abundance may rest upon our church in the dear Southland, I am,

Yours in his service,

MARY L. HARGROVE.

The Annual Meeting of the W. P. and H. M. S. of the North Mississippi Conference will be held in Winona, Miss., Oct. 9-12, 1897.

We presume the usual arrangements will be effected with the railroads, using the certificate plan.

Let us have a full attendance. Mrs. David B. Turner is our corresponding secretary here.

Come in the spirit of the Master, praying his blessing on our assemblies together, and claiming his promise, "Lo, I am with you."

This column has been granted us this week to present a few facts to the ladies of the North Mississippi Conference. The eleventh Annual Report of the Woman's Parsonage and Home Mission Society of the M. E. Church, South, has been sent to each Auxiliary. You will find some changes in the Constitution and By-laws, and that the question of dues has been finally settled, that 10 cents a month—$1.20 a year—constitutes a member of an adult society, and 5 cents a month—60 cents a year—a member of a Juvenile or Young Ladies' Society. Let us pay this small amount with a free will as unto the Lord. You will also see how these small amounts have aggregated thousands of dollars during the year and have helped so many parsonages throughout Southern Methodism.

If you have read the reports of the superintendents of the various departments, you will realize how they need your prayers, your sympathy and your mites. Connectional Methodism means united effort, through which great things can be accomplished for our Master.

Bishop Pierce once said: "The entire womanhood of the church ought to be enlisted, and may with proper effort. What an increment of force this would be! The world would feel the impulse, the momentum of such a movement!" Can we not this year enlist all the women of the North Mississippi Conference in this grand movement of home mission work? Let the month of September be a rallying month in each Auxiliary.

Officers and members, bestir yourselves, arouse your women, collect the dues, raise your pledge, send a delegate to the Annual Meeting in October, and put your Conference to the front in all good works! We need your help. Our scholarship in the Training-school must be completed this year, that we may be ready for other pressing demands.

The 600 thank-boxes, which have been distributed (and others are awaiting your orders), will doubtless be the receptacles for many free-will offerings which will redound to the glory of God and enhance interest in the cause they represent. They will serve as gentle reminders to "Honor the Lord with thy substance," with this assurance that "He that soweth bountifully shall reap also bountifully."

To Whom It May Concern:

About three years ago I received a sample bottle of "Mul-en-ol." I had never heard of it before. I began using it, however, as occasion required, and soon found that it was all that is claimed for it, and more. For cuts, burns, bruises, scalds, and all kinds of sores, it is superior to any remedy I have ever used. It is also exceedingly efficacious in colic and diarrhœa. For sore throat it is incomparably better than anything I know of. I heartily recommend it as a medicine worthy of a place in every household. W. C. BLACK,
Editor Christian Advocate.

A Good Man Gone.

With great sorrow I read in the daily paper of Aug. 12 the announcement of the death of Col. T. C. Standifer, of Ruston, La. This announcement has carried grief to thousands of hearts, for Col. Standifer was widely known and admired and loved by all who knew him. His extensive business, pursued with diligence and in the fear of the Lord for over thirty years, brought him in contact with a great many people in North Louisiana; and his attendance upon the Conferences of our church in different parts of the State made him known to the chief men and women of the church, and these all are lamenting his death. Somehow we never get used to death, and we always think that some one else could have been spared by us more easily than the one taken. It is certainly so in this case. A good man—a useful citizen—a consistent Christian is what the world most needs, and when such go hence, we think the loss irreparable.

Col. Standifer possessed in a large measure all those excellencies of character which make up the well-rounded man. Nor were those excellencies difficult to be observed. They were apparent to all who had intercourse with him. They were manifested in his deeds and tempered his character to a beauty rarely attained.

He was a true friend. True friendship is constituted of truth and kindness, and these were most beautifully illustrated in his life. His whole being was alive with the love of truth, and deeds of kindness were the daily nourishment of his spirit. It would be a hopeless task to try to enumerate the number of people who were the recipients of benefits originating in the kindness of his heart. These traits of his character shone with undimmed lustre in his own family circle. Truth and kindness were the ruling virtues in his household, and he was honored and loved there as few fathers are honored and loved. I count it one of the highest honors of my life to have been admitted to share the friendship of such a man.

He was a good citizen. He was one of those men who have sense enough to appreciate citizenship in the fullest meaning of that great word. His patriotism was broad and intelligent, and he proved it to all the world by standing firm for his native land through four years of storm and darkness. He was one of the first to take up arms when he thought his country wronged, and he was among the last to lay them down. During those dreadful years his courage and vigilance brought him unsought promotion, and in those responsible positions the honor of his beloved land was kept untarnished.

He was a consistent Christian. There was nothing about him of what has been aptly termed "religious clap-trap." His religious convictions were as deep as his own nature, and his daily life exemplified the simplicity of his faith and the earnestness of his devotion to the cause of Christ. The offices of trust which the church conferred upon him never inflated him with ecclesiastical pride. Wherever you found him he was the same simple-hearted Christian. He joined the church and began his Christian life when he was a young man, and as the years went by his faith in a crucified Redeemer grew into most magnificent proportions. I have seldom seen a man or woman who exhibited a more steady or a more simple trust in Christ's atonement. He believed that great fact with all the energy of his soul, and as a result of that faith he was kept in perfect peace. His religion shone at home and away from home. The fire on the family altar never went out. As a co-worker with his pastors his work was highly appreciated, and they leaned on him with a perfect confidence. His wise counsels, emanating from unprejudiced judgment and a large love for the church, have helped many a preacher safely over difficult places.

Having lived as he did, he was prepared for the summons of the Master, no matter how it came. The call came suddenly and he departed with the messenger of his Lord, Aug. 10, in the seventieth year of his age. His family and friends and church are sorely bereaved, but hope mingles with our sorrow and we expect to see him again.

C. W. CARTER.

FROM THE WORK.

Rev. H. S. Johns, Bayon Chicot, Aug. 24, 1897: "The next day after we closed the great Kent meeting here with Bro. Isbell, I began at White's Chapel, but the week of rain closed us out. A good interest was on, and many penitents at the altar the last night. The week's rain cut off the crops, they say, some 25 per cent. I forgot to say that at our meeting here seven made application to join the Baptist Church, making twenty-two in all."

Rev. Ira B. Robertson, P. C., Lake, Miss., Aug. 21, 1897: "The Lord is doing great things for us, whereof we are glad. We began a meeting at Carr Church last Sunday. The indications were favorable from the first service. Bro. Bradford, of Newton, came to our help Monday. He had the spirit of the Divine Master, and preached some fine gospel sermons. The rain forced us to close Tuesday night. There were several conversions, a few accessions, and the membership of the church was much revived."

Rev. J. M. Huggin, Big Creek, Miss., Aug. 24, 1897: "I write to correct some typographical errors that occur in my report of the Pittsboro Camp Meeting, published in the ADVOCATE, of the nineteenth. I wrote that the impression was left on our people that Bro. Bachman was a man of 'weight' in more respects than one The published report has it 'might.' The published report says 'some' joined our church on profession of faith. I wrote 'seven.' I forgot to state in my report that the Revs. R. S. Lawson and B. P. Patterson were with us in the meeting, and that they gave us two highly appreciated sermons each. Bro. Patterson was visiting his father's family, and being very much at home, extended to us many courtesies."

Rev. Sam. B. Cox, P. C., Jonesboro, Miss.: "We have just closed a great meeting at Camp Ground, Jonesboro circuit, Corinth district, North Mississippi Conference. Rev. J. W. Ramsey, of Waterford, did all the preaching. He preached fifteen as able sermons as it has ever been my pleasure to hear. Like the pioneers of Methodism, he kindles his fire with brimstone, and then brings in the power of the Holy Ghost seasoned with common sense, and it is useless to say that such preaching has a great effect. Forty-three souls were added to Methodism, two to other churches, and thirty-one professed conversion. Bro. Ramsey performs some of the best feats of ecclesiastical generalship I have seen. Our charge generally is in a prosperous condition. Collections over half provided for, and more cash paid already than was paid last year. We are building one new church. The Lord is blessing us wonderfully. To him be all the praise."

Rev. Jno. D. Crymes, Blantville, Miss., Aug. 24, 1897: "The meeting at Santee was a most marvelous victory. The oldest inhabitants say, 'We have never seen the like.' Revs. E. T. Breland, D. C. Rawls, O. L Leonard and W. J. Dawson were with us. I believe the meeting, exactly as it was, would have been impossible if any of the brethren had been absent. Each contributed in a peculiar way as the Holy Spirit had qualified him. There was not a day without conversion, reclamation and sanctification. At a single altar service 15 testified at that time to have found Christ in the blessing sought. God has raised up on this circuit the strongest band of laymen I have ever known. For four months the holy fire has been upon some of them. At log rolling, house raising, or any providential gathering, Christ is magnified. Only a few days ago, at one of these gatherings, two were sanctified and one was converted. A committee is appointed and arrangements are being made for a camp meeting."

Rev. H. P. Lewis, P. C., Carthage, Miss., Aug. 20, 1897: "The third annual camp meeting at the Carthage Camp Ground was held Aug. 6-15—10 days. Bros. T. L. Mellen, of Canton, Miss., D. G. W. Ellis, of Meridian, Miss., and C. H. Ellis, of New Orleans, La., did the preaching. Every sermon and every service was a success. The meeting was largely attended. A large number professed faith in Christ, while a goodly number of Christians professed to get upon a higher plane of Christian living. There were present two traveling, one superannuated, and four local preachers. God bless them all! We have here a beautiful site for a camp ground. Our people are building large, roomy, two-story cottages. It is thought there will be at least twenty or twenty-five additional cottages on the ground by next camp meeting, which is to begin Aug. 5, 1898. Forty-six of our brethren have reported results of Children's Day. Four of them report over $20 each. Bro. G. A. Guice, of Warren circuit, reports $22 80. Bro. A. D. Miller, of Hermanville, reports $22 50. Bro. W. M. Stevens, of Harriston, reports $20. Bro. R. A. Breland, of Roxy, reports $20. These brethren and their charges have done well. We are having rain and sickness in abundance. The Lord is good to all."

Rev. S. H. Whatley, Gross Tete and False River Mission, Louisiana Conference: "At the Ruston Conference the Domestic Mission Board saw reasons for withholding the small amount heretofore given single men or men with small families on this work, while at the same time Bishop Hendrix appointed myself with wife and seven children without where to lay our head. We produced a house for the year, with bedsteads, table, chairs, etc., for the new parsonage, which we are now preparing to build this Fall. Something over $400 in sight. Our presiding elder has not skipped us this year, and we all love his appearing. Bro. C. L. Andrews, of the Fordoche, made the presiding elder and preacher in charge a gift of one hundred and sixty acres of fine swamp land each. This fixes the home of, at least, one Methodist preacher in the parish of Point Coupee. We nearly overflowed in the Spring and are now almost flooded with rain. We begin another protracted meeting on the twenty-second instant at Rosedale. Mrs. T. S. Randall, district secretary of W. P. and H. M. S., is to organize our women next Sunday, the twenty-second. Our people are loyal and true. We have never asked for an amount, but it has been promptly given almost always in excess. Have raised on mission department $24, and feel that we are justly enrolled in the sisterhood of circuits. Our Children's Day is to be in September. Bros. J. A. Matirne and C. L. Andrews are leading our juvenile host on to victory. Glory! Pray for us."

The average clergyman is not a healthy man. There are many reasons that contribute to make him delicate. He leads a sedentary life. He doesn't take sufficient exercise. Just the same he is a hard-working man. He takes too much trouble about other people's troubles to trouble much about his own. He thinks too much about other sick people to look after his own health. The result is that the hard-working clergyman becomes a semi-invalid early in life.

There is no necessity for this. A clergyman adds nothing to his usefulness, but greatly detracts from it, by neglecting his health. If a man, be he clergyman or layman, will resort to the right remedy just as soon as he feels out of sorts, and knows that he is a little bilious, or that his liver is torpid, or his digestion is out of order, he will remain healthy and robust and add much to his usefulness and many years to his life. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery restores the appetite, makes digestion and assimilation perfect, invigorates the liver, purifies the blood and tones the nerves. It is the greatest of all known blood-makers and flesh-builders. It cures 98 per cent. of all cases of consumption and diseases of the air passages. Thousands who were given up by the doctors and had lost all hope have testified to their complete recovery under this marvelous medicine. It is the discovery of an eminent and skillful specialist, Dr. R. V. Pierce, for thirty years chief consulting physician to the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, at Buffalo, N. Y. All medicine dealers sell it.

"Eight years ago I was taken with what my doctor called liver complaint," writes N. E. Kendrick, Esq., of Campton, Grafton Co., New Hampshire. "I began doctoring for it, taking sarsaparillas and other medicines. Last February I had a bilious attack, and I could not sit up long enough to eat. I began taking Dr. Pierce's medicines. I have taken one bottle of 'Golden Medical Discovery' and one vial of 'Pleasant Pellets.' I find no other medicine equal to yours in helping me."

Without an equal for constipation and biliousness—Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets.

A Sabbath well spent
Brings a week of content,
And health for the toil of the morrow;
But a Sabbath profaned,
Whatever be gained,
Is a certain forerunner of sorrow.
—Sir Matthew Hale.

Hurry means worry.

No man is any holier than he lives.

Meanness often palms itself off as cleverness.

Introspection is better than neighbor inspection.

Harmlessness is by no means a passport into heaven.

Our deeds never rise above the level of our thoughts.

Stupidity has no friends and wants none.—Horace Greeley.

We have never seen a man who confessed to the sin of covetousness.

Every man is apt to think that people who do not agree with him are stubborn.

Education is a better safeguard of liberty than a standing army.—Edward Everett.

More harm is sometimes done by a moment's hasty speech than can be repaired in a lifetime.

The best reformers the world has ever had are those who have commenced on themselves.—H. W. Shaw.

It is unchristian to cease speaking kind words and performing good deeds because our efforts are not appreciated.

Not a few believers fancy themselves persecuted because other Christians dare to dissent from their peculiar views.

Probably the most of the difficulties of trying to live the Christian life arise from attempting to half live it. —Henry Drummond.

The failures in Christian life are not due to a lack of power, but to the failure to use the power that is in us.—G. F. Pentecost.

The best cure for sorrow is to sympathize with another in his sorrow. The cure for despondency is to lift the burden from some other heart.

Antagonism of authority seems to be a fad with some people. To hear them rave, one would think that nothing good could emanate from rulers, particularly those in the church.

Mr. Gladstone recently spoke a sentence in a phonograph which is to be preserved and reproduced in connection with the sentences of fifty other eminent Englishmen half a century hence. This is Mr. Gladstone's sentence: "I owe my life and vigor through a long and busy life to the Sabbath day, with its blessed surcease of toil."—Pittsburg Advocate.

"Is Family Prayer Declining?"

The editor of the Quiver, an English magazine, some time ago addressed the above inquiry to a number of prominent English clergymen, and of the nineteen answers received, eleven are in the affirmative, six are neutral, and only two deny that the practice, so far as their observation goes, is dying out. The question is certainly a vital one in religious circles, and the responses quoted in the Quiver article, which is a very timely one, furnish food for serious reflection.

Dr. Joseph Parker emphatically says: "There can be but one answer to the question whether family worship is declining: In my opinion it is almost extinct." Dr. MacMillam, Moderator of the Free Church of Scotland, states: "I am afraid the custom of family worship has to a great extent fallen into abeyance in Scotland." Dr. John Watson ("Ian Maclaren") writes: "Within the sphere personally known to me, the custom is on the decline." Dr. Robert P. Downes, editor of "Great Thoughts," records it as "his strong impression based on the experience of one who is entertained in a different Christian home for every Sunday and Monday in the year, that family worship is declining among Christian people generally."

Rev. Hugh Price Hughes gives it as his opinion that "Family worship is declining in consequence of the terrible hurry and competition of modern life, especially in great cities. I realize the difficulty most painfully in my own household. Our children have morning worship in the schools they attend, but nothing can compensate for the loss of the family altar. . . . . The all-pervading mammonism is injuring everything, and few things more than the quiet and reverent family prayer, which was so great a blessing in the past."

We are strongly of the opinion that the declension of family worship is by no means confined to our kinsmen across the seas. In many American homes, the heads of which profess to be Christians, the family altar is a thing unknown; and in numerous instances where family worship was once observed, it is no longer kept up on account of the hurry of modern life, and the spread of the hurtful notion that it is neither necessary nor beneficial. It is a sad day in the history of any Christian family when, on account of the encroachments of business and pleasure, or because of the loss of spirituality, this sacred duty is neglected.

Indications are that in most American cities family worship is largely unobserved, and that the evil is on the increase. We believe, however, that in the country the family altar is holding its own, and that among country people, as a rule, may be found a keener appreciation of its benefits and obligation than among city dwellers.

Since the family is the cradle of the nation, and since the impressions and influences of the home circle do more to mould the character of the young than all other influences combined, the daily assembling of the family to read the Bible and invoke the blessings of the Father of mercies has inestimable value, and is rightly regarded by Dr. George F. Pentecost as "the greatest safeguard of the home." Children naturally and necessarily follow the example of their parents, and measure the value of religion by the importance they attach to it.

It is noticeable that the best Christian workers come of godly parentage. Homes where family worship is neglected, and where Christ is seldom named, are not usually the ones that furnish numerous and reliable recruits to the army of our Lord. Every influence that hallows home life, and that awakens and fosters religious thoughts and emotions in the minds of the young, ought to be most sacredly esteemed. Nor do we know of anything connected with our holy religion more hallowed in its associations, more gracious in its influences, or better calculated to inspire the children with love and reverence for God, than is the regular observance of family worship. It is related that a poor sailor lying very ill in the hospital of a distant sea-port seemed deaf to every appeal made to him by an earnest missionary who visited him, until at last the good man began to sing some lines of the 103rd Psalm, which the sick man had often heard his father use in conducting family worship. The poor fellow, it is said, at once broke into sobs, and, though he died soon after, was thus led to repentance.

The general destruction of the family altar means the decline of spirituality in the church, and will be followed by the most serious consequences. Says the editor of the Evangelical Messenger: "But what manner of men and women will they be who in childhood and youth do not hear the voice of their parents daily in prayer and in Bible reading? Need we wonder if infidelity spreads, and secularism gnaws the very heart out of society? Need we wonder if Sabbath desecration and divorces increase when family altars crumble? Need we wonder if the church becomes cold and formal when the fires of devotion on the home altar are buried under the white ashes of neglect?"

A widespread revival of family worship would mean a better type of citizenship for the future, a purer, more aggressive Christianity, and the enlistment of an immeasurably larger number of youth under the banner of the cross. Let no Christian parent think himself or herself excused from this highly important duty, which ought to be earnestly emphasized by every pulpit in the land. Let none look upon it as a cross or a burden too grievous to be borne. With the Lord's help we can do all that the gospel requires.

Philip Henry, the father of Matthew Henry, has wisely said that "prayer and provender hinder no journey," and, as the editor of the Quiver remarks, "Surely the individual life, as well as the family life, will be strengthened and sustained throughout the day by the few minutes spent in the morning round the family altar."

A Noble Benefaction.

With inexpressible pleasure we announce to our readers that George T. Hoagland, of St. Joseph, Mo., a brother past eighty-three years of age, has subscribed the sum of $1,000 toward the erection of "Haygood Memorial Hall," at Paine Institute, Augusta, Ga., on condition that the church raise $24,000 more for that worthy purpose. This is a noble benefaction, and we trust that Bro. Hoagland's proposition will awaken many liberal and prompt responses. Concerning this gift, Rev. R. J. Bigham, Secretary of the Board of Education, says:

To a worthy but wavering enterprise Bro. Hoagland extends a helping hand at a time of sore need. Seldom, if ever, under my observation, has our church had a proposition so calculated, by its spirit and its just view of a great question, to encourage and provoke her to noble action. Shall not our brother, past eighty-three years of age, but hoping to see this building completed while he tabernacles in the flesh, receive from us that co-operation and response which he so earnestly desires? Let us meet him, and let us finish now the Haygood Memorial Hall, which he thinks so fitting a testimonial, but which, better still, as he thinks, will meet the approval of Jesus Christ.

We have in hand $5,719.29 with which to begin the building; and we have begun it.

We have put Bishop Holsey in the field, commending him to our Annual Conferences, where, it is hoped, his cause will have the right of way, and we have otherwise provided such ways and means as seem to be wise to secure the gift of Bro. Hoagland, and to finish and furnish this building. Now is our opportunity. Let us all —Bishops, editors, general officers, preachers and laymen—take hold of this business and put it through. Let us do so in six months. The man who helps us now, whether much or little, helps twice.

The progress of the movement will be reported from time to time in our papers.

Evils of Enforced Idleness.

The Anti-Contract Prison law now in force in the State of New York, by virtue of which the majority of the prisoners are kept in solitary confinement for twenty-two hours each day, is resulting disastrously upon their mental condition. Nineteen prisoners, it is said, have already become raving maniacs, and it is believed that unless the law is soon repealed and some form of employment be given the prisoners, there will be a still more alarming increase of insanity among them. The appeals for work made by some of the convicts are pathetic in the extreme, as the following specimens will show:

"I hope you will be able to find some work for me, no matter how low or menial. Before I came here I detested work. Now I am almost crazy for something to do."

"Can you find me a place to work somewhere? I am almost dead after being idle so long. I had rather work day and night than remain idle. Please give me work, hard work. The day seems two days."

"Do, please, let me have some work. To remain in my room without work is slow, agonizing death."

NEW BOOKS.

LIFE AND TIMES OF GLADSTONE.

Messrs. Eaton & Mains, No. 150 Fifth avenue, New York City, take great pleasure in announcing the issue at an early date of the "Life and Times of William E. Gladstone," by Dr. John Clark Ridpath. The American public will welcome such a work, coming as it does under the name and authority of the historian already known as one of the leading writers of the age.

William Ewart Gladstone is, doubtless, the foremost citizen of the world. He was born six years before the downfall of Napoleon. He remembers well the thunder of the great guns in Liverpool, announcing the result at Waterloo and the final overthrow of the Imperial Corsican. It seems impossible that one human life should have had such continuity, and that that life should have been so interwoven with the whole web of modern history for three-quarters of a century.

This volume has been prepared by Dr. Ridpath with great care from the most authentic records of Mr. Gladstone's life. The work is in the author's best vein; every page will exhibit his remarkable power of personal and historical delineation. The book will be illustrated with portraits and engravings well suited to produce, in connection with the text, a vivid and lasting impression of the various interesting and critical aspects of Mr. Gladstone's life.

The "Life and Times of Gladstone" will appear in one large volume of about 750 pages, octavo, elegantly bound, with Preface and Contents, List of Illustrations, Index, etc.

A BRIEF LATIN GRAMMAR. By W. D. Mooney, A. M. 12 mo, 272 pages. American Book Co., Publishers.

This is a succinct and simple, but modern and comprehensive manual of the forms and syntax of the Latin language, and is admirably adapted for use in high schools and preparatory schools. The author has spared no pains to make it a pleasing and practical text-book, and, being a teacher of experience and recognized scholarship, he has done his work well. The book is excellently printed and bound. Educators give it high praise.

Magazines for September.

SCRIBNER'S MAGAZINE.

Scribner's, for September, presents to its readers: "Some Notes on Tennessee's Centennial," by F. H. Smith; "San Sebastian, the Spanish Newport," by W. H. Bishop; "The Ways of an Election," by Octave Thanet, and other charming articles.

THE COSMOPOLITAN.

The September number of the Cosmopolitan is unusually attractive. "The Yukon Gold Fields," by Robert Oglesby; "Music-Halls and Popular Songs," by DeKoven, are intensely interesting and liberally illustrated. "Two New Educational Ideas" is a splendid article by President Andrews.

HARPER'S MAGAZINE.

Harper's, for September, contains the following articles: "Around London by Bicycle," by Elizabeth Robins Pennell, illustrated by Joseph Pennell; "The Milkweed," the last unpublished work of William Hamilton Gibson, illustrated by the author; "A Twentieth-Century Outlook," by A. T. Mahan; "George du Maurier," by Henry James; "The Beginnings of the American Navy," by James Barnes, and "The Lotus Land of the Pacific," by John Harrison Wagner, illustrated by J. Macfarlane. There are also many short stories and several serial stories.

Chautauqua has celebrated her twenty-third anniversary. Among the speakers were three—Bishop Vincent, President Lewis Miller and Dr. J. M. Buckley—who attended twenty-four years ago. The service used then was used at the anniversary. Chautauqua's sons and daughters number over a million.—Methodist Herald.

NOTES.

Rev. L. A. Reed has been stricken with paralysis. As he is eighty-six years of age, it is feared that the attack may prove serious.

Dr. Wm. B. Murrah, president of Millsaps College, made the ADVOCATE office a pleasant call last Wednesday. He reports the prospects fine for a good opening on the fifteenth instant.

If you want any kind of printing done, send orders to the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE. We do any kind of work from visiting cards to pamphlets. See our ad. in this issue

Do not let ten thousand failures cause you to lower your ideal of a religious life. The best that is still beautiful and attractive in your thought is possible in your experience. —Bishop O. P. Fitzgerald.

We were glad to receive a visit last week from Rev. W. S. Shipman, of the North Mississippi Conference, and his good wife, who were en route to their home in Sardis (Miss.), after spending a month at that delightful resort, the Seashore Camp Ground.

What the United States Senate failed to do, through weakness and pandering to the whisky element, Richard Bright, Sergeant-at Arms, has accomplished, by taking the matter in his own hands and stopping the sale of liquor in the Senate and House restaurants. That is the way to do things. Would that more public men had the courage of their convictions.—Central Methodist.

The sad news reaches us of the death at Macon, Ga., on the twenty-first of August, of Rev. J. W. Burke, an aged and much-beloved member of the South Georgia Conference. Bro. Burke was a man of noble character and eminent usefulness. For many years he was assistant editor and business manager of the Wesleyan Christian Advocate. He leaves a wife and five children, one of whom, Rev. W. B. Burke, is a missionary to China.

The official figures show that the Southern Methodists gave for foreign missions the past year, $244,463. The Southern Baptists for the same cause, $125,681.99. The Methodists gave for home missions, $133,948. The Baptists for the same cause, $125,618.99. The Southern Methodist women gave $81,000 to foreign missions. The Southern Baptist women gave to the same cause $23,476.43, or less than one-third as much as their Methodist sisters.—Central Methodist.

***

The committee appointed by the Tennessee Conference at its last session to establish or procure a Conference organ, the Tennessee Methodist having been repudiated, has decided to adopt the Holston Methodist; and there is every reason to believe that this action of the committee will be ratified by the Conference at its next session. We congratulate Editor Price upon this enlargement of his field of usefulness and influence, as well as upon this emphatic endorsement of his editorial skill.

The Central Advocate reports that an earnest effort is being made in the city of St. Louis to break up the gambling dens which have long flourished unmolested. The police a short time since raided the pool-rooms of that city, arresting most of the proprietors of these establishments, together with a number of their employees and patrons, and seizing various gambling devices. The officers declare that all these infamous resorts must remain closed. We suspect that a similar move ought to be made in this city.

We are in receipt of two small, but splendid pamphlets on the subject of Christian education—one by Dr. W. W. Smith, president of Randolph-Macon, entitled, "That Boy of Yours;" the second by Dr. W. A. Candler, entitled, "Not Less Education, But More of the Right Sort." These educational tracts, published and sent out by the Board of Education, ought to have an extensive circulation. A copy of one or both ought to be in the hands of every Methodist parent. Pastors, teachers and others will be furnished with copies on application to Rev. R. J. Bigham, D.D., Corresponding Secretary, Nashville, Tenn.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

DOMESTIC.

There were 300 applications for a single chaplaincy in the United States Army recently.

Two colored boys will appear at the Naval Academy at Annapolis this week for examination for admission as cadets in that institution.

William W. Howe, of New Orleans, was elected president of the American Bar Association at its meeting in Cleveland, O., last week.

The Armour Packing Company, of Kansas City, is filling an order for forty cars of mess beef for shipment to Japan, for use by the Japanese Army and Navy.

The United States will require 500,000 square feet for the exhibit at the Paris Exposition in 1900. This is nearly five times as much space as occupied at the Exposition of 1889.

A young woman has applied for a pilot's license to run a small steamboat on the Harlem river above New York City. She boasts of a thorough knowledge of deep sea navigation.

The American ship "Commodore" left Honolulu for New York on Aug. 19 with a cargo of sugar valued at $196,200. This will be the last cargo of sugar to be carried around the Horn this season, during which thirteen vessels, carrying $4,331,840 worth of sugar, have been dispatched to New York.

The investigations of the sanitary engineers of Indianapolis show that two-thirds of the wells in that city, from which samples were taken, were bad, and that the water is unfit for use. So far, in round numbers, 1,000 wells in all parts of the city have been tested, and over 600 have been found to be unfit for use.

During the past week the merchants' excursions over the lines running west from this city, including points in Louisiana and Texas, brought a considerable number of people to New Orleans, and during the present week similar excursions over the lines east of the Mississippi river are expected to bring a much larger crowd.

W. E. B. DuBois, a colored man, has been appointed professor of economics and history in Atlanta University, an institution for advanced education of men of his race. He is a graduate of Harvard, and from that institution received the degree of Ph.D. He spent two years studying in Germany, and is the author of many papers dealing with the race question.

There appears to be a sound basis for the advance which has taken place in wheat. While it is probable that the reports of shortage in wheat-producing countries may be overdrawn, it is nevertheless certain that all of the European countries have experienced very short crops, and, as a result, will have to import more largely than usual from the grain-producing countries.

Am 82 years old, hearing began to fail 20 years ago. For eleven years could only hear loud sounds could not hear conversation, had continual roaring in head, and sense of smell was entirely destroyed. Used Aerial Medication in '94, it did its work with the greatest satisfaction—the roaring ceased, discharge from head and throat stopped, hearing improved and for four years have been able to hear ordinary conversation and preaching. Sense of smell entirely restored, and cured of Catarrh and no indication of its return.—G. J. QUICK, Media, Illinois.

I had Catarrh twenty-one years, was deaf eighteen years, could not hear ordinary conversation, had roaring in ears, dreadful headaches, offensive discharge, bad taste and eyes so weak could not see to read. I used Aerial Medication in '92; it stopped the roaring and discharge, fully restored my hearing and for over five years my hearing has been perfect and am entirely free from Catarrh.—MRS. JANE BASTIC, Shelby, N. C.

Deaf Forty Years.

Had Catarrh in a very bad form forty years, which greatly affected my eyes, almost entirely destroyed my hearing, was confined to the house a great portion of the time, and coughed almost continually. Used Aerial Medication in '94, which fully restored my hearing; my eyes are well and I am entirely cured of Catarrh; can work and feel better than for forty years.—JOHN GARRIS, Flatbrookville, N. J.

When a child I met with an accident which caused a profuse offeusive discharge from right ear, for 23 years had not heard a sound in that ear; was treated at two hospitals and by several physicians, was told I would never hear again as the drum was destroyed. Since using Aerial Medication can hear a watch tick distinctly in that ear, it is still improving, and the discharge has stopped entirely.—MRS. DAWES, 37 Ivory Place, Brighton, Eng.

We have reliable assurance that the above statements are genuine and that Dr. Moore is a reputable physician.—Cincinnati Herald and Presbyter.

"A Discordant Note or Two."

MR. EDITOR: Under the above caption Rev. T. L. Mellen expresses disappointment, in last week's issne of the ADVOCATE, at not having his presence and sermon noticed in the report of the proceedings of the recent Vicksburg District Conference.

It was not my place to notice, officially, anything that occurred except by and throngh the action of the Conference.

Bro. H. M. Ellis, of Port Gibson, was appointed to furnish a report of the proceedings of Missionary Day, during which time Bro. Mellen dellyered his sermon to which he refers on "The Holy Spirit in Missions." Bro. Eilis did his work well, and many who read the report are willing to testify that he did justice to Bro. Mellen in his notice of the sermon and presence in qnestion. I heard every word of the sermon, and expressed my appreciation to Bro. Mellen in person, but did not wish to tread on ground that did not belong to me in reporting. I hope Bro. Mellen will accept the explanation, and not think of himself as intentionally wronged by me, for I love him.

TOPIC FOR SEPTEMBER.

THE CHRIST OF ST. PAUL.

SEPT. 5.—HIS BIRTH AND LINEAGE. (Rom. 1, 3, 4, 25; Gal. iv. 4.)

1. Christ, viewed through eyes of St. Paul, is to be our stndy this month. In essentials we find the same Christ that is seen in the Prophets and the Gospels.

The promise in the beginning was that "the seed of the woman shall bruise the serpent's head," and the prophetic utterances are unanimous that Christ should be of the "honse and lineage of David." Mary, his mother, was of the tribe of Judah and a descendant of David. There is no doubt to-day of his human parentage, bnt his divinity is questioned. The denial of the divinity of Christ means more than the world realizes. If he be not divine, then God is not like Christ; and if it be possible, the Christliness of God is of more importance than the divinity of Christ. But the human and diviue are the complemental spheres of his life from his birth to his resurrection. Born in a manger of Bethlehem, he is heralded by an angel choir. Crucified, dead and buried, he breaks the bonds of death and rises from the grave. Human weakness, divine strength. Marvelous One!

2. The divinity of Christ may be argued from nnmerous points of view, bnt the historical evidence of his resurrection is the most solid gronnd npon which to base our belief. "And declared to be the Son of God with power, according to the spirit of holiness, by the resurrection from the dead." In St. Paul's estimation, if "Christ be not raised from the dead," onr faith is foolish, for it has no foundation upon which to rest.

New Building for East Mississippi Female College.

We are glad to learn that the prospects for the E. M. F. College were so bright that it became necessary to erect another large building to accommodate the increase, the rooms in the former buildings having all been engaged. President Beeson is to pay for the buildings, they to be the property of the Mississippi Conference at the expiration of his term of lease of fifteen years. The building is to be a commodious brick structnre, three stories high, 40x80 feet, including a new kitchen, a kindergarten-room, primary-room, recitation-rooms on first floor, an elegant dining-room on second floor, with dish-room, and elevator from kitchen to bring up meals, and a nnmber of bed-rooms and room for Young Woman's Christian Association on third floor. This building is an extension of the south wing, which was the first building erected. The old wooden tower has been removed. The work is being pushed rapidly, and it is expected to be completed by the time school opens, which is Sept. 22. The study hall and new dining-room and halls will be lighted with electricity. Other improvements also will be made.

Board at Millsaps College.

Mrs. Emma Mayes Cook, who for several years has had charge of one of the boarding-halls at Millsaps College, is still at the Williams Hall, where she will be pleased to furnish board and lodging on very moderate terms. A KLONDYKE GOLD MINE AT HOME.

DONT BURN YOUR MONEY!

A GREAT CHANCE TO MAKE MONEY. IMPROVE IT.

We are pleased to call the attention of our subscribers to the most marvelous invention of the nineteenth century. It is known as the Self-Heating Flat Iron and is unlike any device that is invented to iron with. As flat irons are usually heated on the cooking stove, you consume a large amount of fuel unnecessarily, because to heat two or three irons hot enough for ironing you have to heat up the whole stove and keep it hot. This makes the room hot and makes ironing one of the most unpleasant, unhealthy and dreaded labors of the household, besides consuming a large amount of fuel. With the self-heating flat iron all is changed. The iron is heated by a small burner in the iron, which maintains a perfect oven heat, so it is impossible for you to burn the clothes you are ironing. You do not have to run from stove to table to change irons, nor do you have to iron in a heated room, but can get in the shade and cool. It costs only a half a cent an hour to keep your iron hot. The handle is always cool, the iron is light and of convenient size and you have no trouble in getting it just the proper temperature. This is an all-important feature; if iron is too hot, it makes the starch so miserably yellow that it disheartens many a tired wife and mother, and not only does it discolor the starch, but burns the clothes. It saves your wives—saves your cash—saves your clothes—saves your fuel. Wherever the Self-Heating Flat Iron has been seen it has created the greatest excitement and it is easily estimated that over one million of these irons will be required to fill the demand. It is low priced, simple in construction and can not get out of order. How many millions of tired, worn-out women whose back and limbs have ached after several hours froning would not sacrifice a new bonnet or a new dress or some other luxury to secure an iron that has so many advantages. Experienced canvassers state "they never seen anything sell like the Self-Heating Flat Iron;" they make from $15.00 to $100.00 a week selling it without any trouble.

We would advise any of our subscribers who may want a perfect Self-Heating Flat Iron for their own use, who may want to make money, or who may be out of employment and who may desire a nice clean business with plenty of money, to write to J. F. Casey & Co., 1151 St. Charles St., St. Louis, Mo., as there will be an immense demand for the self-heating flat iron this Summer, as the hot weather comes on. Everyone will want one and a great deal of money can be made selling them. Agents easily make from $15.00 to $30.00 a week and find it the easiest thing in the world to sell.

LIEBIG COMPANY'S EXTRACT OF BEEF

The first in the field and still unrivalled

The great chemist Baron JUSTUS VON LIEBIG made the first scientific effort to produce an extract of meat. The result of his efforts he gave to the world under the name of Liebig COMPANY'S Extract of Beef, and to attest its genuineness he authorized this company to use his signature, now familiar to all the world, on the jars of this famous product. JUST FOR TO-DAY.

BY CANON WILBERFORCE.

Lord, for to-morrow and its needs
I do not pray;
Keep me, my God, from stain of sin,
Just for to-day.
Let me both diligently work
And daily pray.
Let me be kind in words and deed,
Just for to-day.
Let me be slow to do my will,
Prompt to obey;
Help me to overcome my flesh,
Just for to-day.
Let me no wrong or idle word
Unthinking say;
Set thou a seal upon my lips,
Just for to-day.
Let me in season, Lord, be grave,
In season gay;
Let me be faithful to thy grace,
Just for to-day.
So for to-morrow and its needs
I do not pray;
But keep me, guide me, love me, Lord,
Just for to-day.

Only One Fault.

I was riding through a country town in Vermont, when I noticed a concourse of people in a church-yard encircling an open grave.

It was a warm day, and I had ridden ten miles, so I drew the rein under some trees, to allow the horse to rest.

Presently a villager came towards me, and I said, "There is a funeral to-day in your town."

"Yes—Stephen. He was one of the largest-hearted men I ever knew. He had great abilities. We sent him to the Legislature three times, then thought of nominating him for governor, but," he added, sadly, "Stephen had one fault."

I made no answer; I was tired, and watched the people disperse, leaving the sexton to his solitary work.

"A very generous man Stephen was. Always visited the sick. The old people all liked him. Even the children used to follow him on the streets."

"A good man, indeed," I said, indifferently.

"Yes; he had only one fault."

"What was that?" I asked.

"Only intemperance. He didn't seem to have any power to resist it at last. He got behindhand, and had to mortgage his farm, and finally had to sell it. His wife died on account of the reverse—kind of crushed, disappointed. Then his children turned out badly. His intemperance seemed to mortify them and take away their spirit. He had to leave politics; 'twouldn't do, you see. Then we had to set him aside from the church; and at last his habits brought on paralysis, and we had to take him to the poorhouse. He died there!"

"Only one fault!" The ship had only one leak, but it sank.

"Only one fault!" The temple had but one decaying pillar, but it fell

"Only one fault!" Home gone, wife lost, family ruined, honor forfeited, social and religious privileges abandoned, broken health, poverty, paralysis, and the poorhouse.—Our Young Folks.

Making Children Happy.

The rearing of children is a subject which always has been and always will be a source of much discussion. We shall never arrive at the point when the application of labeled rules will meet each day's experience; but there are general principles which ought to give definite aim to our government. We assume that all good mothers wish their children to be obedient, truthful, intelligent, but do all teach them to be happy? Some may say: "This is too evasive a thing to be controlled; children are naturally happy." Thank God, the dear little ones do start upon life's pathway with hearts ready to absorb all the sunshine that comes to them, and now is the opportunity to make their world so rich, so beautiful, that its rays may stream over into mature life, and carry with it some of the freshness and enthusiasm that gladdened childhood's days. No hardships or trials can so paralyze the will or make existence such a tread-mill that life is not worth living.

We believe that through the period of childhood the heart and intellect can be so trained and interests so multiplied that however dark the days may be which follow, the feeling will never come that it is not worth while striving. As to the plan to be pursued in this education, we would put first and above all the force of example. Let the home atmosphere be bright and cheerful, and all disagreeable things kept in the background. This will far outweigh all desired teaching. Make your children feel that you regard ill-temper and being cross very serious faults, and making those about them happy the right expression of a right spirit. The cultivation of love for animals is an important element in a child's education. Nature in all its varied forms should be a daily lesson, and, impressed upon the sensitive mind, will be through life a source of joy. Try to keep them from looking upon their tasks as disagreeable duties, and encourage them to feel that there is great satisfaction in being useful. Children so trained are the ones who push forward and make a career of usefulness and honor.—Womankind.

Systematic Reading.

A number of benevolent persons have at different times prepared lists of what they regarded as "the best hundred books." Literary journals with equal benevolence have published these lists of good books and gravely advised their readers to read them all. The youthful Edison in his boyish passion for knowledge decided to read an entire library and actually began at one end of the first shelf. He read every book for about a yard along the shelf—and stopped. The plan did not work. It is equally unwise to attempt to read any selected list of hundred best books, be they never so wisely selected, because the best book may not be precisely the best book for any particular person to read. In a large and general way there are few great books that every man, woman, and child should own, read, mark, and inwardly digest. "The Book" is one, but the moment we get away from the first few (say ten) of the best hundred books there arise many grave doubts as to whether the remaining best books are the best for us all.

Clearly there is a better way. Books are tools. The thing to know is to know what tool is the best for a particular purpose. The object sought in reading books is education, and the kind of education decides what are the best books. Plainly books on building and architecture are better for a carpenter than books on grammar and music. What, then, is your object in reading good books? Is it to be a first-rate carpenter or to be a man of education as well as a carpenter?

The better way is to read certain books arranged in a certain definite order and to read them in a fixed period of time. The young reader who cheerfully sets out to read the whole of anyone of these lists of one hundred best books is courageous, but not precisely wise, because he is not likely to carry out his noble resolve. Long before he reaches the fiftieth book he will find there are others of more value to him. He will soon see that it is simple common sense to read these books and finish the list at a more convenient season, which often never comes. A few books arranged along a definite line, a few books read in a definite time—this is the fine art of reading.—The Chautauquan.

Selecting a Career.

"Next to the matter of selecting a wife—which in the majority of cases is little more than a leap in the dark—the most important problem which a young man has to confront is that of deciding upon his trade, business or profession," writes Rev. Charles H. Parkhurst, D. D., in Ladies' Home Journal. "Almost any young man's decision as to what he is going to do will mean the narrowing of his preparation, whereas all success that is fairly worthy of the name means breadth of preparation. A man needs to get a great mass of foundation under him if he is going to put either a high or a wide structure on the top of it; and if he knows too soon exactly what it is he is going to do, that mass of foundation will not be forthcoming. In all cases where it is possible it is a great deal better for a man to get the knowledge first, and then let him decide what the vocation shall be, than to decide the vocation first, and let that determine what sort of knowledge he shall accumulate.

"If a man is in earnest to do the best that is in him, it will be much to his advantage to get over the feeling that there is any hurry about actually settling down to his life work. It is a great deal wiser to drift, and to do almost anything that offers, as a temporary arrangement, than to make up one's mind finally and irretrievably to an employment that may possibly be a misfit, and that will involve, therefore, a certain amount of failure. We can safely depend upon it that in the case of a man who has a strenuous purpose there is a certain gravitating tendency between him and the work he is best fitted to do, and if that gravitating tendency is not hurried too much it will assert itself, and the man, without any excessively painful searchings of heart, will find himself where he belongs. Along this line the only safe decisions are the decisions that shape themselves, and that we settle into without being very distinctly conscious at any time that a conclusion is being reached."

Secret Faults.

What a risk we run when we foster some secret sin, not knowing when in our weakness the hidden nature may become triumphant! Some shepherds saw an eagle soar out from a crag. It flew majestically up into the sky. But by and by it grew unsteady. At length one wing dropped, and then the other, and with fearful velocity the once mighty bird fell to the earth. Those men sought the eagle and found that a little viper had fastened itself upon it while the eagle rested on the crag. The eagle did not know that the serpent was there; but while the proud monarch was sweeping through the air, that serpent gnawed its way through the feathers and thrust its fangs deep into the eagle's flesh and it came reeling down to the earth. It is the story of King David—when touching the heights of fame, his lust, like poison, brings down the imperial robes into the mire. It is the story of Samson—he was God's messenger; divine and supernatural strength coursed through his veins; one day he posed as God's vice-regent, the next day, all transformed, he went down to Philistia to gratify his passion, and he lost his eyes; and he lost his life! This is the story of many a life in our day—the promise is great—sip the potion of sin, and in secret enjoy its pleasures! But suddenly there is the exposure of the fall! The secret indulgence of sin has long been eating its way into the heart, and at last the proud life lies soiled and dishonored in the dust.—Rev. J. W. Richardson.

What Kind of Evidence.

An Irish witness was being examined as to his knowledge of a shooting affair: "Did you see the shot fired?" the magistrate asked. "No, sorr. I only heard it," was the evasive reply. "That evidence is not satisfactory," replied the magistrate, sternly; "stand down!" The witness proceeded to leave the box, and directly his back was turned he laughed derisively. The magistrate, indignant at this contempt of court, called him back and asked him how he dared to laugh in court. "Did ye see me laugh, your honor?" queried the offender. "No, sir, but I heard you," was the irate reply. "That evidence is not satisfactory," said Pat, quietly, but with a twinkle in his eye. And this time everybody laughed except the magistrate.—Exchange.

Maternal Care.

Mothers, if you want your little ones to grow up with a love for holy things, let that love be instilled at your own knee, or in the family circle. Teach them the "sweet story of old" in language suited to their tender intellects. Make the Sabbath a happy day for them—a day on which the recreations of the week are pleasantly superseded by surroundings which, while never irksome, serve to mark God's day from the rest of the week. Depend upon it that when, in a few years' time, your children attend divine service, the seed sown from the pulpit will fall on good ground—ground which has been tilled by maternal care, ay, and perhaps watered with maternal tears.—Scottish American.

HYGIENE.

Water.

A great deal of water is required to keep the human body in health. Many persons assure us that they never feel thirsty, and take no liquid beyond a little warm drink at meals. Many such persons suffer from neuralgia, headache and indigestion, and I think it is often from a lack of water. The drinking of hot water in the morning on rising has become common. Perhaps no prescription is to-day more popular in our cities than a pint of water as hot as can be borne an hour before you take your breakfast; many persons have derived benefit from the practice. Physicians have tried to explain the benefit of this hot-water drinking, but I have no doubt that it supplies what the newspapers call "a long-felt want," simply more water to supply the needs of our bodies, which require water to run them as truly as a water-wheel. To supply this want by flooding the stomach with cold water at meal-time is one of the worst methods, but if that were the only practicable way, even that would prove a blessing. The best time for introducing the needed water, which should be hot, is on rising, an hour before eating breakfast if possible, and the same on going to bed. If your liver is torpid, skin yellow, digestion weak, with tendency to headache and neuralgia, I think you will find advantage from the introduction into your stomach of a half a pint of hot water two or three times during the day, or, if you prefer the water on going to bed at night, that taken during the day may be cold. With delicate stomachs the hot water seems to agree best. Don't let the mill run dry.

While upon the subject it is well to consider the evil effects of impure water. It will unfit the system for doing its best work sooner than any other cause. Many hundreds of people in a small town in Pennsylvania were seized with a sudden and fatal illness called typhoid fever. After a long search it was discovered that the excreta of a typhoid fever patient had been thrown upon the snow on the bank of a near-by stream during the Winter. In the Spring, when the snow melted, the poisonous matter that had come from the typhoid-fever patient was carried down the bank into the river, and poisoned everyone who drank of the water, even miles below. This one act of ignorance and recklessness led to the death of several hundred innocent people, the loss of time and money among thousands of the living, and the expenditure of many thousands of dollars.

An epidemic may be confined to one household where all the surroundings seem perfectly healthful.

Many readers will recall the Washington hotel case which occurred some years ago. Many of the guests were suddenly seized with cramps and colic; among the sufferers was Senator Sumner. In this instance the cause was a defective drainage which poisoned the water used by the guests.

In a famous school at Pittsfield, Mass., just at the close of a very successful year, many of the young ladies were seized with typhoid fever. The suffering, death and fright were something dreadful. It was soon found that the girls had been poisoned by the matter from a defective drain which found its way to a well. So far from such facts being rare, there is hardly a neighborhood, even in the most healthful country districts, whose history has not been marked by fatal typhoid diseases produced by impure water.—Dio Lewis in Journal of Hygiene.

DR. PRICE'S CREAM BAKING POWDER

MOST PERFECT MADE.

A pure Grape Cream of Tartar Powder. Free from Ammonia, Alum or any other adulterant.

40 YEARS THE STANDARD.

How to Find Out

Fill a bottle or common glass with your water and let it stand twenty-four hours; a sediment or settling indicates an unhealthy condition of the kidneys; if it stains your linen, it is evidence of kidney trouble; too frequent desire to pass it or pain in the back is also convincing proof that the kidneys and bladder are out of order.

WHAT TO DO.

There is comfort in the knowledge so often expressed, that Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney remedy, fulfills every wish in relieving pain in the back, kidneys, liver, bladder and every part of the urinary passages. It corrects inability to hold urine and scalding pain in passing it, or bad effects following use of liquor, wine or beer, and overcomes that unpleasant necessity of being compelled to get up many times during the night to urinate. The mild and the extraordinary effect of Swamp-Root is soon realized. It stands the highest for its wonderful cures of the most distressing cases. If you need a medicine, you should have the best. Sold by druggists; price, fifty cents and one dollar. You may have a sample bottle and pamphlet both sent free by mail. Mention the CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE and send your address to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. The publisher of this paper guarantees the genuineness of this offer.

The Epworth League.

BY MRS. FLORANCE M. STRATTON.

(Read before the Enterprise District Conference, and published by request of the Conference.)

John Wesley says, "I desire to form a league, offensive and defensive, with every soldier of Jesus Christ."

"That our sons may be as plants grown up in their youth; that our daughters may be as corner-stones, polished after the similitude of a palace." (Psalm cxliv, 12.)

Proud indeed may any town be to know they have an Epworth League organization in their midst; proud to know such an organization exists to elevate, teach, inspire the young of their community.

When the Epworth League was founded in Cleveland, Ohio, May 15, 1889, provision was made in its Department of Mercy and Help for a "Junior League, preparatory to the Epworth League." Though the Epworth and Junior Leagues were given formal recognition at the same convention, yet the Junior antedates in Methodism the Epworth, for the first League which was established in the old rectory of Epworth parish, Lincolnshire, England, was a Junior League. It was composed of "the most remarkable family group in the history of English households," the roll of membership being the largest in 1711, when there were ten boys and girls in its chapter. The president was Mrs. Susannah Wesley, one of the most saintly and useful women in the history of Christianity. Thus we have found in the Epworth rectory all the departments of the Epworth League: Spiritual, Mercy and Help, Literary, and Social. They were not merely adopted, but adopted and worked with such method that those young Epworthians must have slept, ate, studied, played and prayed according to rule—a method sternly rigorous, and yet instinct with burning and loving enthusiasm; a method which gave birth to Method-ism.

The Epworth League has spread into our numerous foreign mission fields, has been transplanted into the mother Wesleyan Church of England, and has been adopted by the M. E. Church, South, and by the Methodist Church in Canada. The progress of the League movement in Canada is truly marvelous. There are few even among the week appointments which are without their Leagues, both Senior and Junior. Not only there, but chapters are being organized in all lands, and it is expected that all Methodisms will soon adopt the movement. The Junior League goes everywhere with its mother, and is thus destined to become world-wide "a training-school for the Epworth League and a half-way house to the church." Through the Epworth League and Junior League our Samuels and Johns and Timothys and Ruths will be the leaders of the Lord's host not many years hence. Many conversions are being reported in our Epworth papers by our Juniors, and thus many valuable additions made to the roll of church membership.

'Tis ours to fashion the children's mind,
To kindle their thoughts, and their hopes unbind;
To guide their young feet in their earliest flight,
And lure them to worlds of unsullied light;
To teach them to sing in their gladsome hours
Of a Savior's love, with an angel's powers."

Would to God that every mother in our vast country could see the great need and take hold of this grand work, so that our sons may be as plants grown up in their youth; that our daughters may be as corner-stones, polished after the similitude of a palace. (Psalm cxliv, 12.)

"Feed my lambs" is Christ's command. Now, we know many have little or no home training, while others have come from non-Methodist families and are unfamiliar with our doctrines, polity, and usages; hence the special need of just such instructions as this Epworth League gives. It will make them intelligent, steadfast, loyal Methodists. If you desire above all things to live and be like Jesus, going about doing good to all classes at all times and in all places, you will find no better field for work than in the Epworth League.

The Epworth League 's a home for you,
No home on earth so grand;
Through it the boys and girls may be Brought to that fairer land.

It is to magnify our works,
Our hope and trust in Him,
And ever will it be to you
One grand protesting rim.

The retiring president of the Toronto Conference League gave the right ring when he said, "What the world wants to-day of Christianity is not more profession, but more practice." It also requires consecration and intelligence. Thought rules to-day in every department of life, and if the church is to win the twentieth century, it must first become master of the thought of the age. The Christian must do the thinking as well as preaching and praying. The Epworth League embodies these three essential principles—consecration, intelligence, and service. It is one of the most potent organizations for the uplifting of humanity. In many places "the League" is practically the church in action, and more than one weary pastor finds that the Epworthians of his charge are his most trustworthy helpers.

The chapters in our country, as the result of eight years' work, now number over 17,500 regular chapters, with 5,600 Juniors, with a membership roll of 1,000,000 members.

If we, as members of the Epworth League, but do our duty, and all over this land, from east to west, from north to south, will be heard the sound of rejoicing over the good accomplished, the sorrow alleviated, and the hearts made light and happy through the love of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ.

Will you enlist in the battle,
Will you enter in the fight,
And with John Wesley
Stand firm for the right?

Let us put our shoulders to this Epworth wheel and give it a push. Roll on, glorious wheel, around this wide world, and gather, as you go, the strength and glory of young manhood and maidenhood for Christ. Roll on until this world shall feel the tread of a million young Methodists, who shall march into the twentieth century with the shout of victory upon their lips, scale the battlements of sin, drive back the foes of God, of home and native land, and plant the banner of King Immanuel upon the shores of every land and upon the isles of the sea.

Letter from Sister Cary.

On April 24, as we passed from one room to another and gazed, perhaps, for the last time, through blinding tears, on many familiar and well-beloved objects, and realized that we were leaving all to the mercy of the merciless waves of the proud "Father of Waters," trusting in the mercy of a merciful Father, we were forcibly reminded of our Savior's words, "Lay not up for yourselves treasure upon earth," etc. Still, while the boat was bearing us away from those hallowed scenes, we were comforted by the promise,

"When through the deep water I call thee to go,
The river of woe shall not thee overflow;
For I will be with thee, thy troubles to bless,
And sanctify to thee thy deepest distress."

The meeting with mother and sisters was only saddened by the sight of father's vacant chair, whose occupant had gone home since our last visit. One learns many things while passing through such experiences, all of which "work together for our good." Among other things, we learned a few "new songs," and if I hadn't "kinder" promised "C. M. P.," and others, wouldn't I'd be tempted to comment!—but under the circumstances I forbear. Will say in passing, however, that the people around Covington, La., are loudly singing of

"The glorious church without spot or wrinkle Washed in the blood of the Lamb."

After a pleasant visit of a little over two months we, like the Israelites of old, again took up our journey, and our tent is now pitched at Ruston, La., which we have found to be "no mean city." Bro. Miller is "not at home" at present, but his pulpit is ably filled by Bro. White. We had the pleasure of listening to a Sunday-school lecture by Bro. Alexander, which was both entertaining and instructive. We do not find here as many vacant pews as we have been wont to find in the majority of our churches, which speaks well for the place. We always like to meet with the church-going people of a community. The different denominations seem to harmonize beautifully. We are at present residing with a family where the husband is a Baptist, while the wife is a Methodist.

While we are loth to leave the bounds of the Mississippi Conference, having been in said Conference all our lives, we believe that we shall find the Louisiana Conference not wanting in hospitality and "good works." Some way we have always had a feenity for getting on the good side of the preachers. Perhaps this is because they have no bad side. And if Bro. L. A. Reed and Dr. Sawyer are fair samples of the Louisiana preachers, Mississippi has a formidable rival in the Conference of her sister State. ALICE CARY.

To serve God. Herein lies true happiness, the happiness of yesterday, the happiness of to-day, the happiness of all days. But we must know this, and when we know this we must act. Many never know it, and of those who know it many never commence to act; of those who commence many do not continue, or else continue so feebly that their search for happiness serves merely to weary and disgust them still more with their false happiness—that is, with their real unhappiness.—Louis Veuillot.

How Christ's death takes away thy sins thou wilt never know on earth—perhaps not in heaven. But why he died thou canst see at the first glance. . . . He died because he was love, love itself, love boundless, unchangeable; love which inhabits eternity, and, therefore, could not be hardened or foiled by any sin or rebellion of man, but must love man still, . . . because absolute and perfect love.—Charles Kingsley.

Deafness Can Not Be Cured

by local applications, as they can not reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever. Nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that can not be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars; free.

BROOKHAVEN, MISS.

Epworth College
(Formerly MALONE)

Is located in Holly Springs, at the intersection of the Illinois Central and Kansas City, Memphis and Birmingham Railroads, and has always been noted for the health, culture and refinement of its people. Ten passenger trains come and go every day, except Sunday, when we have eight.

We shall continue to work under the auspices of the North Mississippi Conference, and pledge ourselves to use every effort in behalf of those entrusted to our care that they may be developed into educated, polished Christian women.

BOARDING DEPARTMENT.

Pupils boarding in the College have the personal attention of the President and his wife, who, together with the teachers, strive to make their stay while here as pleasant and profitable as possible.

An abundance of substantial food is furnished; ample time given at each meal for everyone to be satisfied, and President's family, teachers and pupils all fare alike. Special attention is paid to their manners and morals at all times, and every effort is made to impress them with the necessity of constant growth, physically, mentally and morally.

We board at $11.00 per month where they take their meals regularly at the table; extra charge when the meals are carried to their rooms, and extra servant hire. This includes pupils and teachers.

No incidental fee is charged unless something is destroyed, and in this case the cost of the article is charged to the party who destroys it.

Pastoral Visiting: Its Duty, Difficulties, and Benefits.

BY REV. R. B. DOWNER.

(Read before Enterprise District Conference, and published by request of Conference.)

It seems somewhat out of place for a body of Methodist ministers to consider as questionable the subject of pastoral visiting; yet the duty, difficulties and benefits of pastoral visiting has been allotted me as a subject for District Conference contemplation.

Scriptural or not, the M. E. Church, South, demands a promise of every person ordained deacon and elder that this duty shall be performed. Every minister of the gospel in charge of a congregation is not to proclaim the message from the pulpit only, but from house to house. Proper preparation for the pulpit will require large draughts upon the minister's time, as from that standpoint he comes in contact with the masses. Books, however, are not the only custodians of knowledge. He who abides in the musty realms of the study room, and is rarely, if ever, seen at the home of the aged, sick, and lowly, will never compass the possibilities of his being. His ministerial life and influence will lack equipoise. As a means of personal benefit, as well as that conferred, it becomes the duty of every Methodist minister to excel in this department of labor. Like every other valuable agency or blessing, pastoral visiting is not without its difficulties, but the hindrances are often removed by determined perseverance.

To be a successful pastor it is requisite that he be emptied of self and filled with Christ. Possibly nine-tenths of the difficulties in the way arise from thinking more highly of ourselves than we ought—"lords over God's heritage," and not humble messengers of Christ; yet some of the hindrances arise from the people to be visited.

1. To a pastor entering upon a new charge want of knowledge of the abiding-place of his members becomes a perplexing difficulty for a length of time; but the Discipline, 1130, requires every pastor to keep a directory of the residences of his members to facilitate pastoral visitations, and it is to be inferred that upon leaving a charge, this directory is transmitted to his successor. If no directory was made to include a map of the streets, or roads, upon which members live, a new pastor could at once be able to locate the places of his members, and be able to visit the flock without waste of time.

2. The lack of ability to arrange duties that will harmonize with the most appropriate hour of the persons to be visited. A pastoral visit made before the usual morning work is over, on a wash day, or just when a good sister is in the kitchen preparing for dinner or supper, would not be wise. A deceased brother, who was a pastor beloved, told me of his method of overcoming this trouble. After inquiring somewhat as to the domestic arrangements from some of the older sisters, he planned his visits systematically; then from the pulpit each Sabbath he gave notice of his pastoral visitations for each day, with the hour of each place. He said the people liked it, and were at home when he called. This removes another difficulty, when to leave (some preachers never seem to know the right moment to bid adieu), but a prior engagement solves this problem.

3. Encountering unpleasant receptions from unreasonable mortals. Once in a while a home is encountered where there seems to be located a manufactory of sulphuric acid. A spraying nozzle is kept handy near the front door, and as soon as the pastor enters the acrid fluid is turned on. "Well, you have condescended to call at last. I began to think you never would come. I have seen you pass my door a number of times on your way to visit the rich members. Bro. B. never treated me that way; he visited my house every week. However, since you are now here, come in and tell me the news." Her tongue keeps you busy listening, and wondering, with one of old, "Where am I at?" Many a timid pastor prefers a week's communion with Clarke's Commentary than fifteen minutes of sprayed acid. The remedy is simple: always carry with you some of the balm of Gilead—a good supply. Keep sweet, and as the acid burns, rub on the balm. The acid reservoir has a limit. When exhausted, go to prayer, and have Jesus talk. Arise, bid good day, and in about three weeks call again, carrying more balm, and a few balmy visits will dry up the acid factory.

4. Then there is the negative member, much in society. She receives the pastor with much expressed condescension. If in the Winter, ushering him into a musty, darkened parlor room, the temperature of it as frigid as the ice-covered streets without. The surroundings indicate that sometimes the Progressive Euchre Club meets there. Patronizingly the hostess bids the pastor to be seated in one corner of the room, while she occupies another. Occasionally she condescends to say "Yes" or "No" to some question, trusting to freeze the pastor out. Remedy: Don't stay long, but be sure and pray with her before you leave. Call again in a short while. This time keep on your overcoat, and make a longer visit, and about the third time she will order a fire started, and you will have a thawing-out time. Never allow yourself to feel offended, crucify self, and present Christ. As strange as it may appear, I will yet affirm that many of the so-called pastoral visits of 1897 would not be recognized as such by the fathers. Such visits are made for the pleasure given the cultured, ascetic taste of the pastor. Social visits at certain times are quite proper, but a pastoral visit is intended mainly to benefit the visited. As the pastor is a soul physician, he must expect at times disagreeable environments. His duty requires him to mingle with the innocent gaieties of life; also to be present where the warning yellow flag flutters in the breeze. The aged, the sick, the bereaved, the poor, the kept-at-home, have special claims, and must be timely served. Happy is the man that joyfully embraces his opportunity to be in Christ's stead at the home of the despondent. Fireside talks often accomplish more visible results than the pulpit. The visit, to be pastoral, must leave behind the aroma of Christ. A correct method of observance is Christian conversation, followed by the strains of some appropriate hymn, reading of God's Word, and an earnest, heartfelt prayer. Singing gives the visited opportunity to take a share in the acts of devotion. Some pastors can't sing (unfortunate men). Children love to sing. Always give them, if present, an opportunity. As to the benefits, who can estimate them? Around the fireside the pastor is at close range to ascertain the spiritual status, learn of the peculiar hindrances, thus affording knowledge of the proper subjects needed to be presented from the pulpit. His own soul will often rejoice as he lifts to a firmer hold on Christ some despondING, perishing one.

Think of the burdened mothers, aged parents, confirmed invalids, almost wholly dependent upon pastoral ministrations for human words of good cheer. Eternity alone can reveal the benefits thus conferred. Pastoral visiting affords opportunity to become acquainted with the children, and learn to what extent Christianity influences their lives. The loving tender pastor has led many a wayward daughter and prodigal son into sweet companionship with Christ. A few special words to Mary or John before leaving are never forgotten.

The faithful pastor, though not a "D. D.," will rarely, if ever, have to preach to empty benches. It is a wise pastor that finds time to call early upon new-comers, and visit those of other denominations where a visit is acceptable. It should be an exception to the rule to leave without offering to have prayer.

Orphan's Home Notes.

BY REV. THOMAS B. CLIFFORD.

In sending in our

ORPHANS' HOME NOTES

this week we would remind all those who have subscribed that we need the money now, and hope they will find it convenient at a very early date to pay the regularly appointed collectors at the various churches where appeals have been made and collections taken. One town deserves special mention as having paid more than they subscribed, and hereby we commend the example of the county seat of Pike, subscribing on Sunday of our visit $67.40, and paying next day $81. The name of Bro. J. A. B. Jones, the faithful and efficient pastor, deserves mention in this connection for his interest and co-operation in the work. Besides this amount, the good ladies promised to furnish a room. In our last letter we mentioned Siloam as being the scene of our labors at time of writing. From there we went to and, notwithstanding the fact that several hundred dollars had just been subscribed (and some of it already paid) for much-needed improvements on the parsonage, yet the congregation responded to our appeal for the orphans, and nearly $75 will come from West Point in a few weeks to help furnish the Home. No wonder that the West Point congregation has done so much this year, if the good Doctor with whom we stayed is a sample of the flock. He keeps books with the Lord, and pays at least one-tenth. Oh, that his kind may increase both in Mississippi and elsewhere!

MAGNOLIA,

Monday morning, Aug. 23, we took train for Lexington en route to

on the Black Hawk circuit, whither we had been invited by Rev. W. C. Lester, the pastor. A protracted meeting was in progress, Rev. W. H. Sanders assisting. An opportunity was given the agent to preach and represent the Home, and $74.55 was the amount subscribed in answer to our appeal.

Special thanks are due Bro. Williams, of Lexington (a member of the North Georgia Conference), for conveyance to Acona. We shall not soon forget the delightful trip with this genial and godly Georgian.

Fifth Sunday in August we were booked for where we were assured by our friend and brother, Rev. T. Y. Ramsey (the pastor), that a cordial welcome awaited us. Bro. J. J. Yeates was at the depot with conveyance to take the agent in charge, and to him and his excellent wife and family we are indebted for many kindnesses. More than $80 was the result, in a material way, of our labors in behalf of the Home, Sunday morning. At night it was our privilege to preach at a union service to a large congregation assembled in the Cumberland Presbyterian Church.

Monday morning, Aug. 30, found your correspondent on his way to McCool, en route to

on the Rural Hill circuit, to assist the pastor, Rev. W. L. Anderson, in a meeting, and present the claims of the orphanage. Twenty dollars was readily subscribed toward the furnishing of the Home, and one member of the congregation assured us that even more than that would be paid.

We would be glad if all who read these lines would study the history of missions in Mexico and Brazil, and learn somewhat of the foe with which we have had to contend in those countries. When these facts are learned, then, perhaps, Protestants in Mississippi will cease to furnish both money and orphans to strengthen and build up the Roman Catholic Church.

When will the Mississippi Orphans' Home of the M. E. Church, South, located in Water Valley, Miss., be furnished and opened? Echo answers—When? We are depending on the Protestant people, and especially the Methodists of Mississippi, to help us answer this question. Let all help, and help "now."

Correspondence.

Letter from "Gilderoy."

"What is the state or condition of the regenerate?" is another question on which young men ought to have clear and settled views. Mr. Wesley is particularly clear and strong on this subject. No writer, so far as I know, surpasses him in strength, clearness and felicity of utterance on this doctrine. It will pay to study him and to master this subject as presented by him.

Regeneration is a new birth. It is meant to rectify or to restore what was lost in the first birth. Generation is one thing, and regeneration the other and more important thing. The first birth is natural, the new birth spiritual. By the first we become sons of Adam, and by the second sons of God. We are born of God. Our relation to Adam is fleshly; our relation to God spiritual. Generation is a profoundly mysterious fact, and regeneration not one whit less so. All who are born once of our race must be born again of God. The necessity for the new birth grows out of the nature and relations of the first birth.

Owing to the inherent and inherited depravity, or deprivity, of our natures, we are inclined to go the wrong way, to self-will, to excess, even to excess in right things, to sin. We naturally give way to pride, envy, malice, and lust. We want to have our way in everything; to gratify our passions, appetites, and propensities, regardless of God's law or the rights of other people. Self is enthroned, and self-will the only rule and law of action. This is the corruption of nature that is naturally engendered, and it is just this that makes regeneration necessary—yea, absolutely indispensable. Without it men are just as certain to fall into actual sin and go straight down to hell as water is to run down hill. No amount of education and no kind of education and training can do away with the necessity for regeneration. The old man, or Adam, is in us and dominant. He must be dethroned, turned out, and the new man, or Christ, must be raised up in us. We call this regeneration, the new birth, being born of God, born of the Spirit. It is the beginning of spiritual life and makes us sons of God. It was not our fault that we were born as we were, but it will be our fault if we are not born of God. This change is radical, individual, personal. It is a change from the love and service of self to the love and worship of God; from the love of sin to the love and practice of virtue, of holiness. It is the divine mind formed in us by the Holy Ghost; the living Christ in us in the person of the Spirit. The regenerate life is spiritual life from start to finish. If sustained with spiritual food, it will come to maturity and Christian manhood. We are new-born sons of God that we may become grown men in Christ.

It would be difficult to overstate the necessity for regeneration, or the nature of the change wrought by it. It is dangerous to minify the necessity for it or the work done in the new birth. There is a tendency towards both of these evils in widely divergent wings of the church. With some human nature is too good to need regeneration, and with others regeneration is not good enough for fallen human nature. It must be supplemented by something else to set the perverse human will right with God. A careful study of Mr. Wesley on this subject will tend to check extremists in both directions. It will save young preachers from confusion and blundering either way.

Regeneration is unique, singular, and stands alone in its place in Christian theology and in the economy of grace. It is not in the way of any other doctrine. No man who believes the Word of God will speak against it, or minify it, or speak of it to ridicule it, or to belittle regenerate souls. This kind cometh of either ignorance or sin—perhaps of both.

But one asks, "Are not regenerate people depraved beings still?" They are, and specially so in the matter of deprivity. The depravation that comes of deprivation clings to them, and in a large sense will do so as long as they live. No state or work of grace will or can save men from this. Mr. Wesley and the men of his day classed these as infirmities, and not sins. They all say no state of grace will ever destroy or obliterate our connection with the race. Grace was not meant to destroy the race, but to save all the race from all sin.

Justified and regenerate people ought to live without sin. This is the lowest plane on which they dare try to live at all. An effort to live one inch lower than this is to live in sin, and so to fall from grace. The standard in the divine book is very high; so high it does not make allowance for sin. Ignorance, if not wilful, natural weakness of judgment, and the like, are infirmities. Bad habits, formed by long sinning, are sinful. A hot temper must be controlled. Unholy passions, made more unholy by long indulgence, are sinful. It is not wise to be too liberal in forming a long list of personal infirmities. In any matter, if you can't, you can't; but if you can at all, by the help of God, you must.

I am not opposing holiness, but insisting upon it from start to finish. Indeed, I have a very high idea of the duties and obligations and the possibilities of the regenerate life. I got these views from God's Word and from the old Wesleyan masters.

Sardis District Epworth Conference.

Sardis District Epworth Conference will meet at Sardis, Miss., 7:30 P. M., Thursday, Sept. 23—not at 10 A. M., as stated in a former notice. It will continue through the following Sunday. A suitable program will be arranged. Addresses, essays and open discussions bearing on Epworth League work will be in order. Every preacher in the charge is requested to be in attendance, and to have present, at least, one representative from each congregation, whether it have a League or not. Let every organized League have one or more representative, and send in a report of the condition of the League. All the young people of the district are invited to attend, ladies as well as gentlemen. All of our pastors will please give attention to the above suggestions. Do all you can, brethren, to have your charges well represented. Let us have a full attendance, and try, by the help of God, to make the Sardis Epworth Conference a complete success.

Those purposing to attend should send their names, at once, to the district secretary, Miss Stella Boothe, or to Rev. W. S. Shipman, Sardis, Miss.

TOPIC FOR SEPTEMBER.

THE CHRIST OF ST. PAUL.

SEPT. 12.—HIS EARLY DISCIPLES.

(I. Cor. i, 26-28; Gal. ii, 9.)

1. "For ye see your calling, brethren, how that not many wise men after the flesh, not many mighty, not many noble, are called; but God hath chosen the foolish things of the world to confound the wise." Most of Christ's early disciples were chosen from the ranks of the common people. This is also true to-day. Why is it, why was it so? Does he choose them arbitrarily, or because of their fitness? The condition of entrance into the kingdom of God and discipleship is presented in Christ's own words, "Whosoever shall not receive the kingdom of God as a little child, he shall not enter therein." (a) A little child is teachable, willing to learn. Recognizes his ignorance, and is constantly asking questions. Learning, or human greatness of any kind, is likely to produce self satisfaction, and so make man indocile, thus shutting out the lesson Christ would teach. (b) He is obedient. Acknowledges authority. Great men, or learned, will not obey unless they understand. Christ's method is to obey in order to understand. "Obedience is the organ of spiritual knowledge." (c) Child is dependent, trustful. Christ can not save unless we put ourselves in his keeping. Wisdom or wealth makes man independent. He needs no help, he thinks. So he can not enter into the kingdom of God. The child-spirit feels its need, its emptiness, and is receptive. The spirit of human greatness is independent, full, rejective, and, consequently, debars Christ. The kingdom of God is not found by intellectual acuteness and labor, but is given to those who are "poor in spirit."

2. "Not many," but some of the world's great, are found among the disciples. Wisdom or nobility does not necessarily debar, but may be comprehended or included by this spirit of receptivity. When man looks upon his wisdom as a point of excellence that God should honor, then he shuts the door of the kingdom in his own face. When his puny wisdom is lost in the infinite abyss of his need, then it is no barrier.

3. "God has chosen the foolish things to confound the wise." Learned men are apt to obscure God with themselves. They afford a medium colored by their wisdom, through which God can but dimly be seen. God wishes a medium through which he may shine. He wishes an interpreter, not a lecturer.

DOTS.

Remember the meeting of the Union Epworth League, Thursday night, at Tchonpitoulas Street Church, 1014 Tchonpitoulas street.

Dryades League will give a trolley ride next Thursday week from the Louisiana Avenue Chapel.

"If any man among you seemeth to be wise in this world, let him become a fool, that he may be wise."

Notice.

To the Members of the W. P. and H. M. Society of North Mississippi Conference:

The program for the Week of Prayer of our society gives the time as Oct. 11-18. This, you see, includes the time of our annual meeting. As we do not desire these two interests to conflict, we will defer our Week of Prayer indefinitely, but will give due notice of the time, so that it may be observed by all our societies. The program is a remarkably fine one, and, if properly carried out, can not fail to command interest, and we shall be glad to make use of it some time in the near future.

Yours faithfully,

MRS. J. B. STONE,
Pres. W. P. and H. M. S., North Miss. Conf.

LOOKING UPWARDS

BY REV. CLIFTON L. MONTAGUE

None so weak and none so feeble
None so poor or frail can be,
That in love they may not gather
Ever by the side of Thee—
Thou the great Eternal Father.
Thou that heeds a sparrow's fall.
Ever note the steps that falter.
Ever lead and guide us all

Though our lot be hard and heavy.
Dull the task or dark the way
In the silence Thy vast shadow
Whispers of the coming day.
Never fail we in the trusting
Of Thy life, Thy love, Thy power.
We are living with Thy sunshine
Pouring through each little hour.

So our Father we entreat thee
That our lives may be more grand,
That from mountain-tops of glory
We may view Thy better land:
Guide our wanderings, aid our courage,
Give us strength and power and love.
Till our pathways ring forever
Angel music from above.

So shall life become celestial,
So in cadence rich and rare
Shall the melody of being
Day by day Thy love declare.
So forever round our pathway
Flowers will bloom with fragrance sweet,
So before we reach Thy heaven
We shall sense Thy mercy-seat.

"I have chosen you, and ordained you, that ye should go and bring forth fruit, and that your fruit should remain."—John xv, 16.

JAPAN.

The Japan Mission was commenced in 1886. It was at the meeting of the Board of Missions of 1885 that Bishop Keener offered the following resolution, which was adopted: "Resolved, That we establish a mission in Japan, and that we appropriate therefor the sum of $3,000." Bishop McTyeire, who was in charge of the China Mission at the time, appointed Dr. J. W. Lambuth, W. R. Lambuth, and O. A. Dukes, of the China Mission, to Japan. Dr. and Mrs. Lambuth had labored in China for thirty-two years, and during the Civil War in the United States the finances of the home church being depleted, they were forced to secure employment outside, that they might continue their loved employ, and by their evident love for souls endeared themselves to the people with and for whom they had labored so long. While the separation must have been more or less painful, and the fact of there being new environments to adjust themselves to filled their minds with more or less apprehension, Dr. Lambuth replied to the notice of his appointment, which reached him on May 20, 1886, as follows: "We thank you and the friends for this determination to open a mission in Japan. We shall go, leaning on the omnipotent arm of God, and seeking in our work the guidance of the Holy Spirit and his blessing." This aged servant of God and his church was beginning his work as a missionary anew in many respects, taking up the details of the work in its incipiency, necessarily struggling against difficulties in an untried field. It is true, the prospects were brighter than when, thirty-two years before this, they made a charge against idolatry on the shores of China. They were not hindered in their minds by the new circumstances, but were ready to herald to the forty millions of Japan the matchless and sublime claims of the gospel of the Son of God. Their faith and courage were much stimulated by the advance movement of the church at home. On Oct. 2, 1886, the occasion of the first Quarterly Conference, the first convert of the mission was recorded after an inquiry of six months for the truth which had liberated his soul from the bondage of sin. The first Church Conference of the Kobe Mission was held Dec. 3, 1886. The members reported at this Conference were six European, one Chinese, and one Japanese. The Conference had much encouragement from Bishop Wilson, who was on a visit to our missions in the East. A reading-room was opened and maintained by the contribution of $100 per annum from Dr. Palmore, now editor of the St. Louis Advocate, and who has done much in advancing an increase of our forces throughout the foreign work. As was the case with the founder of Methodism, Mrs. Lambuth organized a class for the study of the Bible, and, according to the record, there were sixty women of the best families of Kobe meeting with her in the reading-room, and very soon they requested more time for the investigation of the doctrines of the Word of God. The work of the church there has had more rapid increase than that of any other mission. The recent war between China and Japan, while distressing in the extreme, and apparently a means of destruction to the impressions that had formerly been made for the kingdom of God, has been a blessing, so declare the missionaries. Dr. Lambuth, who passed out from Japan into the port of God's kingdom above, sent the inspiring message to the home church: "I die on the field; send more men." Re-enforcements were needed then and are needed to-day. Bishop Galloway, who visited the field in 1892, declared, "Japan is white to the harvest." In 1895 there were 22 members of the Conference. Fifty-two adults and 41 infants were baptized. Five hundred and fourteen members were reported. The statistics for 1896 are as follows: 542 members; 15 infants and 66 adults were baptized. We have 3 districts with 18 appointments; 2 schools and Conference colporteur. There is a theological department in connection with the college work for the wise and thorough training of the native ministry. The Conference is well-organized, and promises to do much in the universal spread of the kingdom. We must not forget that a little leaven leaveneth the whole lump.

INDIAN MISSION.

The Indian Mission Conference was organized in 1844, and adhered to our church in 1845. In 1896 we had a membership of 19,702 whites and Indians. This mission is more on a self-sustaining basis than any other. The value of our church property in the Indian Mission Conference is $117,000.

Our mission property, except in the Indian Mission Conference, is valued at $251,342. This has been secured by the sacrifice, in many instances, of men and women whose hearts were in the work.

The gospel is a living, generating principle, and will adhere wherever it makes its appearance; but the question naturally arises, Have we reached the point where we can rest upon our laurels? Have we achieved sufficient to say and act enough, we have done what we could? I say, No! ten thousand times no!—for while we have much to gratify us in the subduing of some by the power of the gospel of the Son of God, we have just begun, and truly should the noise of battle be heard on every foreign shore.

Even at the rate we have been going, the world will hear and will have an opportunity to be saved; but it is my conviction that without more earnest and rapid movement we shall have to account for the tardiness of which we are guilty to-day. The church at home, with the necessary sacrifice, has it in her power to send the gospel into every province of the heathen world within the next decade. I do not believe this possibility to be overdrawn. With the appropriation of America's millions, the millions of immortal souls who to day sit in darkness may see the dawning of the Sun of Righteousness in every port and temple of the unevangelized world. It is the demand from God that the church shall give the light of her life to those who have not seen or felt its rays. Our indifference should be converted into an intense and increasing interest in this direction. Have we done that which has been commanded us to do, and shall we longer detain the mighty tread of the world's evangelizing and Christianizing power? Oh, for a conscience in the church which can be reached by the calls of God to duty! Will any man sit heedless of these divine demands?

I will close with a quotation from a sermon recently delivered by Bishop Keener in McKendree Church, Nashville, Tenn. After a very forcible presentation of the obligation of the church to the cause of missions, he closed by saying: "And this is all I have to say: that if the world is not brought to Christ, it is your fault. If the world is not brought to Christ, you will have to answer for it. Christ is not going to go without you. Now, you can make yourselves just as comfortable as you please. He is not going to convert the Mohammedan, the Brahman or Buddhist without you. He has tried that experiment, and it has failed, and he needs men, and must have men, or does nothing. And don't you see how that enhances the dignity of your being? Is it possible that I can work with Christ?—that I can enter this great field of honor, this wonderful system—God's great system of life? Yes, it is possible. You are the man and the responsible person. Don't think there are thousands of others. Recollect Carey, Morrison, Marshman, Livingston and Moffat. Why, they were one hundred years in advance of their people, and they went, and by one man was kindled the glory of God in a vast field. You are the man; you have the means to do it, and you can do it. May God help you to do it!"

Again I quote:

"The restless millions wait
That light, whose dawning marketh all things new;
Christ also waits, but men are slow and late.
Have we done what we could? Have I? Have you?
A cloud of witnesses above encompass us;
We love to think of all they see and know;
But what of this great multitude in peril, who sadly wait below?
O let this thrilling vision daily move us
To earnest prayers and deeds before unknown!
That souls redeemed from many lands may join us,
When Christ brings home his own."

Let us adopt the spirit of these two quotations, and apply ourselves with diligence and earnestness to the propagation of the gospel of the Son of God in every isle and clime of the earth. We can not afford to be quiet any longer. This is "our" work, and we are very near the subjugation of the kingdoms of the earth in the co operation of the Spirit of God, and we must yield to his influence in accomplishing the purpose of God in the establishment of his church. Go or send, do or die, in the effort to save the world.

A Little Scrap.

Let us take the twenty-third verse of the twentieth chapter of Matthew: "And he saith unto them, Ye shall drink indeed of my cup, and be baptized with the baptism that I am baptized with: but, to sit on my right hand, and on my left, is not mine to give, but it shall be given to them for whom it is prepared of my Father."

Leave out now the words supplied by the translators, and the latter part of the verse will read: "But, to sit on my right hand, and on my left, is not mine to give, but for whom it is prepared of my Father."

If, as we may do without violence to the Greek word "alla," we translate that word by our word "except," then we shall have: "Not mine to give, except for whom it is prepared of [by] my Father."

These amendments give a translation in accordance with the original, and change the meaning, for, as the verse stands in the received version, it denies to Christ the right to bestow rewards on his followers; whereas, the corrected rendering, which is a plain translation of the Greek text, as anyone may verify, asserts that right, and states the condition of its exercise.

With this agree those other Scriptures which declare that Christ "shall sit on the throne of his glory," and that "we must all appear before the judgment-seat of Christ," etc. (See Matt. xxv, 31-46; II. Cor. v, 10; Rom. xiv, 10, 11.)

What the Master intended was to rebuke the eager ambition for place and honor, and to point out the true way of life as embracing the inner principles of duty, fidelity and integrity, and the outer conditions of labor and suffering with him.

Correspondence.

Thanks and Else.

Cordial thanks are due the following brethren for kind replies to my request for the names of physicians and druggists: W. T. Griffin, M. M. Black, W. G. Backus, D. Scarborough, C. C. Evans, R. B. Downer, J. W. Brown, I. B. Robertson, W. J. Dawson, J. P. Drake, G. A. Guice, W. L. Linfield, B. W. Lewis, J. V. Penn, B. F. Lewis, E. E. Langford, L. P. Meador, R. A. Sibley, Jr.; H. C. Brown, C. M. Crossley, W. B. Lewis, C. F. Emery, W. W. Morse, W. M. Williams, H. D. Howell, H. B. Vandenburg, H. E. Partridge, W. A. Terry, A. T. Bell, J. G. Cammack, M. L. Burton, M. L. White, D. C. Langford, W. H. Huntley, Jas. G. Galloway, H. W. Featherstun, M. A. Thurman, A. F. Watkins.

Mrs. Lilly Moore Kittrell, of Myrick, Jones county, sends me the address of her husband, who is an M. D.

But more than eighty of my brethren in the Conference having failed for five months to comply with my simple request, and the Conference year being so near its end, the enterprise in view will have to be abandoned, since it is hardly possible to get our physicians and druggists interested sufficiently in the matter in three months, when my brethren in the pastorate, who are their leaders, take so little interest.

Now, brethren, do not cry out and charge me with making unkind reflections on you. I am only trying to stir up your pure minds by way of remembrance. I am just a little interested in foreign and domestic missions, and only wish you were more interested than myself. God bless you in all your labors and in all your experiences.

Bro. W. M. Williams writes me that Gallman circuit has paid its assessment for Conference claimants $35 on foreign missions, and $15 on domestic missions. "We expect to pay all the Conference assessments in full." Good for Gallman circuit and the faithful pastor! They are ahead of Canton station. Bro. Williams works well.

Bro. H. E. Partridge, Waynesboro: "I have secured my foreign mission assessment by subscription. Have raised $37.50 [in cash], and would have collected all, or nearly all, but for sickness."

Bro. W. H. Huntley writes: "I will forward mission money in a few days."

President Beeson, of East Mississippi Female College, offers to take any young lady preparing for mission fields, and give her tuition in regular course, board, washing, fuel and lights the whole session for $75. This offer is not restricted to the boundaries of the Mississippi Conference.

From the subscription list of The Methodist Review of Missions, sent me by Dr. Lambuth, it may be seen that seventy-six traveling preachers, including one Bishop and three superannuates in the bounds of our Conference, are subscribers. Eight out of one hundred and thirty-four local preachers, eight laymen and eleven elect women are also on the list. Ought not every itinerant and every local preacher to be a subscriber and a reader? Ought not every intelligent layman, and especially every official member, to take and peruse this excellent missionary journal? And yet a very intelligent layman remarked to me last Winter: "The Review is devoted to technical matters in which every preacher ought to be informed; but there is no more reason for my taking the Review than there is for your taking one of the law journals for which I subscribe." And he was in earnest, though much mistaken.

Bluff Creek Camp Meeting.

The eighth annual camp meeting at Bluff Creek, East Feliciana parish, La., opened Friday night, Aug. 13, with a sermon by Rev. F. N. Sweeney, and closed Sunday night, Aug. 22, with a sermon by Rev. F. N. Parker.

For five days it rained almost incessantly, filling the creeks to overflowing and flooding the whole country, cutting off the camp ground from surrounding neighborhoods; yet the work of the Lord was carried on in face of these difficulties—not a prayer meeting nor a preaching service was missed.

The following brethren were associated in preaching and working for the salvation of souls during the meeting: Revs. S. S. Keener, F. N. Parker, G. D. Anders, P. Howard, F. N. Sweeney, Lewis Alford, T. J. Upton, J. J. Kelly, W. H. Harvill, J. F. McCleland, S. J. Davies, J. F. Wynn, and Chas. W. Crisler. The spirit of these brethren toward each other, and with respect to the work assigned each, was truly commendable. As a result, faithful work and good, sound gospel preaching were done, which were honored by the Holy Spirit in the conversion of many souls and in the edification of believers.

The association, of which Bro. Tom D. Lipscomb is president, deserves mention as important factors in the result of this meeting. By untiring energy and unselfish devotion they have made possible lasting benedictions to the souls of men. May the Spirit of the Lord so direct them in all the details of his great work here that the success already achieved may be only an earnest of yet greater revelations of blessings!

After a sermon by Rev. Sam'l S. Keenor on Sunday, at 11 o'clock, the sacrament of the Lord's Supper was administered and freely participated in by those present. This service proved a means of grace to many, as the writer had occasion to learn afterwards from persons enjoying this privilege for the first time.

In view of all we saw, heard and felt, the meeting was a gracious blessing to many.

I wonder how many of our sisters of the W. P. and H. M. Society have taken up the reading course prescribed for that body? I fear the number is small. We might find many reasons therefor. Not that most of them are not thoughtful, reading women, we are sure, but mainly, we believe, because of the multiplicity of papers and magazines in our homes. These come to us daily, and in endeavoring to keep place with the current literature of the day we neglect books that we must, so to speak, go out of our way to procure and read. Perhaps, if we call attention to a few of these books, we may awaken a desire to know more of them. First on the list comes "Our Country: Its Possible Future and Present Crisis;" by Rev. Josiah Strong, D. D. Dr. Strong has a way of putting things that tends to impress them strongly upon the mind. You feel convinced that the author has thoroughly studied his subject, and that his facts, while they may be both stubborn and startling, are, nevertheless, facts. He gives us a fine idea of the vast resources of our country, showing that we have territory, population, wealth, and, as Matthew Arnold has said, "America holds the future." Next he takes up the various kinds of peril threatening us with ruin. The chief of these he thinks are immigration, Romanism, religious and the public schools, intemperance, socialism, wealth, and the city, each of which he discusses. Notwithstanding these great perils, he believes it is in the hands of the Christians of the United States, during the next ten or fifteen years, to hasten or retard the coming of Christ's kingdom in the world by hundreds and, perhaps, thousands of years. "We of this generation and nation occupy the Gibraltar of the ages which commands the world's future." The last chapter, "Money and the Kingdom," is worthy a very careful study. He says: "The door of opportunity is open in all the earth; organizations have been completed, languages learned, the Scriptures translated, and now the triumph of the kingdom awaits only the exercise of the power committed to the church, but which she refuses to put forth. If she is to keep step with the majestic march of the divine Providence, the church must consecrate the power which is in money."

Next on the list comes "Prisoners of Poverty," by Mrs. Helen Campbell. Few of us in our heaven-blessed Southern country can ever realize how our sisters—"prisoners of poverty"—in the large cities of the North spend their weary lives. The depths of poverty and wretchedness into which they come, either by birth or misfortune, are unknown among us. 'Tis well to know these things in order to appreciate our own favored condition and the many blessings attending it. This little book gives us glimpses into their lives that make us long to find a remedy, a balm, which will bring healing and sunshine into them. It shows how the great army of working-women are ground down by heartless employers and forced to labor through long, long days, for less than living wages. We hear it asked why these women do not go out to service. Why do not many of them find comfortable, happy homes with those who so greatly need their strong arms in household affairs? Mrs. Campbell answers this and many similar queries, and gives us information in her own natural, easy, interesting manner, so that your attention and interest are kept up throughout the book.

Get these books, sisters; you will enjoy them; and then, having a taste for such things, you will be ready for others in the course.

Mrs. Reed, Natchez: "Yesterday being the first Thursday in the month, we held our regular meeting, when Mrs. Bahn, our delegate, gave the society a most interesting report of the meeting (annual meeting, Jackson). We suggested that each one add at least one new member during the year. We had one accession yesterday.

"I hope to be able to hold a district meeting some time this Fall. I trust that I may report one new society each quarter."

Mrs. Scott Phillips, Vicksburg, is very much interested in her work, and in her letter expressed the hope that, with the aid of the auxiliaries, to have a fine report of her district. We trust that she will have prayerful help from all, especially the ministers and auxiliaries, that her fond hopes may be realized.

We regretted exceedingly the omission, in our annual report, of the delightful children's mass meeting on Sabbath afternoon. The tones of the organ heralded the approach of the Jackson Jewels. Then followed devotional exercises by our young missionary, Miss McNemar, after which were recitations by Jean McLaurin, of Jackson, and Mabel Rivers, of Meridian. Miss Norvell, missionary from Mexico, gave a touching account of the religious state of her adopted land, and exhibited pictures, etc. We found one mistake in the printed report. "More profound conclusions" should be "more profound convictions." MRS. E. D. JONES.

Selections.

Self-Denial.

Self-denial is a Christian grace that lies at the very threshold of all godliness. "If any man will come after me, let him deny himself and take up his cross and follow me," is the language of Jesus, containing the terms of discipleship. Without this no one can be a Christian, much less have the qualification for a Bishop or an evangelist of Christ.

The desire of human nature is to do as it pleases—to have its own way. Man is naturally selfish. The Savior would destroy this carnal disposition; would fill the soul with new emotions, with love for God and love for man. This demands the sacrifice of self. It is true self-denial. Our will, desires, ambitions must all bow to the supreme authority of Jesus. He is the King of saints. We must approach him reverently, crying, "Thy will, O Lord, be done." He requires us to deny ourselves of all ungodliness and worldly lusts, and live soberly, righteously and godly in this world. The allurements of the world must be forsaken for the sake of Christ. Like Paul, we must "count all things but loss, for the excellency of the knowledge of Christ Jesus our Lord, for whom we suffer the loss of all things and do count them but dung, that we may win Christ."

The relation we sustain to other Christians demands self-denial. We are social creatures, united by common sympathies. We have common joys, common sorrows. Each must make sacrifice for the good of all. "Bear one another's burdens, and thus fulfill the law of Christ."

Selfishness antagonizes pure and undefiled religion. We must renounce self to be disciples of Jesus. His terms are: "Let him deny himself, and take up his cross and follow me." Entering thus, he will receive us as we go forward in obedience to his will.

"Let this mind be in you which was in Christ Jesus." "In lowliness of mind let each esteem other better than himself." "Let everyone look not his own," but study those things which make for peace, and the God of peace will be with you.—J. Irvin.

You picture to yourself the beauty of bravery and steadfastness. You let your memory wander over the memory of martyrs who have died for truth. And then, some little wretched, disagreeable duty comes, which is your martyrdom, the latter for your oil, and if you will not do it how your oil is spilt! How flat and thin and unilluminated your sentiment about the martyrs runs over your self-indulgence.—Phillips Brooks.

To Whom It May Concern:

About three years ago I received a sample bottle of "Mul-en-ol." I had never heard of it before. I began using it, however, as occasion required, and soon found that it was all that is claimed for it, and more. For cuts, burns, bruises, scalds, and all kinds of sores, it is superior to any remedy I have ever used. It is also exceedingly efficacious in colic and diarrhœa. For sore throat it is incomparably better than anything I know of. I heartily recommend it as a medicine worthy of a place in every household. W. C. BLACK,

FROM THE WORK.

J. R B., Aug. 21, 1897: "At Mt. Olivet Church, Yazoo county, Miss., the pastor, Rev. C. C. Evans, began a meeting on the fourth Sunday in July, closing Sunday, the ninth day of August. The church had become very cold, and many had very little hope of success; but God was with us from start to finish. The pastor had our good brother, Robert T. Nolan, L E', from Ebenezer. Holmes county, and our own H L. Scarborough, L. E., to assist him. Bro. Nolan did most of the preaching, and nobly did he meet the demand. He is a rapid thinker and fearless talker, and poured hot shot into the vast crowds that attended from day to day; appeal, invitation, warning, such as only a warm heart and burning Christian zeal could employ. The first call found fifteen asking for prayers; then twenty-five, then too many to count. The last call at close of the meeting found fifty-five, and twenty-five mostly grown people, and all good metal, were received into the church, and more yet to come. Bro. Evans is an able preacher, and was equal to the occasion, proving himself to be a revivalist as well as a sermon builder. It was an old-fashioned meeting, with two sermons (at 11 and 3 o'clock), with a bountiful dinner between. The dead church is greatly revived, and the members warmed into new life and effort. A weekly prayer meeting well attended, and the older members are looking after and assisting the new recruits. Our Sunday-school has taken on new life."

Rev. J. T. Abney, P. C., Whitestown charge, Mississippi Conference, Aug. 27, 1897: "We begun a meeting at Muddy Springs, Saturday, July 31—the time of our third Quarterly Conference. Bro. Mounger, our beloved presiding elder, was with us Saturday and Sunday, and, in connection with the work of the Quarterly Conference, he preached three very instructive and helpful sermons. The meeting continued until Friday. Rev. B. H. Rawls, of Auburn, reached us Monday. After entering upon the scene he did all the preaching till the close. He is a man of power, and it was felt in the congregation while with us. I have been told that this was the best meeting ever held at Muddy Springs. Surely the power of God was manifest, so that several gave evidence of being brought into the fold of Christ, and all the membership seemed revived. Bros. Mullens, of McComb; Sandell, of Magnolia; Roberts, of Greensburg, La; Coker, of Auburn, were with us some time during the meeting, and did efficient service, talking to penitents, praying, etc. Their services were all appreciated. A meeting was held at Pisgah, beginning Aug. 14, and was to continue about one week; but because of the continued rain, we were hindered. Rev. J. M. Morse, of McComb, was with us Monday and Tuesday; preached three excellent sermons. Rev. H. D. Howell, of Ocean Springs, was with us Monday, and preached a very impressive sermon. Though hindered by the rain, we feel safe in saying the meeting did much good; have never witnessed better prospect for a good meeting. We have two meetings to hold on the work yet. The Lord has graciously blessed us this year. To him be all the praise."

Rev. Jas E. Riddle, Camden, Miss., Aug. 28, 1897: "Rev. Bro. Kimmons, of the Presbyterian Church, and I began a meeting in this city on Wednesday, Aug. 18, which closed Thursday, Aug. 26. Bro. Kimmons preached the first two sermons. By this time Evangelist Jim Smylie arrived, and took the pulpit, preaching twice a day with great fluency and eloquence and power till the close. Large and appreciative congregations attended each service. The good and great results of this meeting are shared by all Christians and churches alike; for while there were only six accessions, there was a great and widespread revival of the church, the fires of holy love being kindled again in many hearts. And it is the verdict of all that Bro. Smylie has been the means of great good to us. This people call him a great preacher. Any word of commendation from me is unnecessary, as Bro. Smylie is well known throughout Mississippi and Louisiana as a revival preacher; but, brethren, he will do any of you lasting good if you can secure his services. Some of you may not approve evangelists Well, neither do I, as such; but I need help, and they are good helpers. Brethren of the pastorate either can not or will not help each other. This is my tenth year in the ministry, and rarely indeed have I been fortunate enough to secure the assistance of a neighboring pastor for a protracted meeting; and when I did it was always a poor meeting positively; whereas evangelists always do me good, and as to the matter of pay, why that is never any trouble, nor do they in the least affect my salary, but add thereto. My friends in Louisiana who may see this, if you need help, write to Jim J. Smylie, Terry, Miss. I know he will prove, under God and grace, a blessing to you."

PINEVILLE, LA.

After the Centenary commencement and the Baton Rouge District Conference were ended, I came to Pineville on a visit to my father and his family. We have here a commodious church, a convenient country parsonage, with a good garden-plot and necessary out-houses, including a lot and stable. Our church property is situated in the midst of cemeteries. Just in front of the parsonage, on a knoll, there is a group of graves in a small grove of trees that seem to be sentinels for the preacher's family. The ground surrounding the church and in front of the parsonage is called the "Methodist Graveyard." Besides this, just to the left of the parsonage, is the Episcopal Church and graveyard, with carriage-way through the centre of the grounds and winding walks among the tombs. Besides these, there is the Jewish Cemetery of less than an acre of ground, completely filled with tombs and vaults, and scarcely walking room in the narrow alley-ways between the vaults. Other burying-grounds are more extended and have allowed more space for thoroughfares. There is a national cemetery here, kept up by the wealth of "Uncle Sam's treasury," and always in a "gala dress." Just to the right of the parsonage, and extending almost to the river front, is the Catholic Cemetery—a large, roomy burying-ground with many thousand inhabitants and carriage boulevards between the graves. Just back of the parsonage is situated another burying-ground, known as the pauper's graveyard. Amid all this sleeping multitude there are a few hundred living people, some of whom are good Christian people, and a small number are consistent members of our church.

The people on this work are mostly poor, yet they are liberal. One brother, in moderate circumstances, is paying sixty dollars to his preacher, and some others are doing—what they can. Revival fires are constantly burning. They have been served in the past by some of our best men, and still cherish the memory of their godly living and righteous admonitions.

In a ten days' meeting the first of this month, in which Bro. Paul and myself assisted my father, a class of fourteen were admitted into full fellowship in the church; besides some six probationers yet to be received.

The good work of saving souls grows apace, and a committee of our best church members on this work are actively engaged preparing for a Fall encampment of the saints, and expect soon to erect a tabernacle for that purpose.

WM. B. VAN VALKENBURGH

Rev. John A. Miller, P. C., Ruston, La., Aug. 28, 1897: "We closed a very profitable meeting—of nine days—last Sunday night at Douglas Church, Ruston charge. As the condition of my throat has prevented me from doing but very little preaching for the last two months or more, Bros. Bennett and H. W. May did all that work, and, to the promise of God, the Word was efficient to the salvation of many souls. We had twelve accessions: the church was established and sanctified by setting themselves apart wholly to the service of God. I spent the month of July in Western Texas, to recuperate and improve my throat. My general health was greatly benefited: but my throat was not much improved. We expect to begin a protracted service in Ruston soon. Pray for us. I took up my Conference collections at Douglas, and the whole amount of their pro rata was secured."

Rev. R. S. Phillips, P. C., Waynesboro, Miss., Aug. 19, 1897: "The first week of August was spent in a meeting at New Hope Church. Our helpers were Rev. W. W. Moore, Bro. DeBardelabon, Sisters Nettie Brown and Annie Mary Woody—all fire-baptized workers. The Rev. Geo. H. Bell (Spoong Kia Tsing), the Chinese preacher of the Georgia Conference, was with us a few days. The Holy Ghost was present from beginning to end, convicting the multitude, converting and sanctifying many. The second week of August was spent at Spring Hill, with Miss Brown as helper. We had a Pentecost here, moving the people as they were never moved before. Often fifty or sixty were in the altar. Results: Thirty or more conversions, fifteen sanctifications, with many others seeking the blessing. Nine accessions to the church, twenty-five family altars erected, and seventy-five pledges to observe secret prayer and the reading of Scriptures daily. We are urging our people to a loyal discharge of duty to God and the church. Hallelujah!"

Rev. C. McDonald, Caseyville circuit: "We have held our five protracted meetings—one at each church—with good results. At New Hope we were assisted on the fourth and fifth days by B. F. Jones and L. S. Roberts. At Bethesda by R. S. Gale; at Pleasant Valley by Dr. Mounger and E. F. Edgar; at Sweet Water by W. M. Williams, and at Bethel by B. F. Jones. All did good work, especially in preaching. Possibly the circuit never had more sound and spiritual preaching in its series of meetings. Bro. Geo Morrison, now my only local preacher, was with us at two meetings with his song books, and working with his might. We estimate that there were thirty or forty conversions and reclamations, fifteen accessions, a great quickening of the membership, and nineteen children baptized. We expect many others to join as the result of these meetings. Each meeting was better than the preceding one; greater harmony and a better concentration of the working forces on the circuit. At Bethel, where we closed, was by far the greatest display of power. Bro. B. F. Jones preached eight sermons for us—all of them his best and such, we think, as could not be excelled by any man in the Conference—sermons of depth of thought, beautiful language, splendid arrangement and great spiritual power."

Woman's Work

Is never done, and it is especially wearing and wearisome to those whose blood is impure and unfit properly to sustain the wasting of nerve, muscle and tissue. The only remedy for tired, weak, nervous women is in building up by taking a good nerve tonic, blood purifier and vitalizer like Hood's Sarsaparilla. For troubles Peculiar to Women at change of season, climate or life, take

Bright-faced, happy, rollicking, playful babies, thousands of them all over the broad land, have in their bodies the seeds of serious diseases, and while they laugh and play are facing death. The mother, in the majority of cases, is unconsciously responsible for this sad state of affairs. Where the mother, during the anxious period, suffers from weakness and disease of the distinctly feminine organism, it is useless to expect a sound and healthy baby. Every woman may be strong in a womanly way, and have robust, happy children.

A wonderful medicine for women is Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It is the discovery of an eminent and skillful specialist, Dr. R. V. Pierce, for thirty years chief consulting physician to the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, at Buffalo, N. Y. It is a medicine that acts directly and only on those delicate and important organs that bear the burdens of maternity. It makes them strong, healthy and elastic. It allays inflammation, heals ulceration, stops debilitating drains and soothes pain. It gives rest and tone to the tired nerves. It fits for wifehood and motherhood. It does away with the discomforts of the expectant period and makes baby's coming easy and comparatively painless. Honest druggists will not offer an inferior substitute for the sake of a little extra profit.

"I suffered for years from displacement, debilitating drains, inflammation and weak back," writes Mrs. Bessie McPherson, of 38 So. Main St., Providence, R. I. "I traveled with my husband, and first noticed my weaknesses coming on when the jolt of the cars became unbearable. I stopped travelling and the trouble steadily grew worse. I suffered so that I became despondent and wished for death. I took only a few bottles of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription and was permanently cured."

The loads that crush us are not the ones that God lays upon our backs.

We will be judged at the last great day not by what we have professed, but by what we are.

Probably the reason why some preachers are spoken of as "comets" is that they are chiefly gas.

The best sign that a man believes anything is not his repetition of its formulas, but his impregnation with its spirit.—Phillips Brooks.

Time is the stuff that life is made of; the crucible of character, the arena of achievement, and woe to those who fritter it away.—Frances E. Willard.

An eminent preacher said recently, "One quick, decisive action is worth more than a hundred resolutions." Decision of character is a quality of manhood all may well covet.

Observe what direction your thoughts and feelings most readily take when you are alone, and you will then form a tolerably correct opinion of yourself.—Bengel.

He who thinks he can find within himself the means of doing without others is much mistaken, but he who thinks that others can not do without him is still more mistaken.—Rochefoucauld.

Bible reading is not necessarily a means of grace. Some read it to find fault with it. To be benefited by the reading we must have a sincere desire to know the truth and a fixed determination to obey it.

If I do what I may in earnest, I need not mourn if I work no great work on the earth. To help the growth of a thought that struggles toward the light; to brush with gentle hand the earth stain from the white of one snowdrop—such be my ambition!—George Macdonald.

"The Positive Note in Preaching."

The Treasury of Religious Thought, for August, contains a masterly article on this subject from the pen of the gifted Rev. John Watson ("Ian MacLaren"), some extracts from which we quote below. It is his conviction, candidly expressed, that preaching has too largely lost the positive element so necessary to convincing the hearer of the truth and overshadowing importance of the gospel. Contrasting our attitude with that of our fathers, who, he justly remarks, allowed no open questions, often casting out good men for heresy on subjects about which no human being can know anything, he observes: "We do not seem to have any closed questions, being willing to discuss the existence of God or the resurrection of Christ in a neutral spirit with any person. . . . But we do far from well if we are tolerant simply because we do not think there is any certainty possible in religion, or because we do not have any convictions to rouse our spirit. Preachers are affected by the atmosphere, and this to-day is anti-supernatural; so that without being conscious that their faith has been weakened, they come to state the truth in terms of worldly wisdom. The personal God of the saints becomes the eternal something or other. He who was dead and is alive forevermore fades into the Christ-idea. It may be that our fathers were too sure about everything; it would be an immense gain if some of us were sure about anything."

The faith of some Christians, ministers among them, has been undermined, or at least weakened, by the babblings and alleged discoveries of the Higher Critics. Rationalistic evolution has seriously affected the belief of others, while an overestimate of the regenerative power of education and civilization has led some ministers to moderate the intensity and positiveness of their proclamation of man's need of redemption through Christ.

What the world needs and longs for is religious teachers who believe something with all their hearts. Uncertainty in belief ever paralyzes effort and invites failure. People will not knowingly seek the help of a doubter. A physician who proclaims it abroad that he has little faith in medicine, or who expresses doubt to his patients of his ability to cure them, will soon find himself without patients. What sea-captain wants a pilot who fears that he can not steer the ship aright? What soldier is willing to fight under a general who is distrustful of his army and of his own military skill?

The man who has confidence in his mission, whether right or wrong, is sure to find followers. Witness the wonderful success of Mahomet in the East! Consider the feverish excitement produced in Europe in the eleventh century by the fervid appeals and quenchless zeal of Peter the Hermit, who inaugurated the Crusades.

The gospel, in order to produce its intended effect, must be preached by men whose words have the ring of certainty and the glow of love. To quote again from Mr. Watson: "The preacher is a witness to the supremacy of the soul, the reality of the unseen, the glory of the kingdom of God—affirming with unfaltering voice those things which all men wish to believe and do hold dimly in their minds. For the preacher the first qualification is not that he be learned or eloquent, but that he believe. . . . If doubts come on, let him face, fight, master them in secret—in the wilderness with God—and stand before men with unclouded face."

An age of doubt is ever an age of profligacy and loose morality. The English Church in the eighteenth century just before the Wesleyan revival—an age notorious for immorality and corruption in Church and State—had "the mild accent of the apologetic period when," as Johnson put it, "the apostles were tried regularly once a week on the charge of committing forgery." No wonder that skepticism and vice vigorously flourished when doubt and weakness of conviction characterized the clergy. A noted skeptic is said to have gone regularly to hear a certain Scotch divine preach, and on being questioned as to the reason therefor, he replied: "I like to hear once a week a message from a man who thoroughly believes what he says."

Mr. Watson has well said that a preacher ought to be positive about the right things, being careful to distinguish between the facts and the theories of Christianity — between essentials and non-essentials. Certainty does not mean unreasonable dogmatism about incidentals. There is such a thing as zeal about trifles. Unfortunately some in their advocacy of their peculiar beliefs "strain at a gnat and swallow a camel." Christianity has a ground of common belief upon which all may stand together in peace. It is no compromise of the truth to emphasize the generally recognized essentials of religious faith, and to touch lightly upon controverted doctrines. The preaching of denominational tenets ought always to be tempered by the largest charity.

According to Dr. Joseph Parker, the famous London preacher, four beliefs are fundamental in evangelicalism. "The first is the acceptance of the Bible as the Word of God, inspired and authoritative. The second is passionate and adoring loyalty to the deity and priesthood of Christ. The third is the resurrection of Christ. And the fourth is the personality and deity of the Holy Ghost."

The minister who has not sound and deep convictions as to the essential doctrines of Christianity, such as man's depravity and helplessness, the reality of the Atonement, the necessity of Regeneration, the divine Sonship of Christ, and the Holy Spirit and the eternal duration of reward and punishment, is not the man whose preaching will mightily stir the hearts and consciences of men. He who holds to these beliefs feels the firm rock of truth under his feet, and confidently goes forth to battle for the Lord, girded with impenetrable armor.

At Sam Jones Camp Meeting.

By invitation of the presiding elder, Dr. W. L. C. Hunnicutt, we attended the Sam Jones Camp Meeting during the first few days. We were present at the opening service on Friday night and remained until Tuesday morning. The opening sermon was preached by Rev. J. A. B. Jones. It was an excellent sermon and thoroughly appropriate. The following brethren occupied the pulpit during our stay: R. A. Breland, J. Wilson Brown, President J. W. Chambers, J. A. B. Jones, Dr. W. L. C. Hunnicutt, Prof. James B. Hunnicutt, of the Georgia State University, Athens, and this scribe. Bros. Breland and Chambers made a very brief stay, having engagements elsewhere. A full-orbed gospel was preached, and we trust that good was done, although the visible results were small up to the time of our departure. The meeting continued over two Sundays. A full report will doubtless be furnished in due time. The congregation on Sunday exceeded the seating capacity of the tabernacle, which is estimated at twelve hundred. It was, of course, not so large on Monday.

We were so fortunate as to be domiciled with our old-time friends and parishioners, Col. and Mrs. Enoch G. DeLap, to whom we are indebted for many appreciated courtesies. Prof. Hunniontt, above mentioned, is a brother of Dr. W. L. C. Hunnicutt, and is a man of culture and a preacher of decided ability. Sam Jones Camp Ground is abundantly supplied with the purest and best of water, which is cool enough without ice on the hottest day. There are two springs which are quite remarkable for their boldness and the crystalline clearness of their waters. Although these waters have no mineral taste, being delicious to the palate, they possess decided medicinal virtues. Springs of smaller size are numerous, and these are said to be of similar quality to the larger ones.

A number of other ministerial brethren were present participating variously in the services, viz.: W. B. Hines, J. N. Tucker, J. R. Whittington, M. H. Moore, A. C. Flowers, J. A. Moore, R. M. Cassels. Rev. A. D. Miller arrived just as we took our departure.

Magazines for September.

FRANK LESLIE'S POPULAR MONTHLY.

Leslie's Popular Monthly, for September, contains its usual quota of interesting articles. "Wellesley College," by Virginia Sherwood; "Plantation Life in Dixie," by ——; "The Historic Wallkill Valley," by J. P. Ritter, are beautifully illustrated. There are serial stories, poems, and complete stories in this number.

THE ST. NICHOLAS.

The St. Nicholas, for September, contains an article on "Floating Fire-Engines," by C. T. Hill; serial stories and complete stories, all of which are interesting to the young folks.

CASSELL'S MAGAZINE.

The September number of Cassell's Magazine contains many interesting features. The serial stories are: "A Master of Mysteries," by L. Meade and R. Enstace; "By a Hair's Breadth," by Headon Hill. Also a number of short stories add to its attractiveness.

THE QUIVER.

The Quiver, for September, contains a number of excellent short stories, besides three continued stories, all of which are liberally illustrated. "The Delays of Christ," by Archdeacon Wynne, D. D., is an article worthy of note.

Labor-Saving Machinery.

In the August Chautauquan the Hon. Carroll D. Wright discusses the question, "Do labor-saving machines deprive men of labor?" There are many working men who look with suspicion, if not with downright hostility, upon all inventions of labor-saving machinery. Not infrequently it is said by them, "These are the things which take the bread out of the mouths of our children." Mr. Wright, who is good authority on all such questions, shows conclusively that the reverse of this is true. He says that from 1860 to 1890, the most prolific period of inventions, the population increased a little over ninety-nine per cent., while the number of persons employed in gainful occupations increased over one hundred and seventy-six per cent. Numerous and convincing illustrations of the effect of machinery in increasing the demand for labor are furnished by Mr. Wright.—Pittsburg Advocate.

Yellow Fever.

For several weeks past Ocean Springs, Miss., has had what has hitherto been regarded as an epidemic of dengue. On last Monday, the sixth, however, representatives of the Board of Health of the three States of Mississippi, Louisiana and Alabama, after an investigation extending over several days, pronounced it yellow fever. As a result of this the towns in every direction are quarantining against Ocean Springs.

There has been one death from the fever in this city, the disease having been contracted at Ocean Springs. This fact having been announced through the papers, a quarantine has been established against New Orleans by the States of Mississippi and Texas and by towns too numerous to mention. It is not believed here that the fever will become epidemic.

Danger of Profaning the Sabbath.

A remarkable incident (recently cited by Dr. Tillett in the Sunday-School Magazine) illustrating the danger of profaning the Sabbath is related and vouched for by a prominent New York minister. "In the State of New Hampshire there were two neighborhoods—the one of six families, the other of five. The six families habitually disregarded the Sabbath, and this is their history: In course of time five of them were broken up by the separation of husbands and wives, and the other by the husband and father becoming a thief. Eight of the nine parents became drunkards, one committed suicide, and all came to penury. Of some forty or fifty descendants, about twenty are known to be drunkards and gamblers and dissolute. Four or five have been in state prison, one fell in a duel, some are in the almshouse. Only one became a Christian, and he after having been outrageously dissipated. The other five families, that regarded the Sabbath, all prospered. Eight or ten of the children are consistent members of the church, one is a minister of the gospel, and one a missionary to China. No poverty among them. The homesteads are now in the hands of the third generation. Those who have died have all died in the peace of the gospel." Nor is this an exceptional case. Like results may be seen in nearly every community.

Mooney's School, Franklin, Tenn., opened Aug. 31. It has already an enrollment of 102, with 20 more promised for this week.

NOTES.

Rev. S. S. Keener and family have returned from their Summer outing.

Dr. H. W. Knickerbocker and family have returned from the coast.

We are pleased to learn that the prospects are good for a fine opening at Centenary on the fifteenth.

Rev. W. H. LaPrade, Jr., will enter the Biblical Department at Vanderbilt at the opening of the next session.

Our columns are so crowded this week that we are obliged to leave over Bro. Clifford's League Echoes until next week.

Rev. M. M. Black preached every Sabbath during his stay in the city, sometimes for the Methodists, sometimes for the Presbyterians.

We are pleased to learn that Rev. H. C. Brown, of the Mississippi Conference, who has recently been on the invalid list, is now recuperating.

Our readers are under obligations to Rev. M. M. Black for editorial services during the past few weeks when we were taking a needed rest.

Dr. and Mrs. W. H. LaPrade are at Monteagle, and will remain two or three weeks. Bro. LaPrade is convalescing from an attack of malarial fever.

A private letter brings the pleasing intelligence that our venerable friend, Judge H. W. Foote, is rapidly recovering from his recent attack of illness.

Joseph C. Hendrix, of New York, a brother of Bishop E. R. Hendrix, by a unanimous vote, has been chosen president of the American Bankers' Association.

Notoriety is no proof of merit. A thousand dollars' worth of roses will scent up only a few yards, while a dollar's worth of onions will scent up a whole town.—Pittsburg Advocate.

Rev. H. H. Ahrens has had a spell of sickness, in consequence of which he was unable to fill his pulpit last Sabbath. He is convalescent, however, and will doubtless be ready for service next Sabbath.

The way a man spends his Sabbath is a pretty good index to his spiritual state. An infidel once sneeringly remarked to a clergyman: "I always spend the Sabbath day settling my accounts." "Yes," replied the man of God, "and you will likely spend the judgment and all eternity in the same way."

"They say the paper is too high?" "Yes, sir." "Well, people have been saying that since the day of Dr. Capers. I reckon they said it when John Wesley lived. It is the old story about the needy man and the corn. Some won't have corn unless it is ground and brought to them."—The Bishop.

Bro. A. S. Ford, Homer, La., writes under date of Sept. 4:

MR. EDITOR: We like the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE very much. I was struck very forcibly with your editorial, "Non-Enforcement of Law." I read it before the Law and Order League of Homer last Tuesday night. It was very favorably commented on. It suited Claiborne parish exactly.

No man who is not loyal and faithful to his local church can be loyal to the general church. The whole is made up of its parts, and is only what the parts make it. To claim, therefore, to be a loyal Southern Methodist, and yet fail to support the only part of the church within reach, is self-contradictory. Those who do not see it in that light need to have the eyes of their understanding opened.—Central Methodist.

Miss Minnie Cowan, of Oxford, Miss., left for Sherman, Texas, the third of September, to resume her work as Mistress of Latin in the North Texas Female College. Miss Cowan is a graduate of Whitworth College and of the University of Mississippi, and also spent one year in the post-graduate department of the latter institution, studying her specialty, Latin. She has made an excellent record as a faithful and competent teacher in this noble Christian college.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

DOMESTIC.

Twelve men were killed by an explosion in a mine in Colorado on Sept. 3.

The faculty of Stanford University, San Francisco, is determined to put down hazing and all such barbaric practices.

Boston is to elect its mayor in December for a two years' term and to vote on an act for the reorganization of the city government. Prediction is made that the ballots will number a hundred thousand.

The W. C. T. U. in Nebraska have determined to have all arms taken from the State public schools. The members declare that the young men of the State should be taught the arts of peace, not the tactics of war.

A law passed at the recent session of the Alabama Legislature levying a license tax on the capital stock of all corporations, except banks, has been declared constitutional by the Supreme Court of the State.

Mayor Flower, of this city, has declared the lottery shops must go. He has spoken it in language that implies every official delegated with police authority shall be a factor for the suppression of the vice.

One of the projects to celebrate the inauguration of Greater New York is a great industrial fair in 1900. Circulars have been sent to business men advocating the scheme, and most of the replies have been so far favorable.

The great miners' strike is now practically over. Miners' officials and Pittsburg operators have reached an agreement, which, if approved by the strikers, will bring peace. Future wages will be agreed upon by a joint commission.

Mrs. D. A. Milliken, a noble-hearted woman of this city, has made an offer to build a children's ward for the Charity Hospital. It will be a spacious structure, light and airy, in the shape of a four-leafed clover, and will contain play-rooms, fountains, a Kindergarten, and even a plant for the general distribution of pure milk for the babies outside of the ward.

The United Labor League of Western Pennsylvania, at a largely attended and exciting meeting on Sept. 5, gave expression to an open revolt against Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, and many recriminations and ugly charges are made. It was all on account of expressions made by Gompers in reference to the recent convention of labor leaders at St. Louis.

Round figures in Birmingham's (Ala.) cotton receipts for the past twelve months ending Sept. 1, show the total to have been 80,000 bales, an increase of 20,000 over the year previous, and 60,000 over the receipts of five years ago. Cotton men predict receipts for the forthcoming season of 100,000 bales. One cotton factory is in operation there, and another large one in course of construction, which will add to Birmingham's importance as a cotton market.

FOREIGN.

The municipality of Madrid has decided to erect a statue to the murdered Premier Canovas del Castillo.

A monument to the memory of Emperor Frederick is to be unveiled at Weisbaden on Oct. 18. The cost is said to be 26,700 marks.

The Mexican government is offering prizes of $15,000 and $16,000 (Mexican money) for competitive designs for a $1,500,000 capitol building 100 meters square.

The first direct result of the Franco-Russian alliance has been the revival of the agitation in Franco for the recovery of the lost provinces of Alsace and Lorraine.

Prince Bismarck has expressed himself as very skeptical regarding the alleged Franco-Russian alliance, and declares the Czar's toast really committed Russia to very little.

It is announced that M. Euloghi Georgieff, the founder of the Sofia University, who died recently, bequeathed 20,000,000 francs to the Bulgarian government for public purposes, including 6,000,000 francs for a technical school to be established at Sofia.

In the Transvaal Jews are debarred from all participation in the legislative and municipal government. Moreover they are disqualified from filling any public office to which a salary is attached, while their schools are the only ones which receive no subsidy from the State.

The reports from the scene of the uprising in Northern India have been very much more reassuring during the past few days. Large forces of troops are being rapidly concentrated for the purpose of punishing the war like tribes which have risen against British authority.

Japan's Emperor is to receive, as a gift from the American Bible Society, a large folio Bible printed in English. The volume was suggested by the favorable reception which the dowager Empress of China gave in 1894, when a beautiful Chinese New Testament was given her in the name of 10,000 Protestant Christian women in China.

Centenary Building Fund.

EPWORTH LEAGUERS! ATTENTION.

ALGIERS AHEAD!

We are in receipt of the first response to the call made by Bros. Pierce and Carre. This comes from the Algiers League, and speaks well for the interest of the young people of that congregation in our church college. Considering the fact that they are in the midst of building a new church, their subscription of ten dollars to this fund speaks eloquently of their willingness to help. They are blessed with a Centenary preacher and know the value of the grand old institution! Let others of our young people fall into line and send in the funds.

Centenary exists primarily for the benefit of the younger generation of our Church and State. The old folks have borne the burden and heat of the day for a long time, and they have borne it nobly. Let our younger Methodism arise in the strength of her youth, and under the inspiration of her glorious future unite for the realization of a truly great ambition—the making our church an important factor in the intellectual, social and religious development of our State.

Send in your subscriptions at once, as we shall not be able to begin work on the buildings until we have a good part of the money in hand. "He gives twice who gives in a trice."

Board at Millsaps College.

Mrs. Emma Mayes Cook, who for several years has had charge of one of the boarding halls at Millsaps College, is still at the Williams Hall, where she will be pleased to furnish board and lodging on very moderate terms. Those who board with her will find large, well furnished rooms, good fare, and home-like surroundings.

Millsaps College.

The sixth annual session of Millsaps College will open Sept. 15. Appropriate exercises will be conducted in the College Chapel, Wednesday morning, beginning at 11 o'clock, and it is important that all students should be present on that occasion.

New students should be on hand on or before Tuesday, the fourteenth. All applicants for admission must report to the president as soon as possible after their arrival in Jackson. W. B. MURRAH, President.

Crystal Springs.

In my account of the Hennington Camp Meeting, near this place, in your issue of this week, I neglected to mention the name of the Rev. W. M. Williams, of the Gallman circuit. He was with us throughout the entire meeting, and rendered valuable service in the pulpit, in the choir, and in the altar. W. B. LEWIS.

To the North Mississippi Conference.

DEAR BRETHREN: It is the purpose of your Board of Directors of the Orphans' Home to give due credit to all the pastors and people for their efforts and contributions to the Home. Therefore we urge you to please heed the following earnest requests:

1. Send all moneys raised by your individual efforts directly to John M. Taylor, treasurer.

2. Write at once to Capt. I. T. Blount about all furnishings, clothing, bed-clothing and any other things for the Home.

This must be done in order to give proper credit to those who deserve it and to keep the books correctly. In behalf of the Joint Board, it affords me great pleasure to state that in our earnest efforts during the last three years to establish and build the Orphans' Home we have had the increasing co-operation of the Methodist preachers and people of our State. Just here let me say that all the traveling and work of the Board has cost the Home nothing except the necessary record books—all of which has proven a blessing to us. We are glad to hear good news from the agent. Please remember that the postoffice address of Bros. Taylor and Blount is Water Valley, Miss. I am, Yours for the orphans,

Electric Lights for E. M. F. College.

President Beeson, ever on the alert for improvements, has made arrangements with the Electric Light Company for incandescent lights for the study hall, and new dining room, and halls down stairs. The chapel will still be lighted with gas. The electric lights will add much to the attractiveness of the College and pleasure in study hall of having good lights.

There are also a number of new pianos for the Conservatory, among which are two magnificent grands, one Everett and one Conover.

The new rooms will be beautifully furnished with iron beds, white enamel finish, with nice new furniture of natural finish. The halls up stairs and down and the stairways will be laid with matting, the old rooms will be worked over with alabastine, the furniture all renovated and polished. Everything will be in first-class condition by the opening, Sept. 22.

Pres. Beeson says the applications for rooms are pouring in rapidly, several each day. He expects the new buildings to be filled as well as the old. A gentleman traveling in the interest of another college says he finds a great many young ladies all over the country who are going to attend the E. M. F. College. Meridian is proud of this institution, and so ought the whole State to be.—Meridian News.

Ministerial Aid Association of the Mississippi Conference.

To Whom It May Concern—

DEAR BRETHREN: The session of Millsaps College will open in a few days. We have applications for aid from several young ministers who wish to attend school. If those who have given notes towards the fund used in this work will remit to Dr. C. G. Andrews, at Meridian, Miss., they will greatly relieve us of embarrassment and at the same time give timely encouragement to a most worthy enterprise. To assist all those who are looking to us for help we must have funds immediately. Brethren who have in the past enjoyed the benefits of this association will please allow an especial appeal in this, our emergency. We would not confine our appeal to those who have given notes, but will most gladly receive any amount from anyone disposed to send.

Truly and fraternally,

T. B. HOLLOMAN, Pres. Ass'n.

THE BRAVEST OF BATTLES.

BY JOAQUIN MILLER.

The bravest battle that ever was fought,
Shall I tell you where, and when?
On the maps of the world you'll find it not;
'Twas fought by the mothers of men.

Nay, not with cannon or battle shot,
With sword or noble pen!
Nay, not with eloquent word or thought
From mouth of wonderful men!

But deep in a walled-up woman's heart—
Of woman that would not yield,
But bravely, silently bore her part—
Lo! there is the battlefield.

No marshaling troop, no bivouac song,
No banner to gleam and wave!
But oh, these battles! they last so long—
From babyhood to the grave!

Keep Out of Debt.

The best advice that we can offer is contained in the four short words, "Keep out of debt," says a popular writer. This should be taken especially by the young men. One of the most fatal steps a young man can make is to contract a debt. It mortgages his future. It means in nearly every case that he is living beyond his means. Debt is what ruins so many of our business men. They begin with small accounts, and as their business increases they increase their accounts, and finally their habits of living have become so expensive that the debts begin to far exceed the returns of business. The result is failure, disappointment, and disgrace. A young man starts out in life. He is quick, apt, and successful. He gains the confidence of employers and acquaintances. He is honest and upright, and merchants had rather have a bill against him than not. He is flattered by the confidence that is reposed in him. He buys fine things, goes in good society, and from a frugal style of living he branches out into an expensive style. At first his debts were small, and he found no trouble in meeting them. But they have now become a burden, and to straighten things out necessitates a vigorous struggle. Self denial comes harder than it once did, and the debt becomes a matter of worry that will not be quieted. If sickness comes, instead of having a fund to draw on there is a deficiency that each day's illness makes larger and more difficult to wipe out.

Times have changed since long ago. Then it was customary for the young man to practice self-denial in his youth, to work hard, gain a competency, and enjoy leisure beyond the line which divides youth from old age. Now it seems that the young man works on a different principle—his aim is to enjoy the sweets of life at once and save the labor and self-denial for a future day. There is enough of pleasure—healthy, joyous pleasure—that comes with legitimate and successful work, so that young people can afford to live slower for a few years that they may be better able to enjoy the years that follow.

Thrift is a stranger to these times. The tendency is in an opposite direction. Debt-contracting is the rule, not the exception. Nothing should be more carefully avoided by young people. Debt is a great curse. It brings no comfort. On the other hand, it is accompanied by worry and anxiety. The young man who keeps out of debt and secures a balance on the other side of the ledger, not only forms correct habits, but he gains a satisfied peace of mind that can not be secured in any other way, and he stands armed and ready for an emergency when it comes.—Selected.

God's Training.

When God has a great work for anyone to do in the world, he usually gives him a peculiar training for it; and that training is just what no earthly friend would choose for him, and sometimes it is so long continued that there seems to us to be but little time left for him to work. We should not have led Moses into Midian to prepare him to guide a nation, and certainly we should not have left him there forty years. But God knew that the life of the humble shepherd, and in the desert, too, would best fit him to lead his people like a flock, and that he needed to be in that school no less than forty long years to be the truly meek Moses. . . . He must have long years of quiet, under the shadow of Sinai, for meditation on the character of God, before he could meet that God on the top of the mount, and there receive the lively oracles to give to us.—Mary Lyon.

The Blue and the Gray.

Both men and women are apt to feel a little blue, when the gray hairs begin to show. It's a very natural feeling. In the normal condition of things gray hairs belong to advanced age. They have no business whitening the head of man or woman, who has not begun to go down the slope of life. As a matter of fact, the hair turns gray regardless of age, or of life's seasons; sometimes it is whitened by sickness, but more often from lack of care. When the hair fades or turns gray there's no need to resort to hair dyes. The normal color of the hair is restored and retained by the use of Tact and Taste.

Growing girls and boys, who have arrived at a particularly conscious age, often complain that companions of theirs are better liked than themselves, although they know, in their heart of hearts, that these other boys and girls are not as really deserving—that is, are not possessed of as many virtues as they themselves constantly practice. Now is the time for such young people to learn that to be sought after one must have good manners as well as a good heart; taste and tact as well as virtues. You may think this is rather hard, but stop a moment to consider: Why don't you choose that girl for a friend? She tells the truth and is very unselfish. But you remember that she is also fond of reminding you if your hat is crooked or your gown is unbecoming. You don't care for her society, although she is "a good girl." Then there is that boy—he is generous and obliging, but he loves to talk about himself and his own affairs, and never takes any interest in what you are doing. You wouldn't care for him, in spite of his fine qualities, for an intimate friend. It is well to learn the lesson young—for we must learn it at some time or other—that the people we shall be thrown among through life will ask yet more of us than that we keep the Ten Commandments. If they are the sort of people whom we ought to know, they will expect us to do right, but they want still more than that of us, or, rather, they want that carried out to its inner meaning. Tact and taste are needed in social life, as well as the enforcement of the Golden Rule. It is because young folks sometimes overlook these acts that they need to be reminded that good hearts are not visible to the world, as are uncouth manners, careless speech and unpleasing habits. Therefore, these all count in the impression one makes, and one must be on guard that that impression shall be agreeable. "Manners make the man" is not wholly true, but it has some truth in it, too.—The Watchman.

Prompt People.

Don't live a single hour of your life without doing what is to be done in it, and going straight through it from beginning to end. Work, play, study—whatever it is, take hold at once, and finish it up squarely; then to the next thing, without letting any moments drop between. It is wonderful to see how many hours these prompt people contrive to make of a day; it is as though they picked up the moments which the dawdlers lost.

And if ever you find yourself where you have so many things pressing upon you that you hardly know how to begin, let me tell you a secret: Take hold of the very first one that comes to hand, and you will find the rest all fall into file, and follow after, like a company of well-drilled soldiers, and, though work may be hard to meet when it charges in a squad, it is easily vanquished if you can bring it into line. You may often have seen the anecdote of the man who was asked how he had accomplished so much in his life. "My father taught me," was the reply, "when I had anything to do to go and do it." There is the secret—the magic word now! Make sure, however, that what is to be done ought to be done. "Never put off till to-morrow what you can do to-day," is a good proverb, but don't do what you may regret.—Merchant Sentinel.

Cheerfulness.

"Be cheerful," says the man who is easy in his circumstances, missing no loved face at the table, nor by the hearth. But does he ever consider how hard it may be to be "cheerful" when the heart aches, and the cupboard is empty, and there are little fresh graves in the churchyard, and friends are few or indifferent and even heaven for the time being seems to have forgotten us, so desolate is our lot? How difficult for one man to understand another, in such different circumstances! How easy to say, "Be cheerful!" How hard he would find it to practice it were he stripped of all life's brightness!—Great Thoughts.

"Learn to do little things as though they were great." For little things are often the beginning of great things, and even when they are not, they may be made great by the spirit in which they are wrought. There is a tendency to imagine that true nobility can only be attained on great occasions; and many continue to live mean lives only because they overlook the small abundant opportunities of every day. Jesus Christ has shown for all time how the divinest fabric of beauty and goodness can be woven out of the warp and woof of daily experience, how humblest circumstances and facts may become channels of redemptive grace; how the instrument of torture and shame may be transformed into the symbol of holiest love. What he did as Savior of the world we can not repeat, for he stands apart from us; but in this matter we may hope to follow afar off.—Selected.

For Over Fifty Years

Mrs. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP has been used for children teething. It soothes the child, softens the gums, allays all pain, cures wind colic, and is the best remedy for Diarrhœa. Twenty-five cents a bottle.

The practice of prayer in the family and home can not be advocated too strongly. A pastor tells of one instance in the first year of his pastorate when he made special effort to persuade a young mechanic of the importance of family worship. Some time passed and one day the mechanic came to the pastor's study. "Do you remember my child? She died this morning very suddenly. She has gone to God, I have no doubt, but if so, she has told him what I tell you now—that child never heard a prayer from her father's lips. Oh, if I only had her back again one day to do my duty!" It will be a tremendous thing at the last day if some one shall say of us, "I never heard my father pray. I never heard my mother pray."

One of the best ways to be loved in a community is to seek its welfare by refusing to hear and retail gossip, by fair, kind, generous and helpful action, by showing respect for others' opinions, by expressing one's own in a polite but firm way, and by discharging duty with courtesy, consideration and fidelity.

Patient, hopeful waiting is hard work when it is the only work possible to us in an emergency. But patient waiting is in its time the highest duty of a faithful soul.—H. Clay Trumbull.

The glory of the country is in its homes, which contain the true elements of national vitality, and are the embodied type of heaven.

Don't try to argue with the comfortless. If they were in a condition to be argued with, they would not be in need of comfort.

A Change of Menu.

A minister sends us the following 'crumb,' which our readers will probably enjoy more than the family chiefly concerned:

Some years ago when the travelling minister was a frequent visitor in hospitable homes, and caused no great change in family arrangements, an old minister stopped at a home in Virginia when the frugal meal of mush and milk was about to be served. But in the meantime the daughter's beau arrived, and consequently a change in the supper was hurriedly made. When the old minister was requested to ask the blessing he did so in these words:

"The Lord be praised! how I'm amazed!
To see how things have mended;
Shortcakes and tea for supper I see
When mush and milk were intended."
—Epworth Herald.

John Ruskin and the Bible.

John Ruskin says: "All that I have taught of art, everything that I have written, every greatness that there has been in any thought of mine, whatever I have done in my life, has simply been due to the fact that when I was a child my mother daily read with me a part of the Bible and daily made me learn a part of it, by heart."

There are some persons whom to meet always afterwards gives one a greater courage and hope, as if there were more nobleness and high purpose in the world than one thinks.—C. L. Brace.

Care of Invalids.

When a patient is very ill, as a rule, he desires, above all things, to be let alone and not worried. It is an easy matter to be over-zealous in one's attentions to the sick, and to force one's presence upon them, in season and out of season, may display a sympathetic nature, but it displays also very poor judgment.

Indeed, it sometimes happens that over zealous people actually render, by their want of tact, the discomfort of illness more grievous than it need be. Their well-meant attentions are a source of annoyance to the physician and of worry to the patient; yet their efforts are so obviously prompted by kindly motives that every one shuns the ungracious task of pointing out how for they fall short of their aim.

No one should think for a moment of entering the sick room unless particularly requested to do so, and usually the exercise of one's judgment, when so admitted, will quickly determine whether or not the visit should be cut short. No one likes to inform a visitor that his or her presence is harmful to the patient. Nevertheless, it is sometimes, for the patient's sake, absolutely necessary to do this.

Ventilating Bedrooms.

Dr. Sofshue says: In all seasons of the year the sleeping and living rooms need constant attention, in order that the temperature may not be excessive in either direction and the warmth may not be at the expense of ventilation. The very young bear high temperature badly, as is noticed in Summer, and the old can not stand the cold, so that where there are old persons in the family the thermometer must stand at a slightly higher point than usual, which is 68 to 70 degrees. All rooms should be flushed out at least once a day with fresh air, and this is particularly necessary when two or more persons occupy a room. Bedrooms should have all windows and doors open at least an hour every morning, and the bed should be opened and the clothing thrown back or taken off and spread over the chairs, so that cool fresh air can penetrate every part. The little sunlight that can be found in Winter should be allowed to enter the rooms.—Popular Science News.

FROM THE WORK.

Rev. C. C. Griffin, Pelahatchie, Miss., Aug. 16, 1897: "I just closed my second meeting last week at New Providence. The results were very gratifying. I had no help; only my local brethren, Revs. W. B. King and W. W. Murry, who did faithful work. My meeting at Clarksburg is thought to have been the best that has ever been there. We were assisted here by Revs. J. E. Williams, W. W. Murry, and W. L. Linsell. To God be all the glory."

Rev. B. H. Sheppard, P. C., Hico, La., Aug. 16, 1897: "We have held two of the meetings on Summerfield charge. In the meeting at Alabama Church I was assisted by Rev. E. Wright and Rev. J. O. Bennett. We had nine accessions; quite a number of conversions. At Harmony Chapel I was assisted by Rev. J. L. Williams, L. P. Results: 21 accessions and as many conversions. Forty-nine accessions this Conference year for Summerfield charge."

Rev. F. B. Ormond, Natchez, Miss., writes (Aug. 31): "Our people are thoughtful of their pastor and his wife. On last evening one or two of our members called on us, bringing some packages with them. In a few moments others came, followed by still others, all bringing packages to replenish the kitchen for us; and before the storm ceased we had quite a supply of provisions—indeed, a sufficient supply of some articles to last us the remainder of this year, and to begin with next year, provided Bishop Wilson says for us to come back. The pastor and his wife desire to express their appreciation of these kind remembrances and the thoughtfulness of his folk through the medium of the ADVOCATE."

PRICE—Mrs. ALICE E PRIAN (nee Barron) was born in Amite county, Miss., April 14, 1855, and died at her home near Holloway, Rapides parish, La., July 24, 1897.

Her sickness was of long duration, but she was never heard to murmur or complain.

She joined the M. E. Church, South, when quite young, and was happily converted to God, from which time she lived a fully consecrated Christian life, ever trying to do her heavenly Father's will.

She was married to Isaac C. Price, May 14, 1874, and was a most devoted, faithful, affectionate wife and mother.

Two days before she died she told her husband her stay on earth was short, and she wished to talk with him and the children before she became too weak to do so. He said, "You feel ready to go, don't you?" "Yes," she replied, "I feel like I will go sweeping through the gates." She then called the children one by one, and told them she was going to leave them; that she wanted them to be good children and meet her in heaven. She told the little ones who have not yet joined the church to join the church, and when they go to church to sit on the front seats and behave well. Then, turning to her husband, she said, "I know you will meet me in heaven." While talking about dying she said, "I thought I would dread death, but I do not." She left word for all of her people to meet her in heaven. She was conscious to the last, and a few moments before her last breath she called her children, kissed them all "good-by," then fell sweetly asleep in Jesus' arms. When I bade her farewell she grasped my hand and said, "Continue to pray, that I may enter through the pearly gates into the New Jerusalem."

Three children have preceded her to the "better land," while her husband and seven children are left behind to mourn her loss.

The church is poorer because she is gone, the neighborhood will miss her gentle and kindly life, while many kindred and friends bewail the absence of the loved and lost. But we "sorrow not as those who have no hope." She lives where sickness, tears or sorrow shall never come. May we all, like her, "so live that when the summons comes to join the innumerable caravan which moves to that mysterious realm where each shall take his chamber in the silent halls of death, we go not like the quarry slave, scourged to his dungeon, but, sustained and soothed by an unfaltering trust, approach our graves like one who wraps the drapery of his couch around him, and lies him down to pleasant dreams!"

Her pastor, F. D. VAN VALKENBURGH.

Pineville, La.

FELDER—VIRGINIA HARRISON, daughter of George M. Kirk and Mrs. Nancy Susanna Kirk, was born in Hardeman county, Tenn., May 28, 1840. When a child her parents moved to Arkansas, and some years later removed to Biloxi, Miss., where she was reared and educated. During the late war the family refugeed in Amite county, Miss. She was married to Mr. Ira Felder, of Pike county, Miss., in January, 1870. She was the mother of eight children; two sons died in infancy. Five sons and one daughter, with her bereft husband, remain to mourn her loss. She has been a useful member of the Methodist Church from early childhood, and her love and devotion to her church was practically illustrated by a life of beautiful consistency. She was modest and unostentatious in her deportment, strong in faith, fervent in spirit, and circumspect in all the walks of life. She was a true wife; helped her husband bear the burdens of life; affectionate and kind to the children, teaching them by precept and example the great value of the Christian religion. Her husband and daughter say she was unexcelled in charity, and was always happiest when helping the poor and afflicted. She was sick two years. She did not weary in well-doing, but was faithful to the end. During her protracted illness she gave herself to prayer; was a preacher of righteousness, and much good has been accomplished by her exhortations. As a neighbor, she was hard to surpass; as a mother, she was affectionate and kind; as a wife, loving and true.

She died at her home in Pike county, Miss., Sunday morning, May 9, 1897. The church has sustained a great loss in the death of this noble Christian woman; the preacher a faithful, true friend.

The funeral was largely attended; services conducted by Rev. J. M. Morse and Rev. V. V. Boone.

These lines are penned with a sad heart by her attached friend and sister in Christ,

MRS M. L. J. HOOVER.

Myrtle Place, Miss.

CASTLEMAN—Mrs. MAY CASTLEMAN, wife of G. H. Castleman, was born near Oak Grove, La., June 19, 1866. She was converted in early youth, and died Aug. 1, 1897. She joined the M. E. Church, South, at the time of her conversion, kept its sacred vows, and only left its communion for that of the church triumphant. She was the daughter of Rev. T. B. Brennan, a venerable servant of God, who has preached to the people of his country for fifty years. She was united in marriage to Mr. G. H. Castleman, Sept. 25, 1883.

Through all the vicissitudes incident to domestic life she was as true as steel. In the darkest hours of loss and suffering she stood by her husband's side, a tower of strength to support, a ministering angel to save. Her social qualities were superb, her home life beautiful, her hospitalities were large, and she dispensed them with a queenly grace. When questioned about her future state she said, "I have no fears or dreads of the future."

The writer has been closely associated with this good family for two years, and during all this time he has failed to ever find her in an angry mood. She was gentle, kind and loving, softened in her Master's love.

Husband, be cheerful and consoled, for your companion is not dead.

"There is no death! They're only gone,
Transplanted in the heavenly land.
They're singing now the glad new song
Amid the angel band."

J. W. DUNCAN.

REYNOLDS—WILLIAM PERRY, second son of H. W. and May Reynolds, was born June 17, 1895, and died June 15, 1897.

For two years less two days this precious little jewel was permitted to brighten the home of his fond parents. Many were the flattering hopes which clustered around this tender plant; but, alas! as far as this life is concerned, they are all blighted. Disease seized upon his tender form, and after days and weeks of suffering his spirit, unstained by sin, took its flight to the arms of Him who says, "Of such is the kingdom of heaven."

It is hard to give him up, he was so sweet and so bright; but God knows best, and who can tell how much of earth's care and trouble he has escaped?

May our dear Savior, by his grace, comfort and sustain the bereaved parents, and help them to meet little Perry in the Father's house above!

P. D. HARBIN.

Decatur, Miss.

PENN—Whereas, It has pleased Almighty God, in his wise and inscrutable providence, to remove from earth and earthly labors to heaven and heavenly joys the pure and consecrated spirit of our friend and brother, the Rev. J. V. PENN; therefore, be it

Resolved, That we, the officers, teachers and scholars of Logtown Sunday-school, feel each a sense of personal grief and bereavement in his death, and that the church has lost a faithful pastor and the children a devoted friend.

Resolved, That we tender the bereaved wife and babe our heartfelt sympathy, and assure them of our prayers

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be forwarded to the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE, and their publication requested.

ERVIN—Little GEORGE STEWART, son of Samuel W. and Elma Ervin, died April 3, 1897.

Not quite a year did this sweet little baby boy live to gladden the hearts of his parents when God took him to live with the angels; and when, a few weeks later, his father joined him in that beautiful "home," I fancy there was a joyful meeting, and they will live forever with the loved ones who have gone before, and all who have "washed their robes and made them white in the blood of the Lamb."

Dear, sorrowing mother, grieve not for your precious boy. Our heavenly Father takes our loved ones away, and the ties are growing stronger in heaven. One day, if we are faithful, we will meet them again, our tears shall be wiped away, and we shall part no more forever.

WATTS—Mrs. SARAH JANE WATTS was born in Rankin county, Miss., in the year 1841, and died July 16, 1897. She was married to John Watts in the year 1869, he preceding her to the land of rest a number of years. She was the mother of seven children. One of them had gone before to wait at the beautiful gate for mother. She was a devoted wife, a kind and loving mother. She joined the M. E. Church, South, at an early age, and lived a consistent member until her death. She leaves six children, all of whom are grown, and a host of friends to mourn her loss. I would say to the loved ones: Weep not for your mother; she is at rest. May we all meet her on that beautiful shore!

Deafness Can Not Be Cured

by local applications, as they can not reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever. Nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that can not be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars; free.

Are you sure that you're using the right thing for washing? If the work is slow and hard, and you have to depend upon rubbing, then you ought to get something else. And even if you have something that saves work, it may be bad for the clothes. You may be ruining them.

Pearline gives the easiest, quickest, most economical washing, of anything that's safe to use. The more you investigate, and inquire and compare, the surer you'll be that Pearline is the only right thing to wash with. 540

Send it Back

Peddlers and some unscrupulous grocers will tell you "this is as good as" or "the same as Pearline." IT'S FALSE—Pearline is never peddled, and if your grocer sends you something in place of Pearline, be honest—send it back.

BROOKHAVEN, MISS

Epworth College

(Formerly MALONE)

Is located in Holly Springs, at the intersection of the Illinois Central and Kansas City, Memphis and Birmingham Railroads, and has always been noted for the health, culture and refinement of its people. Ten passenger trains come and go every day, except Sunday, when we have eight.

We shall continue to work under the auspices of the North Mississippi Conference, and pledge ourselves to use every effort in behalf of those entrusted to our care that they may be developed into educated, polished Christian women.

BOARDING DEPARTMENT.

Pupils boarding in the College have the personal attention of the President and his wife, who, together with the teachers, strive to make their stay while here as pleasant and profitable as possible.

An abundance of substantial food is furnished; ample time given at each meal for everyone to be satisfied, and President's family, teachers and pupils all fare alike. Special attention is paid to their manners and morals at all times, and every effort is made to impress them with the necessity of constant growth, physically, mentally and morally.

We board at $11.00 per month where they take their meals regularly at the table; extra charge when the meals are carried to their rooms, and extra servant hire. This includes pupils and teachers.

No incidental fee is charged unless something is destroyed, and in this case the cost of the article is charged to the party who destroys it.

Revival at Harris' Chapel.

MR. EDITOR: Please give me space in the ADVOCATE to say that I have just closed a very fine meeting at Harris' Chapel, on my own charge. Our congregations were simply immense, and all very attentive. I was told by those who know that it was the best revival they had had for years. We prayed, expected, and worked for definite results. There were several conversions and fifteen accessions to our church. God made known his power to save. Rev. W. J. Burt was with me, and did some faithful, earnest preaching.

Sturges, Miss.

MR. EDITOR: We have just closed a meeting here at Sturges, which has done much good. Rev. W. S. Lagrone, of West Point, was with us, and preached with power. Eight or ten heads of families covenanted to erect family altars, and quite a number—in fact, almost the entire community—to pray and strive to build up the town to a high Christian standard. The meeting, in its influence, will be felt, no doubt, a long while, and we trust its fruits will be fully matured to the glory of God.

Durant District.

The preachers of the Durant district are in the midst of the Summer campaign, making vigorous efforts against sin. They are having good revivals, and the indications are that before the "harvest is past," there will be a large ingathering of souls, "such as shall be saved."

The Summer has been a trying one. The weather has been extremely warm, and there has been much sickness in the land. Some of our pastors have had much affliction. Bro. Gibbs, the faithful and consecrated pastor at Enpora and Maburn, has been prostrated with fever for abont thirty days, but his work, being well in hand, went on. He has done and is doing a fine work. Bro. Wilson, the active young pastor on the Belzona charge, has not been well for four months, and his wife is just recovering from fourteen days of fever; yet the Lord is blessing his labors. Bro. Gear, of the Chester charge, serving his fourth year, has had affliction in his family all the year, but he has gone bravely on, and the indications are that this will be the best of the four years. Bro. Evans also, of the Ackerman charge, has had affliction in his family, yet his work has gone on well.

There are signs of progress at almost every point. The collections for missions have never been so well in hand at this season of the year.

We have dedicated two new churches on this round, and there are abont five more that ought to be ready by Conference for dedication. The pastors are being better supported than formerly. There is much for which to praise God, yet there remains much to be done.

J. H. MITCHELL.

Durant, Miss., Aug. 26, 1897.

From Rev. J. A. Bowen.

Methodism in Water Valley is taking on new life. There are accessions to both our churches nearly every Sunday—most of them by profession of faith. I am more hopeful of our cause here now than I have ever been, and I have been somewhat sanguine all the time. Bro. W. T. Browning is doing a great work at Main Street. The Lord is blessing his labors abundantly. Bro. W. A. Sadler delighted and edified our people at Wood Street during the six weeks of my absence. All honor to our Millsaps College young men! My health is improving every day. I am happy in my work again. The devotion and kindness of my people is an inspiration to me to do more and better work. I hereby extend my sincere thanks to all the brethren for their interest and prayers in my behalf. I am,

Your grateful fellow servant,

J. A. BOWEN.
